The meeting of Transport Ministers on 19 December 2000 had a wide-ranging discussion covering various aspects of transport. The council identified a list of transport issues where members of the council could share their knowledge and experience, including public-private partnerships, the size and pattern of future transport demand, the development of sustainable transport policies, and programmes to improve road and rail safety. The on-going review of the implementation of the Transport Trans European Network was also identified as an area where they could work together. They also considered practical measures which could be taken to increase co-operation in relation to the road transport industry.

Officials' meetings

The officials' meetings dealt with the substantive business in relevant sectoral areas for forthcoming ministerial meetings including drafting papers and pursuing individual work topics. In addition senior officials form all of the Administrations have met from time to time to discuss British-Irish Council progress and procedures.

Special Advisers and Press Officers

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) special advisers and (b) press officers were employed (i) full-time, (ii) part-time and (iii) on a contract basis by his Department in each year since 1992. [6905]

Mr. Leslie: The information is not held in the form requested and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

All special advisers are appointed under the terms of the model contract for special advisers. At 1 November 2001, there were 81 special advisers in post across all Departments. Figures for the years since 1995–96 are as follows:

Year	Number
1997–98	70
1998–99	74
2000–01	79

Information about the number of press officers working in the Cabinet Office Press Office for the period from 1996–97 to 1998–99 is contained in Appendix 10 of the Report on the Government Information and Communication Service by the Public Administration Select Committee dated 29 July 1998. Copies of the report are available in the Libraries of the House. On 1 January 2000, there were 20 press officers in the Cabinet Office Press Office; at 1 January 2001, there were 16, and there are currently 18.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Children and Young People Strategy

Mr. Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will publish the consultation document on the Government's new strategy for children and young people. [16829]

Mr. Denham: When the Prime Minister set up the Children and Young People's Unit last year he asked it to develop and articulate a new overarching strategy for all children and young people.

Today, the Government are launching "Building a Strategy for Children and Young People: A consultation document" which sets out the Government's plans for a new vision and principles for the development of services for all children and young people, on which future Government investments will be based.

Full copies of the consultation pack are available in the Library.

Investors in People (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which companies located in the Buckingham constituency received Investors in People awards in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000 and (d) 2000–01. [14909]

John Healey: The information requested is not collected on a constituency basis.

Companies recognised as Investors in People in the town of Buckingham are as follows.

Year	Company
1997–98	Royal Latin School Hempton Fields, Nursing Home
1998–99	Fraser Associates plc Buckingham Middle School Buckingham School (London Road)
1999–2000	Assembly Technology and Test Ltd. Royal Latin School Hempton Fields, Nursing Home
2000–01	Page Hall Infants School

Class Sizes

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on average class sizes in secondary schools in Buckinghamshire local education authority in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000 and (d) 2000–01. [15768]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is shown in the table.

Average class sizes[1]: maintained secondary schools

January each year	Buckinghamshire LEA	England
1998	21.0	21.7
1999	21.6	21.9
2001	21.6	22.0

[1] Classes taught by one teacher.

The average size of a secondary class in Buckinghamshire is below the national average and improved in January 2001 after rising for the last two years.

Statemented Pupils

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the expenditure on statemented pupils in the last five years was in (a) Durham and (b) England excluding pupils in special schools. [16257]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Specialist Schools

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will publish the guidance for schools advising them how to apply for specialist school status in maths and computing; and what the core aims at such specialist schools will be. [16561]

Mr. Timms: Guidance setting out the criteria for specialist school applications in mathematics and computing has been published and is available to interested schools on request or by accessing the DfES website at http://www.dfee.gov.uk/specschl/. As for other specialist schools, the aims of Mathematics and Computing Colleges are to: raise standards of achievement, particularly in the specialist subjects, for all pupils; extend the range of opportunities available to students which best meet their needs and interests; raise standards of teaching and learning in the specialist subjects; develop within the schools characteristics which signal their changed ethos; benefit other schools and the wider community and strengthen the links between schools and private or charitable sector sponsors.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) name, (b) character, (c) date of designation, (d) agreed targets for each year within the period of designation and (e) unmet targets to date are of each designated specialist school or college in (i) West Berkshire, (ii) Hounslow, (iii) Oxfordshire, (iv) Wandsworth, (v) Hillingdon, (vi) Cornwall, (vii) Camden, (viii) Milton Keynes, (ix) Wokingham, (x) Hackney, (xi) Dorset and (xii) Bournemouth. [16759]

Mr. Timms: The information on the names of specialist schools, their character and the year in which they were designated as specialist schools in each of the named authorities is given in the following table. Information on the targets agreed with each school and targets which have not been met cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Early Years Excellence

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, (1) pursuant to her answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 539W, what criteria were used in deciding which new early excellence centres should be designated; [16600]

(2) pursuant to her answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 539W, if she will consider the proposal from Somerford Infant School as part of the next batch of early excellence centres designated; [16601]

(3) pursuant to her answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 539W, if she will list those applicants who have been invited to develop their plans further; [16602]

(4) pursuant to her answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 539W, on early years excellence, on what grounds the proposal for a centre at Somerford Infant School was considered not yet ready to join the programme; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the Government's response to the proposal and details of its invitation to the school to develop its plans further; [16603]

(5) pursuant to her answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 539W, on early years excellence, how many expressions of interest there were in joining the early excellence centres programme. [16604]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 20 November 2001]: Criteria and detailed requirements for joining the Early Excellence Centre (EEC) programme are set out in guidance issued by the Department. Guidance issued in February provided the framework for designations made so far this year. Additional guidance was issued on 5 October. The core activities of the programme which all centres are expected to deliver, or have well advanced and convincing plans to develop, remain unchanged and are as follows:

good quality integrated early education and daycare for children 0 to five requiring centre-based extended-day and extended-year provision; parental and carer involvement in the education and care of children, eg schemes for family learning, developing parenting skills, raising parents' expectations and in other ways; support services for children and parents and carers of children, eg health, counselling and information services, home support, drop-in facilities; effective early identification and intervention for children in need and children with special educational needs, with a view to improving children's prospects and, wherever appropriate, achieving inclusion in mainstream provision;

access to adult education and training by parents of young children and other adults, including those seeking skills and qualifications for employment; raising standards of integrated early years provision among other early years providers, including voluntary and private providers, childminders and other carers, by contributing to the training and development strategy of the Early Years Development and Childcare Partnership and through the development and dissemination of good practice.

Decisions on designations also take into account links with other Government programmes, geographical coverage, support of key partners, especially the local Early Years and Childcare Development Partnership (EYCDP), and commitment to multi-agency working.

The Department received 135 expressions of interest following the issue of the February guidance and 14 new centres were announced on 1 October. Officials are continuing to work closely with a further nine centres in Devon, Cornwall, Somerset, Wigan, Peterborough, Norfolk, Oxfordshire, Bedfordshire and Bury, on the basis of expressions of interest received in response to the February guidance. A further 93 expressions of interest in joining the programme have been received since additional guidance was issued in October.

Somerford Infant School's expression of interest in the EEC programme was submitted in response to the guidance issued in February. It was closely linked to emerging local proposals for the development of a Neighbourhood Nursery, but did not meet the requirements set out in the guidance for joint Neighbourhood Nursery/Early Excellence Centre schemes. Neither did it provide sufficient coverage of the core activities or relate them sufficiently well to the wider strategy of the EYCDP.

The Department wrote to the school inviting it to develop its plans further. I have placed a copy of that letter in the Library. The additional guidance issued in October indicates that those invited to do further development work should submit a fresh expression of interest taking into account feedback received. The guidance included full contact details for relevant officials at the Department and encouraged partners to make contact with them for further information.

The Department has not received a further expression of interest from Somerford Infant School. To continue to develop its interest in the programme the school should contact officials at the Department who will be most willing to discuss it with them.

Fast-Track Teacher Recruitment

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which company was awarded the contract to run the Fast-Track Teacher Recruitment Scheme; what the cost and duration of the contract is; what the agreed recruitment targets for each year of the contract were; how the company was chosen; and what the criteria are for success and best value. [16698]

Mr. Timms: Following a competitive tender exercise the contract for assessing Fast-Track applicants was let to a consortium headed by Interactive Skills on 2 October 2000. The cost of the contract in Financial Year 2000–01 was £2,375,081. The contract covers a three-year period, with an option for a two-year extension. Selection is done against standards and not to quota. Main criteria for success are delivery to time and within budget of: (i) a high quality multi-stage selection process which will successfully identify those applicants who meet the competencies and values laid down in the Education (School Teachers' Pay and Conditions) (No.7) Order 2001; (ii) relevant application brochures, website, forms and guidance to a high professional standard; (iii) a cycle of continuous review and improvement in efficiency and effectiveness of the activities of the consortium.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total cost was for each existing fast-track student of recruiting them to the Fast-Track Teacher Recruitment scheme; and what the total cost was for students recruited through the programme. [16697]

Mr. Timms: The Department for Education and Skills spent £4.6 million on the Fast-Track Programme in the last financial year 2000–01, the first year of its existence. This long-term investment supported (i) a national recruitment campaign which raised public awareness of the programme, established a credible presence at the upper end of the highly competitive graduate recruitment market, and attracted 1,574 applications; (ii) the design, development and implementation of a very high quality assessment and selection process which resulted in the offer of 135 places in the first round to potential future leaders of the profession; and (iii) the initial cost of setting-up enhanced Fast-Track Initial Teacher Training.

Online Centres

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many UK online centres in each constituency are to be funded by level 3 Capital Modernisation Fund; [10757]

(2) when she will provide an answer to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Cambridge on 24 October about the number of UK online centres in each constituency. [16838]

John Healey: A table showing the UK online centres to be funded by the third phase of the Capital Modernisation Fund by constituency has been placed in the Library.

The total of UK online centres funded by the third phase will produce a further 1,116 centres across England, covering 63 per cent. of constituencies throughout England.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Attendance Allowance

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has held with the Scottish Executive concerning continued payment of attendance allowance to those recipients who will become eligible for free personal care in Scotland from April 2002. [9742]

Maria Eagle: My right hon. Friend discussed this matter with the Scottish First Minister on a number of occasions.

ONE Pilot Scheme

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of cases of violence against staff working in the ONE pilot offices. [14039]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: From June 1999 to date, there were five cases of physical assault on members of our staff.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many payments by absent parents have been written off as irrecoverable in the last 12 months; what the average and upper decile value of such payments are; and how many payments are in the upper decile. [14360]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Andrew Turner, dated 20 November 2001:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions about the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Smith is unavailable and therefore I am writing to you on his behalf.

You asked how many payments by Non resident parents have been written off as irrecoverable by the Child Support Agency in the last 12 months.

The Child Support Agency does not write off child support maintenance debt. Section 30 of the Child Support Act 1991 allows the Secretary of State to decide when and how to collect and enforce maintenance but it does not allow him to dissolve that debt.

I hope this is helpful.

Pension Credit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which organisations have responded to the consultation documents on (a) the pension credit and (b) invalid care allowance. [15145]

Mr. McCartney: Over 400 responses were received to the Pension Credit formal consultation exercise "The Pension Credit: a consultation paper", Cm4900, November 2000, many welcoming our proposals. We continue to consider views and work closely with groups representing older people to deliver a modernised and dedicated service to meet pensioner needs. We will be announcing our response to the Pension Credit consultation in due course.

40 responses were received to the formal consultation exercise on Invalid Care Allowance which took place between 23 July and 15 October. The majority welcomed our proposals. A summary of the responses will be published on our website and the cabinet office website at the same time as the proposals are introduced into Parliament for Scrutiny.

Pensions (British Citizens Overseas)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many British citizens living abroad are in receipt of the British state retirement pension. [15338]

Mr. McCartney: There are about 866,300 pensioners living abroad in receipt of a UK state retirement pension.

Notes:

1. 5 per cent. sample from the Pension Strategy Computer System at 31 March 2001
2. Figures have been rounded to nearest hundred.
3. Figure is not confined to British nationals. UK retirement pension is paid to those who satisfy the relevant conditions

Departmental Funding

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the total unallocated funds within his departmental expenditure limit (a) in the start of the financial year and (b) to date. [16764]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: At the start of the financial year the Department for Work and Pensions Departmental Expenditure Limit included £322 million awaiting allocation from the Welfare Modernisation Fund and a Departmental Unallocated Provision of £56.088 million. To date there has been no change to these unallocated amounts.

SCOTLAND

Proceeds of Crime Bill

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions she has had with the Scottish Executive on putting before the Scottish Parliament the changes proposed in the confiscation provisions of the Proceeds of Crime Bill in so far as they relate to Scotland. [16789]

Mr. Foulkes: None. This is a matter for the Scottish Executive.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions she has had with the Scottish Executive on proposed changes to the Proceeds of Crime Bill. [16787]

Mr. Foulkes: I have liaised with the Deputy First Minister and the Lord Advocate on the Scottish provisions in the Bill, including the changes being considered for Part III.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps have been taken by her Department to ascertain the views of the Scottish Parliament on the changes proposed to the confiscation provisions of the Proceeds of Crime Bill in so far as they relate to Scotland. [16788]

Mr. Foulkes: We have liaised closely with the Scottish Executive Ministers and officials, but liaison with the Scottish Parliament is clearly a matter for the Scottish Executive to consider.

HOME DEPARTMENT

GHB

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reclassify gamma hydroxy butyrate as a drug; and what recent representations he has received on this issue. [14289]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Following the decision of the United Nations to control gamma hydroxy butyrate (GHB) under Schedule IV of the 1971 UN Convention on Psychotropic Substances, the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs (ACMD) met on 8 November to consider the drug's classification under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. I await their advice.

I have received a number of letters from members of the public, and some from hon. Members, expressing concern about the misuse of GHB.

Sex Offences

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his timetable is for the implementation of the recommendations of his Department's consultation paper entitled, "Setting the boundaries: Reforming the law on sex offences". [14453]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The recommendations of the Sex Offences Review to Government on reforming the law on sex offences were published in "Setting the Boundaries" in July 2000. We are currently considering the recommendations in the light of the over 700 responses to that consultation document. We will announce our conclusions and proposals for legislation once we have completed our consideration.

Passports (Confiscation)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 7 November 2001, Official Report, column 315W, on passports, whether clear evidence of a proposed intention to go to Afghanistan to fight for the Taliban or al-Qaeda is sufficient to demonstrate the undesirability of the grant or continued enjoyment of passport facilities on grounds of public interest; and if he will make a statement. [14818]

Angela Eagle: As indicated in my answer of 7 November, a passport may be withdrawn from a person whose past or proposed activities are so demonstrably undesirable that the grant or continued enjoyment of passport facilities would be contrary to the public interest. On the face of it, a clearly stated intention to fight directly against British interests would justify withdrawal of passport facilities on public interest grounds. Any case would be carefully considered on its individual merits.

Gulf War (Detentions)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) Iraqis and (b) other persons of middle eastern origin were detained during the Gulf war as potential threats to national security; and how many were subsequently (i) deported, (ii) charged with any offence, (iii) released without charge and (iv) compensated. [14296]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 13 November 2001]: Sixty-eight Iraqis and nine Palestinians were detained as threats to national security during the Gulf war. No Iraqis or "people of middle-eastern origin" were deported, although a number of Iraqis left of their own accord on receipt of the Home Secretary's notice of intention to deport. None was charged with an offence. All were released without charge following the conclusion of the war.

Riot Policing

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on establishing closer co-operation across the European Union in the field of riot policing. [15158]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: During the Belgian Presidency, officials of European Union member states (EU), including the European Police Chiefs Task Force, have held meetings to take forward the Conclusions of the Special Justice and Home Affairs Council on 13 July. This Council had considered security at European Summits and other major European Union events, following the disorder at the Gothenburg European Summit.

Discussions centred around building on existing police and judicial co-operation in this area, through the establishment of national contact points, to ensure enhanced exchange of information and effective co-operation before major events at which public order problems are anticipated.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are being followed in respect of awarding the contract for smart cards for asylum seekers. [16054]

Angela Eagle: There is no new contract for the Application Registration Card application. This will be an expansion of the existing Immigration and Asylum Fingerprint System as allowed under the original terms of the associated Official Journal of the European Community (OJEC) Notice of 30 November 1999. Compatibility with this system is essential, as existing equipment will be used to check the cards. Procurement will be effected by way of a Change Control Notice to the existing contract.

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the value of the contract for providing smart cards for asylum seekers. [16053]

Angela Eagle: The price for changing the existing Immigration and Asylum Fingerprint System contract has yet to be fixed. Budgetary estimates do exist but these could not be published without compromising our negotiating position with suppliers.

It is not normal practice to place budgetary estimates in the public domain.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers have been returned to the Democratic Republic of Congo since 1 May 1997. [15821]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The available information relates to the nationality of persons removed. Published statistics show that 60 nationals of the Democratic Republic of Congo who had sought asylum at some stage were removed from the United Kingdom in 1997 and 20 in 1998. A breakdown of the nationality of persons removed in 1999 to 2001 is not available due to data recording problems; these problems are being investigated and it is hoped that nationality information will be available at some stage in the future.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for political asylum were waiting to be heard on 1 February 2000. [15749]

Angela Eagle: There were 121,700 asylum applications awaiting an initial decision on 31 January 2000. This figure has been revised from 103,495 after a manual count of all asylum cases, and is rounded to the nearest hundred. A physical count was ordered by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to ensure the reliability of the statistics. Problems with the backlog figures had arisen from an accumulation of errors since the last manual count of outstanding asylum applications in 1996. The comparable figure for 31 August 2001 was 43,100.

Information on the number of cases awaiting an initial decision is published regularly on the Home Office website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.htm.

Heroin

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many places are available in (a) residential and (b) other centres for the treatment of heroin addiction. [16022]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: There are approximately 3,100 residential places available across England for those requiring treatment for substance misuse problems. Although the majority of these places will be taken up by opiate users, they are also for those addicted to other drugs. It is therefore not possible to estimate how many of these places are taken up by heroin addicts.

As far as non-residential centres are concerned there are approximately 450 drug services across the country. As these centres respond to different levels of demand at different times it is not possible to put a figure on the number of places they provide.

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many addicts are receiving methadone replacement treatment for heroin addiction. [16023]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Since the Home Office Addicts Index closed in 1997, the Regional Drug Misuse Databases (RDMDs) have been the main source of information on people presenting to drug treatment services with a drug problem. During the six month period ending 30 September 2000, around 21,200 people were reported to the RDMDs in England as presenting for treatment with heroin recorded as their main drug of misuse. Around 6,200 of these people were reported as being prescribed methadone for treatment at the time they presented; other heroin users may subsequently have been prescribed methadone.

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his latest estimate is of the number of heroin users in the UK. [16202]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Drug misuse databases (DMDs) are the main source of information on the number of heroin users. These databases report on the number of persons presenting to drug treatment services. Data are not available for the whole of the United Kingdom, but separate figures for Great Britain and Northern Ireland are provided here. In addition, the British Crime Survey (BCS) 2000 calculated a population estimate for 16 to 24-year-old heroin users in England and Wales. There has also been a recent research report published by academics that estimates the number of problematic opiate users in the United Kingdom.

The table provides a summary of estimates from different parts of the United Kingdom by various methods.

Figures on the number of heroin users by area and data source

Area	Year	Data source	Estimate
Great Britain	2000	DMD[1]	25,000 new episodes of treatment in 6 months
Northern Ireland	2000–01	DMD[2]	47 users reporting to agencies in 12 months
Northern Ireland	2000	Addicts Index[3]	233 users registered
England and Wales	2000	BCS[4]	46,000 users in the past year and 18,000 in the last month (by 16-to 24-year-olds)
United Kingdom	1996	Research report[5]	162, 544 to 243, 820 problematic users

Overseas Adoption

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the countries from which young children up to the age of five years were allowed entry into the United Kingdom for legal adoption by citizens of the United Kingdom in the last three years. [15750]

Angela Eagle: Information on the number of children admitted to the United Kingdom from overseas countries for adoption is not currently available.

The information that is available covers the number of children up to the age of five years given indefinite leave to remain in the United Kingdom on the basis of adoption. This number excludes those children given limited leave to remain and who are subsequently adopted through the United Kingdom courts, becoming British citizens on the date that the final adoption order is made.

A total of around 20 adopted children up to the age of five were given indefinite leave to remain in 2000. The corresponding totals for 1999 and 1998 were 10 and 20 respectively. The nationalities of the children were:

Brazil
Chile
China
Guatemala
Hong Kong
India
Jamaica
Kenya
Lebanon
Nigeria
Pakistan
St. Lucia

South Africa
Trinidad and Tobago
Ukraine
United States of America
Vietnam
Zimbabwe.

There were fewer than 10 cases for each nationality.

Correspondence

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 25 September from the hon. Member for Putney with regard to his constituent Mrs. Kulsoom Begum Gill (Refs. G339000 and B523773). [14938]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 19 November 2001]: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 21 November 2001. I am sorry I did not send an earlier reply.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to secure a substantive reply from the National Asylum Support Service reference IMG/01247/1385/587 in relation to the letters of 18 October and 8 November from the hon. Member for Manchester, Central regarding his constituent Mrs. H. A. F. [16317]

Angela Eagle: An official from the National Asylum Support Service responded to my hon. Friend on 16 November.

Aylesbury Young Offenders Institution

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress with work on the perimeter fencing at Aylesbury Young Offenders Institution. [16316]

Beverley Hughes: The latest position is that the work is scheduled to begin in March 2002, and will take approximately one year to complete. In the meantime, young prisoners requiring the highest level of physical security are not being held at Aylesbury.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future of the healthcare centre at Aylesbury Young Offenders Institution. [16312]

Beverley Hughes: The health care centre is under used because of the success of the strategy for treating prisoners on the wings. The Governor is examining a range of options for converting part of the health care centre for other accommodation or activity uses.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his response to the annual report for 2000–01 of the board of visitors of Aylesbury Young Offenders Institution. [16314]

Beverley Hughes: I replied to the Chair of the Board on 13 November 2001 and I am placing a copy of my reply in the Library.

Sentencing Review

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the results of the public consultation on the review of sentencing. [15021]

Mr. Keith Bradley: "Making Punishments Work", the report of a review of the sentencing framework undertaken by John Halliday—and known as the Halliday report—was published on 5 July and responses were invited by 31 October. The report was sent to a large number of individuals and organisations and a series of meetings were held with members of the public and representatives of the judiciary and other bodies to encourage consideration of the report and obtain views.

In order to encourage wider public involvement in the debate, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, launched the Fairer Sentencing website which contained a quiz, a facility to e-mail views and an on-line debating provision. In addition debate was stimulated in local, regional and national media and hon. Members were encouraged to initiate discussion in their constituencies. A number of conferences have also been convened.

The level of interest and response has been considerable. Over 120 detailed responses have been received from individuals or organisations with connections to the criminal justice system and even more from members of the public by letter or e-mail or through the debating channel. In addition, the website received 33,482 page hits, the home page was visited 5,831 times, 2,839 copies of the layman's summary of the Halliday review were downloaded, 1,171 copies of the Home Secretary's speech on sentencing reform were downloaded and 1,226 people completed the quiz on the website. This has been a unique opportunity to hold a public consultation on the point of sentencing and many members of the public have offered their own suggestions and alternatives.

There has been almost unanimous support for the need for change to the present sentencing framework, accompanied by a strong message that the change should be done well, properly resourced and then allowed to stand the test of time. There has also been broad support for the general thrust of the proposals, in particular the need for radical changes in the approach to short prison sentences. There is widespread recognition that it is unacceptable to have no supervision for an individual leaving a short prison sentence and that there are many opportunities for improving the effectiveness of both a prison sentence and a community sentence.

There has also been considerable support for greater transparency in sentencing.

There has been mixed support for the greater involvement of the courts in the management of sentences through review hearings. Many commentators have seen the strength of the arguments in terms of principle but have expressed doubts about whether the enormous practical difficulties could be overcome sufficiently well to justify that intervention in every case.

Officials are now analysing the responses in greater detail and a summary of the responses will be published, with copies in the Library, towards the end of January 2002. I then anticipate publishing a White Paper in spring 2002.

Fireworks

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many reported incidents of injuries to (a) domestic pets and (b) other animals due to the sale of fireworks have been reported (i) prior to 5 November,

(ii) on 5 November and (iii) after 5 November in each of the last five years in (A) Scotland and (B) the United Kingdom; [13179]

(2) how many reported incidents of damage to property with fireworks in each of the last five years have involved (a) minors and (b) adults as alleged perpetrators of the incidents in (i) Scotland and (ii) the UK; [13191]

(3) how many incidents of damage to property with fireworks in the last five years have occurred (a) prior to 5 November, (b) on 5 November and (c) after 5 November in each year in (i) Scotland and (ii) the UK; [13192]

(4) how many incidents of injuries to (a) domestic pets and (b) other animals have been reported due to the sale of fireworks in each of the last five years in (i) Scotland and (ii) the United Kingdom. [13183]

Ms Hewitt [holding answers 8 November 2001]: I have been asked to reply because of my Department's responsibility for consumer and product safety which includes fireworks.

I regret that the information requested is not held by my Department.

Royal Parks Constabulary

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civilian and uniformed staff of the Royal Parks constabulary have left employment in police service on grounds of ill health or disability in the last five years. [15654]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency and I have asked its Chief Executive, William Weston, to reply.

Letter from William Weston to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 21 November 2001:

I have been asked by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the number of RPC officers who have left on health grounds, because this is an operational matter which is the responsibility of the Royal Parks Agency.

Fifteen civilian and uniformed staff of the Royal Parks Constabulary have left employment in police service on the grounds of ill health or disability in the last five years.

TREASURY

VAT

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for the financial years (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02 to the most recent date for which information is available to him (i) the number of VAT returns received by HM Customs and Excise, (ii) the number of trader visits made by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and (iii) the additional net tax found on visits. [11372]

Mr. Boateng: The information is as follows.

Number of VAT Returns	7,330,747	7,344,453	3,566,462
Number of visits made	170,718	166,305	82,653
Additional tax found (£ billion)	1.9	2.3	1.0

Regulation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many regulations were introduced by his Department in each year since May 1997. [14427]

Dawn Primarolo: Regulatory Impact Assessments (Compliance Cost Assessments for measures introduced before August 1998) have been completed in respect of all measures which have significantly imposed or reduced costs on businesses, charities or voluntary bodies. These are available from the House Libraries.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made in introducing zero rates of stamp duty in deprived areas. [15942]

Mr. Boateng: The Government have been considering how best to implement this exemption and an announcement will be made shortly.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to reform stamp duty on shares. [15920]

Ruth Kelly: The Government keep the whole tax system under regular review in order to meet their objectives for a fair and efficient tax system.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact of stamp duty on shares on financial exclusion. [15921]

Ruth Kelly: There is no evidence that stamp duty on shares has any impact on financial exclusion.

Financial Services and Markets Act

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact on the status of friendly societies of the coming into force of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000. [15916]

Ruth Kelly: The constitutional status of friendly societies as member-owned mutual societies will be unchanged by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (FSMA). That Act will harmonise the regulation of friendly societies and other insurance business under a single regulator, the Financial Services Authority (FSA).

EU Moneys (Scotland)

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each year since 1979 in (a) cash terms, (b) real terms and (c) as a percentage of the UK total, the total value of EU moneys spent in Scotland. [16178]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Details of all EC receipts which have been paid in Scotland are not held centrally for this period. However, table 14d of the Departmental Report of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Departments (Cm 5116) contains information on receipts from the EC budget, by Department, and fund, since 1995–96 including for the Scottish Office (now Scottish Executive) (the UK's EAGGF Guarantee receipts are shown in the table under the Intervention Board). Similar information for earlier years was published in previous reports.

Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what involvement his Department has had with the renegotiation of the Ministry of Defence contract with EDS for the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency; and if he will make a statement. [16590]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Ministry of Defence was responsible for the reconstruction of the Armed Forces Personnel and Administration Agency (AFPAA) contract with EDS and HM Treasury was not involved. The Ministry of Defence required my approval as Chief Secretary to the Treasury to proceed with reconstructing the contract. This approval was given following discussions between the Ministry of Defence and the Office of Government Commerce, who are represented on the AFPAA Owner's Board.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employees of (a) his Department and (b) agencies sponsored by his Department work in (i) London, (ii) areas benefiting from EU objective 1 status, (iii) areas with objective 2 status and (iv) other areas. [16112]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The information is as follows:

Department/Agency	London	Objective 1	Objective 2	Other
Office for National Statistics	919	614	1,026	911
Customs and Excise	5,984	2,837	1,941	12,694
Inland Revenue	6,517	8,134	36,885	16,519
Valuation Office Agency	766	194	1,197	2,000
Royal Mint	10	1,007	0	0
National Savings	101	0	15	0
Total	15,450	12,786	41,064	32,124

Earnings Statistics

Julie Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the hourly earnings of women as a proportion of the earnings of men for graduates who graduated in the years (a) 1990, (b) 1991, (c) 1992, (d) 1993, (e) 1994 and (f) 1995 at the latest available date. [16136]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Julie Morgan, dated 21 November 2001:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the hourly earnings of graduates by year of graduation. I am replying in his absence (16136).

The Labour Force Survey (LFS) provides estimates of average gross hourly earnings for graduates of working age, ie men aged 16–64 and women aged 16–59. However, the LFS does not ask people what year they graduated. Therefore, it does not provide estimates of graduates' earnings by year of graduation.

Railtrack

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average loss to private shareholders as a result of the administration of Railtrack. [16027]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

The administrator will be seeking to obtain the best value he can for the assets in Railtrack plc. If there is a surplus value, net of liabilities, this will be made available to Railtrack Group plc and its shareholders.

International Tax Recoveries

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 25 October 2001, Official Report, column 374W, on international tax recoveries, if the two recoveries of over £100 million were from companies linked as sisters or subsidiaries; if they were over £200 million; and what the largest sum recovered was. [15135]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The two cases involving recoveries in excess of £100 million in the year 2000 are unrelated. The amount recovered from each taxpayer exceeded £200 million. Because of the Inland Revenue's duty to maintain taxpayer confidentiality it is not possible to disclose precisely how much was recovered from any single taxpayer.

Clergy (Working Families Tax Credit)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of clergy claiming working families tax credits. [16294]

Dawn Primarolo: The Working Families Tax Credit Quarterly Enquiry shows the number of recipient families in which the main earner has a professional occupation. It is not known how many of these main earners are clergy.

BCCI

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what proposals have been made for the settlement of the BCCI action against the Bank of England; [15915]

(2) what the cost is of the litigation by the liquidators of BCCI against the Bank of England. [15913]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government are not a party to this litigation.

Special Purpose Vehicles

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many special purpose vehicles to facilitate public-private finance the Treasury has approved in the last 12 months. [15803]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Treasury does not approve individual special purpose vehicles.

The term special purpose vehicle is often used to describe the corporate body created when private sector companies join together to provide services under a specific public-private partnership. It will be the contractual counterparty to the public sector partner.

Individual Departments will evaluate special purpose vehicles bidding for contracts against standards set for capability, technical capacity, and financial and economic standing. Departments may also have concerns about changes in the special purpose vehicle's shareholders during the life of the contract. Office of Government Commerce guidance on Standardisation of PFI contracts contains advice to Departments on this subject.

Friendly Societies

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if changes in the status of friendly societies arising from the coming into force of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 will affect the liability of friendly societies for particular taxes; and if he will estimate for each particular tax liability change the impact on revenues which will arise over the first year in which the changes are implemented. [15917]

Mr. Andrew Smith: There are no changes to the tax liabilities of friendly societies as a result of the coming into force of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000.

Inland Revenue

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the Public and Commercial Services Union on his Department's proposal to privatise the Inland Revenue's distraint work in England and Wales; for what reasons his Department has introduced the proposal; and if he will make a statement. [16355]

Dawn Primarolo: I have received a number of representations from members of the Public and Commercial Services Union, and will be taking into account their comments as further consideration is given to this proposal.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on the quality of public service which would result from the privatisation of the Inland Revenue's distraint work in England and Wales; what plans he has to introduce a regulatory framework for bailiffs working on behalf of the Inland Revenue; and if he will make a statement. [16356]

Dawn Primarolo: The implications of the proposed change are still under consideration.

HEALTH

Coronary Heart Disease

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the incidence of coronary heart disease among women and men, broken down by UK standard region, was (a) in the last 12 months and (b) (i) 10, (ii) 20 and (iii) 30 years ago. [9853]

Jacqui Smith: Figures for the incidence of coronary heart disease across the United Kingdom are not available on a consistent basis over 30 years.

The table shows the number of finished consultant episodes for hospital in-patients in England (this is not the same as incidence data) where the main diagnosis was ischaemic heart disease. Hospital episode statistics (HES) data only go back as 1989–90. Prior to this, information is not available in the format requested. Until 1985, data were collected via the hospital in-patient inquiry, which is not directly comparable with HES data due to a number of changes in the methods of collection. Changes in the boundaries between regional health authorities which existed in 1989–90 and the regional offices which are in place now mean it is not possible to make direct comparisons by region over the 10 years.

Note:

1. An FCE is defined as a period of patient care under one consultant in one health care provider. The figures do not represent the number of patients, as one person may have several episodes within the year.

2. The main diagnosis is the first of seven diagnosis fields in the HES data set, and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.

3. Regional Health Authority/Regional office boundaries have changed since 1989–90, but the HES database system does not have the facility to present earlier years in terms of 1999–2000 RO boundaries.

4. Data for 1989–90 are adjusted for both coverage and unknown/invalid clinical data, 1999–2000 figures are not yet adjusted for shortfalls.

Fire-safe Cigarettes

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of fire-safe cigarettes. [11864]

Jacqui Smith: Officials have had discussions with representatives of the main manufacturers in the United Kingdom on the possible effects of certain additives on the burning rates of cigarettes.

One manufacturer is engaged on the development of a cigarette paper modified to control the burn rate.

Officials are aware of the development of standards governing ignition propensity and at least one branch conforming to these standards has been introduced in the United States.

Fluoride

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of whether proposals to raise the level of fluoride in drinking water involve the use of hexafluorosilic acid. [13685]

Jacqui Smith: Hexaflurosilicic acid (also called hydrofluorosilicic acid) is approved for use in artificial fluoridation schemes under the Water Industry Act 1991 and is subject to compliance with a Code of Practice on the Technical Aspects of the Fluoridation of Water Supplies published by the Department of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

The code covers the design, construction, operation and maintenance of fluoridation plant to ensure that the correct level of fluoride is added and there are fail-safe precautions against overdosing. The code includes a detailed specification for added chemicals with advice to water companies on how to check the purity of the chemicals against the specification.

All substances used in the treatment of water supplies are approved by the Drinking Water Inspectorate, acting on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for DEFRA.

Social Workers (North-East)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action the Government are taking to recruit additional (a) psychiatric and (b) approved social workers in the north-east. [15024]

Jacqui Smith: On 19 October 2001, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health announced a £1.5 million recruitment campaign, which is designed to increase the number of people interested in careers in social work and social care work. As well as this action to tackle recruitment problems, the Department is also working with the Local Government Association and the Association of Directors of Social Services to help employers implement policies to improve recruitment and retention of staff.

Children At Risk

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the reasons that children's names are removed from the at risk register; and if he will make a statement. [16760]

Jacqui Smith: A child's name may be removed from the register if:

> It is judged that the child is no longer at continuing risk of significant harm requiring safeguarding by means of a child protection plan (for example, the risk of harm has been reduced by action taken through the child protection plan; the child and family's circumstances have changed; or re-assessment of the child and family indicates that a child protection plan is not necessary). Under these circumstances, only a child protection review conference can decide that registration is no longer necessary;
> The child and family have moved permanently to another local authority area. In such cases, the receiving local authority should convene a child protection conference within 15 days of being notified of the move, only after which event may de-registration take place in respect of the original local authority's child protection register;
> The child has reached 18 years of age, has died or has permanently left the United Kingdom.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the reduction in the number of children added to the at risk register between 31 March 2000 and 31 March 2001. [16761]

Jacqui Smith: The number of additions and deletions to child protection registers during the years ending 31 March 2000 and 2001 are given in the table:

Registrations to and de-registrations from child protection registers during the years ending 31 March 2000 and 2001, and children on registers at 31 March of each years

England Numbers

	All children[1]	Boys	Girls
On the register at 31 March
2000	30,300	15,400	14,600
2001	26,800	13,700	12,900
Registrations
2000	29,300	14,500	13,900
2001	27,000	13,300	12,700
De-registrations
2000	30,500	15,300	15,100
2001	30,200	15,400	14,700

[1] Includes unborn children

The decrease in the number of registrations during 2000–01 (and the consequent fall in numbers on the registers at 31 March 2001) is largely due to the majority of local councils excluding temporary registrations from their figures (children who are on the register in one authority but located in another and are simultaneously on the register of both councils). The year ending 31 March 2001 was the first year in which the Department of Health has requested that only the council with the original responsibility for the child should include the child in its figures until the receiving council has held a child protection conference to determine whether the child should instead be registered by that council. There has been some element of double counting of these children in previous years.

Bed Blocking

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes have been made to the calculation of bed blocking since 1997. [15319]

Jacqui Smith: A blocked bed occurs when a patient is ready for transfer from an acute hospital bed but is still occupying that bed. That definition has not altered since 1997. Until recently, published statistics have been based on the number of beds occupied by people aged 75 years or more. Current and future statistics on bed blocking will include all blocked beds.

Cane Hill Secure Unit

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to improve the security at the disused Medium Secure Unit at Cane Hill, Coulsdon, Croydon; and if he will make a statement. [15494]

Jacqui Smith: As a result of recent incidents on the Cane Hill site a range of additional security measures have been agreed. These include the erection of steel palisade fencing around all redundant buildings and an increased security presence.

Nursing Accommodation

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are in hospital in England awaiting nursing accommodation at the latest available time. [15385]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 19 November 2001]: Information on delayed discharges of patients of all ages in England is collected centrally on a quarterly basis. Information on delays of patients awaiting nursing home placements is not separately identified.

In September 2001 the number of all patients whose discharge was delayed due to awaiting nursing and residential placement was 1,442.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Freedom of Information Act

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on what date his Department established a working group of officials to prepare his Department for the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and on what dates this committee has met since it was set up. [14770]

Mr. Wills: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor announced on 13 November that the publication scheme provisions of the Freedom of Information Act will be implemented for central Government in November 2002 at the start of a rolling programme across the public sector and that the right of access provisions of the Act will be implemented for all public authorities in January 2005.

No such working group has yet been set up. We have a project plan outlining how FOI will be successfully implemented throughout the Department. We have already appointed an FOI champion at Board level and a full-time implementation project manager. Awareness training has already been held and more is planned. As part of the plan we will be setting up a working group of key officials and a network of staff to consider and advise on implementation issues for the Department.

Asset-freezing Order

Mr. Flight: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many requests for legal aid have been received from persons disputing through the courts an asset-freezing order relating to the terrorist activities; and, what assessment she has made of the likely sums involved. [16025]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Legal Services Commission's Special Cases Unit, which would receive any request for funding in cases involving asset-freezing orders based on allegations of terrorist activities, has no record of receiving any such requests.

DEFENCE

Overseas Entertainment

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision has been made for UK forces' overseas entertainment in the current financial year; and if he will give equivalent figures for each of the past five financial years. [16205]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 November 2001]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 12 November 2001, Official Report, columns 525–26W.

"Rapid Effects"

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place a copy of the Director of Land Warfare's "Rapid Effects" paper in the Library. [15514]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The paper "A Rapid Effect Capability for the Future Army" was produced for internal discussion purposes. It has been used subsequently to inform wider force development work. It has also contributed to other work to determine the optimum balance of future United Kingdom land forces.

A version of the paper, which omits sensitive material, has been prepared and I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

RAF Bases

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are based at (a) RAF Lyneham and (b) RAF Brize Norton. [17042]

Mr. Ingram: On 1 November there were 2,469 RAF personnel based at RAF Lyneham and 3,113 RAF personnel based at RAF Brize Norton.

RAF Lyneham

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will guarantee the long-term future of RAF Lyneham; and if he will make a statement; [17155]

(2) if he will provide an assurance that he has no plans to close RAF Lyneham. [15228]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently no plans to close RAF Lyneham. The hon. Member is aware however that a study has been commissioned as part of the Ministry of Defence's normal planning process, to consider the future roles of RAF Lyneham, RAF Brize Norton and RAF St. Mawgan.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many medically downgraded personnel are serving at RAF Lyneham; if they may be deployed in the Falklands; and how that policy of deployment differs from that of the (a) Army and (b) Royal Navy. [15232]

Mr. Hoon: There are 818 medically downgraded personnel serving at RAF Lyneham. Of these, 238 are fit for detachment to the Falkland Islands. The policy for deployment of service personnel to the Falkland Islands is centrally set by the Surgeon General's Department. It is designed to prevent risk to individuals with pre-existing medical conditions. Royal Naval personnel who are graded fit for service worldwide but subject to a specific medical condition may be deployed to the Falkland Islands if their condition permits. Army personnel must be employable on full combatant duties. RAF personnel must be fit for the full ground duties of their branch or trade, including all general service duties.

Helicopters

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Army's Lynx AH7 helicopters will be withdrawn from service. [16555]

Mr. Ingram: Under current plans the majority of the Lynx AH7 fleet will reach the end of their service life towards the end of this decade.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Army's Gazelle helicopters will be withdrawn from service. [16554]

Mr. Ingram: Under current plans the Army's Gazelle fleet will be withdrawn from service towards the end of the next decade.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the oldest airframes of the (a) Sea King HC4, (b) Sea King HAR3 and (c) Puma HC1 operational with Her Majesty's forces. [16552]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is in the table.

Helicopter	Serial number	Entered service
Sea King HC Mk4	ZA291	1979
Sea King HAR 3	XZ585	1978
Puma HC 1	XW198 and XW199	1971

Warship Deployment (Caribbean)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which warships will be in the Caribbean on anti-drugs patrol from mid-November to mid-February. [16549]

Mr. Ingram: Counter-drugs patrols in the Caribbean theatre of operation are undertaken by the RN as one task of the Atlantic Patrol Task (North) duty ship.

As is standard operating procedure, no RN ship will be deployed to the Caribbean between mid-November and mid-February although a ship will be held in the UK on reduced notice to deploy to the Caribbean area of operations. Royal Fleet Auxiliary Gold Rover will, however, remain in the region throughout this period and will provide additional presence and assistance to ships of other nations int he Caribbean involved in the counter-drugs effort.

HMS Cromer

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons HMS Cromer has been decommissioned; and what plans there are to dispose of her. [16548]

Dr. Moonie: The decision to decommission HMS Cromer on 23 November 2001 was taken as a result of the policy-led Strategic Defence Review. The Review recognised the reduced requirement for mine clearance in home waters and concluded that a balanced force of 22 Sandown and Hunt class minehunters would be sufficient to meet envisaged levels of threat, operational tasking and commitments rather than the 23 previously planned. Plans for her disposal, including alternative Ministry of Defence use or sale, are currently under consideration.

Racial Discrimination

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cases of racial discrimination have been brought against the (a) Army, (b) RAF and (c) Navy in the last 12 months. [17204]

Mr. Ingram: The numbers of formal complaints of racial discrimination from Service personnel in the last 12 months are shown in the table.

Year/Service	Number of formal complaintsof racial discrimination
1 November 2000–31 October 2001
Naval Service	0
Army	10
1 November 2000–30 September 2001
RAF[1]	3

Medical Downgrading

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel who have been medically downgraded (a) have continued to be and (b) have subsequently been employed in operational areas in the last 12 months. [14269]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 21 November 2001]: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel were medically downgraded in each service in each month of the last 12 months. [14268]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 21 November 2001]: The information requested is given in the table for the Army and RAF. The figures requested are not available for naval personnel. As at 20 November 2001, there were 3,678 trained naval personnel in a medically downgraded category.

Date	Army[1]	RAF[2]
November 2000	9,284	3,772
December 2000	9,369	3,801
January 2001	9,431	3,813
February 2001	9,529	3,907
March 2001	9,595	3,860
April 2001	9,365	3,888
May 2001	9,674	3,893
June 2001	9,675	3,869
July 2001	9,700	3,873
August 2001	9,718	3,871
September 2001	9,788	3,867
October 2001	9,837	3,888

[1] The figures for medically downgraded Army personnel comprise personnel at all levels of medical downgrading below fully fit. Of these, some two thirds are able to be deployed on military operations but not at the front line. The figures comprise trained personnel only.

[2] The figures for medically downgraded RAF personnel comprise personnel who are considered unfit for any type of deployment. The figures comprise trained and untrained personnel.

Hercules Aircraft

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many air-to-air refuelling probes have been purchased for the C130J; and how many aeroplanes will be operational by 1 January 2002. [15141]

Dr. Moonie: Nineteen air-to-air refuelling probes have been purchased for the C130J fleet. Full operational air-to-air refuelling capability is planned for late 2002. This will be achieved incrementally in accordance with an agreed Flight Clearance programme

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the Defensive Aids Suite capabilities on the C130K Hercules aircraft; how it compares with the US equivalent; and what plans he has to install it on the C130J. [15223]

Dr. Moonie: The capability of the C130K Defensive Aids Suite was assessed as part of the installation development and acceptance programme, based on system requirements arising from detailed threat and countermeasure evaluation. The C130K Defensive Aids Suite will not be fitted to the C130J as Lockheed Martin is currently working to finalise an installation concept for a higher performance defensive system.

The capabilities of systems operated on US aircraft are a matter for the US authorities.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to acquire a secure communications system for the C130J. [15224]

Dr. Moonie: The operational advantages of secure communications systems are well recognised and the capability is already fitted to some aircraft and others are due to be fitted. As with any defence equipment capability, decisions have to be made about priorities. A secure communications capability is not currently planned to be fitted to the Hercules C130J aircraft as we have higher operational priorities

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of (a) the fulfilment by Lockheed Martin of the terms and conditions of the contract for the supply of C130J spares and (b) the likelihood that the terms of that contract provide sufficient spares support to achieve 80 per cent. serviceability of the aircraft once fully trained crews are available. [15225]

Dr. Moonie: Lockheed Martin is currently meeting the terms and conditions of the contract for the supply of C130J spares.

The generation of serviceable C130J aircraft is not solely dependent on spares supplied by Lockheed Martin but also on the provision of spares from other sources and a number of other factors.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence until what date a Defensive Aid Suite was designated as essential for deployments of Hercules aircraft in the middle east; and for what reason this designation was downgraded to desirable. [15226]

Mr. Ingram: I am withholding details about the defensive measures associated with aircraft deployments in accordance with Exemption 1a of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when 16 Air Assault Brigade last exercised with Hercules aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [15230]

Mr. Ingram: 16 Air Assault Brigade last exercised with Hercules aircraft during Exercise Eagles Eye—an aviation battlegroup exercise that took place between 29 October and 9 November 2001. One Hercules aircraft supported the exercise on the morning of Friday 2 November 2001.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) personnel and (b) tonnes of freight have been carried by Hercules aircraft from RAF Lyneham in the last 12 months. [15140]

Mr. Ingram: In the last 12 months Hercules aircraft have carried (a) 38,721 personnel and (b) 10,144 tonnes of freight to and from RAF Lyneham.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the operations upon which Hercules aircraft have been deployed over the last 12 months; and what assessment he has made of the performance of (a) the aircraft and (b) service personnel of RAF Lyneham. [15139]

Mr. Ingram: The operations upon which Hercules aircraft have been deployed over the last 12 months are: Operation Agricola, Operation Banner, Operation Basilica, Operation Bolton, Operation Deliberate Forge, Operation Palatine, Operation Warden, Operation Engadine, Operation Silkman, Operation Contravene, Operation Resinate North, Operation Resinate South, Falkland Islands, Operation Bessemer and Operation Veritas. Both the Hercules C130J and C130K have consistently met operational requirements. Personnel at RAF Lyneham have continued to perform to the very high standards typical of the armed services.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the serviceability in percentage terms is of the RAF fleet of Hercules (a) C130Hon. and (b) C130J; and if he will make a statement outlining the restricting factors on performance. [15138]

Mr. Ingram: In answering this question it has been assumed that C130H should read C130K.

In performance terms, the operational performance, or operability, of the C130J, when compared to the C130K, is as follows:

Range (without external fuel tanks): 15 per cent. further

Operating ceiling: 20 per cent. higher

Normal speed: 13 per cent. faster

Fuel economy at operating ceiling: 20 per cent. better

Field length at take off: 30 per cent. less required

Field length at landing: 10 per cent. less required

Much reduced running costs.

Although in all other respects the two aircraft have similar levels of performance, there are at present certain temporary limitations on the C130J's operation. These issues are being addressed and operational clearances will proceed incrementally. Full clearance is planned by the end of 2002.

Defence Medical Services

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many clinicians have (a) joined and (b) left the Defence Medical Services in each of the last 10 years. [14304]

Dr. Moonie: The numbers of trained medical and dental officers joining and leaving the Defence Medical Services (DMS) in the last nine financial years are provided in the table. No figures are available before financial year 1992–93. Trained medical officers have completed a medical degree, finished a year as a pre-registered medical practitioner and undertaken their initial officer training.

Trained dental officers have completed a dental degree and their initial officer training. The intake figures include those who have completed their medical or dental training under DMS sponsorship.

	Medical officers			Dental officers
Year	Intake	Trained outflow	Net difference	Intake	Trained outflow	Net difference
2000–01	68	59	9	22	17	5
1999–2000	76	71	5	19	26	–7
1998–99	71	75	–4	30	25	5
1997–98	62	83	–21	16	23	–7
1996–97	86	160	–74	19	39	–20
1995–96	64	170	–106	14	37	–23
1994–95	51	120	–69	13	37	–24
1993–94	35	78	–43	19	34	–15
1992–93	72	80	–8	25	31	–6

Notes:

1. The figures in the table include transfers between the services, re-entrants and transfers from medical specialties to dentistry.
2. It is not possible to identify the exact intake dates of army medical and dental officers. The Army intake figures included in the table have been calculated by taking the difference in strengths at the beginning and the end of the year plus the outflow.
3. The intake figures comprise former medical and dental cadets and, in the RAF, former bursars plus direct entrant qualified doctors and dentists.

Territorial Army

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the changes he is making to the advertising account for the Territorial Army. [R] [17079]

Dr. Moonie: Following a restructuring of the external marketing operations of the Army Training and Recruiting Agency's recruiting division, the decision has been taken to seek a re-tender for the national advertising contract for both the Territorial and the Regular Armies. The requirement will be re-tendered over the next few weeks and it is hoped to identify the successful tenderer in mid-December.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 7 November 2001, Official Report, column 250W, on the Territorial Army, if he will make a statement about the reasons for which those members of the Territorial Army unfit for role have been so categorised. [14377]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence does not specifically categorise members of the Territorial Army (TA) as unfit for role.

As I explained in my answer to the hon. Member on 7 November 2001, Official Report, column 250W, members of the TA are considered fit for role when they have completed two phases of training which will vary in length depending on an individual's role and trade. Given that the fit for role numbers are based on 100 per cent. of deployable establishments, the majority of those who have not yet achieved fit for role status are undergoing their required training.

The Strategic Defence Review concluded that, in the light of the likely warning time for any large deployment, just over half the TA strength should be fit for role at any one time and as I explained in my answer on 26 October 2001, Official Report, columns 403–04W, to the hon. Member for Hereford (Mr. Keetch) the TA is very close to meeting that requirement.

Unlike the Regular Army, the TA holds its untrained soldier strength against its deployable establishment and in order to replace the TA wastage of 25–30 per cent. per year, equivalent numbers of personnel must be recruited and trained to the required standard.

Military Exercises

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many exercises involving tactical air transport have been (a) cancelled and (b) reduced over the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [15229]

Mr. Ingram: Since 1 April 2000 when records on the cancellation of exercises involving the tactical air transport element began, 10 exercises have been cancelled. Records were not maintained before this date. The cancellation of these exercises has had no impact on our ability to conduct operations. Records of exercise reduction are not maintained.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the military exercises that have been cancelled in the last 24 months together with the reason for cancellation. [14470]

Mr. Ingram: The table covers those exercises from the Ministry of Defence's Defence Exercise Programme (which lists some 350 exercises each year), the exercise programmes of the Front Line Commands, the Permanent Joint HQ and the Defence Logistic Organisation HQ which have been cancelled in the last 24 months. It does not include unit-organised exercises, details of which are not held centrally and which could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Combat Effectiveness

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what physical tests were included in the combat effectiveness gender study; and if he will publish the (a) male and (b) female failure rates. [14471]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 1 November 2001, Official Report, column 767W.

Somme Battlefields

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has collated on proposals to exhume British and Commonwealth war dead and clear cemeteries in the Somme battlefields in connection with major construction proposals. [16819]

Dr. Moonie: The Commonwealth War Graves Commission is responsible for the care and maintenance of the graves of all British and Commonwealth war dead who fell in the two World Wars and the memorials to those who have no known grave. Neither the Ministry of Defence nor the Commission have received proposals about major construction projects on the Somme which could require the exhumation and relocation of war graves.

Air-to-Air Refuelling

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to bring in air-to-air fuel replenishment for special forces helicopters. [15231]

Mr. Ingram: The hon. Member will be aware that it is our long-standing policy not to comment on matters relating to the operational capability of the UK special forces. I am therefore withholding this information under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, which covers information whose disclosure would be harmful to national security, defence or international relations.

Tactical Air Transport

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual allocation of hours for tactical air transport training; and what is the actual number of hours training achieved in the last 12 months. [15227]

Mr. Ingram: From 1 November 2000 to 31 October 2001, 3,827 hours were allocated for tactical air transport training. Of these, 2,910, or 76 per cent. were achieved. This type of training is very dependent on weather conditions. Restrictions imposed by foot and mouth disease and additional operational tasking also contributed to the shortfall in training hours. Despite, this, crews have met their Basic Training Requirements.

Absence

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel have been absent without leave in each of the last 10 years, broken down by service. [14376]

Mr. Ingram: The numbers of service personnel recorded as being absent without leave, by individual service, during each of the last 10 years up to 31 December 2000, are shown in the table.

Service year	Royal Navy	Royal Marines	Army[1]	Royal Air Force	Total
1992	75	23	2,093	95	2,286
1993	53	15	1,776	72	1,916
1994	57	25	1,548	35	1,665
1995	37	12	1,211	36	1,296
1996	45	10	1,189	36	1,280
1997	32	10	1,181	23	1,246
1998	29	6	1,385	26	1,446
1999	34	9	1,537	34	1,614
2000	57	[2]10	1,917	27	2,011

[1] Army personnel can be formally reported as absent without leave immediately, the Royal Navy and RAF only initiate formal reporting procedures after the seventh day of absence

[2] Figure includes two Army personnel serving with the Royal Marines

Reservists

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the most recent figures, by service, for those reservists on full-time reserve service. [14469]

Dr. Moonie: The most recent figures, by service, for those reservists on full-time reserve service as at 1 October are:

Naval service (inc. RM): 619

C-17s

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had about the effectiveness of the C-17; whether he has considered buying the four C-17s which are leased; what plans he has to expand 99 Squadron, using further C-17s; and if he will make a statement. [16262]

Dr. Moonie: The C-17s, which achieved their in-service date three months ahead of schedule, have fully met our expectations and performed well in Operation Essential Harvest and Exercise Saif Sareea 2. We have no current plans to purchase the leased C-17 aircraft or to expand 99 Squadron using further C-17s. The current arrangements meet the Short Term Strategic Airlift requirement and are expected to continue until the A400M enters service.

F35

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to sponsor trials of the F35 in connection with developing UK requirements; what trials of the aircraft will take place in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [16558]

Dr. Moonie: In order to avoid unnecessary duplication and cost, a dingle integrated Future Joint Combat Aircraft/F35 test programme with our US partner is being considered. Under this strategy, the work would be undertaken primarily in the US. UK Test and Evaluation personnel from the Ministry of Defence and QinetiQ would be integrated into the joint test activities.

Examination of test programme options reflects best practice under Smart Acquisition in delivering defence programmes to performance, time and cost.

In any event, the Joint Strike Fighter prime contractor will be required to demonstrate that the aircraft is compatible with UK aircraft carriers and support infrastructure. This may involve UK based trials.

Afghanistan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries, and the number of troops they have promised, as part of their commitment to the international coalition's actions in Afghanistan. [15823]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The following countries have promised military assets as part of their commitment to the international coalition against terrorism: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Czech Republic, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Republic of Korea, New Zealand, Netherlands, Norway, Romania, Singapore, Spain, Sweden and Turkey.

The Ministry of Defence does not hold records of the number of personnel that each country has offered.

SS Somali

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if diving operations have been (a) carried out and (b) authorised by the Ministry on the wreck of the SS Somali since 1971; and if he will give details of the purpose and results of any such operation. [16860]

Dr. Moonie: The SS Somali was a British merchant ship and as such is not the responsibility of the Ministry of Defence. Responsibility for merchant vessels lies with the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions.

MOD Police

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what statutory powers govern the operation of the Ministry of Defence Police Service's Police Committee. [16830]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence Police Act 1987 provides the statutory basis for the Ministry of Defence Police Committee.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to ensure that the MOD police receive training in dealing with members of the public. [17077]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence police undertake the same basic recruitment and continuation training as their Home Department police colleagues.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is (a) the establishment and (b) the current strength of the MOD police. [17080]

Dr. Moonie: On 31 October 2001 the total authorised complement of the Ministry of Defence police was 3,437 and the strength 3,354, including 63 officers currently serving overseas.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanisms exist for measuring the efficiency and performance of the MOD police. [17078]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence police (MDP) is subject to efficiency and performance targets set by MOD. As with all next steps agencies, the MDP are set annual key targets which are published in the House of Commons Official Report. The chief constable's accounts are audited by the National Audit Office and published in his annual report which is laid before Parliament. Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary undertakes periodic inspections of the MDP. The MOD Police Committee, during its quarterly meetings, review aspects of MDP performance.

NATO

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the UK pays to NATO as its share of NATO's overall costs, broken down into budget headings. [16778]

Mr. Hoon: In financial year 2000–01, the Ministry of Defence contributed £42.915 million (net of receipts) to the capital costs covered by the NATO Security Investment Programme. It also contributed £58.301 million to the Military Budget which funds NATO's military command structure and its associated programmes. Finally, £15.600 million (£15.404 million from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and £0.196 million from the Ministry of Defence) was paid to NATO's Civil Budget which funds NATO's Headquarters and associated programmes.

Osama bin Laden

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the recent discovery of notes for the design of nuclear weapons in houses captured from al-Qaeda in Kabul. [16422]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

There is no evidence of a specific nuclear threat. We know that Osama bin Laden has sought to acquire weapons of mass destruction, but we do not believe that he has the capability to deliver them. We have no doubt that Osama bin Laden would have no moral compunction about using weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons, if he could.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Train Operating Companies

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what representations have been received from train operating companies about the conditions imposed by rolling stock manufacturers on holders of short-term franchises. [12741]

Mr. Jamieson: I am aware that representations have been made by one train operator for which a franchise extension is being considered. The Strategic Rail Authority is not aware that any proposal to enter into a lease has been refused. In the event of such difficulty, the Authority has powers available to assist with procurement arrangements.

Rail Freight

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 1 November 2001, Official Report, column 782W, on rail freight, if the Draft Directions and Guidance to the Strategic Rail Authority specifically mention the 50 per cent. target for freight. [14679]

Mr. Jamieson: No, because the target is 80 per cent.

London Underground

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which members of the London Transport or London Underground boards have at any time within the period since 1990 (a) served on the board of, (b) been employed by and (c) had a material connection to any of the companies which make up the consortiums which have been accorded preferred bidder status for the Public-Private Partnership for London Underground. [14591]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 13 November 2001]: Balfour Beatty is a member of the Metronet consortium, which has preferred bidder status for the Bakerloo, Central and Victoria lines infrastructure contract (BCV) and the sub-surface lines infrastructure contract (SSL). Sir Malcolm Bates served on the board of BICC plc (as a non-executive director) from 8 July 1997 to 31 January 1999, at which time Balfour Beatty was a wholly owned subsidiary of BICC plc. At no time did Sir Malcolm have a material connection with Balfour Beatty. Sir Malcolm resigned his appointment as a non-executive director of BICC plc immediately prior to accepting the office of Chairman of London Transport which he took up on 11 February 1999.

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many escalators on the London Underground system are out of service; where they are located; and for how long they have been non-operational. [15568]

Mr. Jamieson: This is an operational matter for London Underground, who have provided the table. They point out that escalators out of service include those subject to planned replacement or refurbishment programmes, and that the table represents a snapshot in time, reflecting the situation on 15 November 2001. The escalator situation can change rapidly.

Standards Board for England

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will place in the Library copies of all guidance so far issued by the Standards Board for England. [14544]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 13 November 2001]: The Standards Board has published the following guidance:

Guide to Part III of the Local Government Act 2000: Local Authorities;

Guide to Part III of the Local Government Act 2000: Police, Fire, National Parks and other authorities;

Guide to Part III of the Local Government Act 2000: Parish and Town councils.

I have placed copies of these documents in the Library.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the criteria by which he selected people to be appointed members of the Standards Board for England. [14551]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 13 November 2001]: The Board members were appointed by Ministers of the then Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions on the 7 February 2001, 22 March 2001 and on the 3 May 2001. I refer the hon. Member to the answers given by my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State on 7 February 2001, Official Report, column 535W; on 22 March 2001, Official Report, column 292W; and the answer given on 3 May 2001, Official Report, column 753W.

The published criteria were:

commitment to the value of local democracy;

unimpeachable integrity

significant achievement in any field;

tact and discretion;

the ability to act as a team member;

proven strategic and communication skills commensurate with the board of a national body.

candidates must not be holders of national elected office.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what (a) remuneration and (b) superannuation is paid to board members of the Standards Board for England. [14552]

Mr. Byers: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given by the then Under-Secretary of State on 22 March 2001, Official Report, column 292W and on 3 May 2001, Official Report, column 753W.

The Chair is paid £50,000 a year for working two and a half days per week. The Deputy Chair is paid £7,500 a year for working two days a month. The Members of the Board are paid £6,800 a year for working two days a month.

None of the posts is pensionable.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what was the cost of the establishment of the Standards Board for England; and what is its continuing operating cost. [14553]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 13 November 2001]: My Department spent £111,234 on recruitment exercises for the board members and chief executive. Preparatory work for the establishment of the Standards Board for England was also carried out by officials in my Department.

Since the establishment of the Board in March 2001, it has been paid a further £935,384 in grant-in-aid to fund its establishment and running costs.

The allocation made for the Standards Board for England for this year in the Department's request for resources was £7.5 million.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the Code of Conduct signed by the board members of the Standards Board for England, giving the dates on which each board member signed it. [14548]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 13 November 2001]: I have today placed in the Library, the Code of Conduct adopted by the Members of the Standards Board for England. This code was adopted by all board members on 8 August 2001. It is based on the draft Model Code of Conduct for Councillors, adapted to reflect the differing nature of the Board and the local authorities for which the model code was designed.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions who are the board members of the Standards Board for England; and what are their relevant (a) experience and (b) qualifications. [14549]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 13 November 2001]: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given by the then Under-Secretary of State on 22 March 2001, Official Report, column 292W and on 3 May 2001, Official Report, column 753W.

M69 and M42/A42 (Birmingham–Nottingham) and A38 (Birmingham–M1).

The Highways Agency intends to have a route management strategy in place by March 2004 for each of the routes comprising the core trunk road network. The agency is currently revising the timing and boundaries of individual route management strategies yet to commence, to ensure that they dovetail with the multi-modal and roads-based studies.

Roads (Surrey)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much his Department has spent on roads in Surrey in each of the past seven years. [16174]

Mr. Jamieson: The provision made for capital expenditure on local major road schemes and maintenance of local roads and bridges in Surrey in the period 1995–96 to 2001–02 is set out in the table:

Type of road spend

£ million

Year	Capital maintenance of roads and bridges	Major road schemes[1]	Totals
1995–96	7.619	17.164	24.783
1996–97	4.114	9.680	13.794
1997–98	4.580	3.500	8.080
1998–99	4.400	0.800	5.200
1999–2000	5.742	1.500	7.242
2000–01	6.972	0	6.972
2001–02	11.763	0	11.763

[1] Individual schemes with a gross cost in excess of £2 million (£5 million since 2000–01)

The revenue funding provided for structural and routine maintenance of non-principal roads and routine maintenance of principal roads in Surrey in that period is set out in the table.

Structural and routine maintenance

Year	£ million
1995–96	42.07
1996–97	41.11
1997–98	39.93
1998–99	40.76
1999–2000	41.67
2001–02	44.56

Surrey county council may also have chosen to make additional amounts of capital and revenue available for expenditure on roads and road related schemes. Information on expenditure on the trunk road network is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Urban Bus Challenge

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will announce the criteria and timetable for the Urban Bus Challenge; and if he will make a statement. [16050]

Ms Keeble: The first Urban Bus Challenge competition was held earlier this year. Criteria were sent to local authorities in June with a closing date for bids of 31 August. The criteria are available on my Department's website. The outcome of the competition was announced on 2 November 2001, Official Report, columns 921–22W. It is envisaged that the timetable for next year's Urban Bus Challenge competition will be similar.

GNER

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for what reason he rejected the advice of the SRA to grant a 20 year franchise to GNER. [R] [16032]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA may only award a franchise to a person who has submitted a tender in response to an invitation to tender under section 26 of the Railways Act 1993 unless the Secretary of State otherwise directs. Such a direction is required if the SRA plans to replace a franchise before its expiry.

When considering whether to grant a direction, the Secretary of State has to decide whether the benefits offered outweigh the desirability of a franchise being subject to the tendering process under sections 26 to 26C.

The Secretary of State did not give a direction in relation to the Inter City East Coast franchise. He noted that better terms were more likely to be achieved nearer the expiry of the current franchise when the infrastructure upgrade for the East Coast Main Line would be better defined.

Railtrack

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what is the (a) procedure and (b) timetable for consideration of the bids for Railtrack; and what is the cut-off date for bids to be considered. [15802]

Mr. Spellar: These are matters for the Administrator to determine.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what financial guarantees the Administrator of Railtrack plc has sought from the Government concerning new investment projects. [16366]

Mr. Spellar: The Government's Loan Agreement with the Administrator, copies of which have been placed in the House Library, means that Government will provide sufficient funding to continue on a 'business as usual' basis—including investment expenditure decisions—during the administration period.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on (a) voluntary and (b) compulsory redundancies planned by Railtrack in administration. [16361]

Mr. S[illegible]r: There are no plans for redundancies as a result of Administration.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much of the financial guarantee to Railtrack in administration represents cash spent; and how much remains as a facility to draw down. [16379]

Mr. Spellar: The £800 million loan instalment has been fully drawn down. It represents part of the loan agreement entered into with the Administrator—copies of which have been placed in the House Library—in order to enable Railtrack plc (in administration) to continue trading and to repay financial creditors as they become due. The loan is to be repaid either as or before Railtrack plc moves out of administration.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the investment projects over £5 million in value awaiting decision by the administrator of Railtrack plc. [16357]

Mr. Spellar: All planned investment projects by Railtrack were outlined in its Network Management Statement published in May 2001. Government have committed to provide the Administrator with access to sufficient funding to continue on a 'business as usual' basis—including investment expenditure decisions—during the administration period.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many separate rail investment projects are awaiting decision by the administrator of Railtrack; and what their combined value is. [16358]

Mr. Spellar: All planned investment projects by Railtrack were outlined in its Network Management Statement published in May 2001.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which (a) creditors and (b) contractors of Railtrack plc have approached the Government for (i) letters of comfort and (ii) guidance concerning payments for work done for Railtrack. [16367]

Mr. Spellar: No. For the Government's intentions with regard to creditors I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, on 31 October 2001, Official Report, column 671W.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his estimate is of the time Railtrack plc will stay in administration. [16380]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Administrator.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which investment projects have been approved by the administrator since taking over Railtrack plc. [16365]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Administrator. Government have committed to provide the Administrator with access to sufficient funding to continue on a 'business as usual' basis—including investment expenditure decisions—during the administration period.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when bids will close for the (a) assets and (b) liabilities of Railtrack plc in administration. [16370]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Administrator.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what action he has taken with respect to the plan to cut costs at Railtrack plc drawn up by the board before the company was put into administration. [16371]

Mr. Spellar: The running of the company during administration is a matter for the Administrator.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the forecast is of the investment expenditure of Railtrack in administration and its successor for (a) the period from being placed in administration to 31 March 2002 and (b) the 2002–03 financial year. [16362]

Mr. Spellar: While Railtrack plc is in railway administration, the day-to-day expenditure decisions are a matter for the Administrator. The Government's Loan Agreement with the Administrator, copies of which have been placed in the House Library, means that Government will provide sufficient funding to continue on a 'business as usual' basis during the administration period. Investment decisions in future years will be a matter for the successor company to Railtrack plc.

Railways (Consultants)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the external (a) consultants and (b) advisers which the Government have used in the last year on railway matters. [16374]

Mr. Spellar: My Department has, over the last year, used the following consultants and advisers on national railway matters:

AEA Technology Rail
Allen and Overy
AON
Arthur Andersen
Booz Allen and Hamilton
Clifford Chance
CMS Cameron McKenna
Deloitte and Touche
Ernst and Young
Eversheds
KPMG
MDS Transmodal
Mercers Management Consulting
Mott Parsons Gibb
NERA
Oscar Faber
Peter Davidson Consultancy
PricewaterhouseCoopers
Saunders and Dolleymore
Saxton Bampfylde Hever
Schroder Salomon Smith Barney
SEMA Group UK
United Kingdom Accreditation Service.

Aviation Industry

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he has had since 11 September with the European Commission on state aid to airlines to compensate for (a) the four day closure of United States' air space and (b) insurance cover premiums. [15805]

Mr. Jamieson: The European Commission set out guidelines on emergency aid measures in its Communication on the repercussions of the terrorist attacks in the United States on the air transport industry, which was endorsed by the EU Transport Council on 16 October. The Government are considering whether to provide compensation to UK airlines for the four days closure of US airspace, and will notify the Commission if any such aid is forthcoming. In relation to insurance premiums, we have informed the Commission of the arrangements made to provide temporary third party war risk insurance cover for UK airlines and ground service providers. We introduced our scheme on 24 September, for 30 days in the first instance. On 22 October HM Treasury announced that the scheme would continue for a further 30 days until midnight on 24 November. A further announcement will be made shortly on the future operation of the scheme. We are also participating in the Commission's Ad Hoc Insurance Group that has been established to discuss a common approach to resolving the present difficulties in the light of the Council Conclusions on state aid agreed on 16 October.

Evergreen Hedges

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what action the Government proposes to take in response to the final report of the Building Research Establishment and Tree Advice Trust on evergreen hedges; and if he will make a statement; [16413]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the final report of the Building Research Establishment and Tree Advice Trust about evergreen hedges. [16414]

Ms Keeble: The Building Research Establishment (BRE) and Tree Advice Trust were commissioned by my Department to develop an objective method for assessing whether high evergreen hedges block too much daylight and sunlight to adjoining properties, and to provide guidance on hedge heights to alleviate these problems.

We expect to publish the final report of their work shortly and will ensure that copies are then placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

We will also be considering what is the best way of presenting this information to the public, so that people are encouraged to apply the formula to their problem hedge and to use the results to try to settle matters with their neighbours amicably.

Health and Safety Laboratory

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the Health and Safety Laboratory intends to publish its annual report and accounts for 2000–01. [17389]

Dr. Whitehead: The Health and Safety Laboratory has published the 2000–01 annual report and accounts, and copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the Birmingham Northern Relief Road will be opened to the public; and what toll charges will be made for its use. [16823]

Mr. Jamieson: The Birmingham Northern Relief Road is expected to be open to traffic in January 2004. The level of tolls to be charged for the use of the road is a matter for the concessionaire, Midland Expressway Ltd. I understand that they have yet to decide on the toll levels but expect to do so closer to the opening date.

Local and Regional Airports (Security)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what additional security measures have been (a) implemented at and (b) recommended to local and regional airports since 11 September. [17126]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department lays down the security requirements for the operators of public transport aircraft, both passenger-carrying and all-cargo, and the managers of the aerodromes they operate from. Following the attacks of September 11 these requirements have increased and their scope extended to general aviation. To divulge details of them would undermine their effectiveness. DTLR inspectors monitor compliance.

Dibden Bay

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many representations have been made to his Department (a) in favour of and (b) in opposition to the building of a container port at Dibden Bay. [R] [17097]

Mr. Jamieson: In response to the advertisements placed by Associated British Ports Ltd. in respect of their proposal, the Secretary of State received 175 representations in favour of the proposal and 6,189 opposed.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what action his Department intends to take in respect of the petition to Parliament from residents of the New Forest, East constituency concerning the Dibden Bay Public Inquiry venue. [R] [17098]

Mr. Jamieson: We will respond to the petition in due course.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the proposal to hold the public inquiry into the application for permission to build a container port at Dibden Bay (a) in premises owned by the applicant company and (b) outside the area which would primarily be affected by the building of such a port. [R] [17095]

Mr. Jamieson: In the circumstances following the withdrawal of the original venue for the inquiry we considered all the representations made to us about a new venue and accepted the offer from Associated British Ports of the use of the Ferry Terminal Building at Southampton Port. Alternative venues considered were either unsuitable for staging an inquiry of the size and length that the Dibden inquiry is likely to be or would result in too long a delay in getting an inquiry under way.

We have recognised the concerns of local residents about the choice of venue and have asked the inquiry Secretariat to hold the first week's session in Hythe and to arrange for some further sessions to be held in the local area provided suitable locations can be found.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will require the public inquiry into the application for permission to build a container port at Dibden Bay to be held on premises within the area which would primarily be affected by the building of such a port. [R] [17096]

Mr. Jamieson: The Dibden Bay public inquiry will be held at the Ferry Terminal at Southampton Port. The first week's proceedings will be held at the Appledore Centre, Hythe and the inquiry Secretariat have been asked to arrange some other sessions at venues in the local area, provided suitable venues can be found.

Gas Explosion (Newton Heath)

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what representations he has received on the promptness of the response of the Health and Safety Executive following the gas explosion in Newton Heath, Manchester on Saturday 17 November; and if he will make a statement. [17148]

Dr. Whitehead: None.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Consignia

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of Consignia's profits will be paid to the Government this financial year. [13732]

Mr. Alexander: No decision has been taken.

Nuclear Industry

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much BNFL paid the UK Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary for the police it provided to protect the MOX fuel exported to Japan. [15852]

Mr. Wilson: The costs of security arrangements associated with transporting MOX, including the costs associated with the role of the UK Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary, are a commercial matter for the companies involved.

Hartlepool Nuclear Power Station

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she has taken since 11 September to guard against a terrorist attack on the Hartlepool AGR nuclear power station; and if she will make a statement. [16186]

Mr. Wilson: Robust security arrangements were already in place at Hartlepool power station before the events of 11 September. The UK's civil nuclear sites apply stringent security measures regulated by the Office for Civil Nuclear Security (OCNS), the security regulator. The security regulator works closely with the Health and Safety Executive, the safety regulator, which provides advice on the safety implications of events, including external hazards such as plane crashes, at nuclear installations.

Security and safety precautions at nuclear sites are kept under regular review. Both regulators are reviewing all relevant precautions in the light of the recent terrorist attacks in the USA. It is not Government policy to disclose details of security measures taken at civil nuclear sites.

Miners' Compensation

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the total amount of interest paid to sick miners and their dependants who have experienced delays in the payments of the amounts awarded them under the terms of the respiratory disease scheme; and whether the (a) Department and (b) the appointed claims handlers will be responsible for these interest payments. [16660]

Mr. Wilson: Under the claims handling agreement, signed by the Department and the solicitors acting for the claimants, interest on general damages is payable by the Department from the date of the receipt of the letter of claim. On special damages, interest is payable from either the date the loss occurred, or in some cases the date of receipt of the letter of claim. Loss of earnings are calculated at the appropriate court rate, and other heads of special damages are calculated at a reduced rate, reflecting the fact that they are assessed at present day values. Since interest runs to the date an offer is accepted and forms part of the offer, a separate figure is not recorded by the claims handlers.

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many former miners from the north Somerset coalfield have (a) applied for and (b) received compensation awards. [16321]

Mr. Wilson: In relation to respiratory disease, in the constituency of Somerton and Frome, IRISC, the Department's claims handlers, have registered 25 claims. Nine individual payments have been made to date, amounting to £33,139.

With regard to vibration white finger, there are two claimants in this region, of whom one has received a payment of £3,113.

Miners' Pension Schemes

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage increases have been awarded annually to pensioner beneficiaries under the (a) mineworkers' pension scheme and (b) British Coal staff superannuation scheme; and what has been their total value annually at constant prices. [16662]

Mr. Wilson: Since 1994 MPS and BCSSS members have received around a 30 per cent. increase by way of valuation surplus bonuses. This is made up of:

MPS: 20 per cent. from 1997 and approximately 9 per cent. from 2000

BCSSS: 6.7 per cent. from 1996, 10.8 per cent. from 1998, and 11 per cent. this year.

Payments of bonus increases to pensioners have been provided by the trustees and are as follows (excludes the 11 per cent. BCSSS increase for which figures are not yet available).

£ million

Year	MPS[1]	BCSSS[2]
1997–97	23	29
1997–98	69	29
1998–99	76	66
1999–2000	82	78
2000–01	119	76
Total	369	278

[1] Year to end September

[2] Year to end March

In addition to these bonuses, MPS and BCSSS members have also received annual inflation-linked increases to maintain the real level of their pension.

	Percentage
Year	MPS	BCSSS
1995	3.5	2.6
1996	2.1	3.1
1997	2.9	2.7
1998	3.7	3.7
1999	1.3	3.0
2000	3.3	1.4
2001	1.9	3.2

Fuel Cells

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what incentives the Government are providing for the expansion of energy generation from fuel cells; and if she will make a statement. [16741]

Mr. Wilson: The Department has been supporting fuel cells research and development for many years, through the DTI Sustainable Energy Programme and the Engineering and Physical Science Research Council. Since 1992 the DTI has supported 147 fuel cell projects with a total DTI spend of £11.8 million. The current DTI Programme is spending about £2 million per annum, with the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) spending about the same on basic research related to fuel cells.

The DTI is currently supporting the first UK demonstration of a 200 kW fuel cell combined heat and power unit at Woking borough council. Although there are a number of different fuel cell technologies, significant cost reductions will be necessary before they will be fully commercial for electricity generation.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets she has set for the use of fuel cells. [16742]

Mr. Wilson: Fuel cells are not yet fully commercial for electricity generation, and I have not yet set any targets for their use. The Energy Review presently being conducted by the Performance and Innovation Unit is considering the role of new technologies including fuel cells, in conjunction with other energy matters, as part of its review of strategic issues surrounding energy policy. It is due to report to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister by the end of the year.

Fuel cells may also be used to replace or supplement the internal combustion engine in vehicles. The Government will shortly be issuing a consultation draft of their "Powering Future Vehicles" strategy for promoting the development, introduction and take-up of hybrid, fuel cell and other low-carbon vehicle technologies.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the NETA in assisting the suppliers of renewable energy; and if she will make a statement. [16725]

Mr. Wilson: On 1 November 2001, I issued a consultation document in response to Ofgem's reports "The New Electricity Trading Arrangements—Review of the First Three Months" and "Report to the DTI on the Review of the Initial Impact of NETA on Smaller Generators" of 31 August 2001. I have placed copies of the consultation document in the Libraries of the Houses.

The Government recognise the issues faced by smaller generators, including renewables, under NETA and are committed to ensuring that our renewables targets are not prejudiced. The Government's key proposals are, broadly,

To ensure imbalance prices are genuinely cost reflective; and

To ensure that effective consolidation services emerge.

The Government are also inviting views on other proposals put forward by industry.

The Government believe that in some circumstances consolidation services are vital in order to establish and foster smaller generation plant, including assisting suppliers of renewable energy. While consolidation services are now starting to emerge in the market, the Government believe action may be necessary to address the lack of consolidation services to date. The Government have proposed establishing a working group of smaller generators, the National Grid Company, BSC (Balancing and Settlement Code) participants, Ofgem, the DTI and DEFRA to look urgently at possible structural or regulatory obstacles to consolidation, including the likely timescale on which competitive consolidation services will emerge. The Government will ask this group to provide an interim report by 24 December 2001, and a final report by 31 January 2001.

The consultation document is available at www.dti.gov.uk/consultations/. The consultation closes on 1 December 2001.

Departmental Review

Mr. Lammy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made on the review of her Department. [17451]

Ms Hewitt: I am announcing today a series of reforms to the structure and operation of my Department to improve the way it serves business, employees and consumers. The DTI has a vital part to play in helping to drive up UK competitiveness and productivity (including resource as well as labour productivity) and I want it to fulfil that role as effectively as possible.

The changes will clarify my Department's role and strategy to focus sharply on customer needs. They will also simplify the support the Department provides for business and make that support easier to identify and to access. The Department's strategic priorities—reflected in its new structure—will be to promote innovation, spur enterprise and build competitive frameworks, including support for workplace standards and partnership.

The changes will also include the creation of a new strategy board and other boards involving Ministers, senior officials and non-executive directors; significantly greater involvement of business-people and others in the Department's strategy development and greater interchange between the Department and the private and social enterprise sectors. We will maintain an emphasis on better regulation, particularly for small businesses; deliver more consistent, streamlined advice for consumers; and have clearer roles for the Department's work in the English regions.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Plastic Baton Round

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in phase II of the research programme to find alternatives to the plastic baton round; what the estimated cost is of phase II; if he will place its findings in the Library; and at what stage he intends to open out to competitive tender or introduce an independent element into the research programme. [7112]

Jane Kennedy: Phase II of the research programme has now been completed and I will shortly place a copy of the Steering Group's report in the Library of the House. The report will outline our priorities for further research. To date costings for the research programme are approaching £1 million. Arrangements will be made to ensure close liaison between the Policing Board and the Steering Group leading the research programme.

Abortion

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many organisations made submissions to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission calling for the right to access to abortion to be included in a Bill of Rights; and what assessment he has made of how many people each of those organisations represent; [11987]

(2) how many individuals made submissions to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission calling for the right to access to abortion to be included in a Bill of Rights; [11988]

(3) how many organisations made submissions to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission calling for the protection of the right to life for the unborn child to be included in a Bill of Rights; and what assessment he has made of how many people each of these organisations represents; [11989]

(4) how many individuals made submissions to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission calling for the protection of the right to life for the unborn to be included in a Bill of Rights. [11990]

Mr. Browne: These are matters for the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission. The Chief Commissioner has been asked to write to the hon. Member. A copy of his letter will be placed in the Library.

Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission

Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will announce the new appointments to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission; and when he will announce whether or not the existing commissioners are to be re-appointed. [17453]

Mr. Browne: The Secretary of State announced today the appointment of four new Commissioners following an open competition:

Lady (Christine) Eames;
Dr Christopher McGimpsey;
Mr. Kevin McLaughlin; and
Mr. Patrick Yu.

The new Commissioners will take up their appointments on 1 December.

The Secretary of State also confirmed the reappointment of eight of the existing Commissioners, including the Commission's chair, Professor Brice Dickson. The remaining member of the existing Commission, Professor Christine Bell, is currently on maternity leave. A decision on her position has, at her request, been deferred until after she returns to work.

Departmental Events

David Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) national and (b) international awareness events his Department has participated in since June 1997 in the form of (i) sponsorship, (ii) departmental attendance, (iii) similar departmental activities and (iv) a message of support. [5038]

Dr. John Reid: This information is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Heritage Lottery Fund

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many churches in the Buckingham constituency have (a) applied for and (b) received awards from the Heritage Lottery Fund in each year since the National Lottery began. [16165]

Dr. Howells: Five churches in the Buckingham constituency have sought funding from the Heritage Lottery Fund since the National Lottery began.

In 1995 three churches applied and one—All Saints, Middle Claydon—was awarded a grant for bell repairs. One church applied in each of the years 1997 and 1998 but in both cases the application was unsuccessful. No subsequent application has been made. Since 1999 the Heritage Lottery Fund's published policy for the Joint Places of Worship scheme has been to give priority to economically and socially disadvantaged areas.

Ageism

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action her Department has taken to tackle discrimination against older people. [16329]

Dr. Howells: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport's equal opportunities policy proscribes discrimination based on age as well as that based on gender, marital status, race, colour, nationality, ethnic origin, religion, disability or sexual orientation. A number of DCMS policies are specifically aimed at ensuring older people enjoy equality of access to the nation's cultural and sporting heritage. These include an entitlement to a free television licence for everyone over the age of 75; significantly higher statutory targets for subtitling provision on digital terrestrial commercial television; the training of around 8,000 older people to be coaches, administrators, officials, leaders and mentors to youngsters through the Volunteering in Sport project; the People's Network Initiative, linking all public libraries to the internet and, as part of the UK Online programme, increasing the use of information and communication technology leisure and lifelong learning by elderly people. In addition, DCMS is represented on the Inter-Ministerial Group on Older People, which is designed to develop a joined-up approach to older people's issues and co-ordinate Government policy for older people.

English Tourism Council

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the English Tourism Council spent on marketing when it harmonised the grading standards in 1999. [16383]

Dr. Howells: The budget for marketing and promotion of the new quality assurance scheme in the financial year 1999–2000 was £250,000 and this was spent on a variety of activities, including: media and industry launches, promotion to the industry at travel fairs and via videos and presentations, mailings to the travel trade, distribution of consumer leaflets and promotion to the media via fact packs.

The Government remain firmly committed to the voluntary scheme and have encouraged the ETC to identify some funds for consumer promotion. This is now likely to take place next financial year, when the ETC's baseline budget will have been increased by 20 per cent. and taking measures to improve quality in the tourism industry is one of its core priorities.

Film Council

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Film Council will be made subject to the (a) rules and (b) methods of accountability of the civil service. [16647]

Dr. Howells: The Film Council is already a non-departmental public body, accountable to Parliament and my Department. The Chief Executive of the Film Council is appointed as accounting officer by my Department's Permanent Secretary, and acts in accordance with Treasury requirements to ensure propriety and high standards of financial management. The Chair and Board appointments are made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport. The Department's relationship with the Film Council is governed by a financial memorandum which allows the National Audit Office to inspect the Film Council's accounts, and a funding agreement which identifies what the Council must deliver in return for the funding it receives. Expenditure of lottery money is subject to policy and financial directions issued by my Department.

Press Complaints Commission

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to assess the operation of the Press Complaints Commission. [17202]

Dr. Howells: The Government support an effective system of self-regulation for the newspaper industry, with a Code of Practice overseen by the Press Complaints Commission (PCC). We recognise that, as with any regulatory system, there is always room for improvement. My Department, therefore, continues to monitor the effectiveness of the industry's self-regulatory system, both in terms of the provisions contained in the Code of Practice and the PCC's operations, and my ministerial colleagues and I have no hesitation in suggesting improvements to the industry, as and when appropriate.

Television Licences (Residential Homes)

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she intends to amend the regulations governing the Accommodation for Residential Care Concessionary Television Licence Scheme to preserve the rights of beneficiaries of the concessionary scheme who remain in a sheltered housing complex or residential home provided or managed by a local authority, a housing association or a development corporation when the social mix or the level of warden cover change. [16875]

Dr. Howells: Consultations between officials and the BBC about the necessary amendments to the television licence fee regulations are currently under way. We intend to bring forward these amendments as soon as we can but it is important that in doing so we do not create any new anomalies or unnecessary administrative burdens.

Sports Administration

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the objectives are of (a) the regional Sport England bodies and (b) the regional New Opportunities Fund for Sport bodies; and if she will make a statement. [16870]

Mr. Caborn: The role of Sport England's nine regional offices is to deliver, in partnership with a range of statutory, voluntary and commercial agencies concerned with sport and recreation, Sport England's national programmes for the development and promotion of sport.

The New Opportunities Fund is the body designated in the National Lottery Act 1998 to distribute Lottery funds to initiatives concerned with health, education and the environment. The role of the New Opportunities Fund's regional representatives is to help deliver the overall objectives of the fund. The vision for the new opportunities for PE and the sport in schools programme is laid out in the fund's recently published document "Building for Tomorrow".

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

National Audit Office

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission what resources of the NAO are directed to the follow-up of qualifications to (a) agency and (b) departmental accounts; and if he will make a statement. [15246]

Mr. Alan Williams: It is the responsibility of the management of the Department or agency whose accounts have been qualified to take the necessary corrective action. The NAO will provide appropriate advice and assistance to support the body in this regard. The nature of the support and the resources directed will depend on the underlying reason for qualification in each case. For example, the Comptroller and Auditor General qualified his audit opinion on the Child Support Agency's Client Funds Account for 2000–01 for the seventh consecutive year in the light of high error rates in maintenance assessments made by the agency. The National Audit Office plans to spend some £120,000 on its audit of the 2001–02 account. The examination will check a sample of maintenance assessments to estimate the effect of any errors on outstanding maintenance balances.

The National Audit Office will also monitor the agency's progress towards its target of implementing the new assessment system from April 2002. This system of child support was introduced by legislation in 2000 and is aimed at simplifying the rules for maintenance assessments. This is closely linked with modernisation of the Agency's operational processes and the introduction of a new computer system. This is intended to promote increased accuracy in maintenance awards and improved payment compliance. In evaluating progress the National Audit Office will assess the evidence from its own audit work, and a range of other sources including reviews by the internal audit service of the Department for Work and Pensions. The Comptroller and Auditor General will report his findings with the 2001–02 account.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

FCO Advice

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will introduce legislation to ensure that British companies seeking to send workers abroad inform employees of relevant Foreign and Commonwealth Office advice; and if he will make a statement. [16962]

Mr. Bradshaw: Foreign and Commonwealth Office travel advice is already widely accessible to employers as well as the general public by telephone (020 7008 0232/0233) and the FCO website www.fco.gov.uk.

Employment legislation is a matter for the Department of Trade and Industry.

Northern Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Turkish Government regarding recent statements by the Turkish Prime Minister, and the Foreign Minister, relating to the occupied area of northern Cyprus and EU admission. [15331]

Peter Hain: The suggestion that Turkey might "annex" north Cyprus, in the event of Cyprus joining the EU before a settlement, is not new. While it is difficult to predict what Turkey might do if a divided island were to join the EU, we believe that the "annexation" of northern Cyprus would severely compromise Turkey's relations with the EU, and contravene her obligations under the Treaty of Guarantee. However, our aim continues to be a settlement before Cyprus joins the EU, though we stand by the Helsinki Council Conclusions that it is not a precondition for enlargement. To that end we urge all concerned to engage constructively in the current UN process.

Treaty of Nice

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many letters he has received from residents of the Buckingham constituency (a) supporting and (b) opposing the Treaty of Nice. [16167]

Peter Hain: Since January we have received and replied to 3,000 letters on the European Union. The letters have addressed a wide range of different themes related to the EU.

It is not possible to provide a breakdown by constituency without incurring disproportionate cost. We do not keep records of letters from members of the public by constituency.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the backlog of cases is for each group in (a) Islamabad, (b) Karachi, (c) Lahore, (d) Bombay, (e) New Delhi, (f) Colombo, and (g) Dhaka. [16044]

Mr. Bradshaw: The statistics requested are as follows. The number of cases awaiting interview at the end of October is:

Post/settlement queue	Application number in queue	Length of queue (weeks)
Bombay
Q2	477	7
Q3	108	7
Q4	29	7
Colombo[1]	129	13

Poland

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government have taken to facilitate the entry of Poland into the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [15718]

Peter Hain: As the Prime Minister said in Warsaw in October last year,

> "there are no guaranteed places. Reform is the only entry ticket. But, we want Poland, and as many others as are ready, in the EU as soon as possible".

This support is backed by practical assistance, through a bilateral Action Plan (consisting of projects to help Poland's reform: available on www.britishembassy.pl), and eight British civil servants currently seconded to the Polish government through the EU twinning scheme. We have also discussed with Polish ministers and officials progress on closing the chapters of the acquis communitaire, necessary for accession.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the parliamentary election in Poland on 23 September. [15719]

Peter Hain: The Polish elections resulted in a governing coalition comprising the Democratic Left (SLD), Labour Union and Peasants' Party. We look forward to working closely with the new government. My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary have already met their new opposite numbers from Poland, and I will be meeting the new Europe Minister in the next few days.

Subcontinent

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are for a future meeting between the Indian Prime Minister and the Pakistani President as a follow up to their meeting in Agra earlier this year. [16564]

Mr. Bradshaw: During the Agra Summit, Prime Minister Vajpayee accepted President Musharraf's invitation to visit Pakistan. We understand that dates have not yet been arranged. However we hope that a further meeting will take place soon.

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the content of his discussions on (a) nuclear safety, (b) stability in Kashmir and (c) the future make-up of a Government for Afghanistan during his meeting with (i) the Indian Prime Minister and (ii) the Pakistani President. [16565]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has held several meetings recently with Indian and Pakistani interlocutors. The contents of these discussions are confidential under Exemption 1c of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. We continue to work with both the Indian and Pakistan Governments on a range of regional and global issues.

Afghanistan

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are to extend the military action in Afghanistan to other countries. [16665]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our military action is focused on the al-Qaeda network and the Taliban regime in Afghanistan.

Al-Qaeda

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the role of states other than Afghanistan in having assisted Osama bin Laden and al-Qaeda; and if he will list those states. [16421]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are not speculating about the involvement of anyone other than UBL and al-Qaeda in the 11 September attacks. Al-Qaeda is a network of individuals and resources concerned with terrorism and operating covertly in many countries in Central, South and South-East Asia, the Middle East, North Africa, Europe and North America. There is no evidence that any states beyond Afghanistan are supporting the terrorist activities of al-Qaeda.

EU Constitution

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government are opposed in principle to an EU constitution; and if he will make a statement. [16407]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Turner) on 15 October 2001, Official Report, column 976W.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had about the inclusion of a possible EU constitution in the forthcoming Laeken declaration on the future of Europe. [16408]

Peter Hain: It was agreed at Nice that there should be a wide and deep debate on the future of Europe before the next IGC in 2004. The Laeken European Council in December will decide on how to take that debate forward.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many employees of (a) his Department and (b) agencies sponsored by his Department work in (i) London, (ii) areas benefiting from EU objective 1 status, (iii) areas with objective 2 status, and (iv) other areas. [16107]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and its agency (Wiston House, Wilton park, Steyning, West Sussex), employs staff in four separate locations. The number of staff in each are as follows, listed in the four categories requested:

	Number
(i) London	2,231
(ii) EU objective 1 status	0
(iii) EU objective 2 status	0
(iv) Other
Milton Keynes	716
Croydon	136
West Sussex	61

Chechnya Murders

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has received about the involvement of Osama bin Laden in the deaths of three UK citizens in Chechnya in 1998; and if he will make a statement. [16963]

Mr. Bradshaw: We first became aware of the allegation that bin Laden/the Taleban ordered the deaths of the four men last year, when it appeared in an official Russian publication called "Chechnya: The White Paper". A similar article appeared in the Russian newspaper "Gazeta" on 24 October 2001. To date, we have been unable to verify the story, although we have been in contact with the Russian authorities and the author of the "Gazeta" article.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ask the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to reopen his inquiries concerning the deaths of three UK citizens in Chechnya in 1998; and if he will make a statement. [16964]

Mr. Bradshaw: The British police have no general remit to conduct a criminal investigation into the murder of British nationals overseas. This is a matter for the local law enforcement agencies. We will continue to press the Russian authorities for details of the progress of their investigation.

The Metropolitan Police Service did carry out certain inquiries in support of the Coroner's Inquest into the men's deaths. But their role was limited to providing enough information to the coroner so that he could reach a verdict as to the cause of death and judge whether it was lawful or otherwise.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department took to ensure that Foreign and Commonwealth Office advice given to Granger Telecom and BT in 1998 on travel to Chechnya was passed onto three UK citizens in Chechnya; and if he will make a statement. [16965]

Mr. Bradshaw: The FCO cannot interfere in a company's personnel operations, but we do expect UK employers to take the FCO travel advice into account when planning to send their employees overseas. FCO travel advice was first drawn to the attention of Granger Telecom in July 1998, when we first learned of their activities in Chechnya. Our advice was clear and unambiguous:

> "We strongly advise against travel to the Chechen Republic . . . because of the unstable security situation. Visitors have been kidnapped in these areas recently".

We wrote to Granger Telecom in mid-August 1998 pointing out the dangers of working in Chechnya and handed over a copy of the travel advice during a meeting with them at the FCO on 21 August. We also reminded Granger of our travel advice by phone on 22 and 23 September 1998.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made on Zimbabwean farmers and President Mugabe's decree amending the Land Acquisition Act. [16815]

Mr. Bradshaw: We continue to urge the Zimbabwean Government to honour its commitments, under the Abuja Agreement of 6 September, to implement a land reform programme in a fair, just and sustainable manner in the interest of all the people of Zimbabwe. We hope that the Government will engage constructively with the UNDP in pursuing such a programme, on the basis of the UNDP proposals of December 2000.

Extradition

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries which have made extradition requests to the UK in respect of their nationals who are alleged members of Islamic groups who are living here. [11183]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I have been asked to reply.

There are currently nine requests outstanding for the extradition of fugitives accused of involvement in Islamic terrorist activity. Six of those requests had been received before the events of 11 September. The requesting jurisdictions in these cases are as follows:

Requesting jurisdiction	Number of requests
United States of America	5
France	2
Italy	1
Algeria	1

Save in relation to the request from Algeria, none of the other fugitives involved is a national of those countries. All of them are in extradition custody.

SCOTLAND

Island Transport

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was expended by the Government in the last three years prior to the introduction of devolution for Scotland on the maintenance of transport links between the Scottish mainland and her offshore islands. [7197]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 15 October 2001]: Relevant information held by the Scottish Executive is in the table. Elements of this programme expenditure relate to services of benefit to remote mainland areas. It is not practical to disaggregate the recorded expenditure in order to provide figures for support to services linking the islands and the mainland. Footnotes have been provided to give guidance on the figures supplied for each programme.

[1] Spending subsidies scheduled passenger and accompanied car services to Orkney and Shetland. Tariff Rebate Subsidy is paid to eligible shipping operators carrying specified goods. The scheme aims to reduce the cost of imports and exports in the island and seaboard areas of the Highlands and Islands.

[2] Grant payments to local authorities, CalMac and Independent Harbour Trusts schemes to support the development and upgrading of piers and harbours.

[3] Deficit grant, capital grants, loans and repayments to CalMac to maintain affordable sea links to the island communities, to protect fares and levels of service.

[4] Subsidy scheme supports and safeguards lifeline passenger air services between Glasgow and Campbeltown, Tiree and Barra.

[5] Deficit grant, capital grant, loans and repayments to HIAL to deliver safe, affordable, efficient and cost-effective airport services at HIAL's 10 airports across the Highlands and Islands.

[6] Payments under PFI contract agreement with Skye Bridge Limited, and associated costs. Figures include payments following introduction of frequent user toll discount scheme from January 1998.

Skye Bridge

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if she will publish the full details of the agreement between the Government and the Bank of America in relation to the Skye bridge; [6645]

(2) if the figure quoted in the assignation statement in relation to the A87 Toll Order for the construction of the Skye bridge was index-linked; and if the full cost of the Skye bridge has been met. [6622]

Mrs. Liddell: Issues related to the Skye bridge project are a devolved matter for the Scottish Executive.

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what her Department's policy is in relation to departmental spending for supplies concerning the purchase of fair trade goods. [15213]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 16 November 2001]: My Department takes opportunities to promote fair trade products but has very limited requirements for goods which are subject to fair trade schemes. Departmental procurement seeks best value for money, in the interest of the taxpayer.

London Allowances

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will estimate the total value of London weightings and London living allowances for her Department; and if she will make a statement. [6806]

Mrs. Liddell: Staff of my Department in London, below senior civil service level, receive a London pay supplement. The value of the supplements at 1 April 2001 was £65,000.

Departmental Staff

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will estimate total staff costs for her Department and its agencies by nation and region of the UK; and if she will make a statement. [6805]

Mrs. Liddell: The total civil service staff costs for my Department in the current financial year are estimated to be £2.1 million in Scotland and £1.1 million in London.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what proportion of each civil service grade in her Department is located in each region and nation of the UK, what the average salary is for each grade; and if she will make a statement. [6808]

Mrs. Liddell: A breakdown of Scotland Office staff numbers by grade and location, at 1 April 2000, is shown in the tables together with the average salary for each grade.

Fuel Prices (Rural Scotland)

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment she has made of the impact of the level of fuel prices on the economy of rural Scotland. [7066]

Mrs. Liddell: In November 2000, the Scotland Office published a survey, commissioned from independent consultants, of the cost of motoring in Scotland as compared with other parts of Europe. The survey looked at the total cost of motoring in 15 European countries. It concluded that the overall cost of motoring in rural Scotland is similar to the UK's average, and significantly less than some of our European neighbours. Fuel costs have declined since then.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when she last discussed with the Chancellor of the Exchequer the impact of fuel taxes on the economy of rural Scotland. [7065]

Mrs. Liddell: I have regular discussions with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on a wide range of issues, including the state of the Scottish economy.

The Chancellor, in his Budget of 2001, announced a package of measures to encourage cleaner transport, including reductions to the main road fuels. The Budget also included the abolition of VED on agricultural vehicles. The package will benefit up to 20,000 agricultural businesses in Scotland and, taken together, represents the equivalent of a 4p per litre cut in fuel duty to motorists and a 7p per litre duty cut to hauliers.

These changes have brought significant benefit to the people of Scotland, which I am sure have been especially welcome to rural communities.

Scotland Week

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which organisations she met during her participation in Scotland Week in Brussels. [16560]

Mrs. Liddell: I took part in two Scotland Week events during my visit to Brussels in October, a fashion show at HM Ambassador's residence to promote Harris Tweed, and a seminar on the Future of Europe. At the Harris Tweed promotion event I spoke to a large gathering of people, and met representatives of the following organisations who each contributed towards sponsoring the event: Scotland Europa, Western Isles Enterprise, The Harris Tweed Authority and Western Isles Council..

Representatives of many organisations, both Scottish and others, were present at the Future of Europe seminar, at which I also gave a speech. I met representatives of those organising the event, Scotland Europa and the Scottish Executive. I also held other meetings in relation to Government duties.

Proceeds of Crime Bill

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will give an undertaking that the confiscation provisions of the Proceeds of Crime Bill in so far as they relate to Scotland will not be implemented until the views of the Scottish Parliament have been obtained. [16810]

Mr. Foulkes: No. We will continue to liaise closely with Scottish Executive Ministers and officials. It will be for Scottish Ministers to decide whether they wish to obtain further views from the Scottish Parliament.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions she has had with the Home Office regarding putting before the Scottish Parliament the changes proposed in confiscation provisions of the Proceeds of Crime Bill in so far as they relate to Scotland. [16809]

Mr. Foulkes: None. This is a matter for the Scottish Executive to consider.

HEALTH

Smallpox Vaccine

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to ensure that every United Kingdom citizen has access to a vaccine against smallpox to protect against possible bio-terrorist attack; and if additional stocks will need to be purchased to achieve this level of coverage. [13144]

Jacqui Smith: There is no specific threat of a smallpox attack against the United Kingdom. There are strategic supplies of vaccines and antibiotics for use as appropriate to the incident; and we have got substantial stocks of smallpox vaccine which could be rapidly deployed to contain an outbreak.

The UK policy on future smallpox vaccine manufacture is currently under development. The Department is pursuing other sources of vaccine supply at the Swiss Serum Centre which holds stocks of vaccine left over from the World Health Organisation's eradication programme and is also working closely with the Ministry of Defence in determining the UK's vaccine needs. We are also in discussions with the United States of America and other Governments about stocks of vaccine.

Hospital Trusts (Rating System)

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the usefulness of the star rating system for hospital trusts; and if he will make a statement. [14042]

Mr. Hutton: Performance ratings for acute non-specialist national health service trusts were published on 25 September. This is the first time that hospital trusts have been publicly classified according to their performance, with more freedom and rewards for the best and more help for the poorest. This approach is a decisive break with the past.

In the trusts that were awarded no stars, action plans are being drawn up and implemented. These will improve the areas of significant under performance and bring them up to the standard the public and patients have the right to expect.

Overseas Doctors

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many doctors since 1 May 1999 have been entitled to participate in induction courses for overseas doctors; and how many have done so; [15326]

(2) what proportion of overseas doctors working on the wards in UK hospitals have participated in induction courses at the latest available date. [15327]

Mr. Hutton: We expect all doctors, whether from abroad or the United Kingdom, to get the induction they need from their national health service employers when they take up post. We do not hold information centrally on the number of doctors who have participated in local induction.

In addition to the induction offered by NHS trusts to their employees, the Department is actively promoting good induction practice by funding an induction scheme for doctors from outside the UK. This is run via postgraduate deaneries in association with NHS professionals. Postgraduate deaneries ran a formal pilot of the induction courses in 1999, and we began funding the scheme in 2000. So far approximately 600 foreign doctors have been taken through the overseas doctors induction scheme.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he intends to take to change the residence requirements for funding of GP training for overseas doctors; and if he will make a statement. [13852]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 12 November 2001]: We have today changed these requirements. Overseas doctors are now eligible for National Health Service funding for general practitioner training.

This move will support our drive to increase GP numbers. We know that there are overseas doctors—some currently working in the United Kingdom—who are keen to train for a career in general practice. Out-of-date restrictions have previously excluded such doctors from NHS funding. We have now removed these restrictions and are taking immediate steps to recruit more doctors into GP training.

Health Funding (Essex)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to provide new resources for (a) Barking, Havering and Redbridge Hospitals and (b) the Havering Primary Care NHS Trust; and if he will make a statement. [14801]

Mr. Hutton: Barking and Havering Health Authority, which is served by Barking, Havering and Redbridge Hospitals National Health Service Trust, received an initial £24 million (8.56 per cent.) increase in allocation in 2001–02.

The health authority has also received the following in-year allocations:

£1.1 million to support NHS Plan implementation

£0.2 million for HIV/AIDS services

£0.3 million modernisation fund for dentists

£0.3 million for winter preparations

£0.4 million for primary care practice based incentive scheme

£0.3 million to address long waiting times.

Recent announcements have allocated the following additional funding:

£50 million nationally to support the development of the emergency care strategy, of which Barking, Havering and Redbridge Hospitals NHS Trust is receiving £0.8 million.

£50 million nationally to tackle occupancy, cancelled operations and accident and emergency delays of which Barking, Havering and Redbridge Hospitals NHS Trust is receiving £0.5 million.

Havering Primary Care Trust will take on more responsibility for commissioning services in the future and will be allocated the resources to do so. From 2003–04, subject to legislation, revenue allocations will go directly to PCTs instead of through health authorities.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the expected saving to public funds from the private finance initiative schemes in (a) Carlisle, (b) Dartford and Gravesham and (c) South Buckinghamshire; [15256]

(2) what the anticipated saving is to public funds from the 100 PFI hospital schemes provided for in the NHS plan by 2010; [15247]

(3) if he will make a statement on the anticipated savings to public funds from the private finance initiative schemes due to become operational in 2001. [15257]

Mr. Hutton: The table shows a list of all major private finance initiative contracts which have reached financial close since May 1997 listing net present costs of private finance versus public sector comparator option. The projected savings on each scheme over the lifetime of the contracts are in column 4 and are presented in net present value terms.

[1] At financial close in July 1997 the figures for the PSC and PFI were 922,600 and 943,900 respectively, producing a projected saving of £21,300,000. An error in the PSC was uncovered by the NAO during the course of the work for their report on this scheme in 1999. As a result the projected saving was revised downwards to £5.1 million.

[2] Figures only taken as at FBC

Notes:

The table does not allow direct comparisons between the difference schemes. Investment appraisal conventions allow different approaches to counting costs. For example, provided the conventions are consistently applied in each appraisal, costs common to both alternatives can be either included or excluded and differences in costs can be scored rather than actual costs.

The table includes the expected savings on the schemes at Carlisle, Dartford and Gravesham and South Buckinghamshire. Greenwich, North Durham, Calderdale, South Manchester and Norfolk and Norwich all became operational in 2001. No further major schemes are scheduled to open in 2001.

The 23 major schemes in the table contribute to the target of over 100 new PFI hospital schemes by 2010 in the NHS plan. The target comprises a minimum of 64 major hospital schemes (capital value over £20 million) and a minimum of 36 medium-sized hospital schemes (capital value £10-£20 million), of which 17 have already reached financial close. Information on the projected savings of medium-sized hospital schemes is not held centrally.

Value for money in PFI is assessed on a case by case basis upon presentation of the full business case (FBC). None of the other 60 major and medium-sized hospital schemes comprising the NHS plan target have yet to reach this stage so it is not possible to anticipate the savings to public funds for these schemes.

The total projected savings in net present value terms to the national health service and the taxpayer for these first 23 major PFI schemes to reach financial close is £223,000,000.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance he has issued to those hospital trusts making strategic outhouse case bids for PFIs; and what scoring criteria will be used to measure (a) value for money, (b) existing social need, (c) existing medical service shortfalls, (d) innovation and (e) other factors; [15863]

(2) which initial PFI offers to acute trusts made in the last three years were (a) in response to a comprehensive and costed strategic outline case or plan and (b) following a general plan; [15849]

(3) which acute trusts have indicated an intention to complete a strategic outline cost for a PFI investment in the current year; [15848]

(4) how many PFI offers have been agreed between his Department and acute trusts in each of the last three years. [15850]

Mr. Hutton: The most recent guidance for the preparation of strategic outline cases (SOCs) was issued to the national health service last year. The purpose of the SOC is to provide Ministers (advised by the Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group (CPAG)) with the necessary information to assess the national priority of major capital investment schemes with a capital value of £20 million or over.

The guidance states that Ministers have made it clear that the main criterion by which schemes are prioritised is health service need, but that other factors such as deliverability and affordability are also important.

Under the private finance initiative procurement process, initial offers by bidders are made in response to the invitation to negotiate which an NHS trust sends to bidders selected from those who responded to the Official Journal of the European Community notice. All major schemes which are prioritised on the basis of the SOC then have to prepare an outline business case (OBC) which identifies and develops a fully costed preferred option for the proposed scheme. It is at this OBC stage that the final decision is taken on whether to test for private finance; the assessment will take into account a number of value for money factors. If approved to proceed under the PFI route, the NHS trust will first place a contract notice in OJEC which potential bidders will respond to.

The decision to develop an SOC must be supported and agreed to by all the key local stakeholders, principally the Department of Health regional office, health authorities and primary care trusts. Local authorities and regional offices of Government/Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions will also need to be aware if major construction works are envisaged. Only following such agreement will the Department of Health be formally notified and a decision taken on the best way of taking it forward. No such notifications have been received to date in the current year.

SOCs for major capital projects are normally accepted in specific rounds by CPAG, which advises Ministers on each scheme's viability. Ministers can consider cases outside of specific prioritisation rounds where there is an urgent need. The eventual treatment of such cases will depend on the progress and priority of those schemes already approved to commence their procurements, and the number of schemes waiting to go to tender, so as to ensure optimal value for money.

The following major acute PFI schemes have reached financial close (signed contracts) and started construction in the past three years:

Hereford

Worcester

Barnet and Chase Farm

Swindon and Marlborough

King's Healthcare

South Tees

South Durham

2000:

Hull and East Yorkshire

St George's

University College London Hospital

West Middlesex

Dudley.

Personal Injury Cases

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has estimated the potential cost to the NHS of the Lord Chancellor's decision to reduce the discount rate to 2.5 per cent. for damages in personal injury cases. [15475]

Mr. Hutton: The Lord Chancellor's Department is carrying out a full assessment of the impact of the new discount rate, which is being prepared and will be published in due course.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in (a) rank and (b) alphabetical order of NHS trust in each region the (i) proportion and (ii) number of patients waiting (A) over 12 months and (B) over 18 months or more for in-patient treatment (1) at the latest available date, (2) in March 1997 and (3) in June 1997. [16805]

Mr. Hutton: The number and proportion of patients waiting over 12 and 18 months at March 1997, June 1997 and September 2001 have been placed in the Library.

In line with the NHS plan, in-patient waiting times will fall on a staged basis from 18 months now through to 15,12, nine and down to six months by 2005. As a first step towards this, the maximum waiting time for an in-patient appointment will be 15 months by the end of March 2002.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients there were on in-patient waiting lists waiting over 12 months for the quarter ended (a) March 1997 and (b) September 2001; [16403]

(2) if he will list the percentage of patients on in-patient waiting lists waiting over 12 months for the quarter ended (a) March 1997 and (b) September 2001. [16402]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

	March 1997	September 2001
Number of patients waiting over 12 months	30,245	43,873
Percentage of total waiting list	2.67	4.29

Note:

Figures are health authority based and are sourced from the QF01 waiting times return.

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the balance in the work programme of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence between (a) technology appraisals and (b) treatment guidelines. [15968]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The work programme of the National Institute is set by Health Ministers in England and Wales. The Department and National Assembly for Wales have also approved the institute's current business plan.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out for each technology appraisal undertaken by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence the (a) final recommendation and (b) cost effectiveness as measured in terms of QALYs. [15967]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 November 2001]: Details of each completed appraisal can be found on the National Institute's website at www.nice.org.uk. The final appraisal determination contains the estimated cost per quality adjusted life year (QALY) for those cases where the National Institute of Clinical Excellence has quoted a specific figure. The Institute's judgments are based on a range of factors which include available information on cost per QALY.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to undertake a review of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence. [15965]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The report of the Bristol Royal Infirmary Inquiry makes some far-reaching recommendations on the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE). We are considering how these will affect any review of NICE's work. We expect to make an announcement shortly.

National Blood Service

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which experts from outside the National Blood Service Appropriate Use of Blood Working Group is consulting. [16347]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The Appropriate Use of Blood Working Group has experts from outside the National Blood Service as members. They are:

Dr. Paula Bolton-Maggs: Consultant haematologist, Alder Hey Hospital

Carol Cantwell: Chief biomedical scientist, St. Mary's Hospital, London

Jan Gordon: Transfusion nurse, Chelsea and Westminster Hospital

Charles McCollum: Professor of surgery, Manchester

Prof. Paul McMaster: Hepatobiliary and transplant surgeon, Birmingham

Dr. Dafydd Thomas: Consultant, Morriston Hospital

John Thompson: Royal Devon and Exeter Hospital.

Blood Use (Overseas Hospitals)

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had about the use of blood and blood transfusions for NHS patients who take up treatment in overseas hospitals with Ministers from those countries. [16349]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The Department recognises that commissioning care overseas raises a number of particular issues, including the use of blood and blood transfusions. The three pilot sites currently working to send patients to mainland Europe are discussing these issues with potential providers.

Relenza

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many health authorities in the north-west region have drawn up patient group directions for Relenza; [16290]

(2) what advice he has given to health authorities on drawing up patient group directions for Relenza and other drugs. [16291]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 21 November 2001]: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Health Service Circular 2000/026 containing guidance on Patient Group Directions was issued to the national health service (England) on 9 August 2000. Additional guidance on the supply and administration of Relenza was issued on 21 November 2000.

NHS (IT Policy)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 26 October 2001, Official Report, column 423W, on IT policy in the NHS, if he will place a copy of the CISCO E-Compliant Network study in the Library. [16816]

Ms Blears: A copy of the report has now been placed in the Library.

Nursing and Midwifery Council

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish the representations he has received on the proposal to leave health visitors out of the title of the Nursing and Midwifery Council; [16298]

(2) what the legislative timetable is for the introduction of the Nursing and Midwifery Council; [16299]

(3) if he will define the roles of (a) health visitors and (b) community practitioners. [16300]

Mr. Hutton: The Nursing and Midwifery Order to establish the new Nursing and Midwifery Council was laid before Parliament on 15 November, together with a report on the consultation. Copies are available in the Vote Office. The Orders will be considered in Standing Committee on 26 November and in the House of Lords shortly. The legislation contains a number of safeguards for health visiting. There will be a separate part of the register, protection of the professional title, and equal representation with nurses and midwives on the council. The future role of health visitors will be a matter for the Nursing and Midwifery Council.

Tilt Report

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the implementation of the recommendations of the Tilt report concerning security at special hospitals and the amount of money so far spent on implementation by his Department. [16621]

Jacqui Smith: The report of the review of security at the high security hospitals (the Tilt report) was published on 22 May 2000. All the recommendations in the report were accepted by the Government and the implementation process is on-going. Central funding for 2000–01 and 2001–02 is set out in the table:

£ million

	Current expenditure	Capital expenditure
2001–02	5.0	38.0

£1 million of current expenditure funding was provided in 2000–01 to meet some of the costs of implementation arising in that year. The £5 million for current expenditure for 2001–02 has been provided specifically in response to the recommendation that additional funding should be made available to facilitate the movement out of the hospitals of patients no longer needing high security care. Other current expenditure for 2001–02 arising from Tilt report recommendations has been met by the health authority commissioners of the services out of the overall expenditure allocations available to them.The capital expenditure relates to improvements to the physical security of the high security hospitals, particularly the upgrading of perimeter security that Sir Richard Tilt saw as being necessary in the interests of maintaining public safety.

Mental Health

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the occupancy rate of beds is in acute mental health wards in each London hospital in respect of (a) detained patients and (b) voluntary patients. [16624]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 5 November 2001, Official Report, columns 101–02W.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in the mapping of local mental health services; and if he will publish the results. [16622]

Jacqui Smith: The results of the comprehensive mapping of mental health services conducted in autumn 2000 were made available to local implementation teams (LIT) in January 2001 and have been available on a Durham University website in July 2001. This contains all data supplied by each LIT for the 2000 Mapping. The database will remain available to LITs for their continued use for local planning and monitoring purposes.

As part of the comprehensive review process between April and October 2001 the Mapping has been updated to provide a picture of service provision as of 30 September 2001. Reports based on analysis and summary of the data in the form of tables and maps will be available by the end of January 2002.

The data provided by the Mapping 2001 will be published in the form of an atlas and will also be available to the public on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/servicemapping/index.htm.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to commission the development of a tool kit to support mental health services in promoting mental health for people from ethnic minority communities; and if he will make a statement on (a) the work so far and (b) the cost. [17089]

Jacqui Smith: Work on developing the tool kit will be taken forward under the auspices of the National Institute for Mental Health in its 2002–03 work programme.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health at what age mental health services users are transferred from adolescent to adult services. [16612]

Jacqui Smith: This is an area in which local practice varies quite widely at present.

The National Service Framework for Mental Health specified that local arrangements (including service protocols) should be in place to ensure clarity in the handling of referrals of young people in the borderline ages (for example, 16 to 21 years) to ensure that no young person's mental health needs remain unmet.

Earlier this year, Ministers announced that child and adolescent mental health services will form part of the planned Children's National Service Framework, alongside maternity and hospital and social services for children. The Children's National Service Framework will be based on key NHS Plan values including the integration of services, partnership working and breaking down professional barriers. The question of unifying transfer ages between services will be fully considered in the context of developing standards and good practice guidance for this new and important service framework.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) medium and (b) low secure beds there are for mental health patients. [16611]

Jacqui Smith: Returns indicate that at April 2001, the latest date for which information is currently available, there were 2,231 medium secure beds and 1,353 other secure beds for mental health patients.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average annual cost is per patient to the NHS of a person with a diagnosis of severe mental illness. [17221]

Jacqui Smith: People with severe mental illness may access a range of National Health Service services at various times and in no predictable way and it is not possible from the information held centrally to disaggregate the costs of different services to enable the calculation of an average annual cost to the NHS per severely mentally ill patient.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures are in place, and what changes are planned, to ensure that mental health-related calls to NHS Direct are handled in such a way that those contemplating suicide receive the treatment they need. [17223]

Jacqui Smith: NHS Direct nurse advisers use formalised computer based clinical assessment systems to enable them to offer appropriate support and advice to callers who may be contemplating suicide. In addition they receive specific training to assist them in undertaking a risk assessment which includes the assessment of potential deliberate self-harm. Links have been made and protocols are in place to enable nurse advisers to refer callers to local specialist mental health crisis services and to appropriate mental health helplines.

Student Nurses

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many student nurses received (a) hardship loans and (b) NHS hardship grants in each of the last three years, and how many have been made in the current year. [17219]

Mr. Hutton: The hardship loans that student nurses in receipt of the means tested national health service bursary are eligible to apply for, are funded by the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) through the allocations made to higher education institutions by the Higher Education Funding Council for England. NHS education and training commissioners (work force development confederations) are required to allocate funds for the purpose of providing NHS hardship grants for students experiencing financial difficulties and who have exhausted all other sources of support.

The Department does not routinely monitor take-up of either form of hardship support. However, evidence from the DfES 1998–99 student income and expenditure survey indicated around 2 per cent. of NHS students claiming access/hardship support. These data are supported by information the Department gathered during 1999, which reported a total of 105 payments of NHS hardship grants (that is to say payments to fewer than 1 per cent. of eligible students).

NHS-funded Students

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for the review of student funding policy in relation to NHS-funded students. [17220]

Mr. Hutton: On 3 October my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Department for Education and Skills announced plans for a fundamental review of DfES student support arrangements. The new arrangements will be introduced from autumn 2003 at the earliest. The Department will be working with DfES to ensure that the needs of health professional students are taken fully into account in the design of the new arrangements, and will consider carefully what implications the changes have for the support which the national health service provides directly through the NHS bursary scheme.

National Health Service Reform and Health Care Professions Bill

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he intends to table amendments to the National Health Service Reform and Health Care Professions Bill; and if he will make a statement. [16623]

Mr. Hutton: At this stage, as with any Bill of this size and complexity, there may be a need for some minor or consequential amendments. The scrutiny of the Bill during its passage may highlight areas where improvements could be made, and where an amendment might therefore be required.

Patient Priority

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department gives to clinicians for the purposes of determining the priority of patients to be treated. [14281]

Mr. Hutton: We have made it clear that patients must be treated according to their clinical need and priority. In July 1997 an Executive Letter (EL (97) 42) was issued to the national health service about access to secondary care services. It stated that

> "clinical priority must be the main determinant of when patients are seen as outpatients or admitted as inpatients."

Since then, additional forms of guidance from the Department on waiting list management and clinical priority have been given to the NHS. "Getting Patients Treated—The Waiting List Action Team Handbook" was issued to all NHS trust chief executives in August 1999 and advises on the order in which patients should be treated.

Recently, the NHS was instructed to use guidance drawn up by the NHS Modernisation Agency called the "Primary Targeting Lists Approach" to assist them in treating patients within the shorter maximum waiting times targets for 2001–02. The guidance states that patients with greatest clinical priority must be treated first and gives NHS organisations the practical advice to treat patients in the right order within the maximum waiting times targets.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Animal Welfare

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she intends the slaughter provisions in the Animal Welfare Bill to apply to pet animals. [12412]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 5 November 2001]: The slaughter provisions in the Animal Health Act and Bill with respect to foot and mouth disease do not apply to animals which are not susceptible to this disease such as horses, cats and dogs.

Existing provisions in the Animal Health Act 1981 make no distinction between foot and mouth disease-susceptible animals kept as pets and those kept for any other reason. The same approach is taken in the new slaughter provisions under the Animal Health Bill.

Equally, the Bill will not change the current position on exemptions from slaughter, which is that there is specific provision in veterinary instructions for proportionate exceptions at local level based on local veterinary judgment, including where susceptible animals are kept as pets.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will propose amendments to the Animal Health Bill to cover failures by (a) DEFRA officials, (b) army personnel and (c) veterinary surgeons to respect her Department's bio-security rules. [15648]

Mr. Morley: No. I am aware of the allegations that biosecurity measures were breached by DEFRA officials and others. All such allegations were treated with the utmost seriousness and were investigated. Most cases were found either to be groundless or to be lacking in sufficient detail to enable a thorough investigation. All staff working for DEFRA already have to follow strict biosecurity guidelines.

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress her Department has made in implementing the recommendation in the Performance and Innovation Unit report on animal welfare and the WTO. [16085]

Mr. Morley: The Government have ensured that the issue of animal welfare is firmly on the WTO negotiating agenda and an integral part of the European Union's comprehensive negotiating proposal.

PCSU Industrial Action

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the dispute between her Department and the Public and Commercial Services Union; and if she will make a statement. [16587]

Mr. Morley: The industrial action that is currently taking place by the Public and Commercial Services union in the former MAFF part of DEFRA risks affecting payment arrangements to farmers this winter. We are doing our best to take corrective action, taking account of the needs of our customers, the taxpayer and long term working relations in the Department. Our aim is to resolve the dispute as quickly as possible.

Public Transport (Rural Areas)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans the Government have to fund public transport interchanges at train and bus stations in rural areas. [16585]

Alun Michael: Many local authorities have plans for new and improved public transport interchanges as part of the strategies contained in their local transport plans. Last December, the Government announced a significant increase in local transport capital funding on 14 December 2000, Official Report, columns 200–02, with £8.4 billion being provided over the five years from 2001–02. Innovative bus schemes in rural areas can also seek central government funding from the Rural Bus Challenge Fund. Promoters of interchanges at rail stations may also apply for Rail Passenger Partnership funding.

Rural Local Authorities

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which local authorities in England and Wales she classifies as rural. [16583]

Alun Michael: The following list of districts/unitary authorities have been classified as rural by the Countryside Agency for their 1999, 2000 and 2001 State of the Countryside Reports:

North East

Durham county: Teesdale, Wear Valley

Northumberland: Alnwick, Berwick-upon-Tweed, Castle Morpeth, Tynedale

North West

Cheshire county: Chester, Congleton, Crewe and Nantwich, Ellesmere Port and Neston, Vale Royal

Cumbria: Allerdale, Copeland, Eden, South Lakeland

Lancashire county: Lancaster, Pendle, Ribble Valley, Wyre

Yorkshire and The Humber

East Riding of Yorkshire UA

North Lincolnshire UA

Craven, Hambleton, Harrogate, Richmondshire, Ryedale, Scarborough, Selby

East Midlands

Rutland UA

Derbyshire county: Derbyshire Dales, High Peak, South Derbyshire

Leicestershire county: Harborough, Hinckley and Bosworth, Melton, North West Leicestershire

Lincolnshire: Boston, East Lindsey, North Kesteven, South Holland, South Kesteven, West Lindsey

Northamptonshire: Daventry, East Northamptonshire, South Northamptonshire

Nottinghamshire county: Bassetlaw, Newark and Sherwood, Rushcliffe

West Midlands

County of Herefordshire UA

Shropshire county: Bridgnorth, North Shropshire, Oswestry, Shrewsbury and Atcham, South Shropshire

Staffordshire county: East Staffordshire, South Staffordshire, Staffordshire Moorlands

Warwickshire: North Warwickshire, Stratford-upon-Avon

Worcestershire county: Malvern Hills, Wychavon

East

Bedfordshire county: Mid Bedfordshire, South Bedfordshire

Cambridgeshire county: East Cambridgeshire, Fenland, Huntingdonshire, South Cambridgeshire

Essex county: Braintree, Maldon, Tendring, Uttlesford

Hertfordshire: East Hertfordshire

Norfolk: Breckland, Broadland, Kings Lynn and West Norfolk, North Norfolk, South Norfolk

Suffolk: Babergh, Forest Heath, Mid Suffolk, St. Edmundsbury, Suffolk Coastal, Waveney

South East

Isle of Wight UA

West Berkshire UA (Newbury)

Buckinghamshire county: Aylesbury Vale, Chiltern, Wycombe

East Sussex county: Lewes, Rother, Wealden

Hampshire county: East Hampshire, New Forest, Test Valley, Winchester

Kent county: Ashford, Canterbury, Dover, Maidstone, Sevenoaks, Shepway, Thanet, Tonbridge and Malling, Tunbridge Wells

Oxfordshire: Cherwell, South Oxfordshire, Vale of White Horse, West Oxfordshire

Surrey: Tandridge, Waverley

West Sussex: Arun, Chichester, Horsham, Mid Sussex

South West

Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly: Caradon, Carrick, Kerrier, North Cornwall, Penwith, Restormel, Isles of Scilly

Devon county: East Devon, Mid Devon, North Devon, South Hams, Teignbridge, Torridge, West Devon

Dorset county: East Dorset, North Dorset, Purbeck, West Dorset

Gloucestershire: Cotswold, Forest of Dean, Stroud, Tewkesbury

Somerset: Mendip, Sedgemoor, South Somerset, Taunton Deane, West Somerset

Wiltshire county: Kennet, North Wiltshire, Salisbury, West Wiltshire.

Rural Employment

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of people between 16 and 60 years old in rural areas in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001 were active in (i) full-time, (ii) part-time and (iii) seasonal work. [16586]

Alun Michael: The percentage of people aged 16 and over in rural areas in England in full-time and part-time employment was as follows:

Percentage

Year	Full-time	Part-time
1996	73.11	28.02
1997	73.58	26.96
1998	73.49	27.31
1999	73.44	27.67
2000	72.99	27.79
2001	73.13	28.16

Reliable information on seasonal employment is not readily available.

Farm Birds

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what was the population of farm birds in rural areas in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [16580]

Alun Michael: In 1970 the baseline index for 25 farmland bird species was 100.

(c) 1998—56.351

(d) 1999—58.902

(e) 2000—figures due to be published in December

(f) 2001—figures not currently available

Countryside Visits

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the level of spending by visitors to the countryside in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [16589]

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of people who visited the countryside in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [15897]

Alun Michael: The "United Kingdom Day Visitors Survey" shows the level of spending to be:

(b) 1997—no survey carried out

(c) 1998—£8.4 billion

(d) 1999—no survey carried out

(e) 2000—no survey carried out

(f) 2001—no survey carried out

The Countryside Agency is working on plans for a further survey in 2002.

Ozone

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the levels of ozone in rural areas in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [16538]

Alun Michael: Average number of days per site in rural areas on which pollution levels were above national air quality standards.

Rural Crime

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of people in rural areas claimed to feel safe from crime in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [16541]

Alun Michael: The figures show that more people in rural areas feel safe from crime. The proportion (percentage) of adults in rural areas surveyed in the British Crime Survey not worried about crime by type.

Agriculture

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people were employed in agriculture in the United Kingdom in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000, and (f) 2001; and what proportion were (a) full-time, (b) part-time and (c) seasonal. [16536]

Alun Michael: The latest information available for the United Kingdom is from the June 2000 Agricultural Census. Results for 2001 will be available later this year. The labour questions were changed in 1998 in England and Wales to allow more detailed information on full/part time and paid/unpaid labour to be collected. The available information is shown in the table:

United Kingdom

Thousand head

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Total workers	245.7	242.9	245.2	229.6	204.4
Salaried managers[1]	7.8	7.8	12.1	13.8	11.1
Full-time	n/a	n/a	9.9	10.9	9.3

Regular workers	156.4	154.2	154.6	143.8	128.9
Full-time	101.8	100.1	100.5	94.1	83.8
Part-time	54.6	54.1	54.1	49.7	45.2
Casual/gang	81.5	80.9	78.4	72.0	64.4

[1] From 1998 all farmers managing holdings for limited companies were asked to classify themselves as salaried managers.

Notes:

1. In 1998 fundamental changes were introduced to the labour questions in England and Wales. It appears that this change may have led to the recording of additional labour not previously included in the census returns. The change in questions has also led to a redistribution of labour between the various categories, most notably for salaried managers. Caution is therefore advised when comparing the 1997 and 1998 results.
2. Figures exclude school children but include trainees employed under an official youth training scheme and paid at Agricultural Wages Board rates or above.
3. Includes minor holdings.
4. Totals may not agree with components due to rounding.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the (a) subsidies paid to agriculture, (b) environmental costs of agriculture and (c) contribution of agriculture to GDP in each of the last five years; and what estimate she has made of the projected contribution of agriculture to GDP in each of the next five years expressed as a percentage of total GDP. [12292]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 2 November 2001]: Total public expenditure on agriculture in the financial year 2000–01 is estimated to have been £3,182 million[1]

Estimates of the total value of the impact of agriculture on the environment are not currently produced by my Department.

Two recent academic studies have made estimates of the environmental costs of agriculture:

Pretty, J., Brett, C., Gee, D., Hine, R., Mason, C., Morison, J., Raven, H., Rayment, M. and van der Bijl, G. (2000), an assessment of the external costs of UK agriculture, "Agricultural Systems", forthcoming.

Hartridge, O., Pearce, D., "Is UK Agriculture Sustainable? Environmentally Adjusted Economic Accounts for UK Agriculture". Centre for Social and Economic Research on the Global Environmental: University College, London.

Agriculture's share of national gross value added at basic prices (formerly GDP) in each of the last five years is given in the following table.

Percentage

	Agriculture's share of national gross value added
1996	1.5
1997	1.2
1998	1.0

Estimates of the projected contribution of agriculture to GDP in future years are not produced by my Department.

The decline since 1996 is partly due to the rise in sterling against the Euro (which has affected agriculture more than many other sectors) weak world commodity markets and the effects of BSE. However, it also reflects a long term downward trend which results from underlying trends in demand—because as standards of living rise, consumers spend a smaller share of their family budget on food—and also from underlying trends in technology—which mean that prices for agricultural commodities have tended to rise less quickly than general inflation. These trends can be expected to continue, to some degree, in the future.

Rural Bus Services

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of rural bus services ran over the weekend in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [16540]

Alun Michael: The following information is available from the Countryside Agency's rural services survey:

Percentage of parishes with a bus service

	1997	2000
A 6 days a week bus service	35	31
A 7 days a week bus service	25	36
6/7 day service	60	67

Note:

Data not available for 1996, 1998, 1999 and 2001

Percentage of settlements with a bus service

A 6 days a week bus service	27
A 7 days a week bus service	24
6/7 day service	51

Note:

Data not available for 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999 and 2001

Source:

RDC and Countryside Agency

The data come from the rural services survey series which is undertaken triennially. For 2000 data were collected on both a parish basis (historical administrative boundaries) and settlement basis (areas where people live) where the sample size increased from around 6,000 to 14,000.

Agrimonetary Compensation

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funds are available from the (a) EU and (b) UK Government to compensate agriculture in Britain for losses caused by the weakness of the euro; and how much has been paid, by categories, in each of the last three periods for which figures are available. [15403]

Mr. Morley: Payments of agrimonetary compensation are partially funded by the EU budget and partly from the UK Exchequer. The following table lists the amounts of compensation that became available from 1999 to 2001. Payments are shown against the year in which the compensation became available although payments are made in up to three annual instalments. It was compulsory for member states to pay the EU element of the compensation which became available in 1999. All subsequent compensation payments are optional.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) which countries have used inoculation as a preventive tool in trying to combat foot and mouth disease breakdowns over the last five years; [8545]

(2) if she will list the countries that inoculate all their animals against foot and mouth disease breakdowns. [8544]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 October 2001]: These questions can be fully answered only at disproportionate cost. However, the website of the Office International des Epizootics www.oie.int/eng/en—index.htm provides a very detailed range of statistics regarding the control measures employed by its member countries.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if her Department has identified the origins of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease. [15625]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The current epidemic has been caused by a specific strain of the foot and mouth virus (PanAsian Strain O) which has occurred in a number of countries around the world. The precise means of the introduction of the virus into Great Britain is unknown and the subject of continuing investigations, but is more likely to have been introduced in illegally imported meat or meat products.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what contingency plans and resources were established within MAFF to deal with foot and mouth disease before the outbreak this year. [15370]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 November 2001]: Prior to the current outbreak of foot and mouth disease, MAFF had contingency plans for dealing with outbreaks of serious animal disease which included detailed operational instructions for use by the state veterinary service. The general contingency plan for foot and mouth was updated and submitted to the European Commission in July 2000. MAFF regularly held local emergency exercises in co-operation with the police, supervised by the divisional veterinary manager. Animal health offices were required to regularly update their local contingency plans.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which office in her Department is responsible for co-ordinating policy on foot and mouth; and how many civil servants are working in this policy area. [15373]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The co-ordination of foot and mouth policy is the responsibility of the DEFRA ministerial team. Day-to-day responsibility for foot and mouth eradication policy lies with Jim Scudamore as chief veterinary officer and director general of animal health and welfare in DEFRA. The CVO is closely supported in this work area by the veterinary director and the director of animal health.

The directorate general includes veterinary and administrative staff engaged in an extremely wide rang of FMD related duties, and works closely with other teams inside DEFRA, notably the joint co-ordination centre (JCC) which reports to Mark Addison, director general operations and service delivery.

The number of officials, at all levels, within Jim Scudamore's team in headquarters who work full time in the exotic diseases veterinary team and the foot and mouth division is 47.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what instructions have been issued by her Department to the chairmen of the foot and mouth disease inquiries (a) to concentrate on the handling of future animal disease outbreaks and (b) to exclude the handling of the outbreak from their inquiries and final reports; and if she will make a statement. [16659]

Mr. Morley: On 9 August 2001 the Prime Minister announced two independent inquiries and a policy commission into the foot and mouth disease (FMD) outbreak.

The "Lessons Learned" inquiry is to make recommendations for the way in which the Government should handle any future major animal disease outbreak in the light of the lessons identified from the handling of the 2001 FMD outbreak in Great Britain. The Royal Society has been asked to review scientific questions relating to the transmission, prevention and control of epidemic outbreaks of infectious diseases in livestock in Great Britain. The Policy Commission on the Future of Farming and Food will advise on how to create a sustainable, competitive and diverse farming and food sector.

No specific instructions have been issued to the chairmen of the two inquiries and the Policy Commission beyond the terms of reference.

Appeal Mechanism (Farmers)

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will establish an independent appeal system for farmers in disagreement with her Department over the processing, interpretation or assessment of applications for financial support and other statutory services and procedures. [16400]

Mr. Morley: A consultation paper was issued in December 2000 on the introduction of an independent appeals procedure for farmers wishing to contest decisions to reduce or withhold payments under IACS (Integrated Administration and Control System) subsidy schemes in England. We announced on 15 May that we would work with industry to introduce new arrangements as soon as we can. Since then, DEFRA officials including the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) have been working on the details of the procedure prior to further consultation with the industry. The RPA is also working on parallel procedures for non-IACS schemes. In addition to this new procedure a senior DEFRA official acts as the Department's Impartial Complaints Adjudicator to investigate complaints about standards of service provided by the Department.

Fishing

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of progress in management of fishing effort in the Irish Sea. [15869]

Mr. Morley: Management of the Irish Sea focuses on setting TACs in line with scientific advice, enhanced technical conservation measures and, in 2000 and 2001, a prohibition on demersal fishing so as to allow the maximum number of cod to spawn.

The European Commission is currently preparing a proposal to the Council of Ministers for a Regulation establishing the long-term framework for recovery plans. An element of this proposal is expected to involve a significant reduction in fishing effort.

Coastal Protection

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in her discussions with the Environment Agency on coastal protection, what definition she has used for the phrase, Coastal Squeeze. [15812]

Mr. Morley: In the context of coastal defence, the term "coastal squeeze" is taken to refer to the process whereby, in the face of rising sea levels, an area of intertidal habitat, such as saltmarsh, mudflat or saline lagoon is prevented from migrating landwards owing to the presence of a hard boundary such as a sea defence.

(This description is set out at page 17 of Flood and Coastal Defence Project Appraisal Guidance, Volume 5, Environmental Appraisal (FCDPAG5)).

Flood Defences (Suffolk)

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent on sea and river defences in Suffolk between and including the rivers Blyth and Stour in each of the last 10 years. [15835]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency does not have information readily available on this basis.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to protect Suffolk environmentally sensitive areas from flooding due to bad weather. [15833]

Mr. Morley: Operational management of flood and coastal erosion risk in England is a matter for local operating authorities—the Environment Agency (EA), local authorities and internal drainage boards. I understand the Norfolk and Suffolk Flood Defence Committee of the EA is currently planning to undertake some 17 work projects or studies with a view to alleviating flood risk in areas that include environmental sites of European importance (Special Protection Areas (SPAs), Special Areas of Conservation (SACs) and Ramsar sites) in Suffolk which are at risk of flooding.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the shingle bank that protects the Alde and Ore estuary will be recharged. [15814]

Mr. Morley: I understand that, subject to the completion of an Appropriate Assessment as required by the Conservation (Natural Habitats etc) Regulations 1994, the Environment Agency plan to begin to recharge this shingle bank in April to May 2002. However the Agency have an agreement with English Nature that emergency works can be carried out if these become necessary in the meantime.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the annual cost is of shingle bank recharge between and including the rivers Blyth and Stour estuaries; and what the cost is of recharging the shingle banks that protect the Alde and Ore estuary. [15813]

Mr. Morley: I understand from the Environment Agency that the average annual costs of shingle recharge/movement on the following areas is:

	£000 per annum
Slaughden (Alde-Ore Estuary)	30
Easton Broad (North of Southwold)	10
Dunwich-Walberswick	15
Total	55

There is not shingle recharge/movement on the River Stour.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the loss of habitat in environmentally sensitive areas of Suffolk as a result of breached sea and river defences in the last 10 years. [15834]

Mr. Morley: Operational management of flood and coastal erosion risk in England, including environmentally sensitive areas, is a matter for local operating authorities. I understand that the Environment Agency, the main flood defence operating authority, has not abandoned any sea or river defences in Suffolk in the last 10 years.

Pig Industry

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2001, Official Report, columns 976–77, if she will make a statement on the operation of the pig industry restructuring support scheme, indicating (a) the total taken up, (b) the purposes for which the fund was used, (c) the amount left from the scheme unused and (d) what plans she has to use the unused sum. [17152]

Mr. Morley: The Pig Industry Restructuring Scheme (PIRS) is a Government funded scheme, introduced as part of the Action Plan for Farming, designed to offer short-term assistance to pig producers. Its aim is to help pig producers reduce breeding capacity, reduce costs, overcome any competitive disadvantage and restore long term viability; PIRS consists of two elements—outgoers and ongoers.

Partly as a response to the outbreak of FMD, there were two outgoers schemes, both of which are now closed for applications. Under these schemes, a total of 937 bids were accepted, covering 150,000 sow places, at a cost of £16 million. In terms of the number of sow places removed from the herd and of the value for money, outgoers was extremely successful.

For ongoers, there were a total of 712 applications in the UK and £21.8 million has been offered to the successful applicants—at an average of £31,000 per applicant. 99 per cent. of all applications were successful; a good indication that the scheme was both straightforward and flexible.

On finance; all but £3 million of the £66 million allocated to PIRS was used to fund pig specific operations and schemes, even though PIRS itself was under subscribed. The unspent £3 million was re-allocated to a business recovery scheme from which pig producers could benefit.

Rural Task Force

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the conclusions of the Rural Task Force. [16529]

Alun Michael: We are currently considering all the conclusions of the Rural Task Force's report. Several of the recommendations have been acted upon, not least through the provision of an additional £24 million to extend the work of the Business Recovery Fund announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 18 October.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what date it was planned for the Rural Task Force to be wound up. [16528]

Alun Michael: There has never been a fixed date for the Rural Task Force to be wound up: it will remain in being for as long as there is a need, and for as long as it can make a useful contribution towards kick-starting the rural economy following foot and mouth disease. The Task Force met last week and members made excellent and practical contributions from a variety of perspectives on ways in which the recovery of the rural economy can be assisted.

Prawn Quotas

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has held with the European Commission regarding prawn quotas. [16285]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The Government requested the Commission, by letter of 20 July 2001, to bring forward a proposal to restore the 10 per cent. cut that the EU made in the Total Allowable Catches for nephrops in the Irish sea, the North sea and west of Scotland in order to protect stocks of cod and hake. It is our contention that these cuts are not needed for reasons related to the state of the nephrops stocks and make no significant contribution to the protection of cod and hake.

The Commission has not so far seen fit to grant our request, despite having declared last December that it would bring forward proposals if such a case were demonstrated.

We are continuing to pursue this matter, including through, in the last few days, representation of the case to Commission officials by a delegation of officials from all the Fisheries Departments in the United Kingdom. I have now taken this up myself directly with Commissioner Fischler as a matter of urgency and am currently awaiting his response.

Special Advisers and Press Officers

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) special advisers and (b) press officers were employed (i) full time, (ii) part time and (iii) on a contract basis by her Department in each year since 1992. [6901]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, on 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 340W.

Movement of Livestock

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the unavailability of Welsh medium forms for use by local authorities in Wales at the commencement of the autumn movement of livestock scheme. [12545]

Mr. Morley: The Department has provided a standard template for forms to be used in connection with the livestock movement scheme. Local authorities may translate this into Welsh and I understand that a number may have now done so.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from the National Beef Association and other farming organisations on her Department's proposal to make permanent the 20-day standstill on cattle and sheep movements on farms; and if she will make a statement. [16034]

Mr. Morley: The Department received comments from the National Beef Association and a number of other representative industry associations on the proposals for a 20-day standstill. The Government are reviewing their proposals in the light of responses to the consultation exercise and we are carrying out full veterinary and economic risk assessments. It has been decided to make this issue part of a total approach to future disease control, which will also include biosecurity, animal identification and licensing. In the meantime, current movement licensing controls will continue.

BSE

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of those cattle tested for BSE are (a) fallen stock, (b) casualty animals and (c) over 30 months old; and what assessment she has made of the accuracy of the results in indicating the present level of BSE in the national herd. [16042]

Mr. Morley: Of the cattle tested in active surveillance this year up to 9 November the proportions are as follows:

Cattle tested for BSE	Percentage
Fallen Stock	40.1
Casualty Animals	58.2
Over 30 months old	98.6

The Government's testing programme is continuously adjusted on the basis of scientific advice and to comply with EU legislation. Its recent significant expansion will give us a more accurate picture of the level of BSE infectivity in the national herd.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the number of cattle tested for BSE in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; what plans her Department has to increase the number of cattle tested annually for BSE; and what assessment she has made of the level of testing for BSE in (a) France and (b) Germany. [16041]

Mr. Morley: The following table lists the number of cattle tested for BSE in each of last 10 years for which figures are available.

	Passive surveillance	Active surveillance
1991	29,237	—
1992	43,591	—
1993	41,642	—
1994	29,151	—
1995	17,382	—
1996	10,274	—
1997	5,346	—
1998	4,055	—
1999	2,853	3,951
2000	1,784	12,595
2001[1]	1,090	54,253

[1] As at 19 November

The Government's active surveillance programme has recently been stepped up so that testing of over 350,000 cattle per year will be carried out. These include all fallen stock over 24 months of age, all casualty animals over 24 months of age, all casualty animals over 24 months of age, all cattle born between 1 August 1996 and 31 July 1997 which are slaughtered under the over-thirty-months scheme and a sample of 50,000 other animals over the age of 30 months.Passive surveillance will continue as before though numbers of cattle showing clinical signs suspicious of BSE are in decline.

The current level of testing in France and Germany, as in the UK, is determined by EU legislation. Unlike the UK, the EU member states are now required to test all cattle over 30 months of age intended for human consumption—only meat from those with negative results is allowed to enter the food chain. The Food Standards Agency considers, however, that the UK's over-thirty-month-rule provides stronger protection.

Poultry Farms

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on the planning guidance currently issued to local authorities relating to the siting of new generation mobile chicken units on poultry farms. [16040]

Mr. Morley: We have had no recent discussions with DTLR on this subject. Guidance on temporary structures used for agriculture, including mobile poultry units, is contained within PPG7, Annexe C, paragraph 11.

DEFRA contributes to both national and regional planning guidance on a range of aspects. Through Government Offices, DEFRA provides technical advice to local planning authorities. This includes advice on giving farmers flexibility to adapt to changing animal welfare legislation. In doing so, local authorities are enabled to take due account of these aspects when they prepare their local development plans and assess individual planning applications.

Farm Assurance Schemes

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what further steps her Department plans to take to promote public awareness of the red tractor symbol and related farm food assurance schemes. [16038]

Mr. Morley: The Government support the development of assurance schemes and the red tractor logo. We are grant aiding the development of assured food standards which was set up to act as an umbrella body for assurance schemes and licence the use of the red tractor logo.

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the (a) efficiency and (b) promptness of the tasks carried out by the Rural Payments Agency; and if she will make a statement. [15810]

Mr. Morley: Following the launch of the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) as an executive agency of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on 16 October 2001, the House was informed of the agency's Performance Targets on 17 October 2001, Official Report, column 1247W. These cover a range of targets that reflect the efficiency and promptness of tasks undertaken by RPA. Copies of its Framework Document, Corporate Plan and Business Plan were placed in the Library of the House on 15 November 2001.

An Ownership Board was appointed, chaired by the Permanent Secretary of the Department. Other members include three independents and representatives of the devolved Administrations.

Within the objective of providing strategic direction and oversight to RPA, one of the four primary roles of the Ownership Board is to monitor regularly on behalf of the Secretary of State, the devolved Administrations and competent authority the performance of RPA against its targets.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Scottish Devolution

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is regarding consultations prior to the publication of proposals involving the transfer of powers to the Scottish Executive by (a) primary legislation and (b) Order in Council. [13824]

Mr. Blunkett: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland on 8 November 2001, Official Report, column 748W.

Osama bin Laden

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the extent of support for Osama bin Laden by (a) organised groups and (b) individuals within the United Kingdom. [13677]

Mr. Blunkett: The estimate of support for Osama bin Laden by organised groups and individuals in the United Kingdom is an operational matter for the security service and the police, who attach a high priority to monitoring and countering any possible activities in the country by foreign extremists. Any credible information is fully investigated. An investigation which yields evidence that organisations or individuals are supporting terrorism will result in the appropriate action being taken.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has collated on the extent to which the views and values of Osama bin Laden have been promoted in public within the United Kingdom since 1997. [16410]

Angela Eagle: The police and security forces closely monitor the activities of those who seek to promote the views of proscribed organisations. As head of al-Qaeda, an organisation proscribed under the Terrorism Act 2000, the views of Osama bin Laden, or those who advocate support for this organisation, fall into this category. The Metropolitan police are investigating a number of possible breaches of the provisions of the Terrorist Act 2000 as well as allegedly racially-inflammatory comments made after the terrorist attacks in the United States. Osama bin Laden's views have in any case, of course, long been in the public domain, and particularly since the events of 11 September.

The Government have proposed new laws on incitement to religious hatred which specifically address those who seek to stir up hatred against members of religious groups. No individual or group can be considered exempt from prosecution under these laws.

Immigration Applications

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of applications received by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate are sent by recorded delivery; if those sent by recorded delivery are dealt with more expeditiously than those delivered by other means; and if he will make a statement. [17161]

Angela Eagle: About 90 per cent. of all immigration applications are posted by registered/recorded delivery.

Applications sent by registered/recorded delivery are not dealt with more expeditiously than those delivered by ordinary post. New applications are normally considered in order of receipt irrespective of the method of posting.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost is of keeping a person in an immigration detention establishment in England and Wales. [14941]

Angela Eagle: The average annual cost of detaining a person in an Immigration Service Detention Centre is currently £27,006.

Extremist Groups

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the activities and statements of Abu Abdullah of the Mosque of Piety, Leicester; and if he will make a statement; [14974]

(2) what assessment he has made of the activities of Ayadi Chafiq bin Muhammed; and if he will make a statement; [14972]

(3) what assessment he has made of links between Al Massad and bin Laden, al-Qaeda and the Taliban; and if he will make a statement; [14973]

(4) what assessment he has made of the activities of Omar Al-Bayoumi (aka Abu Imard); and if he will make a statement; [14976]

(5) what assessment he has made of the activities in the United Kingdom of the Al Massad organisation; and if he will make a statement. [14975]

Mr. Blunkett: The police and the Security Service monitor closely the activities of all foreign extremists and organisations within the United Kingdom. Any credible information is fully investigated. An investigation which yields evidence that organisations or individuals are supporting terrorism will result in the appropriate action being taken.

Hirst v. United Kingdom

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Government will introduce legislation to comply with the ruling of the European Court of Human Rights in Hirst v. United Kingdom. [15675]

Beverley Hughes: There are no plans to introduce new legislation as there is nothing in the judgment to require this. Existing domestic legislation provides a flexible framework within which successive Parole Board reviews can be held so that the period between reviews in each case is decided on its merits, compatibly with Article 5(4) of the European Convention on Human Rights. Appropriate guidance has already been issued following the earlier European Court of Human Rights judgment in the case of Oldham.

Further training will be provided to ensure that relevant Prison Service staff and Parole Board members are aware that the timing of reviews should be geared to the particular circumstances of each case, subject to the statutory maximum interval of two years which must only be set where this is justified in the individual circumstances.

Women Prisoners (Mother and Baby Units)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if women received into (a) Holloway and (b) Brock Hill prisons are advised that they may apply for a place in a mother and baby unit. [15671]

Beverley Hughes: A process is in place to enable all women, sentenced or unsentenced, who are pregnant or have a child aged under 18 months to make an informed choice about applying for a place in a mother and baby unit.

Governors in all women's prisons must ensure that the reception process identifies all eligible women and provides them with the prisoners' handbook "All About Mother and Baby Units".

Governors in all women's prisons must appoint a named liaison officer who is responsible for providing the woman with any information she requires as well as assisting her with the application process.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women who already had babies and were sentenced or remanded to (a) Holloway and (b) Brock Hill prisons applied for a place in a mother and baby unit. [15670]

Beverley Hughes: The information requested is not available centrally. Computer systems have recently been installed in each of the four mother and baby units and these will record that sort of information and transmit it to a central point. The staff concerned are being trained in its use and some inputting of new cases has begun.

Appointments

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many appointments he has made to public bodies since 7 June; and how many are in his gift. [15482]

Mr. Blunkett: Information about numbers of ministerial appointments to public bodies is included in the Cabinet Office's annual report, "Public Bodies". Copies of this are placed in the Library and the report is published on the Cabinet Office's internet website. The next edition of "Public Bodies", which will include number of appointments at 31 March 2001, will be published around the end of the year.

Between 7 June and 31 October 2001 my Department made 179 appointments to public bodies. The total number of appointments that are the responsibility of my Department is 2,516.

GHB

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recommendation of the Drug Advisory Council with regard to the classification of GHB. [16272]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: At its meeting on 8 November, the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs (ACMD) recommended that gammahydroxybutyrate (GHB) should be controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 as a Class C drug. I have accepted their recommendation in principle, subject to the normal consultation with interested professional bodies.

Deportation (National Security)

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people his Department has sought to have deported from the United Kingdom on national security grounds, broken down by the country to which they are being deported; and if he will indicate the proportion of those successfully deported in the last 12 months. [15872]

Angela Eagle: There have been no deportations from the United Kingdom on the ground of national security in the past 12 months. However, 25 individuals have been excluded from entering the United Kingdom on the ground that their presence here would not be conductive to the public good on national security grounds. The Anti-Terrorism Crime and Security Bill contains provision for suspected terrorists to be arrested and detained indefinitely if they cannot be sent back to their own country or to a safe third country.

Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Bill

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is his intention that belief in (a) the teachings of Osama bin Laden, (b) Muslim fundamentalism and (c) the Reverend Moon are religious beliefs for the purposes of Part 5 of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Bill. [16664]

Angela Eagle: It is not necessary in the context of this legislation to define religion or religious beliefs. This is a matter which can be left to the courts to interpret in the wider context of the criminal behaviour being considered. We have therefore not sought to compile a list of 'acceptable' religious beliefs to the exclusion of others. It is a matter of deciding, where a criminal offence has been committed against a person or group, whether the perpetrator's hatred of that person or group was a principal or aggravating factor.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the scope of the expression "particular circumstances" in clause 109 7(b) of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Bill. [16418]

Mr. Blunkett: Sub-clause (7) of clause 109 of the Anti-terrorism, Security and Crime Bill sets out the circumstances in which the Justice and Home Affairs (JHA) enabling power conferred by clause 109 can be used to create a criminal offence with a penalty of more than two years' imprisonment. The expression "particular circumstances" in sub-clause (7)(b) covers the situation where the European Union Justice and Home Affairs obligation makes a distinction between 'aggravated' and 'non-aggravated' versions of an offence and, for example, provides for a minimum/maximum sentence for the 'aggravated' version of the offence but does not specify a penalty level for the basic offence. Sub-clause (7)(b) will enable implementing regulations in this situation to apply the minimum/maximum sentence provided for the 'aggravated' offence to all versions of the offence. The courts will then be able to take the particular circumstances of each case into account when sentencing. This mechanism ensures we can transpose European Union obligations in a way which takes full account of sentencing structures in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will prepare a register of the religious beliefs to which part 5 of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Bill applies. [16417]

Angela Eagle: The Government will not be preparing such a register, as the Bill does not seek to define religion or religious belief. In this part of the Bill "religious hatred" means "hatred against a group of persons defined by reference to religious belief or lack of religious belief". This is an inclusive definition, and therefore does not require a list of "acceptable" religious beliefs to be drawn up. The Government do not want to make value judgments about the nature of a particular religion. The Bill reflects the fact that what is to be considered is whether a criminal offence has been committed against a person because of, or aggravated by, the perpetrator's hatred for their religion or belief.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance has been issued to transport companies concerning proposals in the new anti-terrorism legislation on the collection and retention of passenger and freight information. [16884]

Beverley Hughes: No formal guidance has been issued. However, the Home Office will shortly be issuing to carriers and other interested bodies a consultation paper about the types of information about passengers and goods to be collected.

Criminal Offences

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal offences punishable with imprisonment in excess of two years have been created by statutory instrument in each of the last 10 years. [16223]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 19 November 2001]: Records indicate that of all the existing offences punishable with imprisonment of more than two years, none were created by statutory instrument.

Special Hospitals

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been transferred to NHS mental health facilities on temporary licence since 13 July 2000; and if he will make a statement about his policy. [16610]

Beverley Hughes: Information about the number of prisoners transferred to national health service mental health facilities on temporary licence is not collected centrally but we would expect there to be few, if any, such cases. Our objective is to ensure that prisoners who are so severely mentally disordered that they require in-patient treatment in hospital are diagnosed, assessed and transferred as quickly as possible. Some 750 prisoners a year are transferred from prison to hospital by direction of the Home Secretary under sections 47 and 48 of the Mental Health Act 1983. It is the usual practice for such transfers to take place with an escort of either prison or hospital staff.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letter of 14 May from the hon. Member for Aylesbury to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate about his constituent Mr. D. M., reference M1002217. [16817]

Angela Eagle: My officials wrote to the hon. Member on 20 November. I am sorry he did not receive an earlier response.

Drug Misuse

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the Government's 10-year strategy for tackling the misuse of drugs. [17084]

(2) what progress is being made towards the targets for reducing the use of class A drugs set out in the 10-year plan for tackling the misuse of drugs; and if he will make a statement. [17086]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: We are currently reviewing progress against all the Drugs Strategy targets as part of the work for the 2002 Spending Review, to ensure that we still have the right balance and focus. We know we need to focus even more on Class A drugs. That is why the Home Secretary announced to the Home Affairs Select Committee on 23 October 2001 that he would be seeking advice from the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs on their assessment reclassifying cannabis from Class B to Class C.

Addressing substance misuse among young people is a key priority in delivering the Strategy. We are developing our policy and approach in a number of areas such as in improving the planning and co-ordination of the delivery of services for young people through "Young People's Substance Misuse Plans". We will also be introducing an innovative public awareness campaign on drugs aimed at young people. We have also introduced a range of measures across the whole Strategy. For example, we have provided £1 million as a starter fund for a pilot project to help police target regional drug traffickers with a view to a national roll-out of the scheme; we have agreed a further roll-out of drug testing programmes; and a series of measures, in partnership with the Department of Health, to minimise the harm drug cause.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the planned timetable is for the implementation of smart cards for asylum seekers. [16052]

Angela Eagle: The target dates for the Application Registration Card (ARC) project are: Cards issued to new applicants at Croydon by the end of January 2002; Card issue is to commence at remote sites by the end of March 2002.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of asylum seekers who have remained in the United Kingdom after their claims have been rejected in each of the last five years. [17087]

Angela Eagle: There is no official estimate of the number of failed asylum seekers who remain in the United Kingdom for the period requested. No Government have ever been able to give reliable estimates of this nature.

However, we are currently in the process of commissioning a study that will consider the methods available for generating such an estimate.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the (a) scope and (b) nature of advice and help for asylum seekers that will operate at (a) induction centres and (b) accommodation centres. [17081]

Angela Eagle: With regard to legal advice and assistance, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary on 29 October 2001, Official Report, column 642, and to a reply given by me on 5 November 2001, Official Report, column 80W.

We have also given a commitment to provide education and health facilities at accommodation centres, though the full range of services is yet to be settled. Details will be in the White Paper.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure the provision of legal advice for asylum seekers at induction centres. [17083]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to replies given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary on 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 642, and by myself on 5 November 2001, Official Report, column 80W. Full details of the plans will be included in the forthcoming White Paper on asylum and immigration. It is envisaged that this will be issued in January 2002.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long asylum seekers will remain at (a) induction centres and (b) accommodation centres. [17082]

Angela Eagle: Asylum seekers will remain in induction centres for a few days while a number of the present National Asylum Support Services (NASS) functions, as well as initial asylum processes, are undertaken.

Asylum seekers will remain at accommodation centres for the duration of the asylum process. We expect accommodation centres to result in faster processing of asylum cases.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Scottish Devolution

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his policy is regarding consultations prior to the publication of proposals involving the transfer of powers to the Scottish Executive by (a) primary legislation and (b) Order in Council. [13829]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Airdrie and Shotts (Mrs. Liddell) on 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 748W.

Call Centre Services

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the cost of the improved telephone call centre services referred to on page five of his Department's report 2000. [14094]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Over the last year and a half we have introduced a new telephone-based service for our employer customers—Employer Direct. Eleven Employer Direct sites are now operational throughout the UK. The sites will be gradually linked together to enable employers anywhere in Great Britain to use a single telephone number for notifying their vacancies to Jobcentres, providing instantaneous display on our Jobpoints and Employment Service managed internet sites. We expect the service to be completed and formally launched towards the end of the financial year.

Employer Direct is part of the overall investment in modernisation and service improvement by the Employment Service. The different elements are all interdependent and it is not therefore possible to separate the cost of Employer Direct. The modernisation programme is being delivered under an eight-year contract, the first phase of which is costing £470 millions over the first five years.

ONE Pilot Scheme

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the cost of the launch of the ONE service in pilot areas. [14096]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The total cost of the development, implementation and live running of the 12 ONE pilots to the end of March 2000 was £31,116,755.

New Deal (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on (a) the number of participants in the New Deal for Young People from the Buckingham constituency in the last 12 months, (b) the destinations of people leaving the scheme and (c) the cost involved. [14217]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information as is available is in the tables. Estimates of the cost of the programme are not available at constituency level.

Disabled People

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many disabled people have found regular consistent employment under the Government's New Deal for Disabled People since its inception, broken down by nation and region in the UK; and what percentage the Scottish number represents of the total number of disabled people in Scotland. [16779]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We believe that disabled people should be provided with the same opportunities as everyone else to find out about moving into work and to help themselves to become, and remain, more independent. Since July we have been establishing a national network of job brokers to provide support and services to people on incapacity benefits who want to work.

During the first pilot phase of the New Deal for Disabled People (NDDP), up to June 2001, 8,242 people in the pilot areas were helped into work, 978 of whom were in Scotland.

As at May 2001, there were 356,800 people of working age claiming one or more key sickness or disability benefits in Scotland. They will all have the opportunity to benefit from the wide range of innovative approaches delivered through NDDP job brokers that are helping people on benefits move into work.

Pensions

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensions were paid to (a) married couples, (b) single males and (c) single females; and what was the cost of their payment (i) in each of the last 10 years and (ii) in 1980. [16822]

Mr. McCartney: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Year	Males (millions)	Females (millions)	Total cost (£ billions)
1980–81	3.2	5.9	25.6

Acquired Brain Injury

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action he is taking in conjunction with the Department of Health to improve employment prospects for those who have an acquired brain injury. [16821]

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent meetings he has had with the Department of Health regarding the provision of rehabilitation services for people with acquired brain injury. [17258]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Departmental officials consulted the Department of Health as part of a process to produce an improved framework for brain injury rehabilitation services for the Employment Service's Work Preparation programme. Following consultations with providers of brain injury Work Preparation services and officials in the Department of Health, the delivery of these services will incorporate changes which should result in significant benefits for those who use them. The improvements include:

> Being clearer about the scope of Work Preparation delivered by the Employment Service, compared with other forms of rehabilitation, some of which are contracted with the Department of Health;
> Greater individualisation of provision based on comprehensive assessments of clients' needs.

The Employment Service has also taken into account views on the average length of the Work Preparation programme and lengthened this as a result. By introducing the national framework, the Employment Service will now deliver consistent brain injury Work Preparation programmes throughout Great Britain, which are clear in their scope. We expect these new arrangements to improve employment prospects for those who have acquired brain injury.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit fraud have been detected and how many successful prosecutions have been brought in each year since 1997. [7676]

Malcolm Wicks: We are working in partnership with local authorities to drive up standards across the board and tackle fraud and error. Over half of local authorities have begun to operate the verification framework, making thorough checks on all housing benefit claimants before payments are made.

Information is not available separately for housing benefit and council tax benefit. The number of fraudulent cases and prosecutions reported by local authorities is in the table:

Year	Number of cases where fraud was established and a weekly benefit saving was claimed[1]	Number of successful prosecutions[1]
1997–98	220,000	700
1998–99	160,000	800
1999–2000	120,000	860
2000–01	100,000	1,100

[1] Data are not available for all 409 local authorities. The total for Great Britain includes estimates for local authorities that have not responded. These estimates are based on historical and regional data. This type of estimate is standard practice in reporting totals where there have been non-respondents.

Note:

The figures have been rounded to two significant figures.

SchlumbergerSema

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the duration is of the contracts for the supply of medical services by SchlumbergerSema; and if he will make a statement. [18142]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Government are committed to giving speedy and efficient support for people with disabilities and those who are unable to work. It also wants to help people to work wherever possible. The creation of Jobcentre Plus to bring together help with benefits and employment and the national extension of the New Deal for Disabled People are some of the improvements the Government are making to achieve that. It is also important that the processes to assess people's entitlement to benefit and capability for work are timely and effective.

The contracts signed on 20 February 1998, provided for the supply of medical services to support benefit administration for a period of five years, from 1 September 1998 to 31 August 2003 with the option of an extension up to a further two years.

SEMA were taken over by Schlumberger in Spring 2001. New managers have been installed and we have been working with them to improve both current performance and service delivery in the future.

Performance in key areas has improved. In particular there has been a significant increase in the number of incapacity benefit examinations performed and the percentage of medical reports which fail to meet the required standards is now well within the target set in the Government response to the Social Security Select Committee report.

For the future, the company is committed to an improvement plan increasing the number of doctors used on this contract, introducing evidence based medicine (the application of accepted protocols) on an IT platform, and taking part in pilot schemes to reduce the numbers of people failing to attend for examination and the gathering of better quality medical evidence.

The Government believe that an extension to the contract offers the best opportunity to make the service improvements we all want to see and are seeking to agree detailed conditions which is expected to be finalised shortly. The agreement to extend the contract would be subject to confirmation by 31 May 2002.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Further Education

9. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has for increasing funding to further education colleges; and if she will make a statement. [14639]

John Healey: The Government plan to continue their substantial investment in further education. This year total further education funding via the Learning and Skills Council is up by £527 million compared with 2000–01, a 12 per cent. real terms increase. This brings the planned total to £4,029 million.

Next year we plan a further 3 per cent. in real terms rise. These are resources to meet our ambitious aims for the learning and skills agenda and confirms the importance of FE in delivering it.

10. Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of the quality of teaching in further education. [14640]

21. Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the quality of teaching in further education. [14651]

John Healey: Since the Learning and Skills Act 2000, Ofsted and Adult Learning Inspectorate (ALI) inspect Further Education colleges under the common inspection framework. Each inspection includes an assessment of teaching quality. The first five college inspections under the new regime were published in the summer, when 16 per cent. of lessons observed were judged to be less than satisfactory. These are the only inspections published to date and might well not be representative.

35. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she is taking to increase participation in further education. [14665]

John Healey: This year we have allocated the Learning and Skills Council an additional £527 million to fund increased participation in further education and raise standards and achievement, a 12 per cent. increase in real terms. Colleges are central to our plans to develop a coherent phase of education for 14 to 19-year-olds. For adult learners, colleges contribute to raising skill levels, improving basic skills, boosting employability and widening access. We have asked the Learning and Skills Council to examine the potential for FE to deliver further growth in adult participation in future.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent representations she has received on the recruitment of further education lecturers in England; how many vacancies exist in further education colleges in England; and if she will make a statement. [17294]

John Healey: Neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State nor I have received recent official representations on this matter. We have both met with the Association of Colleges recently and my right hon. Friend spoke at the Association's Conference earlier this week. My hon. Friend the Minister for Lifelong Learning met with the Association for College Management earlier this month and is due to meet with the National Association of Teachers in Further and Higher Education in December.

The Department does not collect information on vacancies centrally, as further education colleges are independent corporations. However, I understand from a recent survey by the Association of Colleges that there are 3,000 teaching vacancies in general further education colleges.

Work is under way to ensure that the further education sector benefits from similar recruitment initiatives to those already proposed for schools, such as "Golden Hellos" and the write off of student loans.

Citizenship

12. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what preparations remain to be completed prior to the introduction of citizenship as a curriculum subject. [14642]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Detailed guidance for Citizenship for 11–14 year olds has been circulated to all secondary schools; a new website including an on-line training package for teachers was launched in October; nine regional training events for teachers took place this spring. The first cohort of Citizenship PGCE students started their courses in September; and OFSTED inspection guidance for secondary schools will be published next year.

Guidance for 14–16 year olds will also be published in summer 2002. This will be followed soon after by guidance for primary schools. Guidance on assessment in primary schools will be published in summer 2002. Awarding bodies are also developing specifications for the new GCSE (short course) in Citizenship Studies for teaching to start in September 2002.

We will, of course, monitor any additional support schools may need following the introduction of Citizenship next September.

Research Assessment Exercise

13. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to review the working of the research assessment exercise. [14643]

Margaret Hodge: The distribution of funds to support research in universities and colleges is a matter for the Higher Education Funding Council for England and the other UK funding councils.

Individual Learning Accounts

14. Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will reinstate individual learning accounts. [14644]

John Healey: Individual learning accounts (ILAs) in England will not be reinstated in their present form. However, the Government remain committed to support those who find a lack of money a barrier to returning to education, learning or training. We are developing future plans which build on the successful elements of the ILA programme.

26. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations she has received on the ending of individual learning accounts. [14656]

John Healey: Following the announcement of the withdrawal of the individual learning accounts programme in England, we have received representations from hon. Members, individual learning account holders and individual learning account registered learning providers.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to introduce a new scheme to replace individual learning accounts; when she plans to introduce it; and if she will make a statement. [17298]

John Healey: Individual learning accounts (ILAs) will not be reinstated in their present form. We are developing future plans which build on the successful elements of the ILA programme. I hope to announce more details on the process for developing a further scheme in due course.

Area Cost Adjustment

15. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions she has had about the area cost adjustment. [14645]

Mr. Timms: My right hon. Friend has discussions about various aspects of the current and future funding formula for local education authorities from time to time.

Higher Education (Participation)

16. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to increase participation in higher education. [14646]

Margaret Hodge: Our programmes to raise standards in schools and colleges will have a major impact on increasing participation. Our new Aim Higher advertising campaign, together with the Excellence Challenge programme, will encourage more young people from disadvantaged backgrounds to enter HE. We are also encouraging Higher Education Institutions to introduce a range of measures to enable more people to participate in higher education including part-time learning and access programmes for mature students.

Teacher Recruitment

17. Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent action she has taken to increase teacher recruitment. [14647]

Mr. Timms: Better rewards, status and working conditions have already helped to deliver more teachers in maintained schools in England than at any time since 1984. We have pledged to secure at least a further 10,000 by 2006. In addition, training bursaries and Golden Hellos have reversed an eight-year decline in recruitment to initial teacher training. This year, numbers of trainees have risen for the second year in a row, to their highest level since 1994/95.

Nursery Places (Lancashire)

18. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to increase the number of nursery places available in Lancashire. [14648]

Mr. Timms: Already all four year olds in Lancashire are able to access a free part-time nursery education place. In the near future, we will be announcing to all local authorities in England, details of the specific funding we will be making available, to increase the number of free nursery education places available for three year olds in their areas.

Pupil Attainment (Secondary Education)

19. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to improve the attainment of pupils in the early years of secondary education. [14649]

Mr. Timms: Our plans to transform secondary education include a major programme to help schools improve the attainment of all 11 to 14-year-olds. The key stage 3 strategy sets high expectations and challenging targets. It aims to improve the quality of teaching and learning in the classroom by investing in teachers' professional development. Expenditure on the strategy will be £489 million to 2003–04.

GCSE Results

22. Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the latest set of GCSE results. [14652]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The statistics published by the Department on 20 November show that 50.0 per cent. of 15-year-olds gained at least five top grades this year. We have, therefore, met the Government's target—for 50 per cent. of 15-year-olds to achieve five GCSE grades A*-C by 2002—a year early. This is a result of pupils working hard, and of the first class support they receive from teachers. There are many new policies to tackle underachievement in schools and these are feeding through now into more candidates achieving better GCSEs.

Maintenance Grants

23. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will restore maintenance grants to attract students to universities from less well-off backgrounds. [14653]

Margaret Hodge: Options for attracting students from lower income families into higher education are being considered as part of the student support review my right hon. Friend announced in October. As part of the Excellence Challenge programme, funding has already been set aside for up to 25,000 Opportunity Bursaries worth £2,000 each for students from less well-off backgrounds over the next three years. In 2001–02 we have also improved grant provision for lone parents and students with dependants with a new child care grant of 85 per cent. of the actual costs during term time and the short vacations and a travel, books and equipment grant. This is in addition to increasing significantly disabled students allowances and hardship grants during the last four years.

Competitive Team Sports

24. Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to increase competitive team sports in schools. [14654]

Mr. Timms: Competitive games are a compulsory part of the National Curriculum for Physical Education for pupils aged between five and 14, and are one of the options for pupils aged 14 to 16. The Government's White Paper "School—Achieving Success" includes a pledge that all children will receive two hours of physical education and school sport a week, within and outside the curriculum. We are currently consulting on how best this can be delivered. We have established over 370 school sports co-ordinators to assist families of primary and secondary schools to deliver after-school competitive sports.

Learning and Skills Council

25. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance she has given to learning and skills councils on the financial support of post-16 education in schools. [14655]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have guaranteed that school sixth form funding will be maintained in real terms, uprated for inflation, provided that numbers do not fall.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her estimate is of the operating costs of the Learning and Skills Council in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [17296]

Margaret Hodge: The original budgets for the administration costs of the Learning and Skills Council were set some time ago as £188 million for 2001–2 and £193 million for 2002–3. While the council may wish us to consider an increase in their budget we will ensure that annual administration costs will remain at least £50 million lower than the relevant administration costs of its predecessor bodies.

Class Sizes (Key Stage 1)

27. Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress she has made with implementing the Government's class size policy for key stage 1. [14657]

Mr. Timms: On 15 November we announced that 99.5 per cent. of infants are now in classes of 30 or fewer. This is excellent news and means that, apart from permitted exceptions, now just 0.1 per cent. of the 63,000 infant classes have extra children.

Teaching Vacancies

28. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent meetings she has had with the National Association of Schoolmasters Union of Women Teachers to discuss the number of teacher vacancies in secondary schools. [14658]

Mr. Timms: I last met representatives of NASUWT on 31 October 2001. A range of issues was discussed, including the terms of teachers' employment, but the number of teacher vacancies was not specifically raised by NASUWT.

20. Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teacher vacancies there are in secondary schools; and if she will make a statement. [14650]

Mr. Timms: Information on the number of teacher vacancies in local education authorities is collected once a year in January as part of the annual census of teachers and vacancies. In January 2001, local education authorities recorded 2,586 vacancies in secondary schools.

Education and Business Links

29. Mr. Plaskitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to provide closer links between further and higher education establishments and business. [14659]

Margaret Hodge: The Government recognise the importance of enhancing links between further and higher education institutions and business. We are investing £100 million over the next three years to create a national network of Centres of Vocational Excellence in Further Education. Centres will enable colleges to develop their links with employer networks and to focus specialist vocational provision on meeting the skills needs of employers at local, regional, national and sectoral level. In doing so they will secure active employer/college engagement to underpin, develop and strengthen innovative and flexible approaches to meeting current and future skills. We are also making available £25 million towards establishing New Technology Institutes (NTIs) in each region from autumn 2002. NTIs, involving colleges, universities and the private sector, will increase the supply of people with skills in information and communications technology and provide support to local businesses on new technology and innovative business practices. A core feature of the new Foundation Degree, which is being introduced from this autumn, is that employers are actively involved in the design and subsequent review of programmes along with higher and further education institutions, national training organisations and other professional bodies. The Higher Education Innovation Fund provides funding to help higher education institutions make organisational and structural arrangements to enhance their interaction with business. Almost £80 million has been allocated to a wide range of institutions for the most recent round of projects, which will take place over the next three years.

Excellence in Cities

30. Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of changes in standards of achievement in excellence in cities areas. [14660]

Mr. Timms: There are strong indications that the extra support for city schools—not least learning mentors, learning support units and enhanced opportunities for gifted and talented children—is making an impact on children's attainment, on inclusion, and on allowing teachers in those schools to concentrate on teaching. This year's performance tables show that, overall, the 750 secondary schools in Excellence in Cities areas, where the programme has been in place for at least a year, continue to show faster than average improvements in terms of the percentage of pupils achieving 5 or more GCSE/GNVQ results at A*-C.

Teaching Expertise

31. Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps her Department is taking to ensure that teachers in secondary schools do not teach a subject in which they have no expertise. [14661]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter for head teachers.

Pupil Funding

32. Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken to reduce the disparity in funding per pupil between local education authorities. [14662]

Mr. Timms: We are currently working up proposals for a reformed system of school and LEA funding for introduction in 2003–04. We aim to create a simpler, more transparent and fairer formula that reflects fairly, on the basis of up to date evidence, the needs of authorities in different parts of the country. We do not want there to be disparities in the formula which are not justified by the education needs of children.

In the meantime we are continuing to make significant increases in funding overall. In 2002–03 Education Standard Spending will increase by over £1.3 billion or 6 per cent.; direct grants to schools will increase by 2.75 per cent.; and Standards Fund grant will increase by £85.6 million.

Advanced Skills Teachers

33. Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the work of advanced skills teachers. [14663]

Mr. Timms: The Advanced Skills Teacher (AST) route is designed to recognise and reward excellent teachers who wish to remain in the classroom rather than go into management. ASTs have an important role in helping to raise standards. They typically spend 80 per cent. of their time teaching in the usual way and 20 per cent. helping teachers in neighbouring schools. This can involve a wide range of activities such as coaching individual teachers or advising them on their professional development, giving demonstration lessons or holding workshops on particular aspects of teaching such as classroom management. Some have led specific projects within their own school or LEA, for example on provision for the gifted and talented children or techniques to overcome low achievement by boys. Many ASTs have produced or updated schemes of work and developed new teaching materials to help less experienced colleagues.

Education Authority Funding

34. Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to improve funding of the lowest-funded education authorities. [14664]

Mr. Timms: We are currently working up proposals for a reformed system of school and LEA funding for introduction in 2003–04. We aim to create a simpler, more transparent and fairer formula that reflects fairly, on the basis of up to date evidence, the needs of authorities in different parts of the country. We do not want there to be disparities in the formula which are not justified by the education needs of children.

In the meantime we have been making significant increases in funding overall. Since 1997 Swindon's Education Standard Spending Assessment (ESS) has increased by an average of over 6 per cent. each year. On top of that Swindon's Standards Fund grant has increased from under £1 million in 1997 to over £4 million this year. Also we have introduced the School Standards Grant, which goes straight to schools: this year Swindon's schools have received £2.4 million. In 2002–03 ESS overall will increase by over £1.3 billion or 6 per cent.; direct grants to schools will increase by 2.75 per cent.; and Standards Fund grant will increase by £85.6 million.

Learning Support Units

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many learning support units have been established in schools; and if she will make a statement. [14631]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There are approximately 1,090 learning support units in schools in England. We plan to increase this total further as independent evaluation of LSUs shows that they improve behaviour and cut exclusions. Phase 3 of Excellence in Cities and the Excellence Cluster programme should provide another 140 LSUs and up to 50 more are being set up this term outside the Excellence in Cities programme.

Special Advisers and Press Officers

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) special advisers and (b) press officers were employed (i) full-time, (ii) part-time and (iii) on a contract basis by her Department in each year since 1992. [6909]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: For the number of special advisers employed, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 340W.

For the number of press officers employed, we are unable to provide information dating back to 1992 without incurring disproportionate costs but information from 1996–97 to 1998–99 is available from appendix 10 of the Sixth Report from the Select Committee on Public Administration entitled the Government Information and Communication Service, published on 29 July 1998. www.publications. parliament. uk/pa/cm199798/cmselect/cmpubadm/770/77002. htm. Information for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 for full-time and part-time press officers is in the table.

Departmental Co-ordination

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what mechanisms and procedures are in place to ensure there is effective co-ordination between her Department and the National Assembly for Wales. [14472]

Estelle Morris: The Department for Education and Skills is working with the Assembly to finalise a concordat, which we hope to publish shortly. This records how we already co-operate and builds on the principles set out in the Memorandum of Understanding between the UK Government and the Devolved Administrations. The concordat gives assurance to both parties that working relationships will continue to be conducted in an agreed and helpful manner.

A recent example of effective co-ordination was the publication by the National Assembly for Wales of its paving document for Wales, "The Learning Country", alongside the White Paper "Schools: Achieving Success" published by Department for Education and Skills this autumn.

Trailblazer Sector Skills Councils

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will place in the Library a list of organisations invited to submit expressions of interest in becoming Trailblazer sector skills councils. [16946]

John Healey: I wrote to all Chairs and Chief Executives of National Training Organisations (NTOs) and to Trade Associations on 2 November inviting expressions of interest in becoming a trailblazer Sector Skills Council. Lists of organisations to which the letter was sent have been placed in the Library.

Advertising

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much her Department has spent in real terms on advertising campaigns to promote training and education policy in each of the last 15 years. [16098]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The Department's spend on advertising, for each of the last 15 years, is set out in the tables. Within the totals for the Employment Department and Department for Education and Employment there was advertising to promote employment and employability policies, as well as training and education policy. It is not possible to disaggregate this without disproportionate cost.

Prior to 1991–92 the Employment Department agencies (Manpower Services Commission, Training Commission and Training Agency) spent their own publicity budgets. From 1991–92 these were held centrally by the Employment Department. However, because of the way the information is held in our records the figures for the former Employment Department from 1992–93 to 1995–96 do not include expenditure by agencies. The Department for Education and Department for Education and Employment figures also do not include expenditure by agencies and NDPBs.

Real term expenditure is calculated using 1999–2000 base year prices.

Key Skills

Diana Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills for what reason the addendum to key skills guidance issued in September by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority to ease the assessment burdens associated with key skills was changed. [16195]

Mr. Timms: Following publication of the final draft of the addendum on the QCA website, the generally favourable feedback also suggested that there was a potential contradiction in one short paragraph. This dealt with the collection of evidence for the Application of Number key skills qualification, at one level only (level 2). The QCA therefore removed that paragraph and is discussing with awarding bodies the best way to ensure that this causes minimum disruption.

Specialist Schools and Colleges

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) name, (b) character, (c) date of designation, (d) agreed targets for each year within the period of designation and (e) unmet targets to date are of each designated specialist school or college in (i) Medway, (ii) Somerset, (iii) Islington, (iv) Plymouth, (v) Wiltshire, (vi) Isle of Wight, (vii) Tower Hamlets, (viii) Redbridge, (ix) Waltham Forest and (x) Ealing. [16735]

Teacher Training

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she is taking to train teachers to challenge stereotypes in the classroom; and if she will make a statement. [16863]

Mr. Timms: I have asked the Teacher Training Agency to consult on a revised set of requirements for initial teacher training, which include the need for trainees to demonstrate the ability to work in an inclusive way, respond to the needs of all children whatever their background, and challenge stereotypes. The revised requirements are due to take effect from September 2002.

Out-of-School Provision

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of youth provision outside school hours; and if she will make a statement. [16874]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government have recognised that out-of-school hours provision has a key role to play in developing young people and raising their attainment. A number of initiatives are now in place. Since autumn 2000, a number of assessments have been made of this provision.

In June 2001 we published the report of the "Study Support National Evaluation and Development Programme"—which showed that participation in voluntary out of school hours learning has a positive effect on the academic attainment, attitudes and school attendance of secondary school pupils.

A number of pilot projects have been funded through the Department's Partners for Study Support grant scheme, for example, Cleveland Arts and Stockton Adult Education Service will work in partnership with a primary and secondary school to produce a digital film including live footage, animation, digital special effects, a sound track, creative writing and interviews by residents of the Billingham area. Middlesbrough Evening Gazette and East Cleveland Education Action Zone will work in partnership with schools to give 35 gifted and talented children in years six and nine the opportunity to experience the world of work and the opportunity to produce a real newspaper. Middlesbrough LEA are also a partner LEA with the University of the First Age National Project.

A second evaluation of the "Playing for Success" (PfS) out of school hours study support initiative published in September 2001 has found significant gains in literacy, numeracy and information and communications technology skills among children taking part. Thirty eight of the top football clubs, including Middlesbrough FC, have so far built PfS centres within their stadiums and other sports are beginning to take part.

The pilot summer activities for 16-year-olds programme was evaluated in autumn 2000. The evaluation provided clear indicators of what worked well and what did not, and these findings have been fed into the design of the second phase pilots. The second phase pilots are currently being evaluated. Middlesbrough ran a small-scale pilot in 2000—a small group of year 11 leavers were taken on a one week residential in the Lake District where they took part in a variety of adventure activities. Middlesbrough were also involved in the Tees Valley summer activities pilot in 2001.

The National Youth Agency carries out an annual audit of England's Local Authority Youth Services on behalf of the Department for Education and Skills, and in July 2001 published a report "England's Local Authority Youth Services—The Basic Facts 1999–2000". In October 2001, following the "Transforming Youth Work" consultation on the future of the Youth Service, we announced a new vision for the Service. Full guidance on the role of the Youth Service and its relationship with the Connexions Service is to be published by the end of the year, with a draft specification for a new look youth service to be issued in the new year, and in January we will help new Connexions partnerships by publishing case studies of successful Youth Service links with Connexions.

Female School Students

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she has taken to encourage female school students to study subjects likely to lead to high earning power. [16967]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: All pupils are required to study the National Curriculum from 5 to 16, which together with other elements of the broader school curriculum, prepares pupils of both genders for the opportunities, responsibilities and experiences of adult life. Teachers and other staff in schools offer information and advice on future options as part of their role under the Education Act 1996 to prepare pupils for adult life. The primary role of giving advice and guidance to young people considering learning options from 14 to 19 and beyond, including their implications for employment, falls to Connexions and careers services.

The Connexions service works with young people between 13 and 19 in and out of schools and subsumes the role of the Careers service. Both the Connexions and Careers services provide support to young people by working to overcome any barriers to full achievement and provide comprehensive and impartial information, advice and guidance on learning and career options from age 14. Their staff are required to maintain a full and up-to-date appreciation of how to provide services in ways which challenge stereotyping and promote equality of opportunity, and which engender this awareness in their clients.

An Equal Opportunities Commission Research Report "Gender Equality and the Careers Service" was published in 1999. It gave case studies of good practice and made recommendations for the enhancement of the work of Careers services in this field.

Young People (Communication Skills)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the material produced by the (a) Children's Society's, Ask Us project and (b) Triangle and National Society for Protection of Cruelty to Children Two Way Street project concerning young people's communications skills and involvement in policy making. [16968]

Mr. Denham: The materials from these projects are an important contribution to our work to support Government Departments in implementing the principles in "Learning to Listen: Core Principles for the Involvement of Children and Young People". As "Learning to Listen" makes clear, Government Departments have made a commitment to provide more opportunities for all children and young people to get involved in the design and delivery of policies and services relevant to them. Making sure disabled and other children in need are effectively involved in this work is a key priority. The Ask Us and Two Way Street materials are being included in the resource index which will accompany the "Learning to Listen" guidance (which will shortly be available over the internet at www.cypu.gov.uk).

Yesterday I launched consultation on the Government's new strategy for children and young people, in our consultation document: "Building a Strategy for Children and Young People". I would welcome input from the projects in the consultation.

Both the "Building a Strategy" and the "Learning to Listen" documents are available in the Library.

Teaching Reforms

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to continue funding the reforms to the teaching profession after the initial two year period. [17133]

Mr. Timms: The special grant for threshold pay is already putting over £400 million per annum into the salaries of nearly 200,000 teachers. A new special grant will provide £250 million more for performance pay progression over the next two financial years. Special grants are for fixed periods. But the Government have always accepted that a new pay structure providing additional rewards for effective teachers means a substantial and permanent increase in the cost of teachers' pay. So our financial planning will continue to take account of that.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Interests

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many Ministers in his Department have submitted lists of interests to the Permanent Secretary, pursuant to paragraph 115 of the Ministerial Code. [16867]

The Deputy Prime Minister: All Ministers in this Department have complied with the requirements of paragraph 115 of the Ministerial Code.

Civil Service

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to relax regulations prohibiting members of the senior civil service from holding public office. [16881]

Mr. Leslie: There are no plans to relax the restrictions relating to the involvement of members of the senior civil service in political activities. The rules are set out in the Civil Service Management Code and specify that members of the Senior Civil Service are not allowed to take part in national political activities. They may take part in local political activities with the permission of their Department or agency. Civil servants are prohibited from election to Parliament by way of the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975.

Business Co-ordination Unit

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many small and medium-sized enterprises, by region, have been assisted in meeting Government Ministers through the work of the Business Co-ordination Unit; what percentage of those meetings resulted from invitations originally refused by ministerial offices; and what information he has collated on meetings between each departmental Minister and SMEs in the last 12 months. [14884]

Mrs. Roche: 1. Over the last 12 months the BCU has arranged 211 ministerial visits. A "visit" can be a bilateral, larger meeting, discussion group, seminar or conference involving SMEs. The number of SMEs attending these events can vary in number from one (for bilateral) to 500 (for conferences).

2. The BCU does not keep records specifically on the number of SMEs it has arranged ministerial meetings with. The following information has been estimated based on the original invitation paperwork received from the event organisers.

Regions	Number of visits	Number of SMEs attended	Number of visits from declined invitations	Number of SMEs from declined invitations
London	49	1,683	15	910
East Midlands	37	914	8	466
East	9	53	1	10
South West	16	139	2	30
South East	32	1,020	5	820
North West	12	493	2	120
North East	5	600	5	350
West Midlands	33	622	6	285
Yorkshire and Humber	16	434	5	270
Wales	1	20	0	0
Scotland	1	20	0	0
Total	211	5,998	49 (23%)	3,261 (54%)

3. The majority of declined invitations tend to be for large conferences, which explains why 23 per cent. of declined invitations represents over 54 per cent. of SMEs met.

4. The BCU does not collate or retain information exchanged at meetings between Ministers and SMEs; any relevant points made by SMEs are immediately relayed back to the appropriate Department for further consideration.

TREASURY

NIRS2

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place legal advice on the position of the NIRS2 contract in the Library. [16723]

Dawn Primarolo: It would be inappropriate to place the legal advice in the Library in accordance with Exclusion 4 (Information covered by legal professional privilege) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Railtrack

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average loss to save as you earn schemes invested in Railtrack by employees of Railtrack since October. [16026]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

This is an internal company scheme.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Local Government, Transport and the Regions regarding the bid for Railtrack from WestLB. [17742]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Treasury Ministers have discussions with colleagues in other Departments on a range of subjects on a regular basis.

EU Fraud and Waste

Mr. Spring: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what response the Government have made to the EU Court of Auditors' report of 12 November on fraud and waste. [16814]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government are carefully considering the Court of Auditors' Annual Report and Statement of Assurance for the financial year 2000 and will send its detailed comments to the Commission by 20 December as part of the normal follow-up procedure, ensuring that both Houses receive an advance copy. The Government will also contribute fully to Council discussions leading to the recommendation on whether to give discharge to the Commission for the year 2000 budget at the March 2002 ECOFIN meeting.

Share Dealings

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with EU Finance Ministers in relation to the impact of respective national taxes on share dealings on the development of the single market in financial services. [15919]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor discusses a wide range of issues with other European Finance Ministers, but he has had no recent discussions with them on the issue of national taxes on share dealings, which are of course a matter for national Governments.

Aggregates Levy

David Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the time scale needed by the mining and quarrying industry, after the aggregates levy legislation is enacted, to put in place the necessary financial and information systems to operate the levy; [16302]

(2) if he will postpone implementation of the aggregates tax to take account of significant problems caused to (a) the quarry industry and (b) the rural economy. [16303]

Mr. Boateng: The aggregates levy was pre-announced by two years in order to give business time to adjust. The primary legislation was enacted in the Finance Act 2000. A full Regulatory Impact Assessment has been published by HM Customs and Excise and is available from their website.

The aggregates levy will come into effect on 1 April 2002.

David Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what areas of the aggregates levy legislation remain to be prepared; and when the process will be completed. [16301]

Mr. Boateng: Secondary legislation is still to be laid but will be implemented ahead of the introduction of the aggregates levy.

Psychiatric Illness

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will receive the results of the repeat psychiatric morbidity survey conducted in 2000; and if he will publish the report. [17093]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Oliver Heald, dated 22 November 2001:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on the results of the repeat psychiatric morbidity survey conducted in 2000 (17093).

A First Release of data from the survey entitled "Psychiatric morbidity among adults, 2000" was published by the Office for National Statistics on 9 July 2001 and is available on the National Statistics website (www.statistics.gov.uk).

The main report of the survey will be published on December 18th, 2001 and will be obtainable from The Stationery Office. A copy will also be placed in the House of Commons library. This will provide an overview of the main survey findings. A summary report will also be published and will be made available on the National Statistics website together with the Technical Report of the survey. A series of shorter reports focusing in more detail on a range of topics has also been commissioned by the Department of Health for publication over the next year.

Suicide Statistics

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the proportion of young men who commit suicide who are black or from ethnic minorities. [17088]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Oliver Heald, dated 22 November 2001:

As National Statistician I have been asked to answer your question on what assessment has been made of the proportion of young men who commit suicide who are black or from ethnic minorities (17088)

Ethnicity is not recorded at death registration. Information collected at death registration relates to country of birth. However, country of birth would not detect the generations who are black or from ethnic minorities that were born in the UK, or those members of the white ethnic group that were born in other countries. Therefore suicide figures for ethnic groups are not available.

PRIME MINISTER

Special Advisers and Press Officers

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) special advisers and (b) press officers were employed (i) full-time, (ii) part-time and (iii) on a contract basis by his Department in each year since 1992. [6941]

The Prime Minister: For information about special advisers, I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office gave to him on 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 340W.

Information about the number of press officers working in the Number 10 Press Office from 1998 onwards is given in the table.

	Number of press officers
1998[1]	8
1999[1]	8
2000[1]	9
2001[1]	8

[1] 31 March

Information requested for the earlier years can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Freedom of Information Act

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister what recommendations he has made with regard to the timetable on which the rights of access in the Freedom of Information Act 2000 will come fully into force; and if he will place a copy of these recommendations in the Library. [14834]

The Prime Minister: Paragraph 16 of the Ministerial Code makes clear that the internal process through which a decision has been made should not be disclosed. Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government information applies.

World Summit on Sustainable Development

Mr. Miller: To ask the Prime Minister what the composition and terms of reference are of the new Cabinet Committee on the preparation for the World Summit on Sustainable Development. [18143]

The Prime Minister: I have asked my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister to chair a new Cabinet Committee on sustainable development in preparation for the World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg in September 2002. The composition and terms of reference of the new committee are:

Ministerial Committee on Sustainable Development (MISC18)

Composition

The Deputy Prime Minister (Chair)

Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs

Chancellor of the Exchequer

Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs

Secretary of State for International Development

Secretary of State Trade and Industry

Secretary of State for Work and Pensions

Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions

Invited to attend

Minister of the Environment, Northern Ireland Executive

Minister of the Environment, Scottish Executive

Minister of the Environment, Welsh Assembly

Terms of Reference

"To develop, co-ordinate and deliver the Government's strategy for the World Summit on sustainable development in September 2002".

Government Information

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to bring forward prospects to increase the powers of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration with respect to the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. [16869]

The Prime Minister: None.

Ministerial Code

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Prime Minister what consultations he had prior to revising the Ministerial Code in July. [16868]

The Prime Minister: The Ministerial Code is my guidance to my Ministers on how they should act and arrange their affairs in order to uphold the highest standards. I decide the content of the Ministerial Code.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress in meeting the public service agreement target of reducing in real terms the unit cost of an asylum appeal. [14994]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The public service agreement target is to reduce in real terms the unit cost of asylum appeal by an average of 3 per cent. per annum. This year's target figure, which excludes accommodation and overheads, is £1,025. Performance against target is properly reported upon at the year end, but current performance indicates that this target will be achieved.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on (a) the criteria for assessment of and (b) progress towards meeting the public service agreement target of an improvement in the proportion of training which contributes to improvements in job performance. [14985]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Staff training is regularly evaluated in all parts of LCD—including the Court Service. This includes an assessment by individuals and managers of how the training contributed to job performance. There are no general criteria for this assessment. The individual and manager consider whether the training met the training objectives for that individual, which vary from case to case.

In 2000–01, evaluation showed that training contributed to an improvement in performance in 92 per cent. of trainees in LCD and 99 per cent. of trainees in the Court Service. The difference between the two figures is not regarded as significant, and probably arises from variations in the training events attended, some of which are necessarily more general and therefore less amenable to very specific training objectives.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress in meeting the Public Service Agreement target for the reduction of sickness absence in (a) the Public Trust Office and (b) the Court Service. [14988]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The average number of working days' sick absence per member of staff for this financial year (April 2001 to September 2001) in: (a) the Public Guardianship Office, is 9.2 days against a PSA target of 10.2 days; and (b) the Court Service, is 11.4 days against the PSA target of 8.1 days.

Although the figure is higher than the target for the Court Service, it masks a reduction in the actual number of days of sick absence per month from 9,211 days in April to 7,625 days in September.

A great deal of work has been undertaken in the Court Service to raise awareness of the targets and of the need to manage attendance in accordance with the best practice policies. It will however take time for this increased activity to improve attendance to have an impact on the average figures

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on performance in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01 against the Public Service Agreement target of maintaining the average unit cost per court case constraint in real terms in Northern Ireland. [14916]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Northern Ireland Court Service's average unit costs, as defined by the terms set out in the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review, have increased as a consequence of the implementation of an extensive modernisation programme in line with the Government modernisation agenda and the one-off costs associated with the Omagh inquest. This unit of measurement for measuring the Northern Ireland Court Service's performance was not carried forward into the SR2000 period.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress in meeting the Public Service Agreement target for the extension of the work of the Special Investigations Unit to criminal cases. [14989]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since June 1999 the work of the Special Investigations Unit has included investigations into the financial circumstances of individuals applying for or receiving publicly funded representation in criminal proceedings.

Since April of this year, the higher criminal courts have been able to order the defendant to pay back some or all of the costs of their defence at the end of a case, usually following conviction. SIU is responsible for carrying out means assessments to inform the making of such orders when the court refers them to the Commission.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on progress in meeting the Public Service Agreement target of halving the time from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders. [14995]

Mr. Wills: This PSA target reflects the Government's Youth Justice Pledge. In 1996, dealing with a persistent young offender took an average of 142 days but figures published by my Department show that by June 2001 this had been cut to 70 days. This breakthrough was achieved through effective joint working by all the criminal justice agencies. We have now met or exceeded our target in three consecutive months: in July 2000 the figure was 71 days and in August this year the figure was 66 days.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on progress in meeting the Public Service Agreement target of increasing the proportion of (a) victims, (b) witnesses and (c) jurors who regard their experience in the criminal justice system as acceptable. [14997]

Mr. Wills: The 2000 British Crime Survey showed that 58 per cent. of victims were satisfied with their experience in the criminal justice system. The results of the 2001 British Crime Survey are awaited. The Witness Satisfaction Survey 2000, which was the first national survey of witnesses, showed that 75 per cent. of witnesses were very or fairly satisfied with the treatment they received. A similar survey next year will show whether the proportion of satisfied witnesses has increased. The first juror satisfaction survey, conducted in January 2000, showed that 95 per cent. of jurors were satisfied or very satisfied with their treatment by the courts. A differently constituted survey, carried out in February 2001, showed that 82 per cent. of jurors were satisfied or very satisfied. The original survey will be re-run in early 2002 to allow an accurate assessment of performance against the PSA target.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the public service agreements which apply to magistrates courts. [15035]

Mr. Wills: The public service agreements and service delivery agreements for Magistrates Courts Committees are set out. Other statutory performance targets and ministerial expectations supplement the PSA targets:

> To reduce the average waiting time for witnesses in the magistrates courts to one hour or less by March 2002 and the unnecessary attendance of witnesses in the magistrates courts by 10 per cent. over the SR2000 period
> To improve the standard by which the CJS meets the rights of defendants by achieving by 2004 100 per cent. of targets in a basket of measures as defined in the CJS Business Plan
> To reduce the time taken from first listing in the magistrates courts to sentence or other disposal for all offenders by March 2004
> To deal with 80 per cent. of youth court cases within their time targets
> Halving from 142 to 71 days by March 2002 the time taken from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders and maintaining that level thereafter
> To reduce courtroom over capacity by 10 per cent. by March 2002
> In order to improve compliance with monetary orders and the speed and effectiveness of the arrangements for bringing offenders who fail to comply with community sentences back before the courts, the lead responsibility for the execution of warrants transferred from the police to the magistrates courts in April 2001. Baseline data are being collected during the first year of operation and targets will be set for April 2002.

All MCCs to produce annual reports for 2000–01 by 1 September 2001

100 per cent. of magistrates courts have a charter in place that meets specified standards by March 2002

All MCCs to apply in full the (regulated) performance standards covering the management assurance programme (MAP) and services to disabled court users.

LCD and magistrates courts will also contribute towards the Criminal Justice System PSAs:

to secure a minimum 5 percentage point improvement in the level of satisfaction of users of the justice system by 2004, including that of victim and witnesses with their treatment in the criminal justice system, and to improve the level of confidence in the criminal justice system by 31 March 2004, including improving that of ethnic minority communities.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the Public Service Agreement target for the proportion of (a) witnesses and (b) victims giving evidence on the day that they are called in magistrates courts. [15005]

Mr. Wills: In support of the Public Service Agreement (as part of the common targets for Criminal Justice System agencies) the LCD Service Delivery Agreement targets are to reduce the average waiting time for witnesses in the magistrates courts to one hour or less by March 2002 and reduce the unnecessary attendance of witnesses in the magistrates courts by 10 per cent. over the SR2000 period. In the survey conducted in June 2001 in magistrates courts in England and Wales the average waiting time was one hour 22 minutes and the proportion of witnesses expected to attend who attended but did not give evidence was 51 per cent. Figures concerning victims are not recorded separately.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on progress in meeting the Public Service Agreement target of increasing the (a) number and (b) proportion of young offenders fast tracked. [14996]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor's Department's Departmental Report (the Government's Expenditure Plans 2000–01 to 2001–02) Cm 4606, presented to Parliament in April 2000 referred to an Output Performance Analysis Measure of increasing the number and proportion of young offenders fast tracked. That was in support of the Public Service Agreement target of halving the arrest to sentence time for PYOs from 142 to 71 days. That target reflected the Government's Youth Justice Pledge. Figures published by my Department show that we have now met or exceeded the target of 71 days in three consecutive months: June 2001 (70 days), July 2001 (71 days) and August 2001 (66 days).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the baseline for the Public Service Agreement target of reducing in real terms the unit cost of cases in the Crown court. [15002]

Mr. Wills: The unit cost of cases in the Crown court was originally measured under the cash accounting system. The Court Service has recently moved to accruals accounting, and a new baseline has been set as a result. Performance against this figure will be reported as part of the 2001–02 accounts production process.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the (a) baseline for and (b) redress for the failure to achieve the Public Service Agreement target in 1999–2000 of reducing the unit cost of an item of originating process in the civil courts. [14945]

Mr. Wills: The target in 1999–2000 was £118 per item of county court originating process, and the figure achieved was £137 (16 per cent. greater than target). By way of context, the unit cost measure of performance was withdrawn as a Court Service PSA target after 1999–2000 because of its limitations as a measure of efficiency, mainly because the organisation's costs are fixed and the main driver of the unit cost figure is the relatively volatile level of demand for the service.

The reason for the under achievement is that in 1999–2000 the Court Service successfully implemented a radically different way of delivering civil justice. An assessment was made of the likely full impact on its costs and the behaviour of court users. In the event the costs of the Court Service were 6 per cent. higher than anticipated but the main cause of the increased unit cost was a 10 per cent. reduction in the level of activity. This was mainly due to court users and their advisers adjusting their activities to meet the new procedures. Given the limited value of the unit cost measure, and the unique circumstances, it was accepted in the Department's review of the Court Service's performance during 1999–2000 that there had been a technical rather than substantive failure in this area.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on the reason for the non-specification in the 2001 departmental report of performance indicators for the Public Service Agreement target for the percentage of non-publicly funded expenditure spent on court service headquarters and corporate services group in the Lord Chancellor's Department headquarters. [14984]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This target is associated with the two preceding it in the departmental report. Like them it proved to be ambiguous and has been replaced by a series of targets which can more readily capture the Department's efficiency and value for money programme.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what further resources were (a) sought and (b) obtained to enable the achievement of the Public Service Agreement target on the commencement of Crown Court cases. [14998]

Mr. Wills: As part of the SR2000 settlement, a criminal justice unallocated reserve of £525 million was established to cover the three years of the spending review. Total funding of £10 million was sought and obtained to increase Crown Court sittings in 2001–02 from 93,000 to 100,000 days.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress towards meeting the Public Service Agreement target for the cost of publicly funded criminal defence services by March 2002. [14999]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is on track to achieve stability in the cost of legally aided criminal defence services through a number of measures which will aim to control cost:

(a) From 2 October 2000, firms were required to have a criminal category franchise in order to undertake Legal Services Commission funded criminal defence work in areas funded by the Commission ie magistrates' court work, advice and assistance and duty solicitor (criminal) work;

(b) all magistrates' court work, advice and assistance and duty solicitor (criminal) work has been contracted since the CDS was introduced on 2 April 2001;

(c) from 2 April 2001 only franchised firms have been able to undertake work for the CDS in the Crown court;

(d) from April 2001 the Commission has had the authority to require Very High Cost Criminal Cases (VHCCCs) meeting the relevant criteria ie cases predicted to last more than 25 days if they proceeded to trial, or to have total defence costs of more than £150,000, to proceed by way of an Individual Case Contract (ICC) only. The intention was that by April 2002, all new very high cost cases would proceed by way of an ICC with the Commission. The LSC set up a Criminal Higher Cost Cases (CHCC) unit, with the aim of taking on some VHCCCs this year and all VHCCCs from 1 April next year. To date, 57 VHCCCs have been signed. The Commission has decided, having consulted the Department, that not all cases should be brought within the scheme from that date. The new contract arrangements aim to deliver significant benefits in ensuring that these cases are managed effectively and that the cost of them is controlled. However, implementing the regime for all cases from April would bring forward a significant amount of expenditure and it is necessary to manage this over a longer period of time by phasing the full introduction of the new arrangements. Phasing the introduction in this way will also give the Commission and the profession more time to further develop the new approach and apply the lessons already learned;

(e) the Crown court graduated fee scheme was extended on 29 October 2001 to cover trials up to 25 days;

(f) since 29 October 2001, both prosecution and defence advocates have been paid within the same fee structure for all Crown court trials lasting up to 25 days. Rates for an extended and unified scheme for cracked trials and guilty pleas will be introduced when the results of additional modelling and research are available;

(g) the new regulations which came into force on 1 September 2001, control more tightly the circumstances where Queen's Counsel or more than one advocate might be allowed for the defence in Crown court cases. There has been a reduction in the use of Queen's Counsel (whether alone or with a junior) of some 50 per cent.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress towards meeting the Public Service Agreement target for the reduction of courtroom over-capacity by March 2002. [15003]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Good progress is being made towards achieving the Public Service Agreement target. We are reducing over-capacity by a combination of measures. These include using surplus capacity for coroners courts, asylum and other tribunal work; reducing the number of buildings in the same city/town by facilitating joint usage of courtrooms across the estate (Crown, county and magistrates); and disposing of those courts surplus to requirements.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on the failure to achieve the Public Service Agreement target for the average cost of an act of advice and assistance in criminal cases. [15001]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As of 31 December 2000 actual achievement was £74 against a published target of £71. The main reason why the target was not achieved was because solicitors were spending, on average, more time advising their clients than in previous years.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which Public Service Agreement targets for 2001 to 2004 support the Government's objectives in relation to family law. [15115]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Lord Chancellor's Department has as its fifth strategic objective:

> "To improve the lives of children and help build and sustain strong families through providing a legal and procedural framework to sustain family relationships, and, when they do break down, to resolve disputes with the least distress to those affected, especially the most vulnerable".

This objective is supported by Public Service Agreement target 8:

> "To increase continued contact between children and the non-resident parent after a family breakdown, where this is in the best interests of the child".

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress towards meeting the Public Service Agreement target for the use of (a) BACS to achieve value for money in the payment of invoices and (b) electronic commerce. [14990]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In October 2001 the Department achieved 57 per cent. of expenditure payments by BACS. This performance excludes any payments which have been made locally by the Courts. The use of BACS continues to be monitored by the Department on a monthly basis.

The Department monitors the percentage volume of low level transactions with a view to achieving the e-commerce target. For the last two quarters the Department achieved the following performance:

January to March 2001: 24.8 per cent.

April to June 2001: 35.6 per cent.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress in meeting the Public Service Agreement target for the proportion of ministerial and other departmental correspondence answered within the target deadline. [14986]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is making good progress against its PSA targets on correspondence. For the first six months of the target period (April to October 2001) the Department exceeded its target of replying to 80 per cent. of public correspondence within 15 working days, achieving a figure of 85 per cent. For ministerial correspondence over the same period, 77 per cent. of responses were made within the 20 working day target, with on-going efforts being made to meet the 85 per cent. PSA target by the end of the period.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on the series of targets which have replaced the Public Service Agreement target of (a) three per cent. annual efficiency gains and (b) a reduction in support costs as a proportion of running costs. [14993]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The full range of the Department's current Public Service Agreement targets and Service Delivery Agreement targets is published on the Department's website. A large number of the targets are relevant to the improvement of Departmental efficiency. In particular, Service Delivery Agreement targets 46–53 demonstrate our commitment to improving value for money.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on the Public Service Agreement target of contracting for civil and family legal services solely with quality-assured providers setting out the (a) costs and (b) savings entailed. [15007]

Ms Rosie Winterton: From 1 April 2001, all legal help and representation in publicly funded civil and family work has been placed under contract with quality assured providers. On 1 November 2001, there were 4,972 contracts with solicitors' firms and 381 contracts with not-for-profit organisations. As of 31 December 2000, the average cost per civil bill adjusted for changes in case mix decreased from a published target of £2,151 to an actual achievement of £2,069.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on the failure to achieve the Public Service Agreement target for the average cost of the duty solicitor scheme per person assisted. [15000]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As of 31 December 2000 actual achievement was £150 against a published target of £142. Achievement of the target was mainly affected by the Narey reforms to speed up disposal of cases in the magistrates courts. These reforms have resulted in an increase in cases dealt with under the Court Duty Solicitor Scheme instead of a full legal aid order.

The average cost of "Narey" representation was higher than the historical average for duty solicitor work.

Energy Savings

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the savings were in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000 and (c) 2000–01 from energy efficiency in her Department. [14922]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The latest figures for 1998–99 were placed in the Libraries of both Houses in response to a question from the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) on 12 December 2000. Those for 1999–2000 will be included in Part 2 of the Third Annual Report on Greening Government due to be published on 27 November. The figures for 2000–01 are not yet available.

Mediation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on the (a) cost and (b) savings in 2000–01 of the pilot scheme at Leeds combined court offering mediation to all parties in defended cases. [15032]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The pilot scheme based at Leeds combined court was managed in a way that was cost neutral for the Court Service. The evaluation of the scheme, undertaken by Leeds Metropolitan university, found that most parties that responded to the survey thought that the mediation had saved them money on the total potential costs of resolving the dispute. However, take-up of the scheme was low, with only 15 mediation appointments taking place between 1 July 2000 and 31 August 2001.

Criminal Justice Strategy Committees

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the cost is in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 of the Area Criminal Justice Strategy Committees. [15034]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The total cost of the 42 Area Criminal Justice Strategy Committees in the financial year 2000–01 was approximately £366,000. This comprises the salary costs of the National Co-ordinator, nine full-time equivalent Area Co-ordinator posts and their travel expenses. In addition, six Regional Conferences were held during the year for members of the Area Committees.

In the current financial year, the cost is approximately £1.4 million which includes the salaries and expenses mentioned, local conferences arranged by the Area Committees, and £1 million which was earmarked for the Area Committees from the Criminal Justice Reserve for projects aimed at improving joined-up working among the local criminal justice agencies.

Circuits for Part 51 Work

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what additional resources, referred to on page 10 of the departmental report 2001, have been directed to the circuits for Part 51 work. [14982]

Mr. Wills: An additional £1 million was allocated to the circuits during the 2000–01 financial year to deal with Part 51 work.

Absence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the cost was in 2000–01 of absence through sickness in her Department. [15030]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The salary cost of sickness absence in the Lord Chancellor's Department (including the Court Service and the Public Guardianship Office) for 2000–01 is estimated as £8,757,000. This is based on the average number of working days lost through sick absence per person per annum, as a percentage of total working days per annum, multiplied by the total salary bill.

Resource Accounts

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will publish the unqualified audit opinion that was obtained on her Department's 1999–2000 resource accounts. [14923]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Lord Chancellor's Department's 1999–2000 resource accounts received a qualified audit opinion. The Certificate and Report of the Comptroller and Auditor General to the House of Commons is reproduced in the Lord Chancellor's Department Resource Accounts 1999–2000, which was published in March 2001 by the Stationery Office (Cm 5056).

"Criminal Justice Working Together"

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what savings have been achieved in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 as a result of her Department's response to the National Audit Office report, "Criminal Justice Working Together". [14926]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Audit Office report made a number of recommendations on joint working which we welcomed. My Department, in co-operation with the Home Office and Crown Prosecution Service, is pursuing a programme to implement those recommendations and others to improve joint working in the Criminal Justice process. Information is not specifically collected on savings arising from the individual recommendations in the NAO report.

Capital Grants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much her Department gave in capital grants to the private sector in (a) 1998–99 (b) 1999–2000, (c) 2000–01 and (d) 2001–02; and if he will specify the purposes for which they were made. [14927]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department did not make any capital grants to the private sector in any of those years.

Unallocated Reserve

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on the initiatives funded from the unallocated reserve established for that purpose. [14991]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No reserve has been specifically created for initiatives in my Department. For 2001–02, my Department received £39.49 million from the Criminal Justice System Reserve to cover a number of criminal justice initiatives including increased workload and improving timeliness in the courts, better service to victims and witnesses and improving fine enforcement. In addition a further £1 million has been allocated for service to victims in 2002–03.

Allocations from the Reserve require the joint agreement of the Home Secretary, Lord Chancellor and Attorney-General prior to the Chief Secretary to the Treasury releasing the money from the Reserve. Further allocations for 2002–03 and 2003–04 are being considered.

Cost Recovery

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress towards his Department's objective of achieving full cost recovery in the civil courts. [14928]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Lord Chancellor announced in another place on 19 November 1998[1] that charging for civil court fees should not prevent access to justice; that protection should be provided for litigants of modest means; but litigants should not expect the taxpayer to pay for court services if they could afford to do so themselves. My Department is currently working on a major programme to establish the right balance between those principals in order to achieve its objective of full cost recovery in the civil courts.

Dispute Resolution Methods

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many copies of her Department's information booklet on dispute resolution methods were issued in 2000–01; and what the cost was of its publication. [15033]

Ms Rosie Winterton: During the period 2000–01 the booklets were supplied on a demand-led basis, when requested by local courts and advice agencies and some individuals. Although no detailed record of the numbers supplied in this period was kept, the information that is held shows that the total number for the year would have been in excess of 10,000. The booklets were produced using my Department's internal printing services. We estimate the cost of producing 10,000 copies of the booklet was £2,650.00.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 23 November 2001

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Bona Vacantia

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Solicitor-General what plans she has to reform the application of bona vacantia. [14669]

The Solicitor-General: As a result of my hon. Friend's question, I am looking at how bona vacantia is operated and will report back to him on any changes that may arise.

Bribery

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Solicitor-General how many United Kingdom citizens have been prosecuted in the United Kingdom in the last five years for offences of bribery committed abroad. [14670]

The Solicitor-General: No United Kingdom citizens have been prosecuted for offences in the UK of bribery committed abroad because current legislation does not allow it. It will, though, be possible to prosecute if the offences under the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Bill become law.

Domestic Violence

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will report on recent progress with prosecuting perpetrators of domestic violence. [14672]

The Solicitor-General: There is considerable and encouraging progress in prosecuting crimes of domestic violence. For the first time, next week the CPS will be issuing guidance to Crown prosecutors on domestic violence. That guidance will be published, and that will be the first time that any CPS guidance has been published. To support our prosecutors to do their work as well as possible, there will be a national network of domestic violence prosecutors. A new ministerial committee on domestic violence will co-ordinate work across Government.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will make a statement on the operation of the Crown Prosecution Service; and how it is affected by the location of magistrates courts. [14674]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service prosecutes cases which have been investigated by the police. The CPS is affected by the location of magistrates courts by the need to be located where the witnesses and victims can get to them, and they need to be accessible for the crown prosecutors and caseworkers who prosecute in them.

Gamma-hydroxybutyrate

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Solicitor-General how many successful prosecutions there were in the last 12 months of people accused of rape who used GHB. [14675]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service holds no central records showing case outcomes broken down to particular offences or types, nor is the information held centrally by the Home Office. I will ask my officials to keep me informed on any cases that involve this drug.

Child Sexual Abuse

Julie Morgan: To ask the Solicitor-General what the policy of the Crown Prosecution Service is in connection with allegations of child sexual abuse. [14668]

The Solicitor-General: The CPS applies the evidential and public interest tests set out in the code for Crown prosecutors in all cases referred to it by the police so that it can make fair and consistent prosecution decisions.

Children form a class of victims and witnesses to whom special care should be given. CPS policy in relation to child abuse cases has three key principles: expedition, sensitivity and fairness. Delay should be avoided in all cases involving a child victim or witness. Child witnesses should be afforded as much protection as necessary to enable them to give their evidence in a way that both maintains the quality of that evidence and minimises the trauma suffered by them. CPS policy emphasises that the best interests of the child should be the first, but not the final, consideration when assessing the public interest.

The CPS works together with other statutory agencies in accordance with the inter-agency guidance "Working Together to Safeguard Children".

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards

David Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what discussions he has had with the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards over the decision that her contract is not to be renewed as a matter of course. [15549]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The Speaker had a private meeting with the commissioner on 16 October.

David Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what recent consultations he has had with the Chairman of the Committee on Standards in Public Life regarding the duties of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards; and if he will make a statement. [15513]

Mr. Kirkwood: [holding answer 16 November 2001]: None. Although the post of Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards was established as a result of the work of the Nolan committee, the House of Commons Commission does not see a need to consult the Committee on Standards in Public Life each time the post of commissioner is advertised. In any event, I understand that the Committee on Standards in Public Life does not concern itself with individual cases.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what the words were of the advertisement for the post of Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards on each of the occasions on which applications have been sought. [15732]

Mr. Kirkwood: I have already placed in the Library a copy of the advertisement which appeared in the national press on Sunday 4 November 2001, in response to the hon. Member's previous question on 2 November 2001, Official Report, column 863W. Copies of the advertisements which appeared in 1995 and 1998 will be placed in the Library today.

David Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if the previous Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards was offered a renewal of his contract. [14935]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 15 November 2001]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Worthing, West (Peter Bottomley) on 2 November 2001, Official Report, column 864W.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, on what the assessment of the work of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards is based; and whether the issues have been discussed with the present holder. [15281]

Mr. Kirkwood: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 2 November 2001, Official Report, column 863W.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what (a) written and (b) other sources of advice on best practice were relied on in agreeing (i) the terms of and (ii) the advertisement for the post of Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards. [15279]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 15 November 2001]: As in all such matters, the commission is advised in confidence by the Department of Finance and Administration and the Legal Services Office. In this case, it has also been advised by the recruitment consultants Saxton Bampfylde Hever plc.

David Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what representations have been received on the performance of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards from (a) hon. Members and (b) non-members; and if he will make a statement. [14932]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 15 November 2001]: There have been no submissions to the Commission on the matter.

David Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what has been the average annual number of cases which the present Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards has been investigating during her term of office. [14933]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 15 November 2001]: Over the past three years, complaints requiring assessment have averaged 120 a year. The commissioner completed an average of 14 full investigations a year, each resulting in a report to the Standards and Privileges Committee.

David Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, for what reason the new contract for the post of Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards will involve fewer working days than the present contract. [14931]

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, for what reason (a) the hours required from and (b) the salary paid to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards are being reduced. [15535]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answers 15 and 19 November 2001]: The Commission believes that three days per week should be adequate to conduct the duties of the post. This is the level of time commitment that was established for the first commissioner. The figure of three days is not set in stone, and will be discussed with the successful candidate for the post. Salary is commensurate with hours worked.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, when it was decided (a) to drop and (b) to reinstate the option of reappointment of the holder of the post of Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards by mutual agreement. [15280]

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, for what reason the decision to offer the next Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards an extension to his or her contract by mutual agreement was not taken in respect of the present postholder. [15536]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answers 15 and 19 November 2001]: There has been no such decision. As to the position of the present commissioner, I refer the hon. Member to my answer today to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (David Winnick), column 483W.

David Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, for what reason the Parliamentary Commissioner has not been offered an extension to her contract. [14934]

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, for what reason it was decided not to renew without the requirement for open competition the contract of the current postholder of the post of Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards. [15534]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answers 15 and 19 November 2001]: The appointment was made for a three-year term. Any extension or renewal would be a matter for agreement by both parties. The commission considered that a new appointment should be made following an open competition. The current commissioner is eligible to apply and may be appointed for a further three-year term if she applies for the post and is successful at the final short list stage.

House of Commons Commission

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will make it his policy henceforth that the Commission will (a) meet in public and (b) publish agendas and minutes of its meetings. [15533]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 19 November 2001]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Worthing, West (Peter Bottomley) on 2 November 2001, Official Report, column 864W.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the European Union about its contribution to humanitarian assistance to Afghanistan; and what was the outcome. [16066]

Clare Short: I had informal meetings with European Union Development Ministers on 10 October and 8 November. We agreed upon the importance of continued, substantial, assistance from the European Union for humanitarian programmes in Afghanistan. We also agreed on the importance of effective international co-ordination.

The EC's Humanitarian Aid Office (ECHO) has recently announced the provision of a further 15 million euro of humanitarian assistance to Afghanistan. This brings the amount of EU humanitarian aid committed for the Afghan people so far in 2001 to nearly 44 million euro. The UK contributes 19 per cent. of this.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on (a) recent developments in the supply of humanitarian resources in Afghanistan and (b) her priorities in the supply of humanitarian needs in Afghanistan over the next three months. [16065]

Clare Short: There has been good progress by humanitarian agencies in opening up routes to get food and other emergency supplies into Afghanistan. From 13 November until 19 November, World Food Programme (WFP) operations were suspended (due to local hauliers' concern about the security situation in southern Afghanistan). The WFP resumed operations from Peshawar on 19 November. Operations from Quetta are still suspended, although the WFP continues to deliver food via the northern routes from Turkmenistan and Tajikistan. International staff from humanitarian agencies are beginning to return to Afghanistan, where possible, in order to accelerate deliveries so that winter stockpiles can be strengthened.

Our immediate priorities are to help meet lifesaving needs within Afghanistan, to support refugee needs in neighbouring countries and to strengthen the work of international humanitarian agencies. At the same time, we will also support the people of Afghanistan in building a better future. We continue to work with the international community on plans for rehabilitation and recovery. The principles and priorities guiding our approach are outlined in a document entitled "Afghanistan—Recovery: An emergency plan for the first 100 days". A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with (a) her counterparts in other Governments and (b) the United Nations High Commission for Refugees on the aid programme for Afghan refugees (i) within the borders of Afghanistan and (ii) in neighbouring countries. [15865]

Clare Short: My Department is in regular contact with other Governments through the Afghanistan support group of major donors, including USA, Japan and European countries. We are also in daily contact with key agencies, including UNHCR, regarding the humanitarian situation in the region.

In its inter-agency donor alert, the UN system identified $664 million of priority needs for Afghanistan. Over $700 million has been pledged against the appeal—sufficient to meet immediate requirements—of which over $280 million have actually been contributed (over 40 per cent. of the requirement). This is good by historic standards.

The UK was the first donor to pledge assistance, even prior to the UN inter-agency donor alert. We have so far allocated £40 million to support the work of UN agencies, the Red Cross movement and NGOs for immediate humanitarian assistance to Aghans, both in Afghanistan and neighbouring countries. Of this, £3 million has been disbursed to UNHCR, and includes financial, technical and in-kind assistance in support of its regional programme. At UNHCR's request, my Department has provided three relief flights to Iran and Pakistan transporting tents, shelter material and communications equipment. We have also provided a specialist site planner to UNHCR to Pakistan to assist with the setting up of new refugee camp sites.

In addition, we have allocated a further £11 million to support refugee-hosting communities in Pakistan. This will support the delivery of public health services, the supply of drugs and health equipment, and water and sanitation services. It will focus particularly on North-West Frontier Province and Baluchistan, where most of the Afghan refugees have settled.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with UNHCR about the adequacy of provision for refugees outside Afghanistan. [16067]

Clare Short: My Department is in regular contact with UNHCR at both field and headquarters level so that resources are used effectively for the provision of assistance to refugees and the protection of their rights.

So far we have committed £3 million to UNHCR's operations for refugees in response to the current crisis. At the request of UNHCR, my Department has provided three relief flights to Iran and Pakistan transporting tents, shelter material and communications equipment. We have also provided a specialist site planner to UNHCR in Pakistan to assist with the setting up of new refugee camp sites.

Our assessment is that while the situation in some camps may remain difficult, the general level of assistance to refugees has improved. In addition, there is sufficient reserve capacity in Pakistan to address the needs of a further 300,000 refugees.

Ethiopia

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the status of the New Africa Initiative with respect to Ethiopia. [17719]

Clare Short: The New Partnership for African Development (NEPAD), as the New African Initiative is now known, is an Africa-wide initiative, that does not focus on specific countries. Ethiopia is one of the 17 members of the NEPAD implementation committee, and therefore takes a full part in NEPAD activities. NEPAD has set up teams to work on five areas, which are capacity-building peace and security, economic and corporate governance, infrastructure, central bank and standards, and agriculture and market access. Work on these areas should bring benefits to Ethiopia, as it will to other countries in Africa that are part of NEPAD.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on bilateral agreements between the UK and Ethiopia. [17720]

Clare Short: We are currently exploring how to engage most effectively in a development partnership with Ethiopia, where the overall objective of our assistance will be to support the Government of Ethiopia's poverty reduction strategy. We will discuss plans to seek agreement with the Ethiopian Government when we hold development talks early in the new year.

Departmental Expenditure

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if she will list her Department's aid contributions specifically aimed at human rights issues and eliminating gender disparity in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and the projected contributions for (f) 2002, (g) 2003 and (h) 2004 (i) in total and (ii) as a proportion of GNP; [16644]

(2) if she will list her Department's aid contributions that incorporate human rights and gender disparity in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and the projected contributions for (f) 2002, (g) 2003 and (h) 2004 (i) in total and (ii) as a proportion of GNP. [16640]

Clare Short: Information in the appropriate format has been collected centrally only since 1 April 1998.

In the last three fiscal years, DFID has committed the following amounts to projects which are aimed at addressing human rights or gender disparity issues:

£ million

Project objective	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Human Rights
Principal	95	28	23
Significant	98	152	302
Total	193	180	325
Removal of Gender Discrimination
Principal	2	0.1	11
Significant	223	276	265
Total	225	277	276

Principal project objectives are fundamental in its design and explicit to its goal. Significant project objectives although important are not one of the principal reasons for undertaking the project.

It is not appropriate to present these figures as a proportion of GNP. Contributions for future years are not available.

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list her Department's actual and as a percentage of GNP overseas expenditure on (a) human resources, (b) technical aid (c) commodities and (d) direct financial assistance for debt relief in each of the last four years. [16637]

Clare Short: Figures on DFID's aid contribution for the last five fiscal years are available in "Statistics on International Development 1996/97—2000/01", a copy of which is posted on DFID's website at the following address: www.dfid.gov.uk/. The tables which are of relevance are "Table 12 DFID Programme: Bilateral Technical Co-operation, Table 13 DFID Programme: Bilateral Grants and Other Aid in Kind, Table 15.1 DFID Debt Relief: Retrospective Terms Adjustment by Country, and Table 15.2 Other Debt Reorganisation by Country". A printed version of "Statistics on International Development (SID)" will be placed in the Library of the House following its publication in late November.

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list her Department's overseas aid contribution for (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and projected contributions for (f) 2002, (g) 2003, and (h) 2004 broken down by (i) bilateral, (ii) EU, (iii) multilateral and (iv) NGO aid contributions (A) in total and (B) as a proportion of GNP. [16545]

Clare Short: Figures on DFID's aid contribution for the last five fiscal years are available in "Statistics on International Development 1996/97—2000/01", a copy of which is posted on DFID's website at the following address: www.dfid.gov.uk/. The tables which are of relevance are "Table 3 Gross Public Expenditure on Aid 1996/97—2000/01, and Table 13 DFID Programme: Bilateral Grants and Other Aid in Kind". Please note it is not appropriate to provide these categories of assistance as a proportion of GNP or to provide projected contributions for future years. A printed version of "Statistics on International Development (SID)" will be placed in the Library of the House following its publication in late November.

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list her Department's overseas aid contributions for the years (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and projected contributions for the years (f) 2002, (g) 2003, and (h) 2004 (i) in total and (ii) as a proportion of GNP. [16543]

Clare Short: Figures on DFID's aid and contribution for the last five fiscal years are available in "Statistics on International Development 1996/97–2000/01" a copy of which is posted on DFID's website at the following address www.dfid.gov.uk/. The table which is of relevance is "Table 16.1 UK Total Net Flows to Developing Countries: 1976–2000". Please note it is not possible to provide projected contributions either in total or as a proportion of GNP. However, the Government will ensure that the ratio of oda to GNP will rise to 0.33 per cent. by financial year 2003–04.

A printed version of "Statistics on International Development (SID)" will be placed in the Library of the House following its publication in late November.

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list her Department's aid contribution to emergency relief aid in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and projected contributions for (f) 2002, (g) 2003 and (h) 2004. [16643]

Clare Short: Figures on DFID's aid contribution for the last five fiscal years are available in "Statistics on International Development 1996/97–2000/01" a copy of which is posted on DFID's website at the following address www.dfid.gov.uk. The relevant table in the publication is Table 10 Humanitarian Assistance. Please note it is not possible to provide projected contributions for future years. A printed version of "Statistics on International Development (SID)" will be placed in the Library of the House following its publication in late November.

Public Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if she will list those public bodies which are the responsibility of her Department and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000; [17598]

(2) if she will list those public bodies to which her Department appoints members and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000; [17597]

(3) if she will list those local bodies which were set up under legislation which is the responsibility of her Department since May 1997. [17599]

Clare Short: None.

Sexual and Reproductive Health Programme

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list her Department's individual aid contributions to international sexual and reproductive health NGOs via the Civil Society Challenge Fund in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and the projected contributions for (f) 2002, (g) 2003 and (h) 2004. [16645]

Clare Short: The levels of funding granted by my Department to international sexual and reproductive health NGOs under the Civil Society Challenge Fund, since the introduction of the scheme in 2000–01 is as follows.

2000–01
Population Services International	78
2001–02
International Family Health	152
Population Services International	240
2002–03
International Family Health	142
Population Services International	257
2003–04
International Family Health	81
Population Services International	78
2004–05
International Family Health	12

The funding indicated for 2002–03 onwards represents projects to which we are already committed. Further funding will be dependent on the success of new Civil Society Challenge Fund applications.

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if she will list her Department's sexual and reproductive health aid contribution, actual and as a percentage of GNP, for (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and projected contributions for the years (f) 2002, (g) 2003, and (h) 2004 broken down into (i) bilateral, (ii) EU, (iii) multilateral and (iv) NGO aid contributions (A) in total and (B) as a proportion of GNP; [16546]

(2) if she will list her Department's sexual and reproductive health aid contribution in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and projected contributions for (f) 2002, (g) 2003, and (h) 2004 (i) in total and (ii) as a proportion of GNP; [16544]

(3) if she will list her Department's bilateral aid contributions to sexual and reproductive health aid for (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and projected contributions for the years (f) 2002, (g) 2003 and (h) 2004, broken down by country. [16547]

Clare Short: Information in the appropriate format has been collected centrally only since 1 April 1998.

In the last three fiscal years, DFID committed the following amounts to projects aimed at Reproductive Health Services including HIV/AIDS.

Year	£ million
1998–99	39
1999–2000	202
2000–01	436

A breakdown of these figures by country has been placed in the Library of the House. It is not appropriate to present these figures as a proportion of GNP. Contributions for future years are not available.

In addition to the figures shown in the table, over the same period, DFID made total multilateral contributions to UNFPA of £79.5 million, UNAIDS of £12 million, IPPF of £21 million and WHO-HRP of £0.3 million for activities related to reproductive health services including HIV/AIDS.

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list her Department's individual aid contributions to international sexual and reproductive health NGOs in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and the projected contributions for (f) 2002, (g) 2003 and (h) 2004. [16646]

Clare Short: Figures on DFID's aid contribution for the last five fiscal years are available in "Statistics on International Development 1996–97 to 2001–01" a copy of which is posted on DFID's website at the following address www.dfid.gov.uk/. The tables which are of relevance are "Table 13 DFID Programme : Bilateral Grants and Other Aid in Kind and Table 14 DFID Expenditure through UK CSOs 2000–01". It is not appropriate to provide projected contributions for future years. A printed version of "Statistics on International Development (SID)" will be placed in the Library of the House following its publication in late November.

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list her Department's emergency relief aid contributions to sexual and reproductive health programme work for (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and projected contributions for (f) 2002 (g) 2003 and (h) 2004. [16636]

Clare Short: This information is not collected centrally and to provide data on the basis requested would be at disproportionate cost.

Refrigerator Exports

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she is taking to ensure that exports of refrigerators to the third world comply with the European regulations which come into effect on 1 January. [16247]

Clare Short: My Department applies Government policy on greening government operations and our procurement agents ensure that refrigerators purchased for use by the development programme comply with the new regulations.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many employees of (a) her Department and (b) agencies sponsored by her Department work in (i) London, (ii) areas benefiting from EU objective 1 status, (iii) areas with objective 2 status and (iv) other areas. [16109]

Clare Short: (a) The numbers of staff employed by DFID in the United Kingdom as at 1 September 2001 were:

(i) London—826

(ii) In areas benefiting from EU objective 1 status—nil

(iii) In areas with EU objective 2 status, other than London—nil

(iv) In other areas—540 (in east Kilbride).

(b) There are no agencies sponsored by DFID.

Cipro

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether she supported the move by the United States Government for a compulsory licence to negotiate a lower price for the anti-anthrax drug, Cipro, at the World Trade Organisation meeting. [16072]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The negotiations between the United States Government and the manufacturers of Cipro were private matters for the parties involved. In this instance, the United States Government reached an agreement with the manufacturer of Cipro for a bulk supply of this anti-anthrax drug at reduced prices without resort to a compulsory licence.

Drug Prices

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in what circumstances she has supported developing countries seeking a compulsory licence to negotiate lower drug prices; and if she will make a statement on her policy in such circumstances. [16073]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The trade-related aspects of intellectual property rights agreement makes clear that any WTO member can issue a compulsory licence in certain circumstances. An individual WTO member itself determines the grounds upon which such a licence would be granted.

The declaration agreed at Doha last week on TRIPS and public health commits the TRIPS Council to finding a solution by end 2002 as to how WTO Members with insufficient or no manufacturing capacities in the pharmaceutical sector might make effective use of compulsory licensing under the TRIPS agreement. The UK (as part of the EU) intends to play a constructive role in those negotiations.

TRIPS Agreement

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if it is her policy that the TRIPS agreement should not impede developing countries from taking measures to protect their public health; and what assessment she has made of the obstacles to achieving this. [16069]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The UK wholeheartedly supports the declaration on the TRIPS agreement and public health issued at the successful conclusion of the fourth ministerial meeting of the WTO at Doha, Qatar. The declaration makes it clear that the TRIPS agreement does not and should not prevent Members from taking measures to protect public health.

I am confident that this agreement will both allow developing countries better access to vital medicines in the fight against diseases like HIV/AIDS and TB, and protect the patent system that promotes research into the drugs of the future.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her policy is on a moratorium on formal WTO disputes over TRIPS. [16071]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

In relation to TRIPS and public health the UK wholeheartedly supports the declaration issued at the successful conclusion of the fourth ministerial meeting of the WTO at Doha, Qatar. The declaration makes clear that the TRIPS Agreement does not and should not prevent Members from taking measures to protect public health. It also extends the deadline for implementation of the agreement for the least developed countries, in relation to pharmaceutical products, by 10 years to 2016. Taken together, along with the rest of the declaration, it is clear that there is no need for a formal moratorium.

I have placed a copy of the declaration in the Library of the House.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Government Car Pool

Mr. Barker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many vehicles in the Government car pool are electric-powered; and what plans there are to increase this number. [17348]

Mr. Leslie: The Government Car and Despatch Agency, which is responsible for running ministerial cars, has one electric car on long-term trial and one hybrid petrol/electric powered car on its fleet. Until electric cars with adequate passenger space and mileage range become available, there are no plans to increase the number of electric cars on the fleet.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what the cost was to the Strategic Rail Authority's budget (a) in total and (b) in each year since 1997, of producing (i) each of their annual strategies and (ii) their annual channel tunnel rail link strategy; [15741]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of each of the Strategic Rail Authority's annual channel tunnel strategies produced since 1997; [15740]

(3) what the key recommendations were from the Strategic Rail Authority's most recent annual Channel Tunnel Strategy document; what account he has taken of these recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [15739]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority was established on 1 February 2001 under the provisions of the Transport Act 2000. The Act requires the authority to produce strategies, including a channel tunnel strategy. Copies of the authority's strategies will be placed in the Library of the House when they are published.

London Underground

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will place in the Library a copy of the instructions given to Ernst & Young to prepare the review of the value for money of the PPP for London Underground. [14486]

Mr. Jamieson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has today placed in the Library a copy of the terms of reference agreed with Ernst & Young for this review.

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions who is financing the current advertising campaign on the London Underground relating to the benefits of the public-private partnership; and what is its cost. [16562]

Mr. Jamieson: This is a matter for London Underground.

Trans-European Networks

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if it is Government policy that all trans-European network roads should be dual-carriageways. [14789]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 15 November 2001]: No. The European Community guidelines for the development of the trans-European transport network do not require roads represented on the TEN to be dual-carriageway standard.

Railtrack

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the value was of one share in Railtrack at (a) the time of privatisation and (b) at 1 October for each year thereafter. [16060]

Mr. Jamieson: The flotation price of a share in Railtrack Group plc on 20 May 1996 was 380p. The share price for Railtrack Group plc for 1 October in each subsequent year is as follows:

1 October 1996: 491p

1 October 1997: 902p

1 October 1998: 1,713p

1 October 1999: 1,320p

1 October 2000: 1,109p

1 October 2001: 265p.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what advice the Government sought about the timing of an announcement to the stock exchange of the changed plans for Railtrack plc. [16378]

Mr. Spellar: In reaching his decision on 5 October, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State had regard to the responsibilities and duties that Railtrack Group plc has as a stock exchange quoted company.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his estimate is of the legal fees for advice to his Department (a) incurred so far and (b) likely to be incurred in the rest of the 2001–02 financial year on the issues arising from the Railtrack administration. [16373]

Mr. Spellar: I estimate that since Railtrack went into administration on 7 October 2001, my Department has incurred legal fees of approximately £400,000 for advice on issues arising from the administration. At this stage it is not possible to give an accurate estimate for the rest of this year, but it will be within the Department's budget for such matters.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what accountancy advice he took on the financial position of Railtrack in connection with the petition for administration. [16376]

Mr. Spellar: The Secretary of State received advice on Railtrack's financial position on an on-going basis. It was accountancy and financial advice that provided the evidence of a deficit of £700 million by 8 December rising to £1.7 billion by the end of March 2002, which formed the basis for the administration order. This evidence was not challenged in the High Court by Railtrack.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what (a) guidance and (b) instruction has been issued to Railtrack in administration by the Government on employment in the company. [16364]

Mr. Spellar: No such guidance or instruction has been issued.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 7 November 2001, Official Report, column 289W, on letters of comfort, if he will make it his policy to place such letters in the Library; what representations he has received from potential financiers of the successor body to Railtrack for non-legally binding assurances from the Government on their support for Railtrack's successor body; and if he will make a statement. [16730]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government are not anticipating having to provide any non-legally binding assurances on their support. If contingent liabilities are required to be entered into, they will be notified to Parliament as part of the standard procedure.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what arrangements are in place for private investors to invest in the not-for-profit company replacing Railtrack; and if he is in negotiation with such investors. [16769]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 21 November 2001]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 31 October 2001, Official Report, column 671W.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to her answer of 30 October 2001, Official Report, column 571W, what recent ministerial meetings there have been with the chair of the Strategic Rail Authority. [17119]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles), on 31 October 2001, Official Report, column 668W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 31W, on Railtrack, if he will set out the basis on which his Department determined the value of assets of Railtrack plc for the purposes of assessing the company's solvency, as requested. [17780]

Mr. Byers: As my previous reply stated, the solvency of a company is assessed on the basis of its ability to meet its debt liability payments; and this is the basis on which evidence was produced for the petition to the High Court. The determination of the value of the assets in Railtrack plc is a matter for the administrator.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what information regarding the financial position of Railtrack was received by his Department between (a) 28 September and 1 October and (b) 1 October and 5 October. [17226]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Between those dates my Department received various information on the financial position of Railtrack from various sources.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what comparative assessment he has made of the likely impact on the public finances of a takeover of Railtrack by (a) a not-for-profit company and (b) a private company. [17744]

Mr. Spellar: It will be for the administrator to assess and make recommendations on proposals for how Railtrack plc's property rights and liabilities are transferred out of administration as a going concern and to put a transfer proposal to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for approval. Guidelines on the criteria upon which my right hon. Friend will need to be satisfied before approving any proposal put forward by the administrator were set out in reply my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Vernon Coaker) on 31 October 2001, Official Report, column 669–71W.

Rail Industry

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which representatives of financial institutions he has met to discuss the future of the rail industry since June. [16171]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government have had regular meetings with their financial advisers. In addition, the Government have had meetings with bondholders, institutional shareholders and with credit rating agencies.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on what occasions since 1997 the Government have refused a request to use section 54 of the Railways Act 1993. [16176]

Mr. Jamieson: No such request has been refused since 1997.

Bus Services

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he has received a letter from Mark Fowler, Managing Director of Nottingham City Transport, of 8 November; and if he will make a statement on how competition legislation affects the ability to cross-subsidise bus services. [16953]

Ms Keeble: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport has received a letter dated 8 November from the Managing Director of Nottingham City Transport.

The requirements of competition legislation in relation to the cross-subsidy of bus services is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading.

Planning (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what representations he has received in 2001 on bypasses from residents of Buckingham constituency. [16904]

Mr. Jamieson: In 2001, my Department has received representations from Buckingham residents on the A41 Aston Clinton bypass, the A418 Stoke Hammond and Western Linslade bypass and the A418 Wing bypass.

Data Protection

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many names and addresses of vehicle owners/keepers have been disclosed to third parties by virtue of that party showing reasonable cause for the disclosure over the last three years, broken down into terms of categories of reasonable cause; if the DVLA alerts third parties to the offence under section 55 of the Data Protection Act 1998; if he has undertaken data matching exercises to identify those who might be using the third party facility as a means of tracing individuals who do not want to be traced; and if he will make a statement. [17168]

Mr. Jamieson: The number of "reasonable cause" requests for information processed against the DVLA vehicle register during the last three years are:

	Number of requests
1998–99	830,970
2000–01	955,484

Specific categories of reasonable cause are not recorded and it is not possible to break down the statistics in this way. Most of the inquiries are made by insurance companies and finance houses in relation to insurance claims and vehicle-related loan arrangements. The information is released, often via electronic links, under strictly defined terms and conditions, which specify the security and confidentiality of the information handled and subject to periodic audit. Information is released to around 2,500 private individuals each year. Applicants must give a full written explanation for their inquiry, and they are warned directly of the consequences under the Data Protection Act of unlawfully procuring information. The agency has not identified a need to carry out any formal matching exercises to identify inappropriate inquiries, but it does work closely with the Office of the Data Protection Commissioner to facilitate the prosecution of the handful of offences that come to light each year.

Corsham Station

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the new station of Corsham will open; and what delay there has been in its opening. [17045]

Mr. Jamieson: The station is now expected to become operational at the start of the summer 2003 timetable. There have been delays amounting to approximately one year caused by a variety of issues which have now been resolved.

Light Rail and Tram Schemes

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the (a) light rail and (b) tram schemes which are planned and which could be open by 2010. [17131]

Ms Keeble: It is for local authorities to develop proposals for light rail or tram schemes in the context of their local transport plans. The following schemes are already under construction or have received full approval:

Scheme	Timetable
Sunderland Extension to Tyne and Wear Metro	Under construction, due to open March 2002
Nottingham Express Transit	Under construction, due to open in 2003
Three extensions to Manchester Metrolink[1]	Approved, construction should begin in 2003
Leeds Supertram (Three lines)	Approved, construction should begin in 2003
South Hampshire Rapid Transit	Approved, construction should begin in 2003

[1] Oldham-Rochdale, Airport and Ashton-under-Lyne

In addition, we have given provisional approval to two extensions to the Midland Metro system in Birmingham. The promoters are now seeking the necessary powers under the Transport and Works Act 1992 (TWA). The Docklands Light Rail extension to City airport has also received provisional approval, subject to TWA powers being granted.

At present, we are considering proposals for the Bristol and South Gloucestershire light rapid transit scheme; a further extension to the Manchester Metrolink to Stockport; the Merseytram project and an upgrade of the Blackpool tramway. Transport for London is consulting on options for intermediate-mode transport for four corridors: East London transit, Uxbridge road, Cross River transit, and Greenwich waterfront.

We are aware of a significant number of schemes that may in future be proposed by authorities, including extensions to existing systems. The investment plans set out in the 10-year plan for transport contain provision for up to 25 new light rail lines in major cities and conurbations in England outside London.

Regional Assembly (South-west)

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many written representations he has received from electors in the east Devon constituency expressing support for an elected regional assembly in the south-west of England in the last 12 months. [17271]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department has received no representations on regional government from electors in the east Devon constituency.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for reducing the incidence of fire-related deaths in the home. [16921]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department's public service agreement target looks for an average 20 per cent. reduction in the number of deaths from the base-line figure of 379 (the average over the years April 1994 to March 1999) for the period April 1999 to March 2004—giving a target of 303 (averaged over the five years).

Our statistics show an encouraging trend in the overall reduction of accidental deaths in the home. We achieved our first milestone (1999–2000); the latest set of figures indicate that the Department is not far short of achieving the second milestone (2000–01) where we would hope to record no more than 327 deaths nationally (ie England and Wales). The latest figures for the calendar year 2000 indicate that about 326 died in accidental dwelling fires, in this period. This latest figure also compares with 315 deaths recorded in the previous year (1999).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for implementing fire cover standards. [16919]

Dr. Whitehead: The task group on the fire cover review expects to deliver its final report to the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council in March 2002.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for what reason the public service agreement target for reducing the incidence of fire-related deaths in the home in 2000–01 was higher than the outturn in 1999–2000. [16920]

Dr. Whitehead: The public service agreement target for accidental dwelling fire deaths measures reductions over five years. Because the number of fire deaths per year are subject to variations, it is necessary to take an average over five years to provide a more realistic measure of Government's ability to reduce preventable fire deaths.

The milestones were set in such a way so as to aim for a uniform reduction each year until the target is reached in year five.

Registered Vehicle Keepers (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many registered vehicle keepers there are in the Buckingham constituency. [16912]

Mr. Jamieson: The number of currently licensed vehicles registered to keepers in the Buckingham constituency at December 2000 was 90,207. More than one vehicle may be registered to the same keeper and it would not be possible to establish the number of individual keepers without a special exercise at disproportionate cost.

Street Warden Scheme

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many applications, of what total value, were received in each region of England under the street warden scheme; and of these, how many were successful, and with what total value in each region. [17776]

Ms Keeble: Details, by region, of applications made in England under the street warden scheme are shown in the table.

Region	Applications	Value (£)	Successful applications	Value (£)
East	24	5,648,011	13	1,774,820
East Midlands	11	3,284,644	7	1,030,073
South East	34	13,270,960	15	2,009,521
North West	44	13,270,270	19	2,937,791
London	45	23,249,502	18	4,240,820
North East	19	5,792,618	12	2,007,271
South West	21	5,069,953	12	1,922,744
West Midlands	41	8,050,272	17	2,188,692
Yorkshire and Humber	19	6,663,159	12	2,310,216
Total	258	84,299,389	125	20,421,947

Train Companies (Subsidies)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what subsidies have been paid to (a) Connex South Central, (b) Go Via/Goahead and (c) Thameslink to assist them with the purchase of new trains; when these payments were made; what each company is required to do as a consequence of accepting these payments; how many confirmed orders for new trains each company has informed his Department it has made; and how many trains each company has accepted. [16818]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The following table provides details, for Connex South Central and Thameslink and for each year from franchise commencement to 2000–01, of net outturn payments (or receipts) in cash prices by the Franchising Director and, since 1 February 2001, by the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA):

Cash prices £ million

Year	Connex South Central	Thameslink
1996–97	76	1
1997–98	76	3
1998–99	58	(7)
1999–2000	50	(18)
2000–01	40	(28)

Ownership of the South Central franchise was transferred from Connex to GoVia on 26 August 2001. Franchise support for South Central and Thameslink is the Franchising Director's and the SRA's contribution to funding all those companies' expenditure under their franchise agreements, including any expenditure on new trains.

Under its franchise agreement, Thameslink has no commitment to order new trains. The South Central franchise agreement included a commitment by Connex to replace its Mark I rolling stock by 1 January 2005, as required by Health and Safety Executive regulations. On 26 August that commitment was passed to GoVia, which has subsequently ordered 240 new vehicles that are due to start entering service on its South Central franchise in 2002. Further orders are expected to be placed shortly.

Homelessness

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 15 November 2001, Official Report, column 832W, on homelessness, if he will specify what provisions exist within the Homelessness Bill to ensure housing authorities take a more strategic, multi-agency approach to (a) the prevention of homelessness and (b) the re-housing of homeless households; and if he will make a statement. [17781]

Ms Keeble: The Homelessness Bill includes a requirement for housing authorities, with the assistance of social services authorities, and in consultation with other bodies including registered social landlords and voluntary organisations, to:

> carry out reviews of homelessness in their area;
> formulate and publish strategies for tackling and preventing homelessness problems based on the results of those reviews;
> publish the first strategy within 12 months of the coming into operation of these provisions; and > publish a new strategy thereafter within five years of the previous strategy having been published.

The Bill also requires housing authorities and social services authorities to take the homelessness strategy into account when carrying out their functions.

Details are set out in the explanatory notes which are available in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 15 November 2001, Official Report, column 832W, on homelessness, if he will specify what measures exist within the Homelessness Bill to ensure housing authorities provide the (a) timely and (b) suitable rehousing of homeless households. [17814]

Ms Keeble: The Housing Act 1996 requires local housing authorities to secure that suitable accommodation is available immediately for a housing applicant, pending completion of their inquiries, if they have reason to believe that he or she may be homeless, eligible for assistance and have a priority need for accommodation. That duty continues until the authority decides whether a substantive duty is owed. The Homelessness Bill will amend the 1996 Act so that, in all cases where the authority decides that the applicant is eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and falls within a priority need group, they must secure that suitable accommodation is available until a settled housing solution can be found.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will launch a road safety campaign aimed at reducing the number of HGV drivers of vehicles with a maximum loaded weight of over 7.5 tonnes driving in the offside lane of motorways with three or more lanes in England and Wales. [17409]

Mr. Spellar: No. HGVs with a laden weight exceeding 7.5 tonnes are already banned from the outside lane of motorways (with three or more lanes). Enforcement of the law is a matter for the police.

Fair Trade Products

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what fairly traded products, other than tea and coffee, have been purchased by his Department in each of the last five years; and what was their value. [17565]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department does not directly purchase these products, but within the last two months the staff restaurant contractor has introduced Fair Trade chocolate and cereal bars for sale to staff in the main staff restaurant. No figures are available on the value of these purchases.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he has taken to encourage the use of Fair Trade products by local authorities. [17796]

Dr. Whitehead: Local authorities are independent and autonomous and responsible within the law for making their own decisions on procurement matters. In doing so they will no doubt consider the case for purchasing Fair Trade products on their merits with regard to the need to achieve value for money in making their decisions.

South East England Regional Assembly

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what was (a) the cost of establishing, (b) the running costs since it was established and (c) the costs this year of the South East England Regional Assembly. [17341]

Dr. Whitehead: The South East England Regional Assembly (SEERA) has been established region—Highland voluntarily by bodies representing the interests of the south-east region. Their expenditure and start-up costs are a matter for the assembly and its members. The Government have however, allocated £500,000 this year to SEERA to help the assembly to establish a stronger strategic and scrutiny role within the region. The Government office for the south- east will be monitoring that part of SEERA's expenditure which relates to the £500,000 grant.

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many people have been employed by the South East England Regional Assembly (a) this year and (b) in each year since it was established. [17342]

Dr. Whitehead: These are matters for the South East England Regional Assembly.

Fire Service (East Sussex)

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which fire stations have been closed in East Sussex since 1997. [17344]

Dr. Whitehead: None.

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many firefighters are (a) in active service and (b) on long-term sick leave in East Sussex Fire Brigade this year; and what the figures were for each of the last four years. [17343]

Dr. Whitehead: In east Sussex this year there have been 416 whole-time firefighters in active service and 11 on long-term sick leave. Due to technical difficulties, information for previous years is not currently available. East Sussex are in the process of installing a new central personnel computer system. The information requested will be available from April 2002 for the two previous years.

Travel Concessions (Middlesbrough)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what travel concessions are available, and how many people are eligible per group, (a) in total, (b) in Teesside and (c) in the Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency. [17798]

Ms Keeble: The Transport Act 2000 requires local authorities and PTEs in England and Wales to provide half-price fares on local buses to pensioners and disabled people, with no charge for the pass. In addition, the Transport Act 1985 gives local authorities discretion to provide a more generous scheme (eg less than half-fare or free travel; discounted travel on trains, metros, trams, ferries; or cross-boundary travel). In London, the Freedom Pass scheme is covered by the Greater London Authority Act 1999. Broadly 5.5 million pensioners and 1.5 million disabled people are eligible for these concessions.

Regional or constituency data are not held centrally.

Rough Sleepers Unit

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much money from the rough sleepers unit has been invested (a) in total and (b) broken down by area since the creation of the unit. [17797]

Ms Keeble: The rough sleepers unit has a programme budget (both capital and revenue) of £200 million over three years. In London, a total of £159 million has been invested over three years drawn from funding streams previously administered by separate Departments. Outside London, where local authorities continue to take the lead in developing local strategies, the unit has invested £39 million under the homelessness action programme. The unit's budget is ring-fenced.

Total grant for three years 1999–2000 to 2001–02, based on actual expenditure in 1999–2000 and 2000–01 and forecast expenditure in 2001–02

Special Purpose Vehicles

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what plans he has for special purpose vehicles to be created to undertake works in connection with the replacement of the (a) south-west and (b) south and central passenger franchises; and if he will place the plans in the Library; [18218]

(2) what plans exist for special purpose vehicles to be created to undertake works in connection with the development of the East London Line; and if he will place plans in the Library; [17788]

(3) if he will list those projects for which special purpose vehicles are being established; [17785]

(4) what role the company which replaced Railtrack will have in the special purpose vehicles set up for rail infrastructure projects; [17782]

(5) if he will publish the (a) framework and (b) timetable for the establishment of special purpose vehicles to undertake rail infrastructure projects; [17783]

(6) what research he has undertaken as to the suitability of using special purpose vehicles for rail infrastructure projects. [17784]

Mr. Byers: The framework for special purpose vehicles for rail investment projects is currently being developed by the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) and my Department. The SRA strategic plan will identify the investment projects for which an SPV may be appropriate.

Planning

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects to publish the Green Paper on planning. [18013]

Ms Keeble: Shortly.

Domestic Sprinklers

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent representations he has received on the use of domestic sprinklers to prevent death and damage by fire in domestic homes. [17391]

Dr. Whitehead: My Department regularly receives representations from organisations calling for the greater use of domestic sprinklers.

The Government recognise that domestic sprinklers have a role to play in promoting life safety, particularly for the most vulnerable. The Fire Safety Advisory Board will continue to assess their value in the light of emerging standards and improvements in sprinkler technology. We have, therefore, recently commissioned research into the benefits of sprinklers in residential properties, including the preparation of a regulatory impact assessment. The results and conclusions from this work should be available in a little over two years from now.

Additionally, the housing health and safety rating system, which we propose should replace the housing fitness standard, includes guidance in respect of hazards from fire. Although not mandatory for houses in multiple occupation, sprinklers may well be recommended where the risk of fire is high.

Vehicle Specification

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what decision he has reached following the consultation exercise on the European Commission's proposal to introduce pedestrian protection features in new cars by means of a negotiated agreement with vehicle manufacturers. [18270]

Mr. Jamieson: We have decided that we should support the negotiated approach in this case. The most significant factor is that it offers the quickest route to introducing worthwhile pedestrian protection into the design of new car models.

The first phase of the agreement offers about 25 per cent. of the fatality reduction and 60 per cent. of the serious injury reduction expected from the European Enhanced Vehicle Safety Committee (EEVC) proposal on pedestrian protection. The full EEVC benefits are to be achieved in the second phase.

I have recently written to the Chairmen of the European Scrutiny Committees, informing them of the Government's position.

Council Tax Discounts

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will consult on the proposed changes to the council tax discounts on second and long-term empty homes. [18381]

Mr. Raynsford: I am today publishing proposals to give local authorities discretion to reduce or end the council tax discounts which owners of second and long-term empty homes currently receive.

The Government's proposals are set out in "Council Tax: a consultation paper on proposed changes for second homes and long-term empty homes". It fulfils the Government's commitment, made in the rural White Paper last year, to consult on this issue.

The Government are also seeking views on how the extra revenue raised should be used: whether it should be retained locally and whether it should be used for specific purposes such as housing. We are also proposing that councils should have the discretion to give council tax discounts for local reasons such as where homes are hit by flooding or in cases of individual hardship.

Our proposals would give local authorities the flexibility to choose the best option for their communities.

In some areas, second-home owners bring a much-needed boost to the local economy but, in other areas, a high demand for second homes is pricing local people out of the property market and undermining the viability of local services. Equally, homes left empty for long periods can blight local communities and encourage crime and antisocial behaviour. The proposals we are announcing today could be used to help encourage owners of empty homes to bring them back into use.

More than half a million properties which are no one's main residence currently receive a 50 per cent. council tax discount. Over half of these are long-term empty properties. Potentially, up to £200 million could be raised in England by ending the council tax discounts on second and long-term empty homes.

The Government are asking for responses to their consultation by 15 February 2002.

Planning Applications

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the latest annual figures for the number of planning applications under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 in England and Wales by (a) region, (b) the number of application passed, (c) the number sent to appeal and (d) the number of successful appeals; and if he will provide the same figures for the previous 10 years. Fridges

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps the Government are taking to ensure that local authority schemes for recycling and disposing of fridges comply with EU regulations. [16404]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has written to all local authorities informing them of the requirements of EC Regulation 2037/2000 regarding the recycling/disposal of fridges. A further letter will be issued shortly to remind local authorities of their obligations to receive and collect waste refrigeration equipment from householders. Guidance on storage of waste refrigeration equipment has been issued in draft and we are currently considering funding options for local authorities.

DEFENCE

Defence Academy

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the job specification drawn up for the appointment of the head of the Defence Academy. [15345]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The Defence Academy of the United Kingdom is to be a national and international centre of excellence, providing civilian and military personnel with high quality education, primarily at postgraduate level, and conducting research in fields related to defence. It will bring together, inter alia, the existing Joint Service Command and Staff College, the Royal College of Defence Studies and the Royal Military College of Science (RMCS). It is intended to exert increasing influence with national and international military and academic institutions and to provide a focus for the research effort of the existing colleges in support of defence objectives, including the development of policy and doctrine by the policy director and the joint doctrine and concepts centre. The role of the head of the academy is to establish the academy, and to develop and run it in such a way as to achieve these aims.

The head will have overall responsibility for the academy's collective performance in delivering its outputs. While delivery of these outputs will be delegated to the heads of the component organisations, he will remain accountable for them. In particular, he/she will:

> Provide a clear vision for the academy and ensure that the teaching and research it provides are coherent and responsive to customer needs and to developing national and international circumstances.
> Create and develop links with national and international military and academic bodies and institutions, in order to establish the academy as a major influence on thinking worldwide on defence issues.
> Develop a strategic plan for the future development of the academy and the Shrivenham site, including future arrangements for academic provision and future contractual and support arrangements, to ensure coherence and cost-effectiveness of teaching and research activities.

To facilitate the achievement of these objectives, the head of the academy will:

> Establish and maintain effective arrangements for the management of academy business and the development of synergies and relationships within and beyond the academy, and give broad policy guidance.
> Establish and maintain a focus for research in support of defence objectives, including the development of policy and doctrine by the policy director and joint doctrine and concepts centre.
> Encourage the fullest international and inter-agency participation in the academy's courses, in support of policy and defence diplomacy objectives.
> Oversee the establishment of the defence leadership centre, the joint service warrant officers' school, the defence sixth-form college, the defence technical undergraduate scheme and the defence finance training cell.
> Manage a single budget incorporating those of the component organisations.

The head of the academy will also be responsible, through RMCS, for Welbeck sixth-form college. In addition, two new organisations will be set up as part of the academy: a defence leadership centre and a joint services warrant officers school.

The head of the academy will report to the vice chief of the Defence staff (VCDS). The second reporting officer will be the Chief of the Defence Staff (CDS). The academy budget will form part of the central top level budget.

A policy board, chaired by CDS, and comprising key stakeholders and external members, will deal with strategy, high-level tasking and funding issues. This will subsume the role of the existing policy boards of the individual colleges but each college will retain arrangements for providing access to senior figures from academia and industry through an advisory board. An academy advisory board, chaired by the head, on which key stakeholders and customers would be represented, will agree outputs and match requirements between customers in line with capacity in the academy. The membership of the academy level boards will be determined by the head, in consultation with the Chiefs of Staff and other interested parties. The head will direct academy business through a management board, which will comprise the heads of the component organisations.

The head of the academy will be consulted on decisions on the most senior staff and academic appointments within the academy, and on the provision of academic advice and support.

By April 2002, he is to have put in place the academy's unified management structure. As part of that process, he is to:

> Review the reporting and customer liaison arrangements and make changes where appropriate to ensure that they are fully streamlined, eliminating duplication and applying best working practices.
> Review and rationalise the senior management structure within the academy, define the structure and roles of the academy's central organisation, and make proposals for improvement to performance across the academy, particularly in the area of enhanced coherence.

By April 2003, he is to develop proposals for the longer-term size, shape and status of the academy including the rationalisation of academic provision and future contractual and support arrangements.

He is to carry out a post-project evaluation of the new organisation and its constituent parts after 12 months of implementation, beginning in April 2003.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the charter of the Defence Academy and list the members of the advisory board and constituent parts of the Academy. [15350]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The Defence Academy will comprise the Joint Services Command and Staff College, the Royal College of Defence Studies (which will remain in London), the Royal Military College of Science, the Conflict Studies Research Centre and three new elements: a defence leadership centre, a joint services warrant officers' school and a school of finance management.

The Defence Academy will be established on 1 April 2002 as a national and international centre for postgraduate education and research in defence fields.

A charter, or similar, for the Defence Academy, including a constitution for an advisory board, will follow further detailed implementation work.

RAF Bases

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilian staff are employed at (a) RAF Lyneham and (b) RAF Brize Norton. [17040]

Dr. Moonie: There are 269 Ministry of Defence civil servants and approximately 490 contracted and sub-contracted staff employed at RAF Lyneham, and 555 MOD civil servants and approximately 60 contracted and sub-contracted staff at RAF Brize Norton. Numbers vary from day to day depending on the requirement to use sub-contractors to carry out specialist tasks.

September 11

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has made to the Energy Review Group regarding security at nuclear power stations following the events of 11 September. [16794]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 22 November 2001]: None. The security of nuclear power stations is a matter for the Department of Trade and Industry. We are in close contact with the DTI and other Government Departments concerning any contribution the armed forces could make in this area.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has made to the Nuclear Inspectorate regarding security at nuclear installations following the events of 11 September. [16795]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 22 November 2001]: None. The security of the Ministry of Defence nuclear installations is an MOD responsibility. However, close contact is maintained with the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate for health and safety matters at MOD licensed nuclear sites.

Royal Marines

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many recruits there were to the Royal Marines this year; and how many of these were (a) invalided out and (b) discharged for disciplinary reasons, before completing their course. [17345]

Mr. Ingram: In the last 12 months, 1,180 recruits joined the Royal Marines Commando training centre at Lympstone. Of these, 51 were medically discharged and one was discharged for disciplinary offences before the end of the course.

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people were recruited this year to the Royal Marines, by rank, at (a) 16 years old, (b) 18 years old and (c) 21 years old. [17340]

Mr. Ingram: Information for this year is available from 23 April to 12 November. The number of recruits to the Royal Marine Corp is set out in the table:

	Ratings	Officers
Under 18s	219	—
18–21	358	21
Over 21s	151	40
Total	728	61

All ratings join as a Marine Second Class and officers as a Second Lieutenant. The ages of officers recruited cannot be broken down.

Depleted Uranium

Dr. Jack Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) guns and (b) gun barrels used for the test firing of depleted uranium shells at Eskmeals have been removed to another range not licensed for the testing of depleted uranium; who authorised such transfers; whether this complied with health and safety regulations; and if he will make a statement. [16885]

Dr. Moonie: I believe my right hon. Friend may be referring to two Challenger 2 tank gun barrels used for test firing depleted uranium (DU) ammunition at the Kirkcudbright training area, but stored at the QinetiQ Eskmeals range. These were transferred on 6 November to the firing range at Shoeburyness, for test firing of non-DU ammunition, to support a Challenger 2 tank safety trial to determine acceptable limits of gun barrel erosion. The transfer was carried out by QinetiQ. A risk assessment by the radiation protection adviser showed that the levels of DU in the two barrels were so low and the DU so inaccessible that the material is not a radioactive substance within the meaning of the Ionising Radiation Regulations. These are the regulations that protect workers and members of the public who maybe exposed to ionising radiation and radioactive material from work activities.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Greenpeace/Friends of the Earth

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she last met representatives of (a) Greenpeace and (b) Friends of the Earth; and what matters were discussed. [17477]

Margaret Beckett: Representatives from both Greenpeace and Friends of the Earth attended the Waste Summit which I hosted on Wednesday 21 November. Various issues relating to the future direction of the UK's waste strategy were discussed.

Scientific Research

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list those agencies or laboratories which have conducted scientific research on behalf of her Department in the past year which are not accredited by the UK Accreditation Service. [10610]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 26 October 2001]: DEFRA commissions research with several hundred contractors, and through them many sub-contractors. The UK Accreditation Service standard is just one of a number of quality standards which such contractors may apply and meet. My Department does not hold information on its hundreds of contractors and it could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Countryside Visitors

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs by what means she is monitoring the types of visits people undertook to the countryside in the 12 months since November 2000. [16722]

Alun Michael: The English Tourism Council undertakes a survey of tourism by residents of the United Kingdom. The survey provides information on visits to the countryside and results for 2001 will be available in early 2002.

In addition, the Countryside Agency will be undertaking its leisure day visits survey in January 2002 to report back in 2003.

Utilities

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to review the statutory rights of utilities; and if she will make a statement. [12362]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 5 November 2001]: This Department has responsibility only for the water companies. The Government published the draft Water Bill in November 2000, which includes proposals for certain changes to the statutory rights and responsibilities of water companies. These include duties to conserve water and to maintain up-to-date drought plans.

The draft Water Bill would also require companies to disclose any links between their directors' pay and performance standards to ensure greater accountability by the companies.

Changes to the statutory rights and responsibilities of water companies are also possible as part of the Government's on-going consideration of competition in the water industry.

Organic Farms

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she will take to protect potential organic farms from the effects of wind-blown contamination from nearby GM crop trials; and if she will make a statement. [12460]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 6 November 2001]: The farm scale evaluation (FSE) trials of GM crops are separated from neighbouring compatible crops to protect them from the effects of wind-blown pollen. The separation distances depend on the type of crop and should ensure that, at the closest separation, cross-pollination does not exceed a maximum of 1 per cent. In practice, it will generally be below that level. The separation distances are greater in relation to organic crops than they are for ordinary, conventional crops. I am not aware of any instance where an FSE trial has affected the status of an organic crop. We want to maintain that position for the remainder of the FSE programme and are therefore keeping the separation distances under review. The general issue of the terms on which GM and non-GM crops might co-exist is one that the Government want to resolve before there is any question of commercial GM planting. This is not just a scientific issue, but one of public acceptability.

Convention on Biodiversity

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the (a) issues discussed at and (b) outcome of the seventh meeting of the subsidiary bodies for scientific, technical and technological advice of the convention on biodiversity. [15853]

Mr. Meacher: The subsidiary body on scientific, technical and technological advice (SBSTTA) met in Montreal from 12 to 16 November. The meeting made recommendations on a number of issues to the sixth meeting of the conference of the parties (COP6) to the convention on biological diversity, to be held in April 2002 in The Hague.

Most attention was focused on forest biological diversity, where SBSTTA proposed a comprehensive programme of further work. This will cover the status and trends of forest biodiversity, options for its conservation and sustainable use, and the role of the socio-economic enabling environment. It will include the impact of the unsustainable harvesting of non-timber forest resources, such as bushmeat.

Other recommendations included proposals for a global strategy for plant conservation and an international initiative for the conservation and sustainable use of pollinators. Technical advice was prepared on the use of incentive measures to secure the objectives of the convention; incorporating biodiversity considerations into environmental impact assessment; and designing monitoring programmes and indicators to measure the state of biodiversity. SBSTTA also welcomed publication of the global biodiversity outlook, a comprehensive stocktaking that will help guide further implementation of the convention.

The UK looks forward to making the best use of SBSTTA's advice, on these and other issues, including by working to ensure a successful outcome at COP6, particularly on the priority issues of forest biodiversity, alien species, access and benefit-sharing; and agreement of a strategic plan for the convention.

Coal Mine Methane

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent estimate she has made of the benefits to the environment of capturing coal mine methane and using it to generate electricity. [15723]

Mr. Meacher: A report produced for the Department earlier this year estimated that current UK emissions from abandoned coal mines are likely to be in the range of 20 to 300 kilo tonnes. The upper end of this range is equivalent to around 11 per cent. of the UK's total current methane emissions, or about 1 per cent. of UK greenhouse gas emissions as a whole. The emissions estimate is highly uncertain and we plan to carry out further work to gain a better understanding of the estimate, including the amount of gas that is in practice emitted and the potential for reducing these emissions by, for example, using the methane for electricity generation. I am aware that this Department, the Department for Trade and Industry and HM Treasury have been in discussion with the Association of Coal Mine Methane Operators about how the Government could help projects that use coal mine methane to generate electricity.

Rivers

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of rivers were (a) good, (b) fair and (c) poor quality in (i) 1996, (ii) 1997, (iii) 1998, (iv) 1999, (v) 2000 and (vi) 2001. [15895]

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of rivers in England were in (a) good, (b) fair and (c) poor quality in (i) 1996, (ii) 1997, (iii) 1998, (iv) 1999, (v) 2000 and (vi) 2001. [16581]

Mr. Meacher: In England, the Environment Agency's general quality assessment (GQA) scheme classifies water quality in rivers and canals. Chemical quality, the most widely used measure, is assessed on the basis of biochemical oxygen demand and concentrations of dissolved oxygen and ammonia. Stretches of rivers and canals are assigned as good, fair, poor or bad based on different degrees of chemical quality. Results from 1996 until 2000, the latest year for which figures are available, are as follows:

General quality assessment of rivers: chemical quality, England

Percentage length of river

Year	Good	Fair	Poor	Bad
1996	54	35.1	9.8	1.1
1997	52.3	35.5	11.0	1.2
1998	54.8	34.1	10.3	0.8
1999	59.4	31.7	8.3	0.6
2000	64.4	29.3	5.9	0.4

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many households in the Isle of Wight spent over 10 per cent. of their household income on fuel and were living in fuel poverty in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000 and (e) 2001. [16123]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The estimates of the number of fuel poor in England are based on data from the English house condition survey. Due to the nature of the survey, it is not possible to estimate the number of fuel poor within individual areas such as the Isle of Wight. The latest available information suggests that for the whole south-east Government office region, there were an estimated 270,000 households in fuel poverty in 1998.

Rural Businesses

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what was the turnover of businesses based in rural areas in the United Kingdom in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [16542]

Alun Michael: The turnover (£000) of VAT-based enterprises in rural areas (districts/unitary authorities as classified by the Countryside Agency) in England is as follows:

Year	£
1999	357,774,110
2000	360,296,895
2001	364,896,980

It is not possible to provide figures for earlier years because of changes in geographical boundaries.

Air Quality

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many air quality incidents have been recorded (a) in the UK, (b) in the north-east and (c) in Teesside; and what was the cause of the most potentially dangerous of those incidents in the last 12 months. [16425]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 20 November 2001]: We usually consider a "pollution incident" as an event in which high or very high air pollution has been monitored. The Department of Health's Committee on the effects of air pollution (COMEAP) has defined levels of high air pollution. They advise that during such episodes significant effects may be noticed by sensitive individuals and action to avoid or reduce these effects may be needed (e.g. reducing exposure by spending less time in polluted areas outdoors). During episodes of very high pollution the effects on sensitive individuals described for high levels of pollution may worsen. The pollution thresholds adopted by COMEAP are shown as follows.

ug/m^3 (micrograms per cubic metre)	Index	Sulphur dioxide 15 minutes	Nitrogen dioxide 1 hour	Ozone Running 8 hours	Particles (PM^{10}) Running 24 hours	Carbon monoxide Running 8 hours
Very High	10	[1]400	[1]400	[1,2]180	[1]100	[1]20
High	7–9	200–399	300–399	90–179	75–99	15–19.9
Moderate	4–6	199–100	150–299	50–89	50–74	10–14.9
Low	1–3	[3]100	[3]150	[3]50	[3]50	[3]10

[3] Less than

The national automatic monitoring network currently includes 120 sites. Data are produced continuously on an hourly basis. Ratified data is available up to 30 June 2001. After this date care must be taken in interpretation of the pollution levels recorded since high measurements may be the result of instrument error that is still to be identified. Levels recorded at each monitoring site are defined according to the pollutant that is in the highest band during the day.

Across the UK there were 10 days on which pollution levels for ozone were measured as high at one or more sites. For ozone, there were no episodes of high pollution in the north-east or Teeside. Ozone episodes are caused by a combination of sunlight reacting on volatile organic compounds and nitrogen dioxide. These pollutants can be transported long distances and a proportion of the ozone measured during these episodes is likely to have originated from continental sources.

For sulphur dioxide there was only one incident of high pollution recorded, at Grangemouth on 24 August. This is likely to have been caused by an industrial source. A second episode measured in London is unratified data and likely to be instrument error.

For PM^{10} there were 50 days on which pollution levels were high or very high at one or more sites. The highest pollution was recorded at Bexley (190 ug/m^{3}) on 3 November. The episode arose from the combination of calm weather conditions across south-east England and bonfire night celebrations. This was one of the highest measurements of PM^{10} recorded in the UK since 1992 when monitoring commenced. The second highest measurement was recorded in Manchester and arose due to cutting of concrete slabs adjacent to the monitoring station; this probably did not reflect wider air pollution.

In the north-east there were 10 days of high or very high pollution at Scunthorpe (all for PM^{10}). Local industrial sources are likely to have contributed to these episodes. In Leeds, there was one day on which pollution levels for PM^{10} were high. There were no episodes of high pollution for PM^{10} recorded at the Middlesbrough monitoring site in Teesside.

No episodes of high or very high pollution have been recorded in the UK during 2001 for carbon monoxide or nitrogen dioxide.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will provide a breakdown of the cost of (a) settling the dispute between her Department and the Public and Commercial Services Union and (b) charges by the European Union for not meeting (i) foot and mouth compensation and (ii) other support payments. [16588]

Mr. Morley: (a) A breakdown of the cost of settling the dispute between the Department and the Public and Commercial Services Union cannot be given because this depends on funding and the outcome of negotiations with the union.

(b) (i) There should be no charge by the European Union in respect of foot and mouth compensation as there are no deadlines for payment. The dispute has not delayed foot and mouth payments.

(ii) The main impact of the industrial action so far on other CAP support payments is that many of them will be made later in the regulatory payment 'window' than would otherwise have been the case. The extent to which payments may fall outside of the window cannot be predicted since it depends on the course which the industrial action takes and the success of mitigating action being taken by my Department to ensure that delays are kept to the minimum. To date no charges have been imposed by the European Union as a result of delays caused by the industrial action.

Flooding (Insurance)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with insurance companies about the provision of services to people who live on flood plains; and if she will make a statement. [17722]

Mr. Morley: The Government maintain close links with the insurance industry to help ensure continued availability of affordable flood cover. There is an agreement among Association of British Insurers (ABI) member companies that they will continue to provide flood cover, except in exceptional circumstances, for domestic properties and small businesses which they currently insure, during 2001 and 2002. Cases where there is an alleged breach of this agreement have been referred by DEFRA to the ABI for investigation. However, it must be recognised that insurance companies need to take a commercial decision as to what risk they will cover and on what terms. Also, the insurance industry is a competitive one and customers may need to shop around to obtain the best deal.

My hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury and I met the ABI on 5 September to discuss our mutual aim of ensuring that affordable flood insurance cover continues to be generally available after December 2002. Further discussions between officials have taken place.

Together with the flood defence operating authorities, we are reducing the risk of flooding and are communicating this to the insurance industry. We are reducing the risk through substantial increases in investment in flood and coastal defences (which now totals over £400 million a year). Flood defences are being repaired, renewed, maintained and improved. Flood warning arrangements are continually being improved. The Government have issued strengthened guidance to local planning authorities on control of development in flood risk areas, and are reviewing the financial and institutional arrangements under which the flood defence service is delivered.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Sure Start

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the location of the sure start programmes which (a) are in operation, (b) are in the process of being implemented and (c) are planned; and what are the criteria for inclusion in each element of the programme. [14134]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 November 2001]: Local authority districts are invited to develop sure start programmes on the basis of levels of disadvantage and poverty, though achieving a good mix between rural, urban, semi-urban and coastal areas and across the country is also ensured. Once a district has been invited to develop a programme it is up to local stakeholders—from the voluntary, statutory and community sectors—to decide upon the local catchment area. Partnerships are asked to choose a catchment area with high levels of need and which is among the poorest in the district.

Table A shows the locations of sure start programmes for which funding has been approved and are delivering services or starting to deliver them. Table B shows the locations which are currently developing sure start programmes. All of these areas will receive approval once their plans meet the standards set out in the sure start guidance. The tables have been placed in the Libraries.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to extend sure start to all local education authorities; and if she will make a statement. [15557]

Jacqui Smith: Sure start aims to support young children and their families living in disadvantaged areas so that they have improved life chances. The Government have now announced 437 out of the 500 sure start programmes planned to be operational by April 2004. These are located in 197 different local authority districts and in 130 out of the 150 local education authority (LEA) areas. At least a further 63 programmes will be announced next year which may extend sure start to more LEAs. In addition to the 500 full-scale sure start programmes, we have allocated £22 million to establish 50 small sure start programmes to reach pockets of deprivation, particularly those in rural areas. These will be located in 34 different LEA areas, bringing the total number of LEAs with a sure start presence to 135.

The experience and lessons learned from sure start will be shared widely so that, even where there is no local sure start programme, children and parents in the area will benefit from access to improved services.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the cost and performance of the sure start programme (a) nationally and (b) the boroughs of Middlesbrough (ii) Redcar and (iii) Cleveland. [16215]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The Government are committed to establishing 500 sure start programmes by March 2004. In July of this year, the fifth wave of sure start was announced. This brought the total number of programmes announced so far to 437. Over 200 of these programmes have received final approval and are delivering services to children and families in disadvantaged areas. In total, Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland have been invited to submit plans for eight sure start programmes. Of these, three have been approved, one is in the final stages of planning and the other four are in the very early stages of planning.

Nationally, over £600 million has been committed to approved programmes for their first three years of operation. The three approved programmes in Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland will receive approximately £6.5 million of this.

Village Schools

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what factors militate against the presumption against closure of village schools. [17197]

Mr. Timms: Our guidance to school organisation committees makes it clear that the presumption continues to be against the closure of rural schools, and that in considering such proposals the committee should take account of the following factors:

the accessibility of alternative schools and sites;

the standard of the school and the standards of alternative schools;

the overall supply of school places in the area and the likely future demand for places;

the overall effect of the closure on the local community;

the cost implications of the possible options;

any points made by the LEA;

any points made by the school proposed for closure;

the views of parents and other interested parties;

the effect on the school journey, including long-term transport costs, and whether the closure will result in more pupils experiencing longer journeys to school and more pupils being driven to school by car.

We have not said that no rural school should close, but the case for closure needs to be strong and the proposals clearly in the best interest of the children, parents and education in the area.

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many asylum seekers' children are being educated in UK schools; and what is the (a) local education authority, (b) country of origin and (c) age of the children. [16775]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The Refugee Council recently estimated that there are approximately 70,000 children of asylum seekers and refugees in UK schools. However, it is not possible to specify the local education authorities, country of origin and age of these children as this Department does not require local education authorities or schools to keep this information.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money is allocated to UK schools for each asylum seeker child in their school. [16776]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Schools receive funding for children of asylum seekers in the same way as they do for all other children on the school roll, through the education standard spending assessment. It is not possible to say how much each school receives through this funding mechanism. This is because this Department does not require schools and local education authorities to keep information about the numbers of children of asylum seekers on each school roll.

Children of asylum seekers can benefit from the ethnic minority achievement grant. Local education authorities decide which schools they will need to devolve funds to, or otherwise support, under the grant, taking into account each school's particular needs. For the current financial year funding stands at £154 million. In addition, for 2001–02, £1.5 million has been made available to support the education costs of children of asylum seekers. This funding is available to schools in the cluster areas to help settle these children into school and acquire English language skills.

South Tyneside

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which schools in south Tyneside have been granted funding for teacher training. [17401]

Mr. Timms: The information is not collected centrally. Schools may receive funding for activities related to the initial and continuing training of teachers from a variety of sources.

Education Action Zones

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on what date she took a decision to end the education action zone programme. [17628]

Mr. Timms: All education action zones (EAZs) will complete their agreed full statutory term. Under the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, EAZs had a maximum statutory term of five years. Our announcement on 14 November proposes that, wherever possible, we aim to continue to support ex-EAZ schools through our excellence in cities (EiC) initiative, following the end of the zones statutory term.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will publish proposals for future development of former education action zones in (a) rural and (b) suburban areas. [17629]

Mr. Timms: Wherever possible, we aim to find ways of continuing to support ex-EAZ schools following the end of each zone's statutory five-year term. Depending on local circumstances, we hope to do this largely through the excellence in cities initiative. My officials are starting discussions with each zone on the future of the zone, with a view to having firm proposals well before the end of its statutory term.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the costs of winding up education action zones will be. [17632]

Mr. Timms: All education action zones will complete their agreed full statutory term. Each education action zone (EAZ) will need to make arrangements to dispose of any assets and to meet any employment liabilities in accordance with guidance issued by the Department for Education and Skills in the EAZ handbook.

The costs will vary from zone to zone depending on their individual circumstances and liabilities. All costs will be met from within the existing education action zone programme budget.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes to the excellence in cities scheme she proposes to accommodate former education action zones. [17630]

Mr. Timms: My Department will discuss with each education action zone, and the relevant excellence in cities (EiC) partnership, the way forward for ex-zone schools. This could include the creation of new non-statutory EiC action zones in existing EiC areas or the development of new excellence clusters in areas not currently covered by EiC.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the education action zones which (a) have and (b) have not achieved their objectives. [17631]

Mr. Timms: All education action zones (EAZs) have individually agreed targets. These targets cover the zone's full five-year statutory term. It will not be possible to assess whether each zone has met its objectives until the end of that term. Progress towards these objectives will continue to be monitored.

Student Support

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the members of the working group established to serve on her Department's review of student support; and if she will make a statement. [17476]

Margaret Hodge: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills announced on 3 October 2001 that she is leading a review of student funding, including representatives from the Department for Education and Skills, HM Treasury and Inland Revenue.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research she has commissioned as part of her Department's review of student support; and if she will make a statement. [17475]

Margaret Hodge: We have examined existing research on students' attitudes to higher education, their income and expenditure, as well as perceptions of debt. Since 1998 we have commissioned further research to monitor the impact of our reforms in higher education.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Western Sahara (Referendum)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the UN administration in the Western Sahara to name a date for a referendum on the future governance of the territory.

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK supported United Nations Security Council resolution 1359, which was passed unanimously on 29 June 2001. This reiterated full support for the on-going efforts of MINURSO to implement the settlement plan and the agreements by the parties to hold a free, fair and impartial referendum for the self-determination of the people of western Sahara.

The United Nations Security Council resolution made no provision for setting a date for the referendum and at this stage we do not know when it will be possible to set such a date.

The resolution does, however, reaffirm the UN's commitment to assist the parties in achieving a just and lasting solution to the question of the western Sahara. The personal envoy of the Secretary-General is currently engaged in an attempt to resolve the dispute. The special envoy is discussing with the parties the draft framework agreement (as set out in the United Nations Secretary-General's report of June 2001) which may offer a mutually agreed political solution to the dispute. He has also discussed with the Polisario their proposals to overcome the obstacles faced in the settlement plan.

Oil for Food Policy (Iraq)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the performance of the oil for food policy regarding Iraq and the attitude of the Iraqi Government towards this policy.

Mr. Bradshaw: The oil for food programme is the UN's largest humanitarian programme ever, worth some $12.5 billion last year alone. In his most recent report (September 2001), the UN Secretary-General concludes that the oil for food programme has made a considerable difference to the lives of ordinary Iraqis and, in spreading beyond the food and medicine sectors, to the rehabilitation of Iraq's civilian infrastructure.

These achievements have been made despite the continuing efforts of the Iraqi regime to hamper the oil for food programme. For example, around $2 billion of funds lie unspent by Iraq in UN accounts and the Iraqi Central Bank consistently holds up the delivery of around $1 billion-worth of goods. Iraq continues to refuse to allow UN officials to enter Iraq to discuss a cash component for sectors identified by the UN Secretary-General as being critical, such as health, education and water and sanitation.

Iraq (Sanctions)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on the impact of sanctions on the access of Iraqi citizens to clean water; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Bradshaw: We regularly receive parliamentary and public correspondence on all aspects of sanctions on Iraq, including the water and sanitation sector.

Since 1990, the UK has donated over £100 million of humanitarian aid to Iraq (including £5.5 million this year) for projects which include the rehabilitation of water and sanitation infrastructure. In addition, earlier this year the EU agreed a 13 million euro aid package for projects which include the provision of clean drinking water.

By contrast, the Iraqi regime continues to hamper all aspects of the oil for food programme. At a time when around $2 billion lies unspent by Iraq in the UN escrow account, Iraq has, for example, cut spending in this sector by 18 per cent. in 2001 compared to last year. Iraq continues to refuse to allow UN officials to enter Iraq to discuss a cash component for sectors identified by the UN Secretary-General as being critical, one of which is water and sanitation.

International Coalition (Afghanistan)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries that support the international coalition's actions in Afghanistan.

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Lynne Jones) on 20 November 2001, Official Report column 182W.

EU Political and Social Affairs Committee

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on activities being undertaken by the EU Political and Social Affairs Committee. [14810]

Peter Hain: The European Union Political and Security Committee meets regularly in Brussels, usually twice a week, to discuss current foreign policy issues and questions relating to the European security and defence policy.

Gibraltar

Mr. MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is his policy that change in the constitutional status of Gibraltar will occur only after the agreement of the majority of the resident community. [16411]

Peter Hain: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Turner) on 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 26W.

Poland

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Poland about their expulsion of the representative of the US Federal Bureau of Investigation. [17037]

Peter Hain: It is not for Her Majesty's Government to intervene in bilateral matters of this kind between two NATO allies. Poland has given full support to the international effort against terrorism. The Polish President hosted a conference for regional Prime Ministers on 6 November to discuss concrete anti-terrorism measures.

Kosovo

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings he has had since October regarding the future of Kosovo; and if he will make a statement on the result of the recent elections in the province. [16813]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The elections were a landmark in Kosovo's development as a multi-ethnic, democratic and tolerant society. I look forward to this diversity and tolerance being reflected in Kosovo's first truly democratic and representative Government.

The Assembly elections on 17 November, in which all of Kosovo's communities participated, took place peacefully. Both the Council of Europe observer mission, led by a British expert, Owen Masters, and the OSCE's Parliamentary Assembly delegation, led by my right hon. Friend the Member for Walsall, South (Mr. George), declared the elections free and fair.

According to preliminary results issued by the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE), the Democratic League of Kosovo (LDK) won 46.29 per cent. of the vote, the Democratic Party of Kosovo (PDK) won 25.54 per cent., the Serb coalition "Return" won 10.96 per cent. and the Alliance for the Future of Kosovo (AAK) received 7.82 per cent. Final results should be known by 24 November.

Correspondence

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Chelmsford of 26 July on his constituent Mr. Grant Davis. [16825]

Mr. Bradshaw: I wrote to the hon. Member on 29 October.

Afghanistan

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what instructions will be given to British troops relating to the protection of local people from violence perpetrated by future governing regimes. [16666]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

Wherever they are engaged, British forces are required to act in accordance with national and international law.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Consultation Documents

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many consultation documents were issued by his Department from (a) 15 October to 14 January, (b) 15 January to 14 April, (c) 15 April to 14 July and (d) 15 July to 14 October in each year from 1996. [12879]

Dr. John Reid: The information requested is as follows:

Number of consultation documents issued

	15 October to 14 January	15 January to 14 April	15 April to 14 July	15 July to 14 October

Plastic Bullets

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many plastic bullets were procured for the (a) Royal Ulster Constabulary and (b) Police Service of Northern Ireland in each year from 1995 to present. [16574]

Jane Kennedy: The table gives details of the numbers of baton rounds procured by the Royal Ulster Constabulary each year from 1995 to present.

Year	Baton rounds procured
1995	25,200
1996	60,875
1997	33,900
1998	75,227
1999	50,400
2000	76,320
2001[1]	46,000

[1] To date

The date the Police Service of Northern Ireland has not procured any baton rounds.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Sport (East Midlands)

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on her plans to develop grassroots sports in the east midlands. [17058]

Mr. Caborn: The Government are committed to the development of sport and increasing opportunities for participation throughout the country. The strategy for sport—"A Sporting Future for All"—and the Government's plan for sport set out an action plan on how we intend to achieve those objectives. Responsibility for developing grassroots sport at the regional level rests with a number of organisations including Sport England, local authorities, local education authorities, schools, sports governing bodies, sports clubs, volunteers, and in order to ensure the best use of resources it is essential that all these interests work in partnership.

In the east midlands, the regional sports board is providing leadership and direction to this work and in close co-operation with Sport England has engaged the main partners in developing the Region's sporting infrastructure and planning for the future.

All of the programmes for providing better sports facilities and improving sports provision are being implemented in the region including lottery funding, where over £100 million has been committed to the region, the school sport co-ordinators programme and specialist sports colleges while the spaces for sport and arts, NOF round three and NOF green spaces programmes will all be injecting significant new resources into facilities which will be available to schools and the wider community.

For the future I have made it clear that I wish to see strengthened regional structures for the delivery of sport in the regions which involves local decision making and strong partnerships with all the key local interests. I will be discussing these issues with the Sport England Council and its new chief executive when he is in post.

Gambling Review

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many representations she has received on the gambling review report. [17364]

Mr. Caborn: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 22W.

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to implement the Gaming Board's triennial review recommendations on machine stakes and prizes. [17365]

Mr. Caborn: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Hall Green (Mr. McCabe) on 21 November 2000, Official Report, columns 313–34W.

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what role the Minister for Tourism will have in assessing the impact of the Budd report into gambling on seaside resorts before her Department publishes its proposals. [17367]

Mr. Caborn: All Ministers in the Department will support and advise my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in reaching decisions on the report; and those decisions will take proper account of the full range of her responsibilities

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many representations she has received about recommendation 75 of the Gambling Review; and how many supported the recommendation. [17351]

Mr. Caborn: We have received over 100 comments on this recommendation. Four supported it in the terms in which it was set out in the report of the gambling review body. Substantially more supported the proposition in the recommendation that on-licensed premises should be entitled to up to two gaming machines by virtue of their liquor licences (with a higher entitlement for those premises which already had a higher number) but argued either for a higher entitlement of four machines or for licensing authorities to have discretion to authorise more than two machines in appropriate cases.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what assessment she has made of the impact on employment if recommendation 75 of the gambling review is initiated; [17350]

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact on publicans if recommendation 75 of the gambling review is initiated. [17349]

Mr. Caborn: Many of the comments on this recommendation have raised concerns about its possible impact on business and employment. We are considering all representations on the report of the gambling review body with care, but have not yet completed our assessment of them.

Playing Fields

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will publish the figures produced by her Department's monitoring unit on the sale of playing fields for (a) April 2000-March 2001 and (b) April 1999-March 2000 for applications received for sales of (i) school playing fields under one standard pitch size as defined by Sport England as suitable for 10 year olds, (ii) school playing fields greater than one standard pitch size, (iii) non school playing fields under one standard pitch size and (iv) non school playing fields greater than the standard pitch size, stating in each case how many of the applications received by her Department were (a) successful, (b) rejected, (c) withdrawn, (d) not yet determined and (e) called in for special consideration. [17331]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaenau Gwent (Llew Smith) on 20 November 2001, Official Report, columns 189–90W.

Offshore Wind and Biomass Projects

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money has been allocated from the new opportunities fund for offshore wind and biomass projects; and if she will make a statement. [17801]

Mr. Caborn: The new opportunities fund will, by 2006, commit £50 million to projects that are designed to develop renewable electricity generation by building generating capacity for electricity from energy crops, build offshore wind electricity generation projects and develop small-scale biomass heat/combined heat and power projects. Of this £50 million, at least £33 million should be committed to developing renewable electricity generation by building generating capacity for electricity from energy crops, at least £10 million should be committed to building offshore wind electricity generation projects and at least £3 million to small-scale biomass heat/combined heat and power projects.

New Opportunities Fund for Sport

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 501W, what are the regional administration costs of establishing the new opportunities fund for sport; and what are the costs of the regional Sport England officers. [16772]

Mr. Caborn: The new opportunities fund is the body designated in the National Lottery Act 1998 to distribute lottery funds to initiatives concerned with health, education and the environment. They have a presence in the nine English regions which is responsible for the regional aspects of all 13 programmes. The representatives have been in place since September 2001, and are expected to cost £307,539 per year to maintain. Sport England has nine regional offices with running costs for 2000–01 of around £6,484,100.

Sports Projects

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what role Sport England will play in the assessment of grant applications for school sports projects funded by the new opportunities fund. [17464]

Mr. Caborn: Grant applications for the New Opportunities for PE and sport programme will be assessed in two stages. At stage one, Sport England will provide support and advice to local organisations to help the development of strategies and portfolios of projects. These applications will then be assessed by the new opportunities for PE and sport committee for England, two of whose members are full board members of Sport England. The fund and Sport England are currently discussing how best Sport England can provide support at the second stage of the application process.

Lottery Funding

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the level of lottery funding expected for competitive sport for (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; and what was the level in 1996–97. [17177]

Mr. Caborn: My Department's funding for competitive sport is provided through the lottery-funded world class programme, administered by the Sports Councils: UK Sport and Sport England.

The Sports Councils expect to provide funding of over £50 million in 2001–02 to this programme and over £40 million has already been committed for the year 2002–03 with further awards anticipated. There was no lottery expenditure for the world class programme in 1996–97.

Television Licence

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will announce the television licence fees that will come into force next year; and if she will make a statement. [18435]

Dr. Howells: On 21 February 2000, the Government announced their conclusions on the recommendations of the independent review panel on the future funding of the BBC. In addition to a range of measures designed to improve BBC efficiency and accountability, the Government introduced a new funding formula providing for changes in the licence fee of RPI plus 1.5 per cent. for each year from 2000–01 to 2006–07. This formula will enable the BBC to provide a strong and distinctive schedule of high quality programmes and remain at the forefront of broadcasting technology.

Application of the RPI figure of 1.7 per cent. for the year to September 2001, plus 1.5 per cent., to the current unrounded licence fees produces new rounded totals of £112.00 for a colour licence and £37.50 for a black and white licence. The necessary regulations to bring these fees into force will be laid before the House in due course.

Media Ownership

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will publish her proposals to reform the existing rules on media ownership. [18436]

Tessa Jowell: The consultation paper entitled "Consultation on Media Ownership Rules" will be published on Monday 26 November to help us determine the best way to regulate media ownership. There will be two months formal consultation ending on 25 January 2002. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament and on Monday and will be available on the Department's website at www.culture.gov.uk. Having considered the responses, we will publish our proposals in the draft Communications Bill next year. There will then be a further, three-month period of consultation.

Medically Therapeutic Activities

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the joint initiatives and funds that are applied to the provision of leisure and sporting activities that are classed as medically therapeutic; and if she will make a statement. [17802]

Mr. Caborn: The Government fully accept that physical activity and sport has a range of benefits including better health and our plan for sport spells out our policies and strategy for increasing participation among all sectors of the community, particularly the young.

The young and active report, published in 1998, brought together the views of experts and evidence on health and physical activity and put forward a policy framework on the promotion of physical activity for young people. The report outlined the following beneficial health outcomes of physical activity, including;

Reduced symptoms of depression and anxiety

Enhanced self-esteem

Controls blood pressure

Controls weight.

The plan for sport sets out the steps which the Government are taking to enhance opportunities and increase participation at school, in the community and at the highest levels of performance. Overall, it offers a comprehensive package of improvements to the sporting experience in this country. This is being achieved through co-operation between all Government Departments and agencies involved with promoting physical activity and health. The Department for Culture, Media and Sport is working closely with the Department of Health and other Departments to develop a cross-government approach.

Since lottery funding began, Sport England has allocated £1.25 billion to over 3,350 sports projects.

In addition, major funding has been allocated to improving sports facilities and sporting provision throughout England. This includes:

£581 million of new opportunities fund (NOF) money to build and refurbish PE and sports facilities in schools in every local education authority in England. These facilities will be available to the wider community.

The spaces for sport and the arts project—a joint initiative between DCMS, DfES, Sport England, Arts Council of England and the new opportunities fund. £130 million has been allocated to 65 local education authorities to develop new sports and arts facilities on primary school sites which will also be available for community use, with the emphasis on inclusion of currently under-represented groups. Around 300 projects across England will be funded under the scheme.

A further £50 million NOF money will be made available to develop and refurbish outdoor activity and adventure facilities across England as part of an integrated scheme to develop young people through outdoor activities.

Sports Action Zone (West Cumbria)

Dr. Jack Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress has been made by the sports action zone in West Cumbria; what targets have been reached; what new investment has taken place; what the projects involved are; and if he will make a statement. [16969]

Mr. Caborn: A needs assessment and action plan for the zone was approved by Sport England's lottery panel in October 2001. This provides the framework for action over the next five years and contains 28 tasks/projects to be delivered in year 1 which will improve health, education and employment prospects for communities in the districts of Allerdale, Barrow and Copeland.

In addition sport action zone (SAZ) magnet funding of £99,313 has been awarded by Sport England to employ three "active living" posts in Barrow. These posts aim to promote and increase the amount of physical activity accessed by socially excluded groups and ensure that the community has a direct influence over the co-ordination and future planning of sport and activity in Barrow. They will work in partnership with Health Promotion in Barrow, Age Concern and the Barrow Sport Development team. The project will target groups such as young men, young women and middle aged to older adults, aiming to promote better health, preventive measures for chronic health conditions and reduce teenage pregnancies. Further partnership funding of £282,629 has been obtained to develop bids for the magnet fund. A further £282, 629 has been secured from funding organisations including: NW single regeneration budget; Youth Justice Board; Home Office; South Whitehaven single regeneration budget; neighbourhood renewal fund in Barrow; West Cumbria Council for Voluntary Service; sure start; youth works; Cumbria county council; health action zone; West Cumbria local health group; which has enabled an additional £136,813 to be accessed from the magnet fund.

A sport for health manager has also been appointed for West Cumbria to promote the benefits of sport and physical activity on health to organisations such as local health groups and Age Concern. Projects that are being developed in partnership with health related organisations include promotion of the Walking for Health initiative to tourist boards, developing cardiac rehabilitation phase 4 centres and enhancing a GP referral scheme in Copeland.

Other initiatives include the first rural youth works programme for 8 to 25-year-olds aimed at reducing crime in one of Copeland's worst affected areas, the development of a sport and physical activity directory for the zone, and the development of a programme of "speedway" taster sessions to encourage young people to have access to safe places to ride. A successful Home Office funded programme of summer activities for young people in Barrow took place this year involving partnership between Age Concern, the Barrow Youth Inclusion project and Barrow Amateur Swimming Club. A survey is currently taking place in Barrow to ascertain current sport/physical activity participation levels.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits Agency

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on the services of each recruitment specialist engaged by the Benefits Agency in the last financial year. [15612]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: In the financial year 2000–01, the Benefits Agency spent a total of £34,962 on the services of one firm of recruitment specialists.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many attacks on Benefits Agency staff have resulted in staff absence of (a) up to a week, (b) up to a month, (c) up to six months and (d) six months or more in each of the last five years. [14228]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 12 November]: The information requested is held on individual staff records but is not collated centrally.

Appeals Service

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of cases dealt with by the appeals service had not been resolved after six months or more in each year since 1996–97. [9808]

Maria Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested.

The appeals service is committed to a twin strategy of reducing waiting times and clearing the backlog of older cases that accrue. It has made a determined effort to tackle older cases based on its policy of "first in, first out". Wherever possible, cases are cleared at first hearing (current waiting times from receipt of the appeal in the appeal service to first hearing are 13.6 weeks).

Non-State Pensions

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 19 July 2001, Official Report, column 414W, to the right hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field), how much was contributed to non-state pensions in each year between 1992 and 1998 adjusted in each case to 1997 price terms. [7916]

Mr. McCartney: The figures for all years from 1992 are set out in the table. The figures show that there has been sustained growth in contributions to non-state pensions. The figures suggest that the stable economy has created the right conditions to save, and that our policies to encourage higher levels of private saving are having a positive effect.

Capital Rules

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the level of the capital rules if they had been uprated in line with (a) prices and (b) earnings, since May 1997. [9812]

Mr. McCartney: The estimated levels of the capital rules if they had been uprated in line with (a) prices and (b) earnings since 1997 are shown in the table. The lower capital limit for the minimum income guarantee was doubled from £3,000 to £6,000 in April 2001. The upper limit of £8,000 was increased to £12,000 at the same time.

Benefits Agency (Medical Services)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 19 July 2001, Official Report, column 418W, on the Benefits Agency Medical Services, what contract targets have been laid down; and what his assessment is of the performance of SchlumbergerSema measured against these targets. [10468]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The contract with SchlumbergerSema contains numerous targets relating to the volume, timeliness, and quality of medical reports; to customer service standards; and to training of doctors. The Government set four targets, relating to quality, training, and customer service, in their response [Cm 4780] to the Social Security Select Committee's report on medical services.

SchlumbergerSema has restructured the management of medical services and performance against key targets is improving. Performance against all targets is kept under continual review.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures he is implementing to provide Benefits Agency staff with training in issues relating to housing benefit; and how he intends to improve the recovery of overpayments of housing benefit. [11259]

Malcolm Wicks: All new operational staff working on income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance receive housing benefit awareness training.

In June 2000, in order to promote improved benefit administration in local authorities, the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate produced a good practice guide, a copy of which was issued to each local authority. This is based on tried and tested practice in better-performing authorities. The guide includes a section on overpayment recovery, covering the prevention and identification of overpayments as well as options for recovery.

In June 2001 we introduced streamlined procedures for local authorities to recover housing benefit overpayments from prescribed social security benefits administered by the Benefits Agency. These procedures apply in cases where housing benefit is no longer in payment. Local authorities have been given guidance about the types of cases they should refer and new simplified referral forms have been introduced.

The new procedures ensure that both the Benefits Agency and local authorities are operating standard referral and recovery procedures. They also provide tighter control of the recovery process and are being actively monitored to ensure their effectiveness.

SEMA

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library the revised contract with SEMA. [11905]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Such sections of the contract, which are not commercially sensitive, are available in the Library.

Later revisions contain commercially sensitive information and are not published.

Consultation Documents

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many consultation documents were issued by his Department from (a) 15 October to 14 January, (b) 15 January to 14 April, (c) 15 April to 14 July and (d) 15 July to 14 October in each year from 1996. [12878]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The available information is in the table.

1. The table includes consultation documents issued by the former Department of Social Security and the former Department for Education and Employment
2. Further information on these consultation documents can be found at: http://www.dwp.gov.uk/publications/index.htm

Information on consultation documents issued by the former Department of Social Security from 1996 to August 2000, and by the former Department for Education and Employment from 1996 to July 1997, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Welfare Reform

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the reports the Government have published since 1997 evaluating the effectiveness of the welfare reform programme. [13221]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information has been placed in the Library.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost of abolishing the overlapping benefits rule for those over pension age in the case of invalid care allowance. [13443]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Regent's Park and Kensington, North (Ms Buck) on 14 March 2001, Official Report, column 607W.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost, net of savings on means-tested benefits, of increasing the rate of invalid care allowance to the level of the basic state pension. [13442]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 13 July 2001, Official Report, column 691W.

Expenditure (Initiatives)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list for (a) sure start and (b) employment zones (i) the amount budgeted and (ii) the total expended in each financial year for the planned lifetime of each initiative. [14038]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information on budgets and expenditure on sure start and employment zones was published in the Department for Education and Employment departmental report 2001–02 to 2003–04. A copy of this is in the Library. Sure start is now the responsibility of the Department for Education and Skills.

New Deal

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on (a) the number of participants in the new deal for young people from the Wycombe constituency in the last 12 months, (b) the destinations of people leaving the scheme and (c) the cost involved. [14867]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information as is available is in the tables. Estimates of the cost of the programme are not available at constituency level.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have entered the new deal gateway (a) once, (b) twice and (c) three times or more in east Devon in respect of the (i) new deal for young people, (ii) new deal for 25-plus, (iii) new deal for 50-plus and (iv) new deal for lone parents. [17265]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: For new deal for young People, there have been 368 starts on the programme in the East Devon constituency to the end of August 2001. Of these, 20 young people have entered twice and three young people have entered three or more times.

For new deal for 25-plus, there have been 85 starts on the programme in the East Devon constituency to the end of August 2001. Of these, four people have entered twice and one person has entered three or more times.

The new deal for lone parents and new deal for 50-plus do not have gateways.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people on the new deal for young people in east Devon joined (a) the subsidised employment option, (b) the environmental task force option, (c) the voluntary sector option and (d) the full-time education or training option in each year since its inception. [17264]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is in the table.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent assessment he has made of the case to extend winter fuel allowance to those under pensionable age in receipt of (a) the medium or higher rate care component and (b) the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance. [15866]

Mr. McCartney: Disability benefits are already available to people with disabilities in recognition of their extra costs. The care and mobility components in disability living allowance are used as broad indicators of all the extra costs a disabled person has. These could include heating, laundry or special diets. There are no plans to extend the winter fuel payment scheme to people under 60 years of age.

Hearing Aids

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what estimate his Department has made of the number of (a) deaf and (b) hard of hearing people who have received funding for digital hearing aids under the access to work scheme; and what is the average cost of each digital hearing aid that has been purchased; [15682]

(2) what cost-benefit evaluation his Department has made of the job retention benefits that would arise from (a) shorter waiting times for NHS hearing tests and the fitting of hearing aids, (b) higher quality hearing aids and (c) a reduction in the number of people who would benefit from wearing a hearing aid who do not have one. [15683]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The access to work programme provides practical advice and support to overcome work-related obstacles resulting from disability. Through access to work a grant can be provided towards any additional employment costs resulting from disability.

Access to work provides funding towards the purchase of digital hearing aids where there is a work-related need for them. The number of applications or expenditure in relation to any specific aid or piece of equipment is not monitored. It is therefore not possible to provide estimates of the numbers helped by, or the average cost to access to work of digital hearing aids.

The Department has not conducted a cost-benefit evaluation of job retention benefits in relation to the provision of hearing aids.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Numbers (South Tyneside)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were in south Tyneside on 1 May (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001; and what the projected figures are for 1 May (i) 2002, and (i) 2003. [13212]

Mr. Denham: The information requested has been provided by the chief constable of Northumbria and is set out in the table.

South Tyneside Area Command

Year	Actual officers in post
1 May 1999	246
1 May 2000	244
1 May 2001	257

The force is unable to provide projected figures for south Tyneside for 2002 and 03.

On 31 August this year, Northumbria police as a whole had 3,908 officers (full-time equivalent), 51 more than in March. The force has a budgeted work force target of 4,000 officers for 31 March 2002. Northumbria police also had 1,416 civilian staff in March 2001, 51 more than in March 1997.

Salha Idris

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the links between Mr. Salha Idris and security firms providing equipment to Government sites. [13149]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 8 November 2001]: I refer to the reply given in the other place by the Chairman of Committees, Lord Boston of Faversham, on 9 October 2000, Official Report, House of Lords, column WA1, and the Lord Chancellor's reply on 3 May 2001, Official Report, House of Lords, column WA296. The position remains unchanged.

It is vital that a high standard of security is maintained at Government premises. Protective security arrangements are of course the responsibility of the Secretary of State in each respective Government Department. They will, with the support of the police and security service, ensure that this is done.

I also refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Home Secretary on 1 November 2001, Official Report, column 847W.

Translation Services

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what translation services he ensures are available to (a) prisons and (b) probation services in (i) England and (ii) Staffordshire; and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the translation facilities available to the police. [13495]

Beverley Hughes: The Prison Service race relations policy highlights the importance of prisons being aware of the needs of non-English speaking prisoners. To assist in meeting those needs, all prisons were issued with copies of the prisoner information books (Male Prisoners and Young Offenders, Women Prisoners and Female Young Offenders, Visiting and Keeping in Touch and Life Sentenced Prisoners "Lifers"). The books were issued in partnership with the Prison Reform Trust and are available in 21 languages (including English). Updated versions are currently being considered.

The appropriate translation services required for necessary communication with non-English-speaking prisoners is the responsibility of individual establishments. Each establishment has differing demands and needs for such services and establishments are advised to draw up and maintain details of local arrangements. The services are paid for locally.

Following negotiations with the Immigration Service, all prison establishments have access to the register of interpreters. Several of these interpreters also provide translation services. The Immigration Service also has a contract with K International which the Prison Service may approach for written translations. There is a National Register of Public Service Interpreters, which maintains a consistent and adequate standard.

Public documents produced by the National Probation Service (NPS) are translated into Welsh, and other languages as considered necessary. Some core materials (such as leaflets for offenders) are translated into the six languages where demand is greatest (Arabic, Chinese, Hindi, Punjabi, Spanish and Welsh). Design, print and translation services for the NPS headquarters are provided via the Home Office Communication Directorate (under contract with K International). Translation services for the operational needs of the Staffordshire area of the NPS come from established local suppliers and are paid for locally.

Police

There has not been any assessment made of the adequacy of the translation facilities available to the police. The requirement of providing translation services is a matter for individual forces in line with guidance issued under Code of Practice C of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984.

Drugs

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported cases of the use of illegal drugs there were in prisons in England and Wales in 2000. [13929]

Beverley Hughes: Between 1 January 2000 and 31 December 2000, 89,784 mandatory drug tests were conducted on prisoners, of which 17,415 tested positive for drugs. The figures include some prisoners who will have been tested more than once.

Recidivism (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on recidivism rates for prisoners released from (a) HMP Grendon and (b) HMP Springhill in the Buckingham constituency in the last year for which figures are available; and how they compare with similar prisons. [14214]

Beverley Hughes: Grendon and Springhill prisons are co-located and Home Office reconviction rates for the two establishments are not recorded separately.

The latest two-year reconviction rates for prisoners discharged from custody cover the calendar year 1997. The two-year reconviction rate for prisoners discharged from Grendon and Springhill prisons was 29 per cent. This compares with a predicted reconviction rate, based on factors which take account of the previous criminal history, age distribution, and offence of the prisoners discharged, of 32 per cent. For all prisoners, the two-year reconviction rate was 58 per cent.

The findings from a seven-year reconviction study of prisoners who went to Grendon prison for therapy in the years 1984 to 1989 revealed that prisoners treated there had lower reconviction rates than had been expected had they not gone to Grendon. Further details of this research are contained in Home Office Research Findings Number 115, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Kainos

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Christian Kainos wings in HM Prisons. [14805]

Beverley Hughes: In May 1999, the trustees of the Christian organisation, Kainos, sought the Prison Service's agreement to its continuing the operation of Kainos communities in the wings of four prisons. This followed financial and other difficulties with a predecessor organisation, Kairos-Apac. The Prison Service management board agreed in September 1999 that these communities should be permitted to continue, without any commitment of public funds and for a limited period, while they were evaluated for their impact, and in particular their claim to contribute to reducing reoffending. The evaluation was to be done by independent researchers and paid for by Kainos. The board would reach a decision on the future of the programme in the light of the evaluation.

The independent evaluation was completed in September 2001. The Kainos trustees provided the board with a copy of the evaluation report and asked the board to take an early decision on the future of the programme because Kainos' own funding for the programme ceased at the end of 2001.

Among other matters, the evaluation examined the one year reconviction rates of prisoners who had been through the Kainos programme and a comparison group of nearly 14,000 prisoners with similar sentence lengths and from similar prisons. The evaluation report found that there was no basis for concluding that Kainos community prisoners have reconviction rates that are significantly lower than would be expected for similar released prisoners as a whole. This contrasts with other Prison Service programmes designed to reduce reoffending which typically show reductions of 10 per cent. in future reoffending against expected rates.

In the light of this finding, the board decided that the Kainos community should no longer continue to operate in prisons when its present programmes came to an end. The board also had concerns about exposing prisoners to intensive religiously based interventions in prison by any faith group. The board has made it clear that it respects the commitment of the Kainos trustees, and of the staff and volunteers who gave their time to the programmes, but it is determined that effort and scarce resources in prisons are devoted only to offender treatment programmes which can demonstrate their effectiveness, and which contribute to the Government's crime reduction agenda.

The evaluation report remains the property of the Kainos trustees. Kainos has given permission for the executive summary to be placed on the Home Office website and this is being done. I am also placing a copy in the Library.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research is being undertaken into the compatibility of the proposed system of smart cards for asylum seekers with other smart card systems being developed in (a) the UK and (b) the EU. [16051]

Angela Eagle: The application registration cards will be compatible with standard readers and the micro-chip that will be used will be a standard serial chip.

Heroin

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people have been jailed for possession of heroin in each of the last five years; [16200]

(2) how many people have been jailed for supplying heroin in each of the last five years, where the sentence has been less than five years. [16201]

Beverley Hughes: Information readily available on the number of persons sentenced by the courts in England and Wales to immediate custody for offences of (a) possessing and (b) supplying heroin for the period 1995–99 are given in table 1. This is the latest five-year period for which data are currently available. The numbers are broken down by sentence length.

Cyclists

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give guidance to police forces that they should give greater priority to penalising cyclists riding on pavements. [16273]

Mr. Denham: The enforcement of cycling offences is an operational matter for individual chief officers of police. They are best placed to assess the nature and cause of specific local problems and to determine how most effectively to address them.

Cycling on the pavement was made a fixed-penalty offence from 1 August 1999. This gives the police a direct and simple way of dealing with cyclists who use the pavement without proper consideration for others. During the five months to 31 December 1999, the police in England and Wales issued 570 fixed-penalty notices for the offence, 18 in Merseyside.

The cycling infrastructure and environment are currently under improvement as a result of the Government's national cycling strategy. We expect this to reduce the perceived need on the part of some to cycle on the pavement through a fear of cycling on the road.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce proposals to increase the level of fines imposed on law-breaking cyclists. [16243]

Mr. Denham: I have no such plans. The current maximum penalty for dangerous cycling is a fine not exceeding £2,500. The maximum penalty for careless and inconsiderate cycling, and for cycling when unfit through drink or drugs, is a fine not exceeding £1,000. Unauthorised or irregular cycle racing or trials of speed on public ways is also an offence and carries a maximum penalty of £200. We believe that these penalties are sufficient and reflect the seriousness of the offences.

Aylesbury Young Offenders Institution

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects work on C wing, Aylesbury young offenders institution to be completed. [16315]

Beverley Hughes: This work was unfortunately interrupted following the bankruptcy of the first contractor. Work restarted in August this year and is expected to be completed in May 2002.

CCTV

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received with regard to applications for CCTV in locations where property crime and drug offences are closely connected with street prostitution. [13776]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The information is not available in the format requested. However, under round 1 of the crime reduction programme closed circuit television (CCTV) initiative the Home Office has funded 120 CCTV schemes to combat property crime and/or drug offences. Crime reduction figures for these schemes, provided by crime and disorder reduction partnerships, estimate a reduction of 8,819 recorded burglaries and 1,914 recorded drugs offences over three years following their installation. It is not possible to say how many of these crimes might be linked with prostitution.

The communities against drugs and reducing prostitution initiatives also work to combat property crime, drugs and prostitution. Under these initiatives funding can be used to install CCTV systems as well as other crime reduction measures.

Special Constabulary

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to reappraise the role of the Special Constabulary; and how many special constables there are in Cleveland; [16442]

(2) what plans he has to enable members of the Special Constabulary to receive increased remuneration. [16443]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The number of serving special constables in Cleveland police as at 31 March 2001 was 93.

The Government are committed to increasing the special constabulary. While voluntary service to the community is a key element of the special constabulary, we are currently reviewing, as part of the police reform process, the allowances paid to special constables.

We are also considering a number of other options for achieving radical improvements in the conditions of service and the management of special constables, to ensure that specials are deployed effectively and provide an increased visible presence in our communities.

Warden Force

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to increase the powers conferred upon the warden force; and how these plans have changed since 11 September; [16438]

(2) if he will make a statement on the relationship between wardens and the regular constabulary. [16440]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 20 November 2001]: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary made it clear in his speech to the Superintendents' Association on 11 September that we are considering how to make better use of the extended police family (including neighbourhood and street wardens) in support of the police; and whether new powers would be needed.

We are developing proposals in the context of the police reform programme and details will be set out in the forthcoming White Paper.

Suspicious Activity Reports

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 19 October 2001, Official Report, column 1398W, on suspicious activity reports, how many of the reports from the gambling industry were from (a) spread betting organisations and (b) other gambling businesses; and if he will make a statement. [16711]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The data held by the National Criminal Intelligence Service do not differentiate between spread betting organisations and other bookmakers. In 2000, there were 16 suspicious activity reports from the bookmaking industry and 301 such reports from the gaming industry.

Police Complaints

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the pilot schemes for the new complaints system are expected to report their progress; and whether the four schemes are identical. [17125]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The Police Complaints Authority is co-ordinating four research projects that will provide useful information on aspects of the new police complaints system. They will look at independent investigations, the right of appeal against a refusal by the police to record a complaint, the duty of the chief officer to provide the complainant with the outcome of an investigation and the presentation of cases to misconduct hearings by the Independent Police Complaints Commission. These are not formal pilots as they must operate within the current legislation and therefore are not able completely to replicate the provision proposed for the new system. The evaluation reports of each will be produced at different times but initial feedback is expected next spring.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what role civilian investigators will have in the proposed independent police complaints system. [16879]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 November 2001]: As part of the new police complaints system, the Independent Police Complaints Commission will have a body of independent investigators at their disposal. These investigators will be made up of a mix of civilian investigators and seconded police officers. The commission will use these investigators in examining the most serious instances of alleged police misconduct.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in the creation of a independent police complaints system. [16878]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The Government will bring forward provisions to establish a new police complaints system to replace the current system as part of the Police Bill which is due for introduction later in this parliamentary Session. The new system will create a new body, the Independent Police Complaints Commission, which will replace the Police Complaints Authority.

Suspects (Mental Illness)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is given for police officers to deal with suspects who suffer from mental illness. [16699]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The basic training that all new recruits receive includes an element that raises awareness of mental illness and highlights the importance of communicating effectively and sensitively with people suffering from a mental disorder. Individual forces also provide further training for their officers on these issues. Details are not held centrally of all such local provision.

More needs to be done to ensure an appropriate and properly informed police response to mentally ill individuals across the whole range of circumstances in which they deal with them. There are currently several strands of work focused on improving police practice in relation to suspects who suffer from mental illness. The Home Office, the Department of Health and the Association of Chief Police Officers are considering the development of national protocols covering the interaction between the police and health services in dealing with the mentally ill. The current review of the police codes of practice under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 is seeking to strengthen further protections for mentally ill detainees, particularly in terms of assessing their vulnerabilities and fitness for interview. In addition, the review of the Mental Health Act which is under way is looking to increase the emphasis on using hospitals rather than police stations as places of safety for assessing mental condition.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Cycle Loans

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the cost in 2001–02 is of her Department's (a) interest-free loans for cycles and cycling equipment and (b) cycle mileage rates. [14925]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has, so far this financial year, paid a total of £1,132.50 to six members of staff in respect of cycle loans. The pedal cycle allowance in the Lord Chancellor's Department (including the Court Service and the Public Guardianship Office) is currently 12p per mile.

Touch Screen Kiosk Service

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the cost in 2001–02 is of the touch screen kiosk service to be implemented in Shropshire. [14981]

Mr. Wills: The kiosk in Telford, Shropshire—which provides information about the Court Service—is a partnership venture between the courts, the local council, the library and the university of Wolverhampton. The equipment is provided by the council's IT supplier and the content supplied by the Court Service's in-house web publishing team. There is therefore no additional cost to the Court Service.

E-mails

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the cost in 2001–02 is of the facility which enables e-mail applications to be made to Preston county court. [14980]

Mr. Wills: The cost of the Preston e-mail application service in 2001–02 is nominal as the initial outlay for equipment and installation was met in 2000–01. In 2000–01 the costs were £72,495, of which £65,243 were the costs of the computers and the e-mail connection; the balance related to various project related costs.

The on-going running costs of this project include line charges for the e-mail modem, and staff and project management costs which are included in the court's overall running costs. The e-mail service allows the court to process applications by solicitors more efficiently than the paper based service, and therefore is delivering some efficiency savings, although these have yet to be quantified.

Video Conferencing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the cost is in 2001–02 of the video conferencing project linking the Royal Courts of Justice with (a) Leeds Combined Court Centre and (b) Cardiff county court. [15029]

Mr. Wills: The cost of the project in 2001–02 of the video conferencing project linking the Royal Courts of Justice with Leeds Combined Court Centre and Cardiff county court is nominal, as the initial outlay for equipment and installation was met in 2000. The cost of line rental for ISDN lines for the three sites is £3,700 annually. The call costs are met by the party who requested the conference.

Online Claims Issues

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the cost in 2001–02 of the pilot scheme is for the online issue of claims. [14978]

Mr. Wills: The pilot project Money Claims Online is part of the Court Service's wider Courts and Tribunals Modernisation Programme. The one-off project costs are:

£1,841,000 for design and development;

£206,170 for project costs

making a total of £2,047,170.

A yearly service charge of £885,000, will also apply.

The project has been delivered by the Court Service's existing PFI supplier, EDS Ltd., and links into existing systems for case management and document production at the Court Service's Bulk Centre in Northampton. Operational staffing costs to support the pilot project are approximately £48,000.

Electronic issue of claims (by computer media exchange) has functioned at the Bulk Centre for some years, with considerable efficiency gains for the Court Service. This pilot project aims to widen the scope for inclusion to all claims issuers. It will also contribute to the Government's plan for all services to be available electronically by 2005.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on progress in meeting the Public Service Agreement target for 2002 for the proportion of service delivery transactions provided to the public electronically. [14987]

Mr. Wills: The Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR) in 1998 required the Lord Chancellor to set a target by 31 March 1999 for an increase in the proportion of service delivery transactions provided to the public electronically. We published our initial e-business strategy in November 2000 and set an annual target that was the equivalent to the government-wide target for electronic service delivery at that time. The CSR target was that 25 per cent. of service delivery transactions should be capable of being delivered electronically by 2002.

After the conclusion of Spending Review 2000, the original electronic delivery target was updated and published in July 2000 as part of the LCD Service Delivery Agreement (SDA), containing specific Electronic Government SDA targets.

The departmental e-business strategy was updated this summer. We have a full programme of e-business projects for achieving the government's target that by 2005 all appropriate services should be available electronically. Our programme envisages that around 50 per cent. of services will be available electronically by 2002 and currently we are on course to achieve that.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on progress in achieving the Land Registry's Public Service Agreement target of a 6 per cent. return on capital employed. [14891]

Mr. Wills: The Land Registry is a separate Government Department that became an executive agency in 1990. On 1 April 1993, it achieved trading fund status.

The Land Registry's key financial performance target since becoming a trading fund has been to achieve a ministerially agreed percentage return on average capital employed in each financial year. Since 1999–2000, that target has been set at 6 per cent. and in 1999–2000 the Department achieved 12 per cent.

The Land Registry expects to meet the annual 6 per cent. target for 2001–02.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the Public Service Agreement target was in 2000–01 for the number of lay magistrates (a) appointed and (b) recommended for appointment against estimated need; and if it was met. [14983]

Mr. Wills: There is no public service agreement target on judicial appointments. However, there is a service delivery objective of ensuring that 95 per cent. of the target number of lay magistrates are in post by 2003. The national strategy for the recruitment of lay magistrates should help to achieve that objective.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress towards meeting the Public Service Agreement target for the improvement of the rights of dependants by 31 March 2002. [15004]

Ms Rosie Winterton: An interdepartmental working group identified four possible measures to go into a basket of indicators on which targets were to be set by 31 March 2001. The measures proposed for the basket were:

the number of prisons which, in accordance with Prison Service standard audit requirements, have sufficient staff to ensure that all prisoners receive information about legal aid on reception and know who can assist them with legal aid applications.;

ensure that by 31 March 2002 a percentage of people in police stations requesting the service of a duty solicitor receive the service within a specified time;

The number of substantial complaints under the Police Act 1996 per [1,000] people detained (BVPI 140); and

The incidence and nature of successful challenges under Articles 5 and 6 of the Human Rights Act 1998 in respect of criminal cases.

Two targets were set:

98 per cent. of prisons to have sufficient staff to ensure that all prisoners receive information about legal services on reception and know who can assist with their applications for public funding; and 90 per cent. of people in police stations requesting the services of a duty solicitor receive the service within 45 minutes.

It was not possible to set meaningful targets for the other two measures. There was insufficient data available to set a target on the Human Rights Act; and there have been difficulties in setting an overall national target for the police complaints measure due to inconsistent targets set at local level.

The Prison Service target has already been met, achieving 98 per cent. The data for the Duty Solicitor target from the Legal Services Commission will not become available until soon after 31 March 2002, so there will be a short delay in reporting on that target.

The Working Group is currently seeking to identify other measures to go into the basket of indicators.

Asset Sales

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will provide a detailed breakdown of the accruals to public funds in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01 from the sale of fixed assets. [14918]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Lord Chancellor's Department 1999–2000 resource accounts record a loss on disposal of fixed assets of £473,000. The draft 2000–01 resource accounts show a profit on disposal of £398,000. The 2000–01 accounts are still subject to audit. Details of the assets held by the Department, its agencies and associate public bodies, including significant recent disposals and future disposals strategy, can be found in the National Asset Register published by HM Treasury.

Community Legal Service

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people have accessed the Community Legal Service website since its creation; and on what issues people most frequently seek advice. [16445]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There have been over 700,000 "page impressions"—the closest proxy for number of users—of the Community Legal Service website, Just Ask!, since its launch in April 2000. Usage of the site has doubled from a weekly average "page impression" rate of 6,000 at inception to over 12,000 at present.

Issues that people have most frequently sought advice on are employment, family matters, housing, consumer affairs, and immigration.

Freedom of Information

Tony Wright: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received from the Information Commissioner on a recommended timetable for implementing the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [16387]

Mr. Wills: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor invited the Information Commissioner to express her views on a timetable for the implementation of the Act, based on the practical implications for her office. She said that it would be sensible to implement the publication scheme and right of access provisions together on a phased timetable, largely following the structure of Schedule 1 to the Act. She also made it clear that it was for Government to decide on a timetable for implementation.

The Government reached the view that it was right to implement the publication scheme provisions of the Act first as set out in the Schedule I have placed in the Library of the House.

The Information Commissioner has welcomed the announcement of a firm timetable for the implementation of the Act.

Libra Project

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 7521W, on the Libra project, how many MCCs with office automation have retained separate stand-alone terminals to provide access to the legacy systems. [16716]

Mr. Wills: All MCCs in receipt of the Libra Office Automation service have retained one or more stand-alone terminals.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 564W, on the Libra project, if stand-alone terminals will be retained for access for specific local systems where that access was not available on the legacy network, and is not currently available on Libra service. [16731]

Mr. Wills: In all of the Magistrates' Court Committees in receipt of the Libra Office Automation service, access to the main legacy system is achieved, for almost all staff, via the Libra terminal on their desks. In some cases separate stand-alone terminals have been retained to provide access for specific local systems where that access was not available on the legacy network, and is not currently available on the Libra service. This mixture of access is replicated in all MCCs. It is envisaged that the need for access to systems via stand-alone terminals will progressively diminish during the planned transition to the full new Libra service.

Selim Ferhan Onal

Angus Robertson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when she expects her adjudicators to decide on the appeal for entry clearance by Selim Ferhan Onal. [17717]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Immigration Appellate Authority has no record of receiving an appeal from the Home Office for Selim Ferhan Onal.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Climate Change Levy

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in what circumstances a butcher's shop could be liable for payments under the climate change levy. [12746]

Mr. Wilson: The climate change levy aims to increase energy efficiency across all sectors of business, including small food retailers, and will help the UK to meet its commitments to reduce greenhouse emissions, including our Kyoto target. Those small businesses, including butchers' shops, which have very low energy consumption below the minimum thresholds as defined in the Finance Act 2000 are not liable to pay the climate change levy.

Businesses with energy use higher than the thresholds will be liable to pay the levy. However any such businesses can minimise their levy bills by buying levy-exempt, green electricity, for example from new renewable sources; by taking advantage of energy efficiency advice and support from the new Carbon Trust, which aims to take account of the needs of small businesses; or by investing, using the new scheme of enhanced capital allowances for energy efficiency improvements (which covers items including refrigeration equipment).

Small Businesses (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much funding has been made available to start small businesses in Chorley in each of the last five years. [12990]

Nigel Griffiths: £100,000 has been made available to start small businesses in Chorley in the last five years, £20,000 per year.

Languages for Exports Awards

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many entrants there were in the 2001 competition for Languages for Exports Awards, broken down by (a) nation and (b) region. [13168]

Nigel Griffiths: Applications received for this year's competition are as follows:

Regions	Applications received
English:
East	12
East Midlands	14
London and South East	41
North East	17
North West	11
Yorkshire and Humber	10
West Midlands	15
South West	8
Scotland	11
Wales	10
Northern Ireland	9
Total	158

Scottish Trade Delegations

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for how many trade delegations from Scotland to (a) the Czech Republic, (b) Poland, (c) Hungary, (d) Slovenia, (e) Estonia, (f) Lithuania, (g) Latvia and (h) Slovakia her Department provided support in (i) 2000 and (ii) 2001 to date. [13169]

Nigel Griffiths: I am replying on the basis of information provided by Scottish Development International, a joint venture between the Scottish Executive and Scottish Enterprise.

Trade Partners UK services in Scotland are delivered by the Trade Division of Scottish Development International. It, along with other members of the export support network in Scotland, organises overseas trade missions.

In June 2000 there was one trade mission to Hungary and Slovenia led jointly by Export Partnership Forth Valley and Lanarkshire Export Partnership. In 2001 to date there have been two visits to Poland, one in April led by Export Partnership Forth Valley and a sector based mission in June concentrating on food and drink led jointly by Scottish Development International and the Seafood Industry Authority. A visit to Estonia took place in September supported by Renfrewshire and Inverclyde Exports followed by a further mission to Slovenia in October led by Lanarkshire Export Partnership.

In addition, a delegation of Scottish business people interested in developing links with the Czech Republic accompanied the Scottish Minister for Finance during his visit there this September when he formally launched the second twinning covenant for Preparation for Structural Funds.

Companies based in Scotland are also able to take part in any other UK supported trade missions.

Fur Imports

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what quantities of material classified as other fur were imported into the UK from (a) China, (b) the Philippines, (c) Korea and (d) Hong Kong in the last five years. [13799]

Nigel Griffiths: Information on UK imports of "other fur" from China, the Philippines, Korea and Hong Kong in each of the last five years is given in the table:

DTI analysis of data from HM Customs and Excise

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what quantities of domestic (a) dog and (b) cat fur have been imported into the UK over the last five years. [13806]

Nigel Griffiths: The information requested is not available because the system of classification used to record trade does not separately identify cat and dog fur.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will ban the trade in domestic (a) dog and (b) cat fur. [13798]

Nigel Griffiths: Bans on trade in goods such as dog and cat fur are a matter of exclusive European Community competence and the UK cannot act unilaterally.

European Charter for Small Enterprises

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in implementing the principles behind the European Charter for Small Enterprises in the United Kingdom. [13682]

Nigel Griffiths: The UK is firmly committed to a full implementation of the European Charter for Small Enterprises. We believe that since its adoption in June 2000 useful progress has been made in the United Kingdom under all 10 lines for action contained in the charter. Recent examples include proposals for the revision of company law, proposals for the reform of competition rules and insolvency law, continuing action under the UK online for business initiative, and the opening of the 'smallbusinesseurope' office in Brussels. Details of these and many other relevant UK actions can be found in a recent report provided to the European Commission, entitled "The European Charter for Small Enterprises—A Review of relevant actions and measures in force in the United Kingdom". Copies of this report have been placed in the Library of the House. At a wider European level, the UK co-organised with the European Commission a conference on top-class business support services in Cardiff in October.

While we believe that real progress has been made in some areas, we recognise that more needs to be done if we are to meet our own and the EU's goals for creating the best possible environment for small firms. We will continue therefore to take action which will help us and encourage our European partners to achieve these goals.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the principle embodied in the European Charter for Small Enterprises relating to the exemption of small enterprises from certain regulatory obligations. [13683]

Nigel Griffiths: The Government agree with the principle embodied in the European Charter for Small Enterprises that legislative simplification can help reduce the burden of compliance for small business. In the UK the approach has been to adopt "Think Small First" principles—all those considering regulation must first consider alternatives to regulation as well as whether exemptions for small firms are appropriate, the case for exemptions for small firms from regulatory obligations is then made on a case by case basis.

Exemptions for small enterprises from certain regulatory obligations can be a useful way of reducing burdens on business e.g. on audit thresholds, the requirement to consult on redundancies, the need to have works councils and most recently the draft Information and Consultation Directive. There are a range of regulations, such as those relating to food safety, the national minimum wage, environmental protection and health and safety where this is less likely to be appropriate (because of the need to safeguard the rights of employees and protect consumers) and may in fact create a barrier to growth for small firms.

Export Licences (Israel)

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many standard individual export licences have been issued for exports to Israel during (a) May, (b) June, (c) July, (d) August, (e) September and (f) October; and if she will make a statement. [13670]

Nigel Griffiths: The number of Standard Individual Export Licences (SIELs) issued to end users in Israel was as follows.

Month	Number
June	0
July	81
August	17
September	16
October	25

All export licence applications to Israel continue to be considered against the consolidated EU and National Arms Export Licensing Criteria in light of the circumstances prevailing at the time of the application. This means inter alia we will not issue licences where there is a clear risk that the equipment might be used for internal repression, international aggression, adversely affect regional stability or prolong internal conflict.

Ministerial Visit (China and Japan)

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the people met by the Energy Minister on his recent visit to China and Japan; and if she will place in the Library copies of documents made available to the Minister's hosts by her Department during the trip. [14258]

Regional Venture Capital Funds

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what response her Department has made to points raised by the Commission regarding United Kingdom practice in regional venture capital funds in Com 2001/712 EC. [14797]

Nigel Griffiths: Com 2001/712 EC was the document issued by the European Commission granting State Aid clearance to the Regional Venture Capital Fund programme. It was not necessary for the UK Government to respond to the document.

In common with any programme of this kind, the Regional Venture Capital Funds had to be approved by the European Commission under State Aid guidelines. DTI and SBS officials have worked together with EU officials to enable the European Commission to grant this approval.

Atomic Energy Police Force

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many and what makes of vehicles are operated by the Atomic Energy police force; and what is the purchasing policy on UK-built vehicles by the Atomic Energy police. [15161]

Mr. Wilson: The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary (UKAEAC) currently operates 46 vehicles consisting of 22 Ford, seven Landrover, six Vauxhall, five LDV, three Volkswagen, two Mitsubishi and one Peugeot. The UKAEAC's policy is to buy the correct vehicles for its operational needs, with the option for purchasing UK-built vehicles when this is consistent with securing value for money.

Nuclear Industry

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of BNFL's liabilities for (a) radioactive waste and (b) decommissioning is attributed to THORP; and what proportion of the decommissioning costs estimated for THORP will be covered by overseas baseload contracts. [15851]

Mr. Wilson: In accordance with standard accounting practice, information about BNFL's liabilities and provisioning are included in the company's annual report and accounts. The details of BNFL's contracts with overseas THORP baseload reprocessing customers are a commercial matter for BNFL and its customers under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Miners' Pension Schemes

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what sums the Government have obtained annually as guarantors from surplus arising from the (a) mineworkers' pension scheme and (b) British Coal staff superannuation scheme since 1994, at constant prices. [16661]

Mr. Wilson: The cash values of receipts from the two schemes since payments began in 1996–97 are as follows:

£ million

2000–01	53.9	257.0	310.9
2001–02	216.0	196.0	412.0

The Department's calculation of the value of these sums at 2000–01 prices, using the GDP Deflator is as follows.

£ million

Year	BCSSS	MPS	Total
1996–97	43.7	0.0	43.7
1997–98	42.3	121.2	163.5
1998–99	111.7	117.9	229.6
1999–2000	109.0	0.0	109.0
2000–01	53.9	257.0	310.9
2001–02	210.7	191.2	401.9

Miners' Compensation

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average level is of (a) interim and (b) final payments made to date to former miners and their estates under the chronic bronchitis and emphysema compensation scheme. [16694]

Mr. Wilson: Interim payments are made in a wide range of circumstances and vary widely in value. Claimants who are in receipt of the Industrial Injuries Benefit, PD D12, automatically receive an interim payment of £2,000. Further interims are offered where an expedited offer is made to a claimant, who subsequently rejects the offer and elects to undergo the full Medical Assessment Process or MAP. Where there is an outstanding issue prohibiting a full and final offer, an interim payment is made, the percentage determined by IRISC, the Department's claims handlers. Interim payments are also advanced to the estate or widow, subject to certain criteria cited in the Handling Agreement, of between £3,500 and £7,500. Interest is applicable. To date, over 41,300 interim payments have been made, amounting to £159.5 million. This averages at £3,857, although some claimants may be eligible for more than one payment.

Full and final offers including expedited payments vary widely. Expedited offers are made between £2,050 and £14,500. To date, over 12,800 settlements have been made to the value of £68.2 million. This averages at £5,293 per claimant.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research the Government are conducting into underwater tractors used to plant wind farms off the Dutch coast. [16726]

Mr. Wilson: The Department's wind R&D programme has offshore wind as a key priority, and specifically:

> the development and evaluation of improved offshore installation techniques and vessels.

To date no proposals have been put forward to evaluate the concept of installing offshore wind turbines using tractors or other devices that have the capability to drive along the seabed rather than using surface vessels. Consequently there has been no research on the programme in this area. The opportunity for industry to conduct research in this area remains.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research her Department is conducting into the problems of off-shore wind turbines, with particular reference to fatigue caused by waves and wind vibrating the structure in rough weather. [16724]

Mr. Wilson: The Department is currently supporting a project addressing this area. It is monitoring the loads, waves and wind on the UK's first offshore wind turbines at Blyth. It will provide the data and analysis to improve our understanding of the design loads and assumptions that should be used in these more severe offshore conditions, especially the treatment of combined wave and wind loading for both fatigue and extreme loads.

The objectives of the project are:

to establish and then analyse a database of measurements for validation and enhancement of advanced methods for computer modelling and design analysis of offshore wind turbines.

to provide a critical appraisal of present design procedures and certification rules for offshore wind turbines and to recommend changes where appropriate.

to catalogue the key design requirements of offshore wind turbines for sites where the environmental conditions are severe.

The project is due for completion in 2003, but papers on the interim results are expected in advance of this.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research is being conducted by her Department into designing a lattice tower that can change its stiffness and resonant frequency by causing hydraulic pistons to control the rigidity of the diagonal cross bars for off-shore wind turbines. [16734]

Mr. Wilson: The Department's wind R&D programme attaches priority to offshore wind and specifically to the following aspects of offshore wind R&D projects:

the development and evaluation of innovative UK wind turbine components, offering improved performance; the development and evaluation of innovative wind turbine designs offering improved performance.

To date no proposals have been put forward to design a lattice tower that can change its stiffness and resonant frequency by causing hydraulic pistons to control the rigidity of the diagonal cross bars for off-shore wind turbines. Consequently there has been no research on the programme in this area.

Aggregates

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much (a) aggregate and (b) concrete product by weight was imported to Britain in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [16702]

Mr. Wilson: During the 12 months to June 2001, the United Kingdom imported some 380,000 tonnes of aggregate and some 50,000 tonnes of concrete products.

Wave Power

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will (1) list the proposed wave power developments awaiting planning permission in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland, giving their predicted output in kilowatt hours; [16334]

(2) publish a list of the operational wave power locations in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland, giving their output in kilowatt hours. [16335]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The information is as follows.

(a) In Scotland, the LIMPET shoreline device in Islay has a maximum capacity of 500 kW, although it does not generate at this level at present.

There are no operational wave power installations in England, Wales or Northern Ireland.

There are no proposals for wave power developments awaiting planning permission in Scotland, England, Wales or Northern Ireland.

Wave power offers a substantial source of renewable energy for the future and the Government are actively seeking to encourage its development.

Regional Development Agencies

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the annual (a) running cost and (b) budget for each of the regional development agencies. [16447]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The RDA's gross budgets and administrative budgets for 2001–02 are as follows:

£000

	Net budget[1]	Administration budget
One North East	157,755	10,653
North West Development Agency	276,215	14,044
Yorkshire Forward	218,134	9,989
East Midlands Development Agency	86,717	7,488
Advantage West Midlands	159,801	8,793
East of England Development Agency	58,247	5,836
South East Development Agency	97,851	7,143
South West Development Agency	84,663	9,099
London Development Agency	277,142	9,470
Total	1,416,525	82,515

Power Station (Plymouth)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate she has made of when construction of the power station at Langage, Plymouth will commence; [17382]

(2) what steps will be taken by his Department to supervise the construction of the power station at Langage, Plymouth. [17381]

Mr. Wilson: It is a commercial matter for the company when construction takes place. In carrying out that construction the company will have to comply with the planning conditions imposed on the development which are enforced by the relevant planning authorities. In this particular case the planning authorities are South Hams district council and Devon county council.

Nuclear Installations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the remit of the Energy Review Group has been extended to include the consideration of security at nuclear power stations. [16796]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The energy review was not extended in this way because the PIU is not the competent body for reviewing the security of nuclear installations.

The Office for Civil Nuclear Security, the security regulator at civil nuclear sites, sets stringent standards for security at nuclear sites. OCNS works closely with the Health and Safety Executive, the safety regulator, which provides advice on the safety implications of events, including external hazards such as plane crashes, at nuclear installations. Security and safety precautions at nuclear sites are kept under regular review. Both regulators are reviewing all relevant precautions in the light of the recent terrorist attacks in the USA.

The issue of energy infrastructure security in the face of terrorist activity has been raised at a general level in meetings and workshops held by the PIU after 11 September.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations the Energy Review Group have received in relation to security at nuclear power stations following the events of 11 September. [16801]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The deadline for written submissions to the PIU Energy Review was before 11 September and so the majority of material received does not make reference to the tragic events in New York. The issue of energy infrastructure security in the face of terrorist activity has been raised at a general level in subsequent meetings and workshops held by the PIU and in the small number of late replies.

A list of the submissions received by the Energy Review and a summary of the key themes raised can be viewed at the PIU website at www.cabinet-office.gov.uk/innovation. Section B7 of the summary outlines the various points made to the review concerning nuclear power.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the UK's electricity was generated by nuclear power in (a) 1995, (b) 1996, (c) 1997, (d) 1998, (e) 1999 and (f) 2000. [17333]

Mr. Wilson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Hazel Grove (Mr. Stunell) on 13 November 2001, Official Report, column 656W.

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of Scotland's electricity was generated by nuclear power in (a) 1995, (b) 1996, (c) 1997, (d) 1998, (e) 1999 and (f) 2000. [17227]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Available information shows that in 1997 41 per cent. of the electricity generated in Scotland by major power producers was from nuclear stations. This rose to 44 per cent. in 1998, but then declined to 40 per cent. in 1999 and 34 per cent. in 2000. Figures for 1995 and 1996 are not readily available.

Medicine Licensing

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she will take to (a) extend the partial agreement on access to medicines for developing nations reached at Doha and (b) reach agreement on compulsory licensing in third countries. [16799]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The UK whole-heartedly supports the Declaration on the TRIPS agreement and Public Health issued at the successful conclusion of the Fourth Ministerial Meeting of the WTO at Doha, Qatar. This also commits member states, working through the TRIPS Council, to develop a solution before the end of 2002 as to how WTO Members with insufficient or no manufacturing capacities in the pharmaceutical sector might make effective use of compulsory licensing under the TRIPS Agreement.

The UK continues to work in a range of other ways both bilaterally and through for example, the Global Fund for Health to improve access to medicines in poor countries.

Overseas Workers

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received on introducing legislation to ensure that employees are informed of Foreign and Commonwealth Office advice by British companies seeking to send workers abroad; and if she will make a statement. [16961]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 22 November 2001]: I am not aware of any representations to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on this matter.

Foreign and Commonwealth Office travel advice is already readily accessible to employers as well as the general public by telephone (020 7008 0232/0233) and the FCO website "www.fco.gov.uk".

Ilisu Dam

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the recent decision by Balfour Beatty to withdraw from the Ilisu Dam project. [17337]

Ms Hewitt: The decision taken by Balfour Beatty to withdraw from the Ilisu project was entirely a commercial decision and not a matter for Government.

White Goods

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has for promoting improvement of energy standards of white goods in the European Union. [16749]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

The Department will continue to encourage improved energy standards for household appliances, including white goods, the European Union via a mixture of policy instruments including mandatory energy labelling, minimum energy performance standards and voluntary agreements.

We propose to work closely with stakeholders and other member states to reach agreement on the European Commission's proposals for a Framework Directive for Minimum Efficiency Requirements for End-Use Equipment (due to be published in early 2002); to complete the review of Council Directive 92/75/EEC (on the indication by labelling and standard product information of the consumption of energy and other resources by household appliances) and to negotiate new voluntary agreements with European manufacturers and service providers as necessary.

HEALTH

Dentists

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was (a) the average annual income and (b) the average working week of dentists in (i) the NHS and (ii) private practice in the last 12 months. [9259]

Ms Blears: Information on the working hours of general dental service dentists is not routinely collected.

For dentists national health service income, the information regularly available is for payments by the Dental Practice Board for gross fees paid to dentists, but there is no corresponding data on hours worked. For private work, the available information is from the annual Inland Revenue survey of income and expenses. A survey carried out by the Office of Manpower Economics (OME) in March 2000, provides some limited data on this area. The survey reported:

> The average number of hours worked for single handed dentists at 43.1 hours per week.
> Full-time practitioners wholly committed to the GDS reported total gross fee earnings averaging £163,900 in the most recently completed financial year. These figures are affected by transfers of payments from associate dentists to practice owners.

We estimate that the average net income for all dentists wholly committed to the GDS for the period ending 30 September 2001 would be about £65,000 after allowing for an average of £2,600 for other payments to dentists, an average expenses to income ratio for all dental work of 54.1 per cent. subsequent fee increases and the introduction of the dentists commitment payments scheme. The OME survey did not report private earnings of dentists, but using information collected by the Inland Revenue it is estimated that the average income for single-handed dentists from both GDS work and private practice would be around £70,000.

Mental Health

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the results of the collaboration between the Mental Health Act Commission, the Sainsbury centre for mental health and the university of Lancashire on ethnic monitoring, racial harassment and training, announced on 24 October 2000. [9516]

Jacqui Smith: The report from the Mental Health Act Commission, the Sainsbury centre for mental health and the university of central Lancashire will inform the work currently being drawn up to develop a strategy to address the needs of black and minority ethnic service users. It is hoped that the strategy will go for consultation in spring 2002 and be published later that year.

Computer Crime

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of computer (a) hacking (b) fraud and (c) theft his Department has recorded in 2000 and 2001; and on how many occasions in 2000 and 2001 computer systems in his Department have been illegally accessed by computer hackers (i) within and (ii) outside his Department. [11000]

Ms Blears: There have been no reported incidents of illegal hacking or fraud on the Department's computer systems in 2000 and 2001. In 2000 there were computer thefts with a value of £45,894, whereas the equivalent figure for the year 2001 to date is £34,263.

Lymphoedema

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what clinics exist (a) in the UK and (b) in Gloucestershire to treat lymphoedema; what resources are provided for the treatment of that disease in (a) and (b); what training doctors are given in diagnosing and treating the disease; and if he will make a statement. [11059]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 October 2001]: Data on the number of lymphoedema clinics across the United Kingdom are not collected centrally. A lymphoedema nurse specialist, funded by Macmillan Cancer Relief, holds weekly clinics in Gloucester and Cheltenham and also provides a domiciliary service.

Lymphoedema care is mainly a nurse-led service and all breast cancer nurses will have lymphoedema management training. Doctors will receive training as part of their general medical training with further specialist training available in the charitable sector. In addition, there are a growing number of Lymphoedema specialist nurses who will have undertaken specialist nurse training which is carried out mainly in the charitable sector by organisations such as Macmillan Cancer Relief and Marie Curie Cancer Care. This is very much a nurse-led service and specialist nurses are recommended both in "Improving Outcomes Guidance" and the national cancer plan as being a vital part of the multidisciplinary team.

NICE are developing guidance on supportive care which will include guidance on the support of patients with lymphoedema.

NHS Dentistry (Wiltshire)

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the availability of NHS dentistry in Wiltshire. [12854]

Ms Blears: Wiltshire health authority has a dental access plan to ensure that all residents who wish to can access a national health service dentist within a reasonable time and distance. It is meeting the targets set in the plan. A dental access centre opened in Swindon in March 2000 and the health authority is planning to open a second in Chippenham in 2002.

Accident and Emergency (Staffing)

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the number of nurse practitioners in accident and emergency departments. [12862]

Ms Blears: Reforming emergency care will provide funding of £40 million to recruit 600 additional nurses to work in accident and emergency departments. The additional nursing staff will consist of accident and emergency nurses, emergency nurse practitioners and nurse consultants in emergency care.

Anti-TNF Treatment

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on NHS circular HSC/1999/176 with respect to the duty of health authorities to develop policies for the managed introduction of drugs in advance of a decision by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence; [13173]

(2) when the National Institute for Clinical Excellence will report on anti-TNF drugs. [13174]

(3) whether health authorities and primary care groups may fund anti-TNF drugs in advance of the decision by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence; and (a) how many and (b) which are doing so. [13175]

Ms Blears: We anticipate that the National Institute for Clinical Excellence will publish its guidance on anti-TNF drugs for rheumatoid arthritis in March 2002.

Until NICE has completed its appraisal, standing guidance in health service circular 1999/176 advises national health service bodies to use their existing arrangements to determine local prescribing policies, using the publicly available evidence to inform their decision.

The extent to which the NHS funds anti-TNF drugs will vary depending on local circumstances and priorities. Information on these local assessments is not collected centrally.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the Public Service Agreement target to improve the educational attainment of children looked after by local authorities by increasing to at least 50 per cent. by 2001 the proportion of children leaving care aged 16 or above with a GCSE or GNVQ qualification. [14948]

Jacqui Smith: Data published by the Department on 19 October 2001 showed that in year ending 31 March 2001, 37 per cent. of the 6,500 young people leaving care at age 16-plus obtained one or more GCSEs or GNVQs. This compares with 30 per cent. of care leavers in the previous year. Thirty local councils reported meeting the 50 per cent. target compared to 15 in the previous year.

The attainment figures for year ending 31 March 2001 are based on examinations sat in summer 2000 and earlier, therefore preceding many of the important Government initiatives now under way to improve attainment.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the Public Service Agreement target is for 2001–02 for the proportion of children in local authority care to have three or more placements in one year. [14913]

Jacqui Smith: The public service agreement target set following the comprehensive spending review in 1998 was:

> "Improve the continuity of care given to children looked after by local authorities by reducing to no more than 16 per cent. in all authorities the proportion of such children who have three or more placements in one year by March 2001."

This target has been rolled forward to March 2002 thus enabling those authorities that have already met the target to continue to demonstrate their good practice and to provide those which have yet to meet it a further opportunity to achieve the standard required.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress towards meeting the Public Service Agreement target of a reduction in the death rate from accidents by at least 20 per cent. by 2010. [14888]

Ms Blears: Latest available data (for the three years 1998–2000) show virtually no movement in the national death rate from unintentional injury. The target was announced in the saving lives White Paper published in July 1999, so we would not yet expect to see significant progress reflected in the information currently available.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress in meeting the Public Service Agreement target for reducing the national average emergency psychiatric re-admission rate by two per cent. by 2002. [14914]

Jacqui Smith: Assessment of progress is set out in the table. It shows the number of emergency psychiatric re-admissions of patients aged 16–64 within 90 days of all discharges from the care of a psychiatric specialist as a percentage of such discharges.

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Number of re-admissions within 90 days	15,461	14,875	14,068
Total number of discharges	113,585	114,616	110,312
Re-admission rate (percentage)	13.6	13.0	12.8

Progress is being made, and the national milestone as stated in the mental health national service framework to reduce the rate of psychiatric emergency readmissions by April 2002, from 14.3 per cent. to 12.3 per cent. is on target to being achieved.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress in meeting the Public Service Agreement target of reducing the per capita rate of growth in emergency admissions of people aged over 75 years to an annual average of two per cent. up to 2002–03. [14915]

Ms Blears: The rates of growth nationally of emergency admissions of people aged 75 and over since 1998–99 are:

1998–99 to 1999–2000: 0.62 per cent.

2000–01 to 2001–02 (forecast): 0.30 per cent.

All are within the present two per cent. growth target.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on success in meeting the Public Service Agreement target of reducing to no more than 16 per cent. the proportion of children in local authority care who had three or more placements in one year by 2001. [14921]

Jacqui Smith: Provisional data for the year ending 31 March 2001 indicate that 78 per cent. of local councils in England met the target of having no more than 16 per cent. of their looked after children having three or more placements in the year.

The equivalent percentage of local councils who met this target in 1999–2000 and in 1998–99 was 53 per cent. and 39 per cent. respectively.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress towards meeting the Public Service Agreement target of a reduction in serious accidental injury relating to admission to hospital by at least 10 per cent. by 2010. [14887]

Ms Blears: Latest available data (1998–99) show virtually no movement in serious accidental injury relating to hospital admission. The target was announced in the saving lives White Paper published in July 1999, so we could not yet expect to see progress reflected in the information currently available.

Appointments

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many appointments he has made to public bodies since 7 June; and how many are in his gift. [15490]

Ms Blears: Information about numbers of ministerial appointments to public bodies is included in the Cabinet Office's annual report, "Public Bodies". Copies are available in the Library and the report is published on the Cabinet Office's internet website. The next edition of "Public Bodies", which will include numbers of appointments at 31 March 2001, will be published around the end of the year.

238 public appointments were made by departmental Ministers between 7 June and 31 October 2001. A total of 1,041 public appointments are directly within the gift of Department of Health Ministers, 14 of which are joint appointments with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. Public appointments to national health service trusts, health authorities and primary care trusts have since 1 April 2001 been made by the NHS Appointments Commission.

NHS Magazine

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total costs were to his Department of producing the NHS magazine in the last 12 months. [15328]

Ms Blears: The Department has spent £899,480 on the production and distribution of the NHS magazine in the last 12 months (November 2000-October 2001).

Child Care

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has conducted into the reasons for the change in the number of children looked after by local councils since 1997. [15411]

Jacqui Smith: The Department commissioned, at the beginning of the year, the Thomas Coram Research Unit (Institute of Education, University of London) to conduct a tightly focused research study into the reasons that lie behind the increase in the number of children looked after by local authorities since 1994.

The research is designed to assess, among other things, the extent to which drug taking, alcoholism, violence and mental health problems within the family may have been significant factors underlying decisions made by local authorities to look after children.

Diabetes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people he estimates to be suffering from diabetes in each health area; [15788]

(2) if he will make the treatment of diabetes a higher priority; [15753]

(3) when he plans to publish the national service framework for diabetes; [15755]

(4) when he will publish a statement on his plans to identify the two types of diabetes; [15757]

(5) what recent consultations he has had with people suffering from diabetes. [15756]

Jacqui Smith: An estimated 1.3 million people in England have diagnosed diabetes. A population of 100,000 would be expected to include between 2,000 and 3,000 people with diabetes.

We are committed to improving the quality of care for people with diabetes. That is why we are developing a national service framework for diabetes. We shall be publishing the framework in two stages—the standards shortly and the delivery strategy next summer. The standards will cover the prevention, identification and management of diabetes and its complications.

Ministers have met regularly with Diabetes UK, which represents people with diabetes, and I last met with it on 22 October. We have involved people with diabetes in the development of the diabetes national service framework standards, and the implementation group that will inform the development of the delivery strategy will work openly with people with diabetes and others with an interest.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expenditure on diabetes was in each year since 1996 in the Leicestershire health authority. [15752]

Jacqui Smith: It is difficult to be precise about the exact level of expenditure on diabetes, as people with this condition are cared for by so many sectors of the health services. The table details the general medical services non-discretionary expenditure incurred by Leicestershire health authority on the chronic disease management programme for diabetes in each financial year since 1996–97. It must be emphasised that these figures do not reflect the full expenditure on diabetes by the health authority during this period.

General medical service non-discretionary expenditure on CDM diabetes 1996–97 to 2000–01—Leicestershire health authority

Year	£
1996–97	174,450
1997–98	189,377
1998–99	193,767
1999–2000	208,114
2000–01[1]	215,895

Annual financial returns for health authorities

Smoking Cessation

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will announce his decision in respect of funding for smoking cessation for (a) 2002–03 and (b) subsequent years in respect of the North Staffordshire health authority; and if he will make a statement. [15620]

Ms Blears [holding answer 16 November 2001]: Decisions on central funding for 2002–03 have not yet been finalised. Future decisions will form part of the Department's spending review 2002.

The NHS plan sets out a major expansion in services to help reduce smoking. The national health service smoking cessation services have proved to be effective, helping around 61,500 smokers to quit at the four-week stage in 2000–01.

Age Discrimination

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department has taken to tackle discrimination against older people. [16328]

Jacqui Smith: The national service framework for older people (NSF), published 27 March 2001, provides the first co-ordinated programme of actions to ensure that older people are never unfairly discriminated against in accessing national health service or social care services as a result of their age. Standard one of the NSF sets out actions and the time scale for achievement of milestones to identify and address age discriminatory policies and practices in the provision of health and social care services.

To date, initial action has focused on ensuring older people are engaged in the policy and priority planning at national and local level; the undertaking of an audit of written, age-related policies in the NHS; and the development of guidance for undertaking a review of eligibility criteria for adult social care.

Prescription Pricing Authority

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the breakdown of the costs to public funds in 2001–02 of the Prescription Pricing Authority. [16253]

Ms Blears: Information about the cost of the Prescription Pricing Authority (PPA) for 2001–02 will not be available until its accounts are completed and published in its next annual report in autumn 2002. Details of the PPA's costs and activities for 2000–01 are in the latest annual report. A copy is available in the Library and on the internet at www.ppa.org.uk.

Patient Advocates

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to public funds is in 2001–02 of the patient advocates in hospitals. [16249]

Ms Blears: £10 million was earmarked in 2001–02 to fund this service, which is now to be called the patient advice and liaison service following the response to the recent listening exercise.

Cannabis

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward legislation to allow medicinal cannabis to be prescribed in the same way as heroin. [16125]

Ms Blears [holding answer 19 November 2001]: We have approved a number of clinical trials into the medicinal use of cannabis. Once the results of the trials have been properly evaluated, we will have an evidence base that will allow us to decide how to proceed.

Pneumococcal Vaccinations

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps he is taking to make the pneumococcal vaccine more widely available to the under 65 age group; and if he will make a statement; [16523]

(2) in which health authorities in England and Wales the pneumococcal vaccine is available to those aged (a) over and (b) under 65 years; [16522]

(3) what estimate he has made of (a) the lives saved, (b) the hospital bed days saved and (c) the hospital costs saved by extending the availability of the pneumococcal vaccine; and if he will make a statement. [16524]

Jacqui Smith: Pneumococcal vaccine is recommended for all those aged two years or older in whom pneumococcal infection is likely to be more common and/or dangerous, for example, those with:

Asplenia or severe dysfunction of the spleen

Chronic renal disease or nephrotic syndrome

Immunodeficiency or immunosuppression due to disease or treatment, including HIV infection at all stages

Chronic heart disease

Chronic lung disease

Chronic liver disease including cirrhosis

Diabetes mellitus.

Health authority data on the use of pneumococcal vaccine are not available. It is the responsibility of general practitioners and nurses to identify and immunise their at risk patients.

The Department has not carried out a cost-effectiveness study of administering the pneumococcal vaccine, but continues to recommend the vaccine based on underlying ill health rather than age.

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring his Department has undertaken to ensure that NICE guidance is fully implemented for each technology appraisal undertaken by NICE where the technology was recommended as suitable for use within the NHS. [15966]

Ms Blears [holding answer 20 November 2001]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, North (Dr. Gibson) on 5 November 2001, Official Report, column 119W.

Small Acute Hospitals (Emergency Admissions)

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons regarding the future of smaller acute hospitals which take emergency admissions. [16457]

Ms Blears [holding answer 20 November 2001]: Ministers hold regular meetings with the royal colleges to discuss developments in the NHS.

I will be meeting Professor Alberti, President of the Royal College of Physicians in the near future to discuss issues around acute medicine and emergency services with particular reference to acute hospitals.

Nuffield Trust

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the Nuffield Trust report, "Local Medical Emergency Units: Learning Set Interim". [16456]

Ms Blears [holding answer 20 November 2001]: This is a useful and interesting interim report offering some alternative thinking on the idea of localised medical care provision brought about by technological developments in communications.

This will undoubtedly make an important contribution to the on-going debate around service development.

Beef Imports

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are taken to ensure that beef imported from other countries, from which spinal cord tissue has not been removed, is safe. [16284]

Ms Blears [holding answer 20 November 2001]: Where consignments of imported carcase beef are found with spinal cord still attached, and the age of the animals at slaughter or the countries of origin of the consignment means that such spinal cord is defined as specified risk material, the whole of the carcase or part carcase containing the spinal cord is detained and destroyed and is not permitted to enter the human food or animal food chains.

Ward Housekeepers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ward housekeepers were in post using the most recent figures available, broken down by (a) region and (b) health authority. [16762]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 November 2001]: The NHS plan set the target that:

> "Half of all hospitals will have ward housekeepers by 2004".

To date, 29 per cent. of acute hospitals and 23 per cent. of mental health hospitals have begun to introduce the service (although not necessarily across all wards). Because there are local variations in how services are organised, we do not have data on the number of housekeepers in post. However, the latest figures provided by trusts to National Health Service Estates indicate that of the 9,000 wards within England, 2,266 have a housekeeping service.

Winter Plan 2001

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the 2001 winter plan. [16842]

Ms Blears: We expect to publish the winter plan in early December.

Tuberculosis Vaccine

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of 10 to 14-year-olds are inoculated against tuberculosis in each health authority in the latest year for which figures are available. [16840]

Jacqui Smith: The information available for children aged 10 to 15 immunised against tuberculosis (BCG) is contained in table 8 of the statistical bulletin "NHS Immunisation Statistics, England: 2000–01". The information is by the national health service trust whose staff immunised the child, and not by the child's health authority of residence.

A copy of the bulletin is in the Library and can also be found on the Department's website www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0121.htm.

Consultant Neurologists

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultant neurologist (a) vacancies and (b) posts there were in 2000; and how many of the consultant neurologists in post in 2000 were (i) full-time and (ii) part-time. [16806]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The number of consultant neurologists employed and the type of contract they held in September 2000 are shown in the table.

Cirencester Hospital

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent discussions he has had with (a) East Gloucestershire health trust, (b) Cotswold and Stroud primary care group and (c) Gloucestershire health authority about proposed changes to the range of services offered at Cirencester hospital with particular reference to the A&E Department; [16876]

(2) what discussions he has had with Gloucestershire ambulance trust about the provision for an additional ambulance for residents in Cirencester who need to travel longer distances to other hospitals following a curtailment of services at Cirencester. [16877]

Ms Blears [holding answer 22 November 2001]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no discussions about the future of services at Cirencester hospital. This is a matter for the local national health service bodies.

Medicines (Side Effects)

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which a medicine with severe side effects would cease to be licensed; [17121]

(2) what steps he is taking to establish if a typical anti-psychotics have a lower incidence of adverse side effects, with particular reference to tardive dyskinesia; [17124]

(3) if he will make a statement on the circumstances to be taken into account by the MCA in monitoring the licensing of a medicine, with particular reference to the licensing of a new medicine with a lower incidence of side effects. [17120]

Ms Blears [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The primary objective of the Medicines Control Agency (MCA) is to safeguard public health by ensuring that all medicines on the UK market meet appropriate standards of safety, quality and efficacy. A marketing authorisation is granted when the balance of risks and benefits is considered to be favourable in the proposed indication.

The MCA continually monitors the safety of all medicines using a number of data sources with expert advice from the independent scientific advisory committee, the Committee on Safety of Medicines. If there is evidence that the balance of risks and benefits is no longer favourable, regulatory action may be taken to minimise risk. This may include strengthening warnings, restricting the terms of the marketing authorisation, or in appropriate circumstances its revocation. Such regulatory action is pursued with the Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations Etc.) Regulation, SI 1994 No. 3144 and relevant European Community obligations.

Spontaneous reporting data, which are collated by the MCA/CSM through the yellow card scheme, can be used to compare the safety profiles of medicines within a drug class. However, these comparisons must be evaluated with care, as levels of reporting of adverse reactions for particular drugs are dependent on a number of factors including the usage of the drug and the length of time it has been on the market.

The MCA/CSM intensively monitors the safety of all new medicines under a scheme called the black triangle scheme where any of the following circumstances apply:

If the medicine contains a new active substance or a combination of active substances

If the medicine is administered via a novel route or drug delivery system

If the medicine is going to be used in a new population of patients.

National Health Service Reform and Health Care Professions Bill

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the changes in administrative work resulting from the implementation of Clauses 1 to 4 of the National Health Service Reform and Health Care Professions Bill; [16615]

(2) what assessment he has made of the savings in management resulting from the implementation of Clauses 1 to 4 of the National Health Service Reform and Health Care Professions Bill. [16616]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Clauses 1 to 4 of the Bill prepare for the structural changes to the national health service. The 95 health authorities will be replaced by about 28 strategic health authorities; the eight regional offices of the Department will be abolished; and primary care trusts will be the key organisations undertaking an increased range of functions. £100 million is to be saved resulting from these changes: a combination not just of savings in management, but from a reduction in infrastructure and increases in shared services.

Public Bodies

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) existing and (b) proposed NHS (i) national directors posts, (ii) commissions, (iii) offices, (iv) types of trust, (v) types of authority, (vi) groups, (vii) boards, (viii) committees, (ix) forums, (x) councils and (ix) bodies. [16613]

Ms Blears [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The Department of Health public appointments annual report 2000, copies of which were sent to all hon. Members, contains details of all national health service trusts, primary care trusts, health authorities, special health authorities and non-departmental public bodies, including their chairs and non-executive members, as at 1 April 2000.

The 2001 public appointments annual report will be published, covering local and national bodies and appointments as at 1 April 2001. As in previous years, copies of the report will be sent to all hon. Members.

25 primary care trusts and 14 NHS trusts have been established since 1 April 2001. 28 new health authorities are to be established from April 2002 to replace the 95 currently established. An anticipated 15 care trusts are likely to be established during the course of 2002–03. About 120 PCTs are likely to be established over the course of the next two years. Other national bodies established since 1 April 2001 and those planned for the future are as follows.

National Bodies established since 1 April 2001

Advisory Committee on Tissue Banking

General Social Care Council

National Treatment Agency

National Patient Safety Agency

Prescription Pricing Control Tribunal

Social Care Institute for Excellence

National Bodies planned to be established

Council for the Regulation of Healthcare Professionals

Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health

Health Professionals Council

NHS Shared Services Programme

Nursing and Midwifery Council

Tobacco Regulatory Authority

Medical Education Standards Board

Directors and chief executives of special health authorities and departmental non-departmental public bodies are listed in "Public Bodies 2000", a copy of which is in the Library. The 2001 edition of "Public Bodies" will be published in January 2002.

There is a wide range of other offices, groups, committees, forums and bodies operating within the NHS, information on which is not held centrally.

Patients Forums

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what increase in public expenditure the creation of patients forums would require, after taking account of current funding allocations to community health councils and PALS. [16617]

Ms Blears [holding answer 22 November 2001]: People are the most important resource and we will be working to ensure that we make the best use of time offered by lay volunteers in the health service. Patients forums will, of course, require support in terms of human and financial resources for their work, which will be provided by the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health through its local networks. Funding is therefore tied into the overall resource requirements for the commission and the new arrangements collectively, which we are discussing with Her Majesty's Treasury as part of the spending review process.

TREASURY

British Tourist Authority

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to reduce the levels of irrecoverable VAT incurred by the British Tourist Authority in the current financial year; and if he will make a statement. [18434]

Mr. Boateng: The BTA was awarded £14.2 million of additional funding this year to take forward its recovery plan to boost inbound tourism in the wake of the foot and mouth outbreak. Concern was raised in July that this would lead to the BTA incurring irrecoverable VAT on purchases relating to this programme.

The BTA estimated the irrecoverable VAT would be around £600,000. However, HM Customs and Excise has now reached an agreement with the BTA to allow an increase in VAT recovery to achieve a fair and reasonable result within the existing rules. The agreement addresses the impact of foot and mouth disease upon all of BTA's work, not just the elements funded by extra grant in aid. As a result of this agreement, the BTA estimates that the level of irrecoverable VAT incurred on goods and services purchased as part of its tourism recovery programme has now been reduced by between £300,000 and £500,000.

This agreement ensures that as much as possible of the BTA's grant-in-aid and extra funding will go directly towards helping inbound tourism to recover from a particularly difficult year, while complying with the tax laws which apply to all organisations buying goods and services.

Tax Burdens

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what in real terms was the tax burden in (a) 1997–98 and (b) the most recent year for which information is available on the lowest quintile of equivalised disposable income. [12799]

Mr. Andrew Smith: As a result of personal tax and benefit measures introduced since 1997, families with children in the poorest fifth of the population are on average £1,700 a year better off in real terms.

The Office for National Statistics publishes an article, "The effects of taxes and benefits on household incomes", usually in the April edition of "Economic Trends". The most recent article states

> "it should be noted that year on year comparisons between quintile groups of the impact of tax in total could be affected by the inconsistency between income and expenditure for households in the bottom half of income distribution."

It goes on to say

> "The results are intended to be free standing: they were not designed for direct comparison with other years."

Bankruptcy and Winding-up Orders

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many (a) bankruptcy orders and (b) winding-up orders were granted to HM Customs and Excise in (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02 to date; [11635]

(2) how many (a) bankruptcy petitions and (b) winding-up petitions were issued by HM Customs and Excise in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02 to date. [11175]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 5 November 2001]: The latest information, which is available on HM Customs' and Excise website, www.hmce.gsi.gov.uk, is as follows:

1999–2001

Type	Petitions issued 1999–2000	Orders made 1999–2000
Bankruptcy	4,894	2,412
Winding up	4,426	2,750

Figures are not yet available for 2000–01 and 2001–02.

Venture Capital

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the total venture capital investment was in real terms in the last year for which information is available in each region of the United Kingdom; [15940]

(2) how much venture capital was invested in real terms in UK companies in each year since 1992. [15939]

Mr. Boateng: No official statistics are published on venture capital investment. Information is, however, collected by the British Venture Capital Association, and is available from its website, www.bvca.co.uk.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total venture capital investment was as a percentage of GDP in the last year for which information is available in each member state of the European Union. [15941]

Mr. Boateng: No official statistics are published on venture capital investment broken down by EU country. Information is, however, collected by the European Venture Capital Association and is available from its website, www.evca.com. GDP figures for EU members are available from Eurostat, www.europa.eu.int/comm/eurostat.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the competition authorities of the European Commission on the Community investment scheme for venture capital subsidies in deprived areas; and if he will make a statement on compatibility of the proposals with European competition law on state aid. [15952]

Mr. Boateng: The Government are confident that their proposals are compatible with state aid regulations.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he will define disadvantaged areas in relation to the operation of the community investment scheme for venture capital subsidies in deprived areas. [15951]

Mr. Boateng: I assume this question refers to proposals for a community development venture fund. The Government expect the operations of the community development venture fund to focus on the most disadvantaged areas in England as defined in the DTLR's index of multiple deprivation. The Government regard this a robust indicator of deprivation as it incorporates measures of:

Income

Employment

Health, Deprivation and Disability

Education, Skills and Training

Geographical Access to Services

Housing.

Officials are still working on the details of the restrictions, which will require state aid approval.

Investment Tax Credit

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the deadweight take-up of the community investment tax credit in its first full year of operation; and what measures he will take to ensure that deadweight impact is minimised. [15933]

Mr. Boateng: Forecasting in this area is very uncertain, with respondents to the Government's consultation on the community investment tax credit giving wide-ranging estimates of demand. The Government will minimise deadweight through the selection procedure for organisations using the tax credit.

White Papers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions in the last 12 months, confidential final revise proof copies of White Papers have been made available under embargo to (a) the Lobby and Upper Gallery and (b) members of other organised groups of correspondents before publication; and if he will make a statement. [16707]

Mr. Boateng: The Treasury follows the guidance laid down in section 7: "Confidential Final Revise Copies" of the Cabinet Office's publication, "How to publish a Command Paper—February 2001" in its production of White Papers.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has made to other European Union countries on the introduction of an aggregates levy broadly comparable with that proposed in the United Kingdom. [16732]

Mr. Boateng: The UK co-operates with the other member states in several European forums to discuss tax matters, and it does so with our national commitment to sustainable development very much to the fore. However, the implementation of an aggregates levy in any other member state must be a matter for the elected Government of that state.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on the international competitiveness of the United Kingdom's quarry industry of the introduction of the aggregates levy; [16704]

(2) what assessment he has made of the likely change in the import of (a) aggregate and (b) concrete products as a result of the aggregates levy; [16706]

(3) what assessment he has made of the likely change in the import of concrete products to the United Kingdom from (a) the Republic of Ireland and (b) other countries following the introduction of the aggregates levy. [16703]

Mr. Boateng: All imports of aggregate will be subject to the aggregates levy. Exports of aggregate from the UK will not be subject to the levy. This will protect the international competitiveness of the UK's quarrying industry.

There is not expected to be significant impact on the concrete products sector generally because international trade in these products is limited by weight and transport costs. Imports currently represent a very small proportion of total pre-cast concrete industry sales, and these are mainly high value products whose prices would not be significantly affected by the levy.

Mr. Heath: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what representations he has received on the distribution of the sustainability fund derived from the proposed aggregates levy; [15339]

(2) what part will be played by local elected representatives in the distribution of the sustainability fund derived from the proposed aggregates levy. [15341]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

A DEFRA consultation paper on the possible distribution of the aggregates levy sustainability fund in England was published on 2 October 2001. A copy is available in the House of Commons Library.

The paper invites views on how local authorities should be involved in the fund.

We expect to receive comments on this issue and the others raised in the consultation paper until the consultation period closes on 27 November.

Copies of the responses will be placed in the DEFRA library and may be published, unless a respondent asks for their response to be treated as confidential. Confidential responses will nevertheless be included in any statistical summary of views expressed.

Working Hours

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 6 November 2001, Official Report, column 154W, on working hours, if the raw data provided by staff are provided on a monthly basis; and if he will make a statement. [16710]

Mr. Boateng: Before September 2000, data on working hours were manually collected three times a year as set out in the information requested by the hon. Member on 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 774W. Since September 2000, a spreadsheet has been available for staff to record their working hours which provides information on a monthly basis.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 26 November 2001

NORTHERN IRELAND

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will introduce legislation to extend antisocial behaviour orders to Northern Ireland. [17952]

Mr. Browne: Different administrative and legal structures in Northern Ireland mean that it is not currently possible to extend the provisions in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 creating antisocial behaviour orders to Northern Ireland. In particular, the provisions rely on local authorities having responsibilities in the criminal justice field which they currently do not have in Northern Ireland.

Holy Cross Protest

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what type of complaints he has received from (a) Ardoyne road and (b) Glenbryn road residents relating to the Holy Cross protest. [17231]

Jane Kennedy: The Government have received a number of representations and written correspondence concerning the situation at Holy Cross Girls Primary School from Members of this House, Members of the devolved Administration and the general public. We continue to encourage local dialogue between the two communities. We have consistently called on the protesters to call off their protest, but in the meantime support the police in their operations to ensure the children of Holy Cross Primary can make their way to school. We welcome recent efforts by local politicians and community representatives to resolve the current impasse.

Community Groups (North Belfast)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what Government grants have been allocated to local community groups in north Belfast; and for what purpose, since 1998. [17234]

Dr. John Reid: Responsibility for this subject has been devolved to the Northern Ireland institutions and is therefore no longer a matter for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Bill

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the impact of the incitement to religious hatred clause of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Bill on preaching against Roman Catholicism in Northern Ireland. [18183]

Mr. Browne: It has been an offence in Northern Ireland since 1987 (under the Public Order (Northern Ireland) Order 1987) to stir up hatred or arouse fear against a group of persons because of their religion. The proposed amendment to the Public Order Act 1986 will not, therefore, have any impact there.

Prisons

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which prison establishments in Northern Ireland do not use the Royal prefix. [15948]

Jane Kennedy: All Northern Ireland prison establishments can and are referred to officially both as HMP and by name only.

The inclusion or exclusion of the Royal prefix is at the discretion of the governing governor of each establishment.

Police Service of Northern Ireland

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what colours will be used in the new uniform of the Police Service of Northern Ireland, excluding those used in the badge. [17470]

Jane Kennedy: The Report of the Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland (the Patten report) recommended that the colour of the current police uniform should be retained (Recommendation 154). The Government have accepted this recommendation.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the humanitarian situation in Afghanistan following the ejection of the Taliban from key centres and of the opportunities this presents to increase the volume of food aid to the country; and if she will make a statement. [15584]

Clare Short: The advances made by the Northern Alliance in recent days should enable us to improve humanitarian programmes and give better access to some of the most vulnerable people in Afghanistan who have received the least help in recent weeks. Such progress is dependent on improved security.

We hope that the UN and International Committee of the Red Cross will be able to improve delivery of food, healthcare, and other assistance to two million vulnerable people in the Northern Region of Afghanistan and that some of the internally displaced will be able to return home before the winter gets worse. Plans are now being made for the international staff of the UN, Red Cross and non-governmental organisations to return and thus improve services to vulnerable people. In addition, we will be able to accelerate deliveries to areas in central Afghanistan which will become harder to access in the coming months so that stockpiles can be built closer to the people who need them.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her response to the proposals by the Mineseeker Foundation on a scheme to clear mines in Afghanistan. [17973]

Clare Short: My Department has not received any proposals from the Mineseeker Foundation for mine clearance in Afghanistan.

Uganda

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has received from the Ugandan Government about buying arms. [14533]

Clare Short: I have held meetings with President Musevini of Uganda on a number of occasions over the past two months. Our discussions covered a wide range of issues, including defence expenditure.

Women's Leadership Training

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money her Department has spent on women's leadership training in (a) newly democratic and (b) developing nations in the last five years. [16682]

Clare Short: The statistics requested cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost but my Department puts women's empowerment at the heart of its work.

It starts with: girl's access to basic education and completion of primary schools; support for civil society organisations that represent the needs of and advocate for women in decision-making roles; education of the whole community about the rights of women and girls.

Women's leadership training needs to be built on these foundations.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proposals her Department has for funding leadership training for women in Afghanistan once stability has been restored. [16681]

Clare Short: It is the responsibility of the entire international community to ensure that the women of Afghanistan are fully involved in the new political settlement in Afghanistan.

As reconstruction activities begin, the programmes that we support will be designed and monitored to ensure that women and girls benefit. Women are both often the poorest members of communities, and the best organisers. Participation of women in public life is therefore integral to our approach.

Ethiopia

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions she has had with EU Ministers about EU aid to Ethiopia; and if she will make a statement. [17721]

Clare Short: We play a full part in discussing EU aid to Ethiopia both at the Development Council and in meetings with the Commission. Officials from my Department visited Brussels earlier this week to discuss the new EU Country Strategy Paper for Ethiopia. Current EU assistance concentrates on food security, human development, roads and democratisation/institution building.

Illiteracy

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if she will list her Department's aid contribution specifically aimed at reducing illiteracy in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and the projected contributions in (f) 2002, (g) 2003 and (h) 2004 (i) in total and (ii) as a proportion of gross national product; [16641]

(2) if she will list her Department's aid contributions that incorporate illiteracy reduction in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and the projected contributions in (f) 2002, (g) 2003 and (h) 2004 (i) in total and (ii) as a proportion of GNP. [16642]

Clare Short: Literacy statistics are notoriously misleading, particularly when they are disaggregated from the overall sector in which they are embedded. Figures cannot be provided in the form requested.

DFID's major focus for tackling illiteracy is helping developing countries achieve the Millennium Development Goal of universal primary education for all by 2015. Increasing access to good quality primary education and ensuring that children are literate when they leave school is essential for development and poverty reduction. Since 1997 the Government have committed over £600 million to support sustainable education systems in developing countries able to provide high quality primary education for all children. We will do more. We will also give increasing attention to helping developing countries tackle adult illiteracy and poverty reduction. All this will require a broad-based, multi-sectoral approach, aimed at enhancing national capacity to plan and implement effective national poverty reduction programmes.

World Trade Rules

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the proposals put forward by non-governmental organisations in the development and environmental sectors to reform the world trade rules. [15733]

Clare Short: Prior to the 4th Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organisation (WTO), we undertook extensive consultation with non-governmental organisations (NGOs). We intend to continue this dialogue.

Hurricane Michelle

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department has offered to the Caribbean countries hit by Hurricane Michelle. [14737]

Clare Short: We have been following closely the impact of Hurricane Michelle. Following an appeal for international assistance from the Government of Honduras, we have approved three proposals from NGO's (Tearfund, Save the Children Fund and Care International UK) amounting to £372,010. The Government of Cuba have not made an official request for international assistance. However, a joint Government of Cuba and United Nations interagency assessment mission to the affected areas is expected to report their findings shortly.

We await that report. In the meantime we stand ready to assess any appeals for assistance from international organisations or project proposals from NGOs for Cuba.

Doha Conference

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussion there was in Doha about the impact of the patent system on health systems in developing countries; and which proposals for reform she supported. [16063]

Clare Short: The Doha Ministerial discussed the relationship between the Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights agreement (TRIPS) and public health; the freedom to determine the grounds upon which compulsory licences for patented drugs can be granted; the right to determine what constitutes a national emergency; the freedom to establish a regime for the exhaustion of intellectual property rights; and how countries with insufficient or no pharmaceutical manufacturing capacity can make effective use of the compulsory licensing provisions.

I welcome and fully support the proposals in the Doha Ministerial Declaration on TRIPS and Public Health and the World Trade Organisation's (WTO's) effort to ensure the TRIPS Agreement can and should be interpreted and implemented in a manner supportive of public health. I also supported the move to allow Least Developed Countries until 2016 to implement TRIPS provisions with regard to pharmaceuticals.

Furthermore, the Government are committed to working to help the TRIPS Council find a meaningful solution to help countries with insufficient or no manufacturing capacities in the pharmaceutical sector make effective use of compulsory licensing by the end of 2002, as agreed in the declaration.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the outcome of the WTO conference in Doha with respect to developing countries. [16068]

Clare Short: The Ministerial Declaration from the WTO meeting in Doha made strong commitments to the interests of developing countries. The Ministerial resulted in agreement on the need to reduce subsidies and barriers to trade in agriculture, manufacturing and services, which could potentially produce enormous benefits for developing countries. The agreement on TRIPS recognised the need for a flexible interpretation of TRIPS to enable developing countries to protect public health. The challenge now is to ensure that these commitments become a reality.

Generic Drugs

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to encourage increased access of developing countries to generic drugs. [16064]

Clare Short: Poor people need better access to medicines at affordable prices. We are committed to working with industry and the international community to bring this about.

In many cases, increased access to generic drugs will be the most appropriate way to improve health outcomes. 90 per cent. of the drugs on the World Health Organisation's Essential Drug List are generics. Most tried and tested drugs for TB and malaria, for example, do not have patent protection and can be generically produced. We will continue to work for and encourage increased access to such medicines.

In other cases, essential medicines are covered by patent protection. Such protection is necessary in order to create incentives for research and development into future treatments. We fully support the Doha Ministerial declaration on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) and public health and the World Trade Organisation (WTO)'s efforts to ensure the TRIPS agreement can and should be interpreted and implemented in a manner supportive of WTO members' rights to protect public health.

A key aim of the Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and malaria—to which the UK has pledged US$200 million—will be to finance increased coverage of both patented and off-patent generic drugs and medicines.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the future of individual learning accounts. [18829]

Estelle Morris: On Friday 23 November the Department for Education and Skills called in police to investigate new allegations of fraud and theft involving individual learning accounts. Officers from the Department's Special Investigations Unit had discovered irregularities on Thursday after being contacted by an ILA provider. On Friday afternoon, the ILA programme was shut down immediately, two weeks earlier than the planned suspension from December 7, as set out in the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen), on 25 October 2001.

I do recognise the impact this decision will have on learners and learning providers and I am taking steps to keep them informed about developments.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when her Department was first notified of possible fraud related to individual learning accounts. [17484]

John Healey: The first individual learning account provider to have been suspended because of complaints about alleged fraud was on 25 June 2001. The Department, on 11 June 2001, received the first letter in relation to this particular case. From July of this year the Department received an increasing number of similar complaints from individuals and local trading standards officers.

Pupil Exclusions

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils have been excluded by (a) constituency and (b) local education authority in each year since 1991. [16966]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The available information on permanent exclusions by local education authority area has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Information on permanent exclusions at Parliamentary Constituency level could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The latest permanent exclusions data were published in a Statistical Bulletin "Permanent Exclusions from Maintained Schools, England 1999/2000" on 16 November, copies of which are available from the Library, or alternatively can be accessed from the Department for Education and Skills statistical website www.dfes.gsi.gov.uk/statistics

Departmental Staff

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will estimate the number of staff employed by her Department by region and nation of the UK; and if she will make a statement. [6858]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 15 October 2001, Official Report, columns 1009–12W.

Higher Education

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding was given to the higher education sector in each year since 1990 (a) in total and (b) per student; and what the forecasted yearly expenditure is for the next three years. [9592]

Margaret Hodge: The available data for England are shown in the following tables. Universities also receive public funding from the research grants, the national health service and other Government Departments.

[1] Unit funding is based on HEFCE/TTA recurrent grant and plus tuition fees, divided by the number of full time equivalent students. It excludes capital, funding for widening access and all student support.

[2] This includes capital to 1997 which was included in the unit funding calculation, and earmarked capital from 1999–2000 which is excluded from the unit cost calculation. It includes funding via HEFCE for research infrastructure, but excludes the funding for research amounting to around over £1 billion from JIF/SRIF.

[3] Resource costs of student loans including hardship loans.

[4] Also includes British Academy and DFES HE Innovations Fund. Outturn figures drop after 1997–98 due to the change from the "old" grant based system of student support to the current loan based system.

[5] Figures are rounded to nearest £10.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how she defines higher education for the purposes of the Government's target for 18 to 30-year-olds experiencing higher education by the end of this decade. [14542]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 13 November 2001]: This is the first time any Government have set a long-term participation target in Higher Education, so we are currently examining the data to ensure we provide a proper and appropriate base from which to consider progress. We shall shortly announce the results.

Private Sector Sponsorship

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money was raised from private sector sponsorship for higher education in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000 and (e) 2001; and if she will make a statement. [16047]

Margaret Hodge: Data on funding for higher education institutes can be found in the Higher Education Statistics Agency publication "Resources for higher education institutions", copies of which are in the Library of the House. Data for 2000 and 2001 are not yet available.

Learning and Skills Councils

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the total cost of administration in each of the local learning and skills councils in the current financial year. [13335]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) has been allocated £188 million for administration, of which £144 million has been allocated to local LSCs. The LSC has taken on a range of functions previously carried out by a number of bodies, including the Further Education Funding Council (FEFC), 72 Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs), the Department for Education and Employment (DfEE), Government Offices, and the National Advisory Council on Education and Training Targets (NACETT), as well as new work. For the latest year for which we have robust estimates available (1999–2000), our assessment is that the total spent on administration by the predecessor bodies, in relation to the relevant functions, was between £270 and £280 million.

Allocations to each local LSC are detailed in the table.

Standards Fund

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list (a) the total budget for the Learning and Skills Council's Standards Fund, (b) the total number of funding streams within the Standards Fund and the budget for each; and, within each funding stream what is (i) the total number of projects supported to date within the following ranges (A) up to £25,000, (B) £25,000 to £50,000 (C) £50,000 to £100,000 and (D) over £100,000. [14245]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 21 November 2001]: The total budget for the Learning and Skills Council's Standards Fund this year is £160 million. The total number of funding streams, and the budget for each stream are shown in the table, along with the total number of projects supported to date within the ranges specified.

		Projects supported to date

From next year, there will be a single, unified Standards Fund for post-16 learning with no individual ring-fenced funding streams within it.

Pregnant Teenagers

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what specialist support is available to young women who are (a) pregnant, (b) have children and (c) have other caring responsibilities to enable them to continue their education (i) in England, (ii) in the Teeside region and (iii) in Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency. [16263]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: One of the main objectives of the Government's Teenage Pregnancy strategy, being implemented and co-ordinated by the Teenage Pregnancy Unit, is to increase the numbers of teenage parents participating in education, training or employment. Support includes:

Sure Start Plus advisers providing personal support and advice to pregnant teenagers and teenage parents under 18. The Teeside pilot programme began in October 2001 and will run for three years in Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland, Stockton on Tees and Hartlepool, with an annual grant of £200,000. It is one of 20 such pilot programmes that will be fully evaluated before national roll out is considered.

Teenage Pregnancy Reintegration Officers, currently available in Middlesbrough and in April 2002, in Redcar and Cleveland and Stockton-on-Tees. They are funded through the Standards Fund Teenage Pregnancy Grant and will help young women back into school after giving birth.

Furthermore, the Connexions Service being rolled out across England will give all 13 to 19-year-olds access to a Personal Adviser to help co-ordinate this specialist support. Where they exist, Sure Start Plus advisers will usually act as Connexions Personal Advisers to avoid duplication of effort.

Details of whereabouts this support is/will be available across England are set out in the table.

In addition, 193 Sure Start programmes are currently operating across England, of which eight are based in Teeside, providing valuable support to parents and their young children. By March 2004, 500 Sure Start programmes will be up and running. There are also some 17 projects across Teeside, many of which cross constituency boundaries, funded by the Single Regeneration Budget (in excess of £4 million) helping young women to continue in education. DfES is also funding a pilot childminding project in four areas of England (Blackpool, North East Lincolnshire, Greenwich and Barking and Dagenham), specifically aimed to get teenage parents back into education, training or work.

The Government published the National Strategy for carers in 1999. An extra £325 million over five years is helping local authorities to provide a wide range of services to help carers, including young carers. Guidance was also issued to schools in supporting young carers. There are over 100 local projects operating across the country and links to these and support for young carers can be accessed through the Connexions Service, Learning Mentors and Education Welfare Officers.

Correspondence

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will reply to the letter of 11 October on bullying from Reverend Alan Burgess of New Milton. [16412]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A reply has been issued today.

Gender Stereotyping

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she is taking to eliminate gender stereotyping throughout the curriculum; and if she will make a statement. [16862]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have repeatedly confirmed our commitment to ensuring that all pupils, regardless of their background or gender, have an equal opportunity to achieve. The national curriculum provides an entitlement to a broad and balanced education for all pupils. Since the last national curriculum review it contains, for the first time, a statutory inclusion statement which sets out the steps which teachers should take to overcome potential barriers to learning for boys or girls.

The inclusion statement contains recommendations that teachers should create a climate where stereotypical views are challenged and pupils learn to view positively differences arising from race, gender, ability or disability. In order to respond to pupils' diverse learning needs teachers should ensure that boys and girls are able to take part in lessons fully and effectively. For example, they can take account of the interests and concerns of boys and girls by using a range of activities and contexts for work, allowing a variety of interpretations and outcomes and avoiding gender stereotyping in assigning pupils to activities or arranging access to equipment.

Substance Abuse (Education)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance has been issued to schools on the best way of informing students of the problems of tobacco, drug and alcohol addictions; and if she will make a statement. [16872]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 22 November 2001]: DfES guidance Circular number 4/95 sets out the statutory position on drug education in schools and was supplemented by the guidance "Protecting Young People" (1998) which gives detailed advice on how to deliver drug education effectively.

To further support schools, in partnership with the Department of Health, the DfES commissioned DrugScope (formerly the Standing Conference On Drug Abuse) to produce three further guidance documents for schools, "The Right Approach", "The Right Response", and "The Right Choice".

On 16 October we also announced details of a £1 million drug, alcohol and tobacco education training package for teachers that we will deliver as part of the drug strategy to achieve the target to halve the number of young people using illegal drugs by 2010. Guidance to support this package is available on the DfES website at www.dfes.gov.uk/lea/guidance/drugs alcohol tobacco.

Bullying

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she is taking to tackle bullying in schools; and if she will make a statement. [16873]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 22 November 2001]: From September 1999 head teachers of maintained schools have been placed under a duty to draw up measures to prevent all forms of bullying among pupils, including racist or homophobic bullying. Bullying is a serious problem for those who experience it and schools should take all complaints seriously.

Last December we launched a new anti-bullying strategy, including a new pack for schools entitled "Bullying: don't suffer in silence" with an accompanying video aimed at pupils. Schools can order one free copy of the pack from DfES publications. There is also a new anti-bullying website at www.dfes.gov.uk/bullying. The Department is also co-funding the Parentline Plus free helpline for parents whose children are being bullied and we have produced a public information film to raise awareness of bullying. In addition Baroness Ashton has recently provided a short foreword to "Safe for All: a best practice guide to prevent homophobic bullying in secondary schools" published by Stonewall.

We have made it clear that heads can permanently exclude pupils responsible for persistent or violent bullying. However, the key message of our strategy is that victims should be able to report bullying to someone they trust and not suffer in silence.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to review the implementation of anti-bullying policies. [16977]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Anti-bullying policies became compulsory in schools in September 1999. Each school's policy should be reviewed by the head teacher on a regular basis in consultation with the rest of the school community. Whenever my officials investigate alleged bullying with a school they verify that the school has an anti-bullying policy and that this has been followed closely in the case in question.

The Framework for Inspection for the Office for Standards in Education requires inspectors to obtain the views of pupils, parents and teachers on the incidence of bullying in a school and the school's response. This includes assessment of the anti-bullying policy. We meet Ofsted regularly and discipline issues are part of our continuing discussions with them.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the Government policy is on bullying in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools. [16978]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: All maintained schools in England, including primary and secondary schools, are required by law to have an anti-bullying policy. Schools should treat bullying seriously and take steps to combat it promptly and firmly whenever and wherever it occurs.

In December 2000 we launched a new anti-bullying strategy, which includes a new pack for schools entitled 'Bullying: don't suffer in silence' with an accompanying video aimed at pupils. The pack describes strategies for use in primary and secondary schools and it can be ordered from DfES Publications on 0845 602 2260. The cost is £15 although schools can order one free copy each. We have encouraged as many schools as possible to order the pack; so far about 5,000 have done so. We also have a new anti-bullying website at: www.dfes.gov.uk/bullying. The key message of our strategy is that pupils should report bullying to someone they trust and not suffer in silence.

Sure Start Birkenhead

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 927W, what the original allocation for 2000–01 was for Birkenhead. [17338]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 23 November 2001]: In the 2000–01 financial year, Sure Start Birkenhead was allocated £394,500 as revenue and £266,500 as capital.

South Tyneside

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of children in south Tyneside remained in education after the completion of their GCSEs in the last year for which figures are available. [17402]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The percentage of 16-year-olds in full-time education in south Tyneside local education authority was 53 per cent. in 1998–99, the latest year for which figures are available. A further 7 per cent. entered part-time education.

Participation rates by LEA for 16 and 17-year-olds are published in an annual statistical bulletin, "Participation in Education and Training by Young People Aged 16 and 17 in Each Local Area and Region, England".

Performance-related Pay

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the operation of performance-related pay for assistant head teachers, with particular reference to the subsidies granted by local education authorities in the current year. [17809]

Mr. Timms: Schools were able to appoint assistant heads posts from September 2000. Like other members of the leadership group, schools may award assistant heads additional pay points for sustained high performance. A new special grant will help schools meet the cost of performance points awarded to any teacher or leadership group member, including points awarded this school year. The grant will be worth £250 million over the next two financial years. This is in addition to continuing real terms increases in general school funding.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the differences in the operation of performance-related pay for (a) heads, (b) deputy heads, (c) assistant heads and (d) advanced skills teachers, with specific reference to the execution of the pay spine in each case. [17823]

Mr. Timms: Members of all four groups are paid on individual pay ranges set by governing bodies. These ranges are positioned on the leadership group pay spine in the case of head teachers, deputies and assistant heads; and on the Advanced Skills Teacher (AST) pay spine in the case of ASTs. In annual pay reviews, governing bodies may award a point on the relevant pay range to members of all four groups for sustained high quality of performance taking account of performance objectives.

University Staff

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 22 October 2001, Official Report, column 44W, on university staff, how many of the academic staff reported to have left (a) University of Oxford and (b) University of Sussex were re-engaged by their universities after 31 March (i) for the academic year until 30 September and (ii) for a longer period. [18248]

Margaret Hodge: This information is not available.

Student Finances

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what was the average (1) loan taken out by students over the lifetime of their higher education in the last three years; [16177]

(2) what the average gross repayment of student loans is over the lifetime of the loan, including interest costs. [16172]

Margaret Hodge: Information as requested is not collected centrally.

Information on student loan accounts is held by the Student Loans Company, and relates to debt owed to the state or to the private sector following the two Government debt sales.

The average debt of a borrower with a mortgage style student loan entering repayment at the start of financial years 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000, the latest year for which data are available, was £2,170, £2,840 and £3,210 respectively.

The first cohort of students on a three-year course who entered higher education under the new student support arrangements is due to start repayment in April 2002. The average income contingent loan account for borrowers entering repayment in that year is estimated to be some £6,200. These borrowers include those who have completed three years of study from the 1998–99 academic year as well as those from later cohorts on shorter courses or who have left higher education early.

Student loans are subsidised by the Government so that in real terms students repay exactly what they borrow. The real interest rate is 0 per cent. This means that in cash terms students are charged interest annually at the rate of inflation on the remaining balance of their loan.

Information on private sector debt such as overdrafts and other commercial loans is not available centrally.

Tuition Fees

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money was raised from tuition fees in England and Wales in the last 12 months. [16187]

Margaret Hodge: The estimated income to higher education institutions in England and Wales from tuition fees governed by the student support regulations, the mandatory award regulations and for those post-graduate students funded by the research councils is shown in table 1 and table 2. The data is only produced on a financial year basis.

Table 1: Estimated tuition fee income to English institutions

£ million

	Financial year
	2000–01	2001–02
Public contributions to fees	517.0	498.2
Student contributions to fees[1]	302.5	350.1
Total	819.5	848.3

[1] The student contributions are net of an estimated 5 per cent. cost for collection and any default.

Table 2: Estimated tuition fee income to Welsh institutions

£ million

	Financial year
	2000–01	2001–02
Public contributions to fees	34.6	33.5
Student contributions to fees[1]	21.3	25.0
Total	55.9	58.5

[1] The student contributions are net of an estimated 5 per cent. cost for collection and any default.

University of Buckingham

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to visit the University of Buckingham. [16902]

Margaret Hodge: None.

School Place Shortages

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the shortage of school places (a) in England and (b) in east Devon. [17267]

Mr. Timms: My Department does not collect detailed information on the demand for school places. The Government believe that decisions concerning the supply of school places are best taken locally—by the main partners in the provision of education who have knowledge of local needs. Local education authorities have a duty to ensure that there are sufficient school places in their area. They must publish annually a School Organisation Plan setting out how they plan to deal with any surplus or deficit of places over a five year rolling period.

Where an LEA can demonstrate overall growth in the need for school places it may apply to my Department for capital funding.

Teacher Shortages

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the shortage of teachers in (a) England and (b) east Devon. [17268]

Mr. Timms: The Department collects statistics on teacher vacancies annually. We do not collect data specifically for east Devon but in January this year the vacancy rate in Devon was 1.1 per cent. compared with a rate of 1.3 per cent. in England as a whole.

Sixth Forms

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on difference in performance at GCSE between state secondary schools (a) with and (b) without a sixth form in England and east Devon. [17270]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The proportion of 15-year-olds achieving five or more GCSEs at A* to C in 2001 was:

Percentage

	England	East Devon
(a) Schools with sixth forms	52.3	56.7
(b) Schools without sixth forms	42.6	[1]—

[1] There are no schools without sixth forms in east Devon.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Train Operating Companies (Insurance)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many train operating companies are operating without interruption insurance; and if public funds would be used to fund a captive insurer. [16028]

Mr. Jamieson: The majority of train operating companies currently have no business interruption insurance cover. The Strategic Rail Authority is discussing with the rail industry the option of setting up of a captive insurer. No decision has been made regarding funding.

Railtrack

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when his Department prepared the contingency plan relating to Railtrack. [R] [16030]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's statement to the House of 5 November 2001, Official Report, columns 19–29.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on what date he sought legal advice on the price at which it would be necessary to compensate shareholders if Railtrack were re-nationalised. [15501]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 16 November 2001]: Such details are exempt from disclosure under section 2 and 4 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he expects Railtrack administration to last no more than six months. [17113]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 389W.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 898W, on Railtrack, what advice the agencies gave the Government about (a) what would be required and (b) the minimum time scale to secure an A/A2 rating. [17210]

Mr. Jamieson: The definitions of particular credit ratings and the criteria required to achieve them are available from the individual credit rating agencies.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 899W, on Railtrack, if he will place copies of the correspondence in the Library, as requested. [17225]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 22 November 2001]: There was no correspondence.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the value on 5 October of Railtrack shares held by (a) local authorities as part of a general portfolio and (b) pension funds on behalf of local authority employees. [17670]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department does not hold this information.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when press officers in his Department were first briefed about the possibility that Railtrack would be put into administration. [17795]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Details of internal discussions and advice are exempt from disclosure under section 2 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what advice he received prior to 5 October on the status of the financial facilities held by Railtrack with the banks following the making of the administration order. [17791]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Such details are exempt from disclosure under section 2 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many and what proportion of Railtrack shares were owned by institutional investors (a) at privatisation and (b) on 1 October for each year following. [18231]

Mr. Jamieson: The proportion of shares in Railtrack Group plc held by institutional investors at flotation on 20 May 1996 and for subsequent years—as detailed in the Annual Report and Accounts—is shown.

	Percentage
20 May 1996	42
24 April 1997	66
5 May 1998	70
30 April 1999	77
5 May 2000	82
1 May 2001	83

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on how many days following privatisation Railtrack shares were worth (a) more and (b) less than their opening price; and what the highest and lowest values were of a single Railtrack share between privatisation and 1 October. [18232]

Mr. Jamieson: The closing share price for Railtrack Group plc was above the flotation price of 308p on every day between its flotation on 20 May 1996 and 4 June 2001 and also on 8 June 2001. The share price reached a peak of 1768p on 23 November 1998.

The closing share price for Railtrack Group plc was below the flotation price of 308p on the 5, 6, and 7 of June 2001 and on every day between 9 June 2001 and 1 October 2001. The lowest closing share price was 252p on 20 September 2001.

Highways Legislation

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to legislate for changes in highways legislation, following the judgment in Goodes v. East Sussex county council. [16712]

Mr. Jamieson: We are continuing to consider the legal position on the winter service provided by Highway Authorities in the light of this judgment. In the meantime we strongly recommend highway authorities in England to implement winter service provisions on their roads in accordance with the Code of Practice for Maintenance "Delivering Best Practice in Highway Maintenance" published on Tuesday 10 July 2001.

Station (Wootten Bassett)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what consideration he has given to a new station at Wootten Bassett; and if Railtrack's receivership will delay its development. [17162]

Mr. Jamieson: The proposal for a new station at Wootten Bassett has been given initial consideration by the Strategic Rail Authority and is a matter for them to consider further upon receipt of further proposals. This would be unaffected by the High Court's decision to put Railtrack into administration.

Central Railway

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will announce his decision on Central Railway's application for a hybrid Bill. [17116]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 25 October 2001, Official Report, column 383W.

Renewco

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he will list correspondence between his Department and the SRA concerning Renewco (a) since 5 October and (b) between 1 April and 5 October; [17138]

(2) what representations his Department made to the Strategic Rail Authority concerning the timing of the payment of money to Railtrack as part of the Renewco agreement; [17112]

(3) if he will list the meetings between his Department and the Strategic Rail Authority at which Renewco was on the agenda (a) between 1 April and 5 October and (b) since 5 October. [17137]

Mr. Jamieson: Details of commercially sensitive communications between Government agencies and their sponsor Departments are exempt from disclosure under section 2 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Local Councillors

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many local councillors there are; and what their political affiliation is. [17198]

Dr. Whitehead: This information is not held centrally.

Leylandii

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many letters he has received in 2001 concerning leylandii from residents of the Buckingham constituency. [16899]

Ms Keeble: The information is not recorded in the format requested, but my Department has received a total of over 400 letters and e-mails about leylandii since 1 January.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for increasing public participation and confidence in the democratic process. [16926]

Dr. Whitehead: The Home Office published the following PSA target in 1998.

> "Modernise the constitution and increase public participation in the democratic process"

I understand that this target related to the publication of the Representation of the People Bill and was met by its enactment in March 2000. There have been no subsequent PSA targets in similar terms.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for improving fire service efficiency. [16918]

Dr. Whitehead: Fire authorities in England and Wales, including single purpose authorities, are subject to the duty to secure continuous improvement in efficiency under best value. This is underpinned by a process of target-setting against key national performance indicators, such as the incidence of accidental fire-related death and injury in the home. For certain functions where collaboration is considered to offer the most potential scope for improved efficiency, fire authorities have been required to conduct best value reviews to a common timetable.

Regulatory Impact Assessment Costs

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the gross costs were of the regulatory impact assessment for (a) the Motor Vehicles (Driving Licences) (Amendment) Regulations 2001, (b) the Merchant Shipping (Mandatory Surveys for Ro-Ro Ferry and High Speed Passenger Craft) Regulations 2001, (c) the Goods Vehicle (Authorisation of International Journeys) (Fees) (Amendment) Regulations 2001 and (d) the Road Vehicle (Display of Registration Marks) Regulations 2001. [17690]

Mr. Jamieson: These costs are shown in the published regulatory impact assessments which are in the House Libraries.

Index of Multiple Deprivation

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the (a) programmes and (b) funding streams to which the Index of Multiple Deprivation applies (i) wholly and (ii) in part; and if he will make a statement. [17773]

Ms Keeble: The following table sets out Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions programmes and funding streams to which the Index of Multiple Deprivation (IMD 2000) applies, either wholly or in part.

£ million

Programme	2001–01	2001–02	2002–03
Neighbourhood Renewal Fund	200	300	400
Neighbourhood Management		[1]45
Land and Property Programme	—	[2]370	—

[1] Funding for this programme runs from 1999 through to 2003.

[2] Along with the Single Regeneration Budget, this programme will be subsumed into 'single pot' for Regional Development Agencies from April 2002. The Department for Trade and Industry will have effective responsibility for all grant in aid to RDAs from November 2001.

'The Neighbourhood Renewal Fund' is distributed to authorities which figure in the 50 most deprived authorities against the six individual district level measures in the Indices of Deprivation 2000. This produces a list of 81 authorities, to which were added seven authorities that were not included in this list but were included among the 50 most deprived areas on any of the four measures under the Index of Local Deprivation 1998. The allocations are based on a standard amount per head of population living in the 10 per cent. most deprived wards nationally.

'The Neighbourhood Management Pathfinder Programme' is targeted on areas selected from among authorities which include more than one ward in the worst 10 per cent. as measured by the Indices of Deprivation 2000, but excluding any local authority where there is a New Deal for Communities Partnership.

'The Land and Property Programme' includes an element of the Indices of Deprivation 2000 for the period 2001–02 only. 80 per cent. of the budget was allocated on a criteria basis involving the use of seven indicators, one of which was based on the Indices of Deprivation 2000—a 'deprived wards' indicator which captured the number of people living in the most deprived local authority districts. The indices element therefore represents only a small aspect of the allocation methodology. The Index of Deprivation 2000 will not be used in future years due to the commitment of the new single pot for Regional Development Agencies from April 2002.

'Allocation of Housing Capital Resources' to local authorities (Generalised Needs Index and Registered Social Landlords (Housing Needs Index)) is based on needs indices that include an element of targeting of resources to deprived areas. The targeting for 2002–03 will be based on the ID 2000; targeting had previously been based on the largely 1991 Census-based Index of Local Conditions.

The way in which the indices are constructed and used means that the targeting does not allocate a specific amount of the available resources. The targeting currently accounts for 30 per cent. of the Generalised Needs Index and 15 per cent. within the Housing Needs Index (before adjustment for regional cost variations. For this reason we have not included these programmes in the table.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to review the methodology underpinning the Index of Multiple Deprivation with specific reference to (a) incorporation of a crime domain, (b) incorporation of a physical environment domain and (c) the impact of the access domain; and if he will make a statement. [17774]

Ms Keeble: At the time of the publication of the Indices of Deprivation, in July 2000, we acknowledged that they should be revised when further substantial small area data streams become available and could be incorporated into the indices. My Department is intending to commission a project shortly to explore what new data have come on stream since the review that led to the Indices of Deprivation 2000. This will pay particular attention to the development of measures on crime and the physical environment.

Bus Passengers (Nottingham)

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he has had with Nottingham City Transport on bus passenger numbers following the reorganisation of their bus services; and if he will make a statement. [17387]

Ms Keeble: I have had no discussions with Nottingham City Transport about bus passenger numbers since reorganisation of their bus services on 30 September. However, I would expect the city council to continue to monitor the use of public transport in the city as part of the annual reporting process for the Greater Nottingham local transport plan.

Mobile Phone Masts

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to revise the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995, Schedule 2, Part 24 so far as the citing of mobile phone masts is concerned. [17411]

Ms Keeble: On 22 August this year we introduced changes that significantly improved the planning procedures and guidance for telecommunications mast development. The changes, which included, amendments to the 1995 Order:

strengthened public consultation requirements on mast proposals of 15 metres and below so that they are the same as for planning applications; increased the time for an authority to deal with prior approval applications to 56 days; underlined that school governors must be consulted on all proposals for new masts on or near a school or college; and increased fees to enable authorities to carry out full public consultation.

We have no plans to amend further the planning arrangements for telecommunications development.

Speed Cameras

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the average reduction in road speed as a result of the introduction of speed cameras. [17442]

Mr. Jamieson: Monitoring of the eight pilot areas has shown that, on average, speed at the camera sites has reduced on average by 5.6mph. On average the percentage of drivers exceeding the speed limit at pilot camera sites reduced from 55 per cent. to 16 per cent.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of how many police constabularies are in favour of the use of speed cameras. [17444]

Mr. Jamieson: All police forces in the United Kingdom use technology to enforce speed limits. To date, 15 police force areas have been accepted into the new netting-off scheme and a number are preparing their case to join next year. It is envisaged that the scheme will be extended to all areas within two years. ACPO strongly support the netting-off scheme.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the reduction in (a) fatalities and (b) serious accidents as a result of the introduction of speed cameras. [17440]

Mr. Jamieson: The first year report of the netting-off scheme shows that, on average, at camera sites, the number of people killed and seriously injured fell by 47 per cent. compared to the average of the previous three years.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many requests he has received for additional funding for speed cameras since January. [17435]

Mr. Jamieson: Eight further bids have been received to join the netting-off scheme. Of these, seven have been approved.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many speed cameras there are in the United Kingdom. [17441]

Mr. Jamieson: The numbers of speed cameras in police force areas are not held centrally.

Traffic Calming Measures

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what was the cost of damage to emergency vehicles sustained from cushion-style road humps in the last year for which figures are available. [17438]

Mr. Jamieson: This information is not held centrally.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many 20 miles per hour zones have been adopted in England. [17445]

Mr. Jamieson: This information is not held centrally.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what guidance his Department gives on the (a) height, (b) length and (c) width of cushion-style road humps. [17437]

Mr. Jamieson: The Highways (Road Humps) Regulations 1999 states that a road hump should be between 25 and 100mm in height, with no vertical face higher than 6mm and have a minimum width in the direction of traffic not be less than 900mm.

The Department has issued a range of Traffic Advisory Leaflets to all local authorities in England and Wales giving guidance on the installation of road humps. Within the scope offered by the Regulations, it is for highway authorities to decide the most appropriate design and dimension of road hump for each of their roads.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what advice he gives on the introduction of traffic calming measures on (a) trunk and (b) residential roads. [17436]

Mr. Jamieson: Traffic calming has proved to be effective in reducing vehicle speeds and in reducing the number and severity of road accidents

The Department provides highway authorities with guidance and advice on traffic calming, through our Traffic Advisory Leaflet series of publications. We are also preparing a Local Transport Note on the design and effectiveness of traffic calming measures.

The Highways Agency has issued "Trunk Road Traffic Calming Advice" (IAN28/00) to their staff which gives guidance on the use of traffic calming measures on trunk roads. This document is currently being updated to include best practice. It is envisaged that the updated version of the advice will be incorporated into the Highways Agency "Design Manual for Roads and Bridges".

Train Accidents (Farm Animals)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many trains hit farm animals straying on to the track in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [17414]

Mr. Jamieson: The number of incidents where trains have struck animals are contained in the Chief Inspector of Railways' Annual Reports on Railway Safety, copies of which are in the House Library.

Airline Group (NATS)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what approaches he has received from the Airline Group concerning its ability, following 11 September, to invest the projected £50 million profits from its first year operations back into NATS. [17452]

Mr. Jamieson: The Airline Group, in conjunction with NATS, is producing a business plan, for submission to Government by the end of November.

Fuel Prices

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent representations he has received regarding the price of petrol and diesel in England and Wales. [17883]

Mr. Jamieson: This Department receives regular representations on the price of petrol and diesel from a range of bodies and individuals. The current higher price of diesel compared to petrol is the result of increased winter demand for heating oil, which is similar in composition to diesel, as compared to petrol for which demand is generally greater in summer. In Budget 2001 the duties on ultra low sulphur petrol and ultra low sulphur diesel, the two most commonly used road fuels, were reduced to 45.82 pence per litre.

Road Accidents

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many people have been (a) killed and (b) injured on the roads as a result of accidents involving (i) bus, (ii) coach and (iii) lorry drivers in each of the last three years to which the figures are available [18067]

Mr. Jamieson: The following table shows the road casualty figures for accidents in Great Britain involving buses and coaches and for accidents involving a heavy goods vehicle (HGV) of over 3.5 tonnes gvw (maximum permissible gross vehicle weight). It is not possible to present separate figures for accidents involving buses and for accidents involving coaches. The figures include driver casualties in the specified vehicle type where these occurred.

	Road users killed in accidents involving		Road users injured in accidents involving a bus or coach	an HGV	a bus or coach	an HGV
1998	152	576	16,081	18,122
1999	145	620	16,567	19,180
2000	149	560	16,412	19,233

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many road accidents have involved (a) coach, and (b) bus and (c) lorry drivers in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [18091]

Mr. Jamieson: The following table shows the figures for road accidents in Great Britain involving buses and coaches and for accidents involving a heavy goods vehicle (HGV) of over 3.5 tonnes gvw (maximum permissible gross vehicle weight). The statistics relate only to accidents that resulted in personal injury. It is not possible to present separate figures for accidents involving buses and for accidents involving coaches.

These statistics do not indicate whether the driver of the specified vehicle type was the injured party.

	Personal injury accidents involving a bus or coach	an HGV
1998	11,762	14,526
1999	11,888	15,191
2000	11,733	15,194

Passenger Vehicle Safety

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the maximum permitted number of passengers is that can be carried on a scheduled (a) 48 seater and (b) 53 seater bus if all the passengers are aged under 14 years. [17871]

Mr. Jamieson: Provided that the scheduled bus is not equipped with seat belts and has seats fitted in pairs, under the three for two rule, it would be possible to carry (a) in a 48 seat bus, 72 seated passengers under the age of fourteen plus any standees that are permitted and (b) in a 53 seater bus, 79 seated passengers under the age of fourteen plus any permissible standees. However, in practice it is likely that the vehicles will be fitted with more than one single seat so the totals in that case would be less.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the investigations by the Vehicles Inspectorate into breaches of regulations concerning (a) scheduled and (b) private bus and coach operators in (i) 2000 and (ii) 2001. [17877]

Mr. Jamieson: The Vehicle Inspectorate's data identify the operators of public service vehicles (PSVs), but the records do not differentiate between the operators of scheduled, private bus and coach services. In 1999–2000 investigations carried out by the Vehicle Inspectorate into breaches of the traffic regulations by operators and drivers led to 623 cases being taken to court covering a total of 1,633 offences. In 2000–01 the number of cases was 578, which covered 1,753 offences.

Rural Bus Services

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to amend the Competition Act 1998 to facilitate arrangements between bus companies, with particular reference to rural areas. [18176]

Ms Keeble: Naturally, we wish to encourage joint ticketing schemes between operators, aimed at making life easier for bus users in rural areas and elsewhere. This is an important component in delivering the Government's integrated transport policy and achieving our target of increasing bus patronage by 10 per cent. over the period of the 10 year plan.

Any proposal to amend existing competition legislation would be a matter for my right hon. friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. The Director General of Fair Trading has made a block exemption Order exempting, among other things, multi-operator ticketing schemes. I understand that the Director General of Fair Trading intends to consult shortly on a revised guideline on the terms of the block exemption.

Cranford Agreement

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to review the Cranford Agreement. [17794]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 23 November 2001]: We recognise there is a case for reviewing the Cranford Agreement. We will do this next year in conjunction with the review of daytime westerly preference announced in the Terminal Five decision letter.

Gatwick Station

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans exist for a special purpose vehicle to be created to undertake works in connection with Gatwick Station; and if he will place the plans in the Library. [17787]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 23 November 2001]: It is intended that a Special Purpose Vehicle (SPV) will be formed to carry out works under the new South Central franchise, including track works at Gatwick station. Discussions on the appropriate structure for the SPV are being taken forward by the Strategic Rail Authority and GoVia.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans exist for a special purpose vehicle to be created to undertake works in connection with the Channel Tunnel Rail Link; and if he will place the plans in the Library. [17786]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Construction and financing of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link is being undertaken by London and Continental Railways who won a competition to do so in 1996. Those arrangements were restructured in 1998 and arrangements for the construction and finance of Section 2 were concluded in the summer of this year. Construction of Sections 1 and 2 is currently proceeding on time and on budget.

Deprivation (South-West)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish in rank order the 100 most deprived wards in the Government Office South West region indicating their (a) local authority and (b) parliamentary constituency. [17865]

Ms Keeble: The information, based on the Index of Multiple Deprivation (IMD) from the Indices of Deprivation 2000, is shown in the table.

This information is based on the ward level Index of Multiple Deprivation (IMD) from the Indices of Deprivation 2000 which is the Government's current measure of multiple deprivation. The IMD brings together information from six supporting domains of deprivation: Income, Employment, Health Deprivation and Disability, Education Skills and Training, Housing and Geographical Access to Services.

Young Drivers

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many of those who passed the driving test in each of the past five years were under 21 years of age. [17835]

Mr. Jamieson: In the last three years the following number of candidates under 21 years of age passed the practical car driving test:

1998–99: 338,434

1999–2000: 313,048

2000–01: 301,227.

Data on numbers of tests by age of candidates were not compiled before 1998.

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what percentage of (a) deaths and (b) serious injuries in road traffic accidents occurred to passengers where they and the car driver are under 21 years of age, broken down by police authority area, in each of the last three years. [17834]

Mr. Jamieson: The percentages of road accident casualties who were aged under 21 and a passenger in a car with a driver who was also under 21 are shown in the table. It should be noted that these percentages are based on small numbers of casualties, in particular, the numbers of this category of fatalities did not exceed 10 for any police force in any of the years for which figures are shown.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many heavy goods vehicles have been inspected while driving on roads in the UK in the last 12 months. [17882]

Mr. Jamieson: The tables show the total number of different types of inspections of heavy goods vehicles carried out at roadside spot checks by vehicle examiners and traffic examiners in the period from 1 November 2000 to 31 October 2001. The number of individual heavy goods vehicles checked is not readily available.

Roadworthiness	Number of checks
HGV motor vehicles	55,693
Trailers	19,016
Foreign vehicles	4,149
Emission only checks	9,309
Total	88,167

Housing Revenue Account

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement about rent restructuring and the housing revenue account subsidy allocation for 2002–03. [18433]

Ms Keeble: Following extensive consultations last year, we announced our plans to make the rents charged by councils and housing associations fairer and to improve tenants' choice in our housing policy statement "Quality and Choice: A Decent Home for All—The Way Forward for Housing" last December. Starting in April 2002, we will begin a series of gradual changes that will result in rents being linked to the value and size of a property and manual earnings in the area.

Moving to a fairer system will have real benefits social rents will remain affordable and generally well below market levels;

there will be no large rent increases: we have set a limit of RPI + 0.5 per cent. +£2 on the annual increase in any individual rent; and average rents will increase more slowly than in the past: in particular council rents will increase at only half the rate over the last 10 years.

I can today announce a further safeguard. Concerns have been expressed about the effect of the rent restructuring formula on a small proportion of properties in high value areas—around 0.5 per cent. of the total social housing stock. To meet these concerns we have decided that the reforms should not lead to rents exceeding a maximum £100 a week in 2002–03 for any council or housing association home. Lower figures will apply for smaller properties. The maximum will rise by RPI + 1 per cent. a year. Some social housing rents are already above these levels and they will be frozen or reduced over time. Average council rents will remain around half the maximum figure.

Housing associations are free to decide how quickly they move their rents to the levels required by rent restructuring although they should aim to complete the process as far as possible in the next 10 years. We have advised the Chairman of the Housing Corporation that, where housing associations do not need to put their rents up in order to remain financially sound, they should not be pressed to do so.

I understand that the computer systems used by some local authorities limit their ability to apply different rent changes to different properties next April. I am advising those authorities that for 2002–03 they should apply the average percentage rent change suggested in our restructuring proposals for their stock to all of their rents except where this might involve breaches of the RPI + 0.5 per cent. + £2 limit, or the maximum rents announced today. The subsidy system will not penalise authorities for not implementing the reforms at an individual property level.

We will consult further with local authorities and tenant groups about the movement from averaged rent increases to the rents which we expect to be charged for individual properties by the end of the 10-year transitional period.

Progress on rent restructuring will be kept under constant review. We will monitor the impact closely each year and will conduct further research on this.

The Government have already doubled the resources allocated to local authorities for investment in housing and are committed to increasing them further. In particular, we have committed ourselves to ensuring that all social housing meets the decent homes standard by 2010. This will involve eliminating the £19 billion council housing investment backlog we inherited.

Accordingly, my Department is today issuing consultation drafts of the Housing Revenue Account subsidy and Item 8 determinations for 2002–03 which set out proposed subsidy allocations for individual authorities. These are being issued following consultation with authorities and others in which there was general support for the objectives of the proposed changes but concerns were expressed about aspects of the proposals.

In response to these concerns I should like to make it clear that:

There is no intention that the technical changes designed to bring the assumptions within the subsidy system back into line with actual costs and revenues should be used to either reduce or increase the aggregate level of resources available to councils nationally. Indeed, the starting assumption in the forthcoming Spending Review will be that these changes should be resource neutral overall.

Some redistribution of resources between authorities is inevitable if we are to move to a fairer system for distributing resources. However, in view of the concerns expressed, we will review the formulae used in determining subsidy with local authorities to ensure that they reflect as accurately as possible the relative costs faced by different authorities. The HRA subsidy system for 2003–04 will be adjusted as necessary to reflect these consultations and the outcome of the Spending Review.

The proposal to abolish "mitigation"—the mechanism used to ensure that councils with a higher proportion of tenants in receipt of housing benefit are not heavily penalised by the rent rebate subsidy system—will not be implemented at this stage. We will consult further on this and a decision on the future of mitigation will be taken in due course. All the other changes proposed for 2002–2003 will be implemented from 1 April 2002.

Copies of the draft determinations and supporting material are being placed in the Library of the House, and will be available on my Department's website. These allocations are based on information available to us from authorities as at 29 October 2001, and may change as that information is refined. Authorities have until 17 December to comment on the draft determinations.

Council Tax

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will estimate (a) the number of council tax exempt properties on grounds of occupation by student households in each local authority with council tax setting powers and (b) the sums paid to those local authorities by way of compensation. [17727]

Dr. Whitehead: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him on 31 October 2001, Official Report, column 675W. The additional amount of revenue support grant received by authorities to compensate them for properties exempted from the council tax because they consist of student households is equal to the amount of council tax forgone. We estimate therefore that the amount paid is about £90 million for England as a whole.

Rail Services (Huntingdon)

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many times the West Anglian Great Northern railway service between Huntingdon and King's Cross and King's Cross and Huntingdon has been late in each of the past six months, as a percentage of the total number of journeys; and what the reasons were for the delays. [17106]

Mr. Jamieson: The information is not available in the form requested. The latest performance figures for the West Anglia Great Northern (WAGN) franchise as a whole are indicated in the table. Services are deemed to be late if they arrived at their destination beyond five minutes of timetable.

Period	Percentage late
1 April 2001 to 29 April 2001	21.1
30 April 2001 to 27 May 2001	20.5
28 May 2001 to 24 June 2001	20.3
25 June 2001 to 22 July 2001	21.6
23 July 2001 to 19 August 2001	22.8
20 August 2001 to 16 September 2001	20.4
17 September 2001 to 14 October 2001	23.1

WAGN are still subject to 30 Emergency Speed Restrictions. These, coupled with a shortage of drivers, are the principal reasons for disruption. To remedy the driver shortage, WAGN has twice the number of drivers in training for which it currently has vacancies.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what revision there has been of the timetable for planned track improvements between Huntingdon and King's Cross since January; [17110]

(2) what improvements are planned for the railway track between Huntingdon and King's Cross. [17108]

Mr. Jamieson: Railtrack's 2001 Network Management Statement, published in May, identifies the projects on which the company is working as well as expected completion dates. The Administrator has taken over Railtrack's contractual commitments. For the future, the East Coast Main Line upgrade proposals will feature improvements in this area. Further announcements will be made in due course. Emergency Speed Restrictions still apply across much of West Anglia Great Northern's network, while Railtrack carry out tracks maintenance and renewal of track following the Hatfield derailment last year.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what improvements are planned to Huntingdon and St. Neots railway stations; [17104]

(2) what revision has been made to the timetable for planned improvements to Huntingdon and St. Neots railway stations. [17105]

Mr. Jamieson: Both stations are included in the Strategic Rail Authority's Incremental Outputs Statements scheme (IOS), a programme to deliver modern facilities at stations. The specific items to be provided and the timetable will be dependent on the programme's site surveys which are currently on-going. I understand that WAGN are also considering the possibility of extending the car park at St. Neots and for a bus interchange at Huntingdon.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many passengers travelled on the Huntingdon to King's Cross and King's Cross to Huntingdon services in each of the past 36 months. [17107]

Mr. Jamieson: The information is not available in the form requested. Across all West Anglia Great Northern services an estimated 62.5 million passenger journeys were made in 2000–2001, 61.2 million in 1999–2000, and 55.7 million in 1998–1999. West Anglia Great Northern's Passengers In Excess of Capacity (PIXC) figures for each of the last three years were 2.3 per cent. in 2000, 1.8 per cent. in 1999 and 1.2 per cent. in 1998. Train operators are required to keep PIXC to 3 per cent. or below.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to introduce a high-speed rail link between Huntingdon and King's Cross. [17109]

Mr. Jamieson: I am not aware of any plans for a high-speed link. The development of such plans would be a matter for the industry to pursue in response to demand for a high speed service.

Neighbourhood Renewal Oldham

Mrs. Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will announce his decision on additional neighbourhood renewal fund resources for Oldham. [17355]

Ms Keeble: My officials have already explained to Oldham metropolitan borough council that there are no additional neighbourhood renewal fund allocations this year. We have written to the council offering discussions on how to address particular problems they are facing. Ideally these discussions should be informed by the Oldham Independent Review looking at issues raised by the disturbances in the summer, which is due to report in December.

Planning Application, Lymm

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what steps he intends to take to ensure that the guidance in PPG3 is complied with following the inspector's decision in the planning appeal concerning Oughtrington Lane, Lymm; [17907]

(2) what steps he intends to take to protect greenfield sites in areas where a council's committed land supply meets or exceeds regional planning guidance requirements; [17909]

(3) if he will make a statement on the implications for urban regeneration in the north-west of the recent decision concerning the planning application at Oughtrington Lane, Lymm; [17908]

(4) what steps he intends to take to protect greenfield sites in north Warrington following the recent appeal decision concerning the planning application for Oughtrington Lane, Lymm; and if he will make a statement. [17910]

Ms Keeble: Warrington borough council has challenged in the High Court the Inspector's decision in the planning appeal concerning Oughtrington Lane, Lymm. As the appeal is now the subject of a High Court challenge it would not be appropriate to comment further on the matter.

Through Planning Policy Guidance Note 3 "Housing" (PPG3) this Government have introduced a series of tough new measures designed to meet the country's future housing needs in the most sustainable way possible. PPG3 includes a sequential approach which gives priority to re-using brownfield sites in urban areas in preference to developing greenfield sites and we have a national target that, by 2008, 60 per cent. of additional housing should be provided on previously developed land and through conversions of existing buildings.

We expect local authorities to update their development plans to reflect PPG3 and to test all planning applications for housing development against the policies it contains. Local authorities are directed to consult the Secretary of State before giving planning permission for major housing developments on greenfield land allocated in their plans.

Glasgow Airport

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps are being taken to review the security and safety arrangements in Glasgow airport with regards to the building programme in progress following the events of 11 September. [18180]

Mr. Jamieson: All construction work at an UK airport that has a security element must be registered, managed and approved by my Department prior to commencement. All significant projects are surveyed during construction and on completion to ensure compliance with the UK National Aviation Security Programme.

River Lune (Northern Bypass)

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he has had on modifications to the proposed Northern Bypass to include an additional bridge over the River Lune. [18249]

Mr. Jamieson: Ministers have not conducted any such discussions. Lancashire county council are currently reviewing proposals regarding the M6 Heysham link.

Planning

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in the last year for which figures are available how many planning applications (a) were decided by local authorities, (b) went to appeal and (c) were dealt with at a public inquiry. [17354]

Ms Keeble: In 2000–01, 420,000 applications for planning permission were decided in England. This resulted in 14,100 appeals against refusal or against conditions imposed in granting a permission, of which 1,400 were subsequently withdrawn. As of today's date 12,200 of the remaining appeals have been decided and 540 (4 per cent.) were decided by public inquiry.

An applicant can also appeal if an authority has not decided the application within eight weeks of its being submitted, or a longer period if agreed by both parties in writing. In 2000–01, there were 1,600 appeals against non-determination of planning applications, of which 560 were withdrawn. Of the remaining appeals, 930 have been decided and 220 (24 per cent.) were decided by public local inquiry.

PRIME MINISTER

Afghanistan

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 6 November 2001, Official Report, column 197W, which British Muslim organisations have specifically expressed support for the coalition's military action against the Taliban regime in Afghanistan. [14709]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my previous answer.

Islamic Society of Britain

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister when he last met representatives of the Islamic Society of Britain; and what plans he has to do so in future. [15122]

The Prime Minister: I have had a number of meetings recently with representatives of the faith communities including representatives of the Muslim community. As with previous Administrations, it is not my practice to provide details of such meetings.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister if the Islamic Society of Britain has signified its support for the Coalition's military action against the Taliban regime in Afghanistan. [15123]

The Prime Minister: It would not be appropriate for me to comment on behalf of the Islamic Society of Britain.

Cabinet Secretary

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what factors he will take into account when deciding who to appoint as Cabinet Secretary; whether the successful applicant will be drawn from the civil service; and if he will make a statement. [17360]

The Prime Minister: The Secretary of the Cabinet reaches retirement age in October 2002. I will make a statement on his succession when I am ready to do so.

House of Lords

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister whether individuals appointed by him to the House of Lords to act as Ministers following further reforms will be expected to serve a minimum time in that capacity in order to qualify for life membership of the Chamber. [17972]

The Prime Minister: As the Government's White Paper on further reform of the House of Lords, "The House of Lords—Completing the Reform" (Cm 5291), makes clear, there will be no life membership of the second Chamber, other than as a transitional measure for existing life peers at the time that the reforms come into force.

The Government are consulting on the length of the terms for appointed members, with the choice being between terms of five, 10 or 15 years.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Expenditure (Scotland)

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list, in real terms, for each year since 1979 (a) the total sums of money spent directly by her Department in Scotland and (b) the total sums of money allocated by her Department for spending in Scotland through (i) the Scottish Office, (ii) the Scotland Office and (iii) the Scottish Executive. [16182]

Mr. Caborn: The information requested is not readily available. Public expenditure information by territory and function is available in Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2001–02 (Cm 5101) for the years 1995–96 to 1999–2000, and earlier years are available in previous PESA publications. Copies of these publications are available in the Library of the House of Commons.

Local Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list those local bodies which were set up under legislation which is the responsibility of her Department and its predecessors since May 1997. [17578]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has not set up any local bodies under legislation since May 1997.

World Athletics Championships

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport who made the decision to support the staging of the 2005 World Athletics Championships. [16654]

Tessa Jowell: The decision to bid for the 2005 World Athletics Championships was taken by UK Athletics with the support of the Government, Sport England and UK Sport.

Regional Arts Development

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what schemes and programmes are available to support and encourage the development of artists and musicians in the regions, with particular reference to the Teeside area. [17800]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Funding for the Arts is a matter for the Arts Council of England and the Regional Arts Boards. As a result of last year's spending review, however, the Arts Council's grant-in-aid budget will increase by over £100 million, from £233 million in 2000–01 to £338 million in 2003–04. Northern Arts, which includes the Teesside area, will see its budget for supporting the arts increase by £1.4 million, or nearly 11 per cent., over the same period.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the support provided by her Department for the arts in the regions. [17799]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 23 November 2001]: My Department issues grant-in-aid to the Arts Council of England, the main funding body for the arts in England, which is in turn committed to delegating increasing amounts of that funding to the regions. Grant-in-aid to the Arts Council itself is worth £253 million this year, of which £107 million is going directly to the regions. Grant-in-aid is set to increase to £338 million, of which £143 million will go directly to the regions, by 2000–04.

Listed Places of Worship (Grant)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) when she intends to announce details of the grant scheme for listed places of worship; [17640]

(2) if she has selected a preferred bidder to become operator of the grant scheme for listed places of worship. [17641]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The Listed Places of Worship (LPW) Grant Scheme is an interim scheme which will return in grant aid the difference between 5 per cent. and the actual amount spent on VAT on eligible repairs and maintenance to listed places of worship. It is intended to bridge the two-year gap leading up to the 2003 review by the European Commission of the permitted reduced VAT rates in the sixth VAT Directive. Full details of the scheme operator, its criteria and application forms will be available in early December.

Television Licences

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many older people are in receipt of a free television licence in the Tynemouth constituency. [18003]

Mr. Caborn: Everyone aged 75 or over is entitled to benefit from a free television licence. TV Licensing, which administers this concession for the BBC as Licensing Authority, is not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, estimates based on the 1991 Census indicate that there were approximately 7,000 people aged 75 or over in the Tynemouth constituency.

Lottery Funding

Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the average lottery funding to date is for parliamentary constituencies in (a) England and (b) the United Kingdom. [16980]

Mr. Caborn: According to my Department's National Lottery Awards database, which holds information supplied to us from the lottery distributors, the average lottery funding to date for parliamentary constituencies in England is £12.9 million and is £12.4 million for the United Kingdom.

Football

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many football matches she has attended since 7 June in her official capacity. [17199]

Tessa Jowell: I have attended no football matches in an official capacity. However, my right hon. Friend the Minister for Sport has attended four England international matches, but no domestic matches.

Giant's Causeway

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what responses she has made to the UNESCO World Heritage Centre regarding the Giant's Causeway. [16785]

Mr. Caborn: The UK Government recently received a request from UNESCO's World Heritage Centre for a report on the current situation at the Giant's Causeway. My Department has lead responsibility for compliance with the World Heritage Convention and will be responding to that request as soon as possible, and certainly before the next meeting of the World Heritage Committee in Helsinki in December.

As yet there is no tangible threat to the integrity or heritage value of the Giant's Causeway World Heritage Site. The competition devised by Moyle district council for the development of its land has not yet resulted in a firm planning proposal coming before the Department of the Environment, Northern Ireland. As and when such a proposal does materialise, it will be considered carefully in accordance with the requirements of the Northern Ireland planning system; the need to protect the integrity and setting of the site will obviously be a material and significant factor. My Department intends to keep UNESCO fully informed of developments.

Public Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many public appointments she has made and to what position in the last 12 months. [17200]

Tessa Jowell: In the last 12 months, my predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Chris Smith) and I made 107 public appointments to public bodies as detailed. This does not include appointments to bodies sponsored by my Department where my role is to advise on appointments made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, or through him, by Her Majesty the Queen.

TREASURY

Railtrack

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Financial Services Authority is undertaking investigations into potential insider dealing regarding Railtrack shares in the period immediately before the suspension of shares in Railtrack; and if he will make a statement. [16687]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Until midnight on 30 November, the Financial Services Authority has no power to investigate or prosecute insider dealing. Until then the primary responsibility for investigating and prosecuting insider dealing rests with the Department of Trade and Industry.

Private Finance Initiative

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total current gross liabilities are of the public sector under PFI and PPP scheme, (a) set up since 1996–97 and (b) that are planned. [17130]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Table C18 of the 2001 Financial Statement and Budget Report shows the total estimated payments for services under all signed PFI contracts to be made by the public sector from 2000–01 to 2025–26, based on information provided by Departments. However, the collation of detailed information apportioning estimated payments by year of contract signature could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Compliance Costs

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies he has commissioned since April 2000 on the compliance costs imposed on businesses by the tax system; and when these studies will be published. [17211]

Dawn Primarolo: Studies have been commissioned into the compliance costs of VAT, Corporation Tax, Customs procedures for international trade, and excise gambling duties. Ministers will consider the results at the completion of each study.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the administrative cost to British business of the UK tax system; and if he will make a statement. [17212]

Dawn Primarolo: It is precisely to address this question that we have asked the Inland Revenue and Customs to carry out a four year research programme into the compliance costs of the tax system.

Cigarette Imports

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 141W, on cigarette imports, on what basis the minimum indicative level of 800 was calculated. [17749]

Mr. Boateng: The indicative levels for importations of excise goods for own use were agreed unanimously by the Finance Ministers of the EU member states at the ECOFIN meeting of 24 June 1991 and incorporated into Council Directive 92/12/EEC. 800 cigarettes were considered a reasonable indicator, with other factors laid down in Directive 92/12, to help distinguish between smuggling and legitimate imports for own use.

VAT (Sixth-form Colleges)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to re-assess the charging of value added tax on purchases made by sixth-form colleges; and if he will make a statement. [17675]

Mr. Boateng: There are no such plans. The funding of sixth-form colleges takes into account the VAT they incur on their purchases.

Smuggling

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many vehicles were seized for illegally importing alcohol or tobacco in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001; and how many were destined for (i) the north-east and (ii) south Tyneside. [17403]

Mr. Boateng: Customs' records of the number of vehicles seized do not disaggregate between either the nature of the offences or the destination of the vehicles involved in each case.

For the number of vehicles seized by Customs I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington) on 30 October 2001, Official Report, column 625W.

VAT (Medical Equipment)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is regarding the recovery of VAT by (a) doctors' surgeries and (b) local patients' participation groups on the purchase of medical equipment. [17386]

Mr. Boateng: Under longstanding agreements governing EC and UK VAT law VAT can only be recovered to the extent that it relates to taxable activities. Purchases of medical equipment by doctors for use in their surgeries, including through local patient participation groups, are not connected with the making of taxable supplies and cannot therefore be recovered.

Gambling Review

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on tax revenue if recommendation 75 of the gambling review is initiated. [17352]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 23 November 2001]: As recommendation 75, if implemented, would not apply to pubs that already had more than two machines when the gambling review was published, the Government believe there would be a negligible effect upon tax revenues.

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made, following the publication of the Budd report into gambling, of the impact on Government revenue if (a) all the recommendations, (b) those concerning the National Lottery, (c) those concerning gaming machines in social clubs, (d) those concerning gaming machines in public houses and (e) those concerning small stake gaming machines and amusement-with-prize machines in seaside arcades will be accepted. [17370]

Ruth Kelly: It is not possible to give accurate estimates of the revenue effects of individual elements of the package.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the loss of income to the Treasury that would ensue if all local authorities used their powers under Recommendation 43 of the Gambling Review report to ban all types of gambling in their locality. [18073]

Ruth Kelly: The Government have made no such estimate.

Pensions

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he collates on the proportion of assets in funded public sector pension schemes represented by companies subject to regulation as utilities. [18024]

Mr. Andrew Smith: None.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the value of the tax relief given in respect of individual pension accounts in the current financial year. [18028]

Ruth Kelly: Claims for tax relief from pension providers for individual pension accounts are not recorded separately from those for personal and stakeholder pensions in general, the information from administrative sources is therefore not available.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) of the members of the post-1989 private occupational pension schemes, if he will estimate the numbers of members earning (a) up to £25,000 per annum, (b) £26,000 to £35,000, (c) £36,000 to £45,000, (d) £46,000 to £55,000 (e) £56,000 to £65,000, (f) £66,000 to £75,000, (g) £76,000 to £85,000 and (h) £86,000 to £95,000 in the last year for which he has data; [17811]

(2) if he will estimate the number of members in pre-1987 private sector occupational pension schemes earning (a) £10,000 to £20,000 per annum, (b) £21,000 to £30,000, (c) £31,000 to £40,000, (d) £41,000 to £50,000, (e) £51,000 to £60,000, (f) £61,000 to £70,000, (g) £71,000 to £80,000, (h) £81,000 to £90,000, (i) £91,000 to £100,000 and (j) £101,000 and above in the last year for which he has data; [17820]

(3) if he will estimate the number of members of a private occupational pensions scheme established on or after 14 March 1989, or who became members of a previously established scheme on or after 1 June 1989; [17810]

(4) if he will estimate the numbers contributing to AVC and FSAVC schemes earning up to £95,400 in 2001–02; [17818]

(5) if he will estimate the number of members who joined private sector occupational pension schemes before 14 March 1989 earning between, (a) £10,000 to £20,000 per annum, (b) £21,000 to £30,000, (c) £31,000 to £40,000, (d) £41,000 to £50,000, (e) £51,000 to £60,000, (f) £61,000 to £70,000, (g) £71,000 to £80,000 (h) £81,000 to £90,000, (i) £91,000 to £100,000 and (j) £101,000 and above in the last year for which he has data. [17819]

Ruth Kelly: Administrative data on these are not held centrally and estimates are therefore not available.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received in support of the climate change levy; and from whom. [17483]

Mr. Boateng: Numerous representations were received during the development of the levy, and these are listed in Table A.3 of Lord Marshall's November 1998 Report "Economic Instruments and the business use of energy".

More recently, the Government have received representations supporting the levy from a variety of environmental organisations and other interested parties.

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 538W, on national insurance numbers, if he will disaggregate the payroll errors found in the tax year 2000–01 by type. [17224]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Following my answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 538W, the breakdown of payroll discrepancies found in the tax year 2000–01 by type is as follows:

Type of discrepancy	Number of discrepancies
Personal details on payroll—resolved without amendment to national insurance record	420,937
Personal details on national insurance record—resolved with amendment to national insurance record	281,559
None of these has security/benefit fraud implications	31,010
Incomplete/incorrect national insurance numbers on payroll	36,802
Total	770,308

Of the total figure, 22,777 cases were referred for potential fraud investigation. None of the 31,010 unresolved personal details cases were referred for investigation.

Leukaemia

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases of leukaemia have occurred in (a) adults and (b) children over the last 10 years in (i) Plymouth and (ii) Devon; and how these figures compare to the average in England and Wales. [17335]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 26 November 2001:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on how many cases of Leukemia have occurred in (a) adults and (b) children over the last ten years in (i) Plymouth and (ii) Devon; and how these figures compare to the average in England and Wales. (17335)

The numbers of registrations of newly diagnosed cases of leukaemia[1] in children and adults in Plymouth Unitary Authority, the whole of Devon, and England and Wales in 1989–1998 (the most recent 10 years for which figures are available) are given in the table below. The corresponding age standardised rates are shown to enable comparisons to be made between areas.

	Plymouth UA	Devon	England and Wales
Children (0–14) years
Number of cases	24	76	4,206
Rate[2]	5.0	4.2	4.2
Adults (15 years and over)
Number of cases	314	1,358	49,642
Rate[3]	12.7	11.0	9.7

[1] Leukaemia was identified in 1989–1994 by ICD9 codes 202.4 and 204–208; and in 1995 onwards by ICD10 codes C91-C95

[2] Rates per 100,000 population. Directly age standardised using equal weights for the three age groups, 0–4, 5–9 and 10–14

[3] Rate per 100,000 population. Directly age standardised using the European standard population truncated by removing the age group 0–14

Mortgages

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the ability of mortgage lenders to implement the new regulatory regime for the selling of mortgages by August 2002. [17713]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The Financial Services Authority (FSA) is considering this as part of a wider review of the responses to the consultation on its draft mortgage sourcebook—published by the FSA as CP 98.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations have been received on the proposal for mortgage lenders to monitor mortgage brokers' adherence to the new rules for regulating the selling of mortgages. [17714]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 23 November 2001]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford (Mr. Kidney) on 20 November 2001, Official Report, column 137W.

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what recent discussions he has had with the Financial Services Authority regarding the implementation of the new regulatory regime for mortgages; and if he will make a statement; [18033]

(2) what representations he has received from the Council of Mortgage Lenders on (a) the inclusion of mortgage advice and mortgage intermediaries in the new regulatory regime and (b) on moving the date of N3 from August 2002 to 2003; and if he will make a statement. [18034]

Ruth Kelly: I hope to make an announcement about the timing of N3 and related matters shortly.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will modify his proposals for mortgage regulation by (a) limiting the circumstances in which pre-application disclosure will apply and (b) putting back N3 to February 2003. [18168]

Ruth Kelly: I hope to make an announcement on the timing of N3 and related matters shortly.

Insurance (Genetic Information)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance he issues on the use of individual genetic information by insurance companies. [17393]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The Government have established an advisory body, the Genetics and Insurance Committee (GAIC), to consider applications by the insurance industry on the use of specific genetic tests and to make recommendations on whether particular tests are appropriate for use by the insurance industry. Insurance companies have agreed to abide by the decisions of GAIC.

The Government published their response to the Fifth Report from the Science and Technology Committee, on genetics and insurance, on 23 October 2001. The Government support the strengthened Association of British Insurers moratorium on the use of genetic test results by insurance companies, which commenced on 1 November 2001.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance (a) has been and (b) will be given to regional offices of the collector of taxes as regards collection of (i) income tax and (ii) national insurance balances outstanding, as a result of foot and mouth disease. [17394]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Comprehensive guidance has been given to regional and local offices throughout the FMD outbreak. The Revenue is currently working on further guidance with Customs, which will be issued shortly. It is impractical and premature to give details in advance.

The Revenue's initial guidance outlined the need to be sympathetic, considerate and helpful to people and business adversely affected by FMD.

They introduced a number of measures to help businesses during this very difficult time and continue to offer sympathetic support on a case by case basis to those that have been affected by the outbreak.

Departmental Promotions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department spent on information literature, advertising and campaign material in the financial years (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98, (d) 1998–99, (e) 1999–2000 and (f) 2000–01; and if he will make a statement. [12254]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

VAT Registrations

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the (a) stock and (b) net change to stock of businesses as measured by VAT registrations in each region and nation of the UK in each year since 1996, (i) in total and (ii) per capita of population. [17725]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 26 November 2001:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning the stock and net change of businesses as measured by VAT registrations in each region and nation of the UK since 1996 (17725).

The information requested is shown in the following two tables.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost was of administering and collecting (a) stamp duty on shares, (b) stamp duty on property and (c) inheritance tax in the last financial year. [15926]

Ruth Kelly: Figures for collection costs per £ collected, for stamp duty and inheritance tax in 2000–01, will appear in the Board of Inland Revenue's next report.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of stamp duty on shares on the competitiveness of the UK financial services industry. [15918]

Ruth Kelly: There is no convincing evidence that stamp duty on shares harms the competitiveness of the UK financial services industry. Stamp duty applies to shares in UK companies wherever they are traded so there is no discrimination between London markets and foreign markets.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what additional revenue he raised in 2000–01 from property and land transactions in the East Devon constituency as a result of the increases in stamp duty in the March 2000 Budget. [17273]

Ruth Kelly: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what additional revenue he raised in 2000–01 from property and land transactions in the Buckingham constituency as a result of the increases in stamp duty in the March 2000 Budget. [17840]

Ruth Kelly: This information is not available.

Economic Growth

Peter Bradley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the growth rate was of the (a) urban and (b) rural economy (i) in the last financial year, (ii) in the last five years and (iii) in the last 10 years; [17147]

(2) what the per capital GDP was in the last financial year for people in (a) inner city, (b) urban, (c) towns with population of less than 10,000 and (d) rural areas. [17146]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Peter Bradley, dated 26 November 2001:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your two recent questions on estimates of economic growth and GDP per head in rural and urban areas of the United Kingdom (17146/7).

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) does not currently produce estimates of GDP per head on an urban/rural basis. ONS is aware of the growing need for statistics and information to be available on rural and urban geographies. To this end, we are playing an active role on a cross government group being led by officials from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, which is developing guidance on common definitions of rural and urban areas. These definitions will then form the basis of developing statistics for those geographies.

ONS currently compiles and publishes estimates of GDP and GDP per capita by Nomenclature of Units for Territorial Statistics (NUTS) areas. There are five levels of NUTS in the UK and GDP estimates are produced for the first three. NUTS level 3 is the geography that is most closely aligned to county councils, unitary authority and metropolitan areas and is also the lowest geographical level that data are available.

ONS last published estimates of GDP at the NUTS level 3 in April 2001, providing annual (calendar year) estimates for 1993 to 1998. These data are available through the House of Commons library. ONS plans to publish estimates for 1999 in the first half of 2002.

Suicides

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the (a) total and (b) percentage of suicides in each year since 1988, broken down by (i) teenage men, (ii) teenage women, (iii) doctors, (iv) chemists, (v) farmers and (vi) clergymen. [16894]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Paul Flynn, dated 26 November 2001:

As National Statistician I have asked to reply to your question concerning the total number and percentage of suicides in each year since 1988 broken down by (a) teenage men, (b) teenage women, (c) doctors, (d) chemists (e) farmers, and (f) clergymen (16894).

The data requested can be found in the table below:

European Commission

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy towards European Community support for the (a) A Soul for Europe project and (b) Ecumenical Centre in Brussels. [17619]

Ruth Kelly: The managers of any project or centre can make a case to the European Commission for support from the EC budget. The European Commission implements the EC budget in accordance with the Treaty, EC legislative decisions, and the amounts agreed in the annual EC budget by the budgetary authority (Council and European Parliament).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the nature of the (a) United Kingdom and (b) European Community support for (i) Caritas Europe, (ii) the Churches' Commission for Migrants in Europe, (iii) the Commission of the Bishops' Conference of the European Community, (iv) the Conference of European Justice and Peace Commissioners, (v) the Jesuit Refugees Service Europe and (vi) the Quaker Council for European Affairs. [17623]

Ruth Kelly: Any body or organisation can make a case to the European Commission for support from the EC budget. The European Commission implements the EC budget in accordance with the Treaty, EC legislative decisions, and the amounts agreed in the annual EC budget by the budgetary authority (Council and European Parliament).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what European Community funds have supported the organisation 200 Jeunes pour une citoyenneté Européenne de l'an 2000; and what is the UK share thereof. [17618]

Ruth Kelly: The UK contributes to the EC budget as a whole and not to individual programmes. For the 2000 EC budget the UK gross contribution after abatement was 15.09 per cent.

EU Economic Reform Proposals

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement listing the United Kingdom's progress in implementing each of the economic reform proposals agreed at the Lisbon Summit. [17741]

Ruth Kelly: The Government are committed to implementing the economic reform proposals agreed at the Lisbon Summit. We have made progress in numerous areas, including: an integrated and liberalised EU telecoms market; the e-Money Directive; research networks; the Small Firms Charter; the Multi-Annual Programme for Enterprise; and the legal framework for unbundling of the local shop. European economic reform will be the subject of a forthcoming White Paper, which will be published for the Spanish Presidency.

EU Fraud and Waste

Mr. Spring: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on combating fraud and waste in the EU's budget following the Court of Auditors report of 12 November. [17384]

Ruth Kelly: The Government's policies and actions taken to combat fraud and waste are set out in the latest White Paper on European Community Finances which was published in July. The Government are considering carefully the European Court of Auditor's (ECA) report and will send their detailed comments to the Commission by 20 December as part of the normal follow-up procedure, ensuring that both Houses receive an advance copy. Any amount of fraud or waste in the EC budget is unacceptable. That is why the Government are a strong supporter of Commission reform and why they advocated the creation of the new anti-fraud office, OLAF. It is important to note however, that the irregularities reported by the ECA are not all fraud and waste; the majority are small administrative errors which are corrected at a later date.

Census

Matthew Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of census forms have been returned. [17570]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Matthew Green, dated 26 November 2001:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent question about the percentage of census forms that have been returned (17570).

Currently ONS estimates that the 2001 Census response rate will reach 98 per cent. of households.

Postback response for England and Wales as a whole was estimated to be around 88 per cent. of forms. Estimates from field managers reports suggest a further 7 per cent. of forms were collected by the field staff in the follow-up exercise. Judging from our 1991 knowledge possibly 3 per cent. of forms are expected to relate to vacant properties or second residences.

Public Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those local bodies which were set up under legislation which is the responsibility of his Department since May 1997. [17614]

Ruth Kelly: No local bodies have been set up under legislation that is the responsibility of HM Treasury.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list those public bodies which are the responsibility of his Department and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000; [17613]

(2) if he will list those public bodies to which his Department appoints members and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000. [17612]

Ruth Kelly: Public Bodies 2000 sets out information on non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs), certain public corporations (including nationalised industries) and NHS bodies. There are four types of NDPB: executive NDPBs; advisory NDPBs; tribunal NDPBs; and boards of visitors to penal establishments. The next edition will be published around the end of the year. Information about taskforces, annual reports and ad hoc advisory groups and reviews is set out in an annual report, published by the Cabinet Office.

Copies of Public Bodies 2000 are in the Library of the House and this publication may be accessed via the Cabinet Office website http://www.official-documents.co.uk/document/caboff/pb00/pb00.htm. Copies of the annual report on taskforces and similar bodies have also been placed in the Library of the House and the annual report is being made available on the Cabinet Office website.

Ministers of the Chancellor's Departments and agencies make appointments to a number of bodies that are not public bodies so are not listed in "Public Bodies. These bodies, their status and the numbers of ministerial appointments are listed in the table:

Name of body	Status of body	Number of ministerial appointments
Building Societies Commission[1]	Part of the Registry of Friendly Societies (Government body)	8 Commissioners
Crown Estate Commission	Crown Office	8 Commissioners
Financial Services Authority	Private Company limited by Guarantee	14 Appointments
Friendly Societies Commission[1]	Part of the Registry of Friendly Societies (Government body)	6 Appointments
Public Works Loan Board	Government body	16 Appointments

[1] These bodies will cease to exist in their current form on 30 November 2001 with the bringing into force of the FSMA.

Treasury Ministers also make a total of nine non-executive appointments to the Management Boards of the Royal Mint, Office for National Statistics and National Savings, as well as 105 part-time lay appointments to VAT and Duties Tribunals.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the gross costs of the regulatory impact assessment for (a) The Insurance (Fee) Regulations 2001, (b) the Credit Unions (Increase in Limits on Periods by Persons Too Young to be Members of Periods for Repayments of Loans) Order 2001, (c) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001 and (d) the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001. [17698]

Ruth Kelly: These costs are shown in the published Regulatory Impact Assessments copies of which can be found in the House Libraries.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the gross costs of the regulatory impact assessment for (a) the Value Tax (Conversions of Buildings) Order 2001, (b) Starting Up in Business, (c) the Replacement of Personal Pensions Transfer Regulations, (d) the Capital Allowance Bill, (e) the Abolition of Withholding Tax on Bond Interest and Extensions of Routine Information Powers on Savings Income, (f) the Authorised Mileage Rates and (g) Internet Filing of Tax Information. [17699]

Dawn Primarolo: These costs are shown in the Regulatory Impact Assessments for each of the measures which are in the House Libraries and published on departmental internets.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the total annual running cost to firms of administering the working families' tax credit he estimates is borne by firms with no working families' tax credit recipients. [17740]

Dawn Primarolo: None.

Higher Rate Taxpayers (Folkestone and Hythe)

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many higher rate taxpayers there were in the constituency of Folkestone and Hythe for each year since April 1997. [17736]

Dawn Primarolo: There were 2,700 higher rate income taxpayers in the constituency of Folkestone and Hythe in the 1999–2000 tax year. This estimate is based on the Survey of Personal Incomes. I regret that estimates are not available for earlier years.

Higher Rate Taxpayers (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many higher rate taxpayers there were in the Buckingham constituency in each year since April 1997. [17849]

Dawn Primarolo: There were 10,200 higher rate income taxpayers in the constituency of Buckingham in the 1999–2000 tax year. This estimate is based on the Survey of Personal Incomes. I regret that estimates are not available for earlier years.

Unemployment (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged 18 to 24 were unemployed for more than six months in each year since May 1992 in the Buckingham constituency. [17847]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. John Bercow, dated 26 November 2001:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the number of people aged 18 to 24 years who were unemployed for more than six months for each year since May 1992 in the constituency of Buckingham. (17847)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics for unemployment from surveys following the internationally standard International Labour Organisation definition. However, for the Buckingham parliamentary constituency the survey sample size is too small to provide estimates. ONS also compiles statistics of claimants of unemployment-related benefits. The claimant count consists of all people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or National Insurance credits at Employment Service local offices. They must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for and actively seeking work during the week in which the claim is made.

Prior to January 1996 comparable figures for earlier years are not available on the same geographical basis. Information on computerised claims by age and duration for parliamentary constituencies from January 1996 were based on the ward boundaries of the 1991 census while figures before are based on the ward boundaries of the 1981 census and are available from June 1985 to January 1996.

The information requested is given in the attached table

Claimant aged 18 to 24 claiming for six months or more in the Buckingham Parliamentary Constituency for each May 1992 to May 2001 (Computerised claims only)

	18 to 24
May 1992	187
May 1993	217
May 1994	140
May 1995	113
May 1996	79
May 1997	38
May 1998	24
May 1999	11

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate is provided by the Government Actuary's latest survey of occupational pension schemes on (a) the proportion of such shares which undertake annual reviews of the level of pensions currently payable, (b) the proportion of occupational pensioners who have received post-retirement pension increases which are equivalent to, or better than, limited price indexation and (c) the average proportion of trustees of such schemes who are appointed by the employer. [17996]

Ruth Kelly: Information about pensions increases is given in chapter 9 of "Occupational Pension Schemes 1995—Tenth Survey by the Government Actuary". Further information on the relationship between pension increases granted by a scheme and the appointment of trustees is not readily available.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the report of the Government Actuary's Department 2000 survey of occupational pensions. [17995]

Ruth Kelly: The Government Actuary will release the results of his survey of occupational pension schemes as at 2000 in mid 2002.

Global Downturn

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures introduced since 1997 have enabled the United Kingdom to become better placed to withstand a global downturn; and if he will make a statement. [16976]

Ruth Kelly: While no country can fully insulate itself from global conditions, the Government's reforms to the macroeconomic framework and their tough decisions on tax and spending are helping to ensure the UK is better placed to respond than on previous occasions to developments in the world economy. The Government's latest views on economic and policy developments will be set out in the Chancellor's pre-Budget statement to the House on 27 November.

Oil Prices

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the sensitivity of revenues to oil price changes. [17726]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the impact of changes in oil prices on revenues can be found in box B2 of the pre-Budget report 2000, which is available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Stress Audit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the conclusions on his Department's stress audit presented to the Treasury Management Board in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001. [17669]

Ruth Kelly: The Department accepted in full the findings of the 1999 stress audit and has been responding to its recommendations. The Department proposes to carry out a follow-up audit in 2002.

Euro

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what costs his Department has incurred in achieving EMU compliance. [17710]

Ruth Kelly: An update on euro preparations was included in the Fifth Report on Euro Preparations, published on 4 November 2001. Copies of the report are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on planned expenditure in the United Kingdom from the Pericles programme to cover euro-counterfeiting; and if Europol officers will be involved. [17624]

Ruth Kelly: The Pericles programme is not expected to entail significant new expenditure. Most of the costs of the programme will be met by the Community. The costs associated with training UK staff are likely to be met from existing budgets for that purpose within the agencies concerned—principally the National Criminal Intelligence Service and the Bank of England.

Contributors to the Pericles programme will be invited from all the international organisations with relevant expertise, including Europol and Interpol.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what analysis he has made of the establishment of monitors of price stability during the currency switchover period in Eurozone countries; who will fulfil such a role in the context of the UK joining the euro; and if he will make a statement; [17625]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the effect of the introduction of the euro on inflation in European economies, with reference to the consequential effect on the United Kingdom economy; and if he will make a statement. [17626]

Ruth Kelly: Background to developments in the euro area was set out in the Fifth Report on Euro Preparations, published on 4 November. Preparations for the possibility of the UK joining the single currency are addressed in the second Outline National Changeover Plan, published in March 2000. Copies of both documents are in the Library of the House.

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what fairly traded products, other than tea and coffee, have been purchased by his Department in each of the last five years; and what was their value; [17567]

(2) what is the value of fairly traded (a) tea and (b) coffee used in his Department in each of the last five years. [17566]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Overseas Detainees

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many UK nationals are detained in overseas prisons. [13444]

Mr. Bradshaw: As of 1 November we were aware of 3,485 British nationals in prison overseas.

Appointments

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many appointments he has made to public bodies since 7 June; and how many are in his gift. [15483]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office made five ministerial appointments between 7 June and 31 October 2001. The FCO is responsible for 50 ministerial appointments.

Language Charter

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress the Government have made in reviewing the case to specify the inclusion of additional UK languages within the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages. [15864]

Mr. MacShane: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 17 January 2001, Official Report, column 233W. This remained the position when the Government ratified the Charter on 27 March 2001. The assessment of whether Cornish also meets the definition of a regional or minority language is not yet completed.

Council of Europe

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Council of Europe (a) conventions, (b) charters and (c) other agreements the United Kingdom (i) has signed and responded to with a report, (ii) has signed but not yet prepared a report, (iii) has under consideration for signature and (iv) has rejected for signature since 1971. [15862]

Mr. MacShane: The UK has signed and ratified 107 of the 186 Council of Europe legal instruments. The need to produce a report is exceptional and required by only four of its legal instruments: the European Social Charter, the Framework Convention for the protection of national minorities, the European Charter for regional or minority languages, and the Code of Social Security. The UK has produced reports on its application of the provisions of the first two instruments. A report on implementation of the Languages Charter is due by 1 July 2002. The UK has neither signed nor ratified the Code of Social Security.

Concerning parts (iii) and (iv) of the question, the work involved in gathering the required information on the 62 legal instruments which the UK has not signed would entail disproportionate costs.

British Dependent Territories

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on (a) health care facilities and (b) education provision in each of the British Dependent Territories. [16153]

Mr. Bradshaw: Health and education are the responsibility of the locally elected Governments under the constitutions of the Overseas Territories. Health and education facilities are available on all the inhabited territories commensurate with the size of the populations and available public funds. Reciprocal health agreements for the referral of patients exist between the United Kingdom and Gibraltar, British Virgin Islands, Turks and Caicos Islands, Anguilla, Montserrat, St. Helena and the Falklands Islands.

The table sets out facilities available.

[1] In the Falkland Islands, one primary school and one secondary school in Stanley, plus a system of Camp education which includes four settlement (primary) schools and a team of travelling teachers who visit 15 locations.

[2] These figures are for facilities provided by the FIG and GSGSSI; they take no account of the modest health and educational facilities funded by the MOD for military personnel and dependants.

[3] There are some referrals across the border to La Linea.

[4] There are no colleges in Montserrat, although a Community College is planned. Sixth form has also resumed this academic year.

[5] There are no children, therefore there are no educational facilities.

[6] For the use of the scientific and administrative communities.

[7] Many of these are quite small private ventures, and will include Haitian schools. It must be remembered that the population of these islands is dispersed throughout six inhabited islands, each of which has its education establishments.

NATO

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish details of the recent discussions he has had with the Russian Government concerning NATO expansion in (a) the Baltic states and (b) East-Central Europe. [16566]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Foreign Secretary has regular discussions with his Russian counterpart Igor Ivanov on a wide range of policy issues. They met most recently at the UN General Assembly in New York on 12 November.

Middle East

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to assist the economies of (a) Israel, (b) Jordan, (c) Syria, (d) the Palestinian Territories and (e) Lebanon. [16579]

Mr. Bradshaw: (a) The Government have no bilateral economic assistance or aid packages for Israel.

(b) The current planned level of bilateral assistance to Jordan is £3.5 million per annum. Through the UK's contribution to the EC's MEDA funds, we are also providing approximately £6.5 million per annum in assistance to Jordan.

(c) Provisional estimates for Syria's allocation of the EC's MEDA funds for 2000 are £1.5 million. The share attributed to the UK is 19.01 per cent. The UK is also supporting Syria's economic reform programme.

(d) UK bilateral assistance to the Palestinians is £14 million in 2001. The Government also contribute to budgetary aid through our share of the EC MEDA programme—equivalent to £15 million this year.

(e) Provisional estimates for Lebanon's allocation of the EC's MEDA funds for 2000 are £25.77 million. The share attributed to the UK is 19.01 per cent.

Over the past four years the UK has substantially increased its contributions to the work of the UN Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) which provides services to Palestinians throughout the region. In 2001 the UK contribution is £25 million.

Palestine

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria he will apply to determine whether a future Palestinian state is viable. [16271]

Mr. Bradshaw: HMG remain convinced that an independent, democratic and peaceful Palestinian state should emerge as part of a negotiated settlement that guarantees peace and stability for Israel, secure within recognised borders and viewed as an equal partner in the region.

The details are for agreement between the parties in permanent status negotiations. HMG believe the characteristics of such a viable Palestinian state might include for example a high degree of territorial contiguity, responsibility for internal security, and the development of a full range of institutions necessary for effective governance.

Diplomatic Passports

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give hon. Members diplomatic passports on the same basis as British Members of the European Parliament. [16826]

Peter Hain: The Government do not issue diplomatic passports to MEPs.

Representation Offices

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will open representation offices for the devolved Administrations. [17239]

Mr. Straw: Under the terms of the Memorandum of Understanding and the concordat on International Relations between the UK Government and the devolved Administrations, the devolved Administrations may establish offices within the framework of their responsibility for devolved matters in consultation with the FCO. The FCO and the United Kingdom Permanent Representation to the European Union have already assisted the devolved Administrations to establish offices in Brussels. The FCO will continue to assist the Administrations and to provide such advice as they require. Considerable efforts are also made within the UK to consult the devolved Administrations on EU matters. Ministers from each of the devolved Administrations are members of a Cabinet Committee which I chair.

Entertainment Budget

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish his Department's entertainment budget for the last financial year. [17237]

Mr. MacShane: Total worldwide entertainment expenditure in 2000–01 amounted to £11.4 million. Expenditure on entertainment covers a wide range of activities including promotional and trade events, receptions in honour of high level visitors, sustaining contacts with politicians and parliamentarians worldwide and events to establish and cultivate contacts. All are undertaken in pursuit of FCO objectives, both at home and in our posts overseas.

In addition, the FCO administered Government Hospitality Fund drawn upon by all Government Departments when entertaining overseas visitors, spent £1.6 million in 2000–01.

Northern Ireland Executive

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the United Kingdom Representation at Brussels has extended to the Northern Ireland Executive in helping them to establish an office in Brussels. [17238]

Mr. Straw: The office of the Northern Ireland Executive in Brussels is responsible to the Northern Ireland devolved administration. As with the Brussels offices of the Scottish Executive and the National Assembly for Wales, assistance has been extended to ensure that the Northern Ireland (EU) office is able to operate under the umbrella of the United Kingdom Permanent Representation to the European Union, with which it has close working relations. The office's Director and Deputy Director have been accredited to the Belgian authorities as members of the Permanent Representation. In March/May 2001, the Director was given temporary office accommodation in the Permanent Representation while work was completed on the Northern Ireland Executive's new premises in Brussels.

Zimbabwe

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the support given by (a) Zimbabwean and (b) other SADC parliamentarians for the electoral recommendations to Zimbabwe by the SADC Parliamentary Forum. [16235]

Mr. Bradshaw: We welcome the commitment shown by SADC parliamentarians to democratic norms in the conduct of elections in their region, reflected in the recommendations agreed at the SADC Parliamentary Forum meeting in Windhoek on 25 March 2001. SADC parliamentarians clearly have a valuable role to play in ensuring their recommendations are followed in all SADC countries. We hope they will urge respect for these recommendations in the run up to the forthcoming Zimbabwean Presidential election.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what international efforts are being made to encourage the Government of Zimbabwe to implement the recommendations on elections endorsed at the meeting of the SADC Parliamentary Forum at Windhoek in March. [16236]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK, the Commonwealth, the Southern African Development Community, the EU, the US and other concerned members of the international community continue to urge the Government of Zimbabwe, at every opportunity, to create a climate conducive to free and fair elections, and to admit international election observers in good time. The recommendations of the SADC Parliamentary Forum set important benchmarks for the whole region.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken to support the SADC Parliamentary Forum proposals for elections in Zimbabwe. [16237]

Mr. Bradshaw: We continue to urge the Government of Zimbabwe, at every opportunity, to create a climate conducive to free and fair elections.

With our EU partners, we shall focus on the electorial process during forthcoming consultations with the Government of Zimbabwe, under Article 96 of the Cotonou agreement, including the norms and standards set by SADC for elections in Southern Africa.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations (a) his Department and (b) international organisations have made to the Zimbabwe Government to ensure that a politically neutral election commission is in place to administer the forthcoming presidential election in Zimbabwe. [16238]

Mr. Bradshaw: We continue to urge the Government of Zimbabwe, at every opportunity, to create a climate conducive to free and fair elections, including a neutral Electoral Supervisory Commission. We are also working with our EU colleagues to encourage a free and fair electoral process in Zimbabwe in the context of consultations with the Government of Zimbabwe under Article 96 of the Cotonou Agreement.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what British representations have been made to the Government of Zimbabwe relating to (a) free access for all parties to up to date copies of the electronic voters roll, (b) freedom of private media, (c) equal access of all parties to state controlled media during the presidential election campaign and (d) agreement to the admission of election observers bound by the SADC Parliamentary Forum Code. [16239]

Mr. Bradshaw: We urge the Government of Zimbabwe, at every opportunity, to create a climate conducive to free and fair elections and to admit international election observers in the lead up to, and during, the forthcoming Presidential elections. We shall, with our EU partners, also focus on the electoral process during forthcoming consultations with the Government of Zimbabwe, under Article 96 of the Cotonou agreement.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the South African Government about the situation in Zimbabwe; and if he will make a statement. [16240]

Mr. Bradshaw: My noble Friend Baroness Amos discussed Zimbabwe with South African Ministers in October.

Data Protection Act (Notifications)

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the notifications of the Intelligence Service and GCHQ in relation to Part III of the Data Protection Act 1998 are up to date; whether these agencies are to notify purposes associated with the processing of personal data (a) to assist the police and (b) to protect the economic well-being of the state; and if he will make a statement. [17190]

Mr. Straw: The notifications of the Secret Intelligence Service and GCHQ under Part III of the Data Protection Act are up to date and are available on the Data Protection Register which can be viewed on the website of the Information Commissioner www.drp.gov.uk. There is no intention to make any notification in respect of the statutory functions of SIS and GCHQ as defined by the Intelligence Service Act 1994. The requirement for an exemption to safeguard national security under Section 28 of the Data Protection Act is not dependent upon the personal data being processed for a national security purpose.

British Council Offices

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to establish permanent offices of the British Council in (a) Bishkek, (b) Astana and (c) Yerevan. [17157]

Peter Hain: British Council activities in Kyrgystan are currently managed from Almaty. The opening of an office in Bishkek is currently under discussion. There are no plans to open an office in Astana. British Council activities in Kazakhstan are directed from Almaty. A British Council office opened in Yerevan in June 2001.

Diplomatic Representation (Central Asia)

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to change the permanent diplomatic presence in (a) Dushanbe, (b) Bishkek, (c) Ashgabat and (d) Tashkent. [17156]

Peter Hain: The Government hope to have diplomatic representation in Dushanbe soon; we also plan to open a full embassy in Bishkek in 2003, and a diplomat will be posted to Bishkek early next year to supervise the setting up of the mission; there are no current plans to change the diplomatic presence in Ashgabat; the embassy in Tashkent will be shortly reinforced with a defence attaché, and a drugs liaison officer will be posted in the summer of 2002.

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to enhance diplomatic representation in Central Asia. [17158]

Peter Hain: The Government hope to have diplomatic representation in Dushanbe soon; we also plan to open a full embassy in Bishkek in 2003, and a diplomat will be posted to Bishkek early next year to supervise the setting up of the mission; the embassy in Tashkent will be shortly reinforced with a defence attaché, and a drugs liaison officer will be posted in summer 2002. We have recently reinforced the embassy in Ashgabat with a drugs liaison officer, and a regional defence attaché has been posted to Almaty. The opening of an embassy in Bishkek and an office in Dushanbe will also strengthen the capabilities of the embassies in Almaty and Tashkent respectively, which currently cover those countries, by freeing up resources.

Drugs Liaison Officer (Tashkent)

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will appoint a full-time drugs liaison officer to Tashkent. [17159]

Mr. Bradshaw: We plan to post a drugs liaison officer to Tashkent from summer 2002. This will reinforce our drug liaison capacity in the region following the recent posting of a drugs liaison officer to Ashgabat, Turkmenistan.

NATO Intelligence

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact on the security of intelligence within NATO arising from (a) the recent changes in senior personnel in Polish intelligence services and (b) the expulsion from Poland of the representative of the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation. [17036]

Mr. Bradshaw: We do not believe that either event will have any impact on the security of intelligence within NATO.

Russia (International Coalition)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the assistance rendered to (a) British and (b) other coalition forces by Russia since 11 September. [17034]

Mr. Bradshaw: President Putin's statement of 24 September committed Russia to supporting the coalition, opening its airspace to humanitarian flights, intelligence co-operation, search and rescue, and support for western bases in central Asia.

Russia has realised this commitment.

Muslim Fundamentalism

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the threat of Muslim fundamentalism to the political stability of countries bordering Afghanistan. [17032]

Mr. Bradshaw: Religious beliefs, peacefully held, should pose no threat to any Government. But the extremist belief that the violent pursuit of political goals is justified poses a threat to the people of many countries, including those that border Afghanistan. However, extremists prepared to use indiscriminate violence in support of their religious, political or ideological aims form only a small proportion of the population of the countries bordering Afghanistan. We will continue to work bilaterally and multilaterally with these countries to preserve regional stability.

Commonwealth Heads of Government

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the next Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting will be held. [16791]

Mr. Bradshaw: The next Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting will take place from 2 to 5 March 2002 in Queensland, Australia.

Chechnya (Al-Qaeda)

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the involvement of al-Qaeda in the murder of three British hostages in Chechnya in 1998. [16834]

Mr. Bradshaw: We are aware of and have condemned the links between some extremist groups fighting in Chechnya and Osama bin Laden/the Taliban. We do not know for certain the circumstances behind the deaths of the four men in December 1998. To date we have not seen any corroborating evidence that bin Laden or the Taliban ordered the deaths of the four men.

We first became aware of the allegation last year, when it appeared in an official Russian publication called "Chechnya: The White Paper". A similar article appeared in the Russian newspaper "Gazeta" on 24 October 2001. To date, we have been unable to verify the story, although we have been in contact with the Russian authorities and the author of the "Gazeta" article.

Afghanistan

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria he will apply in deciding to recognise the new Government of Afghanistan. [17035]

Mr. Bradshaw: Since 1980, it has been HMG's policy to recognise States, not Governments.

As regards a future Government in Afghanistan, UN Security Council Resolution 1378 (2001) in paragraph 1:

> "Expresses its strong support for the efforts of the Afghan people to establish a new and transitional administration leading to the formation of a government, both of which should be broad-based, multi-ethnic and fully representative of all the Afghan people."

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on the role of the former King of Afghanistan (a) in the future constitution and (b) in the future Government of the country. [17033]

Mr. Bradshaw: The future Government and constitution of Afghanistan is for Afghans to decide, with the support of the United Nations, UN Special Representative Brahimi and the international community.

The ex-King is a respected figure in Afghanistan and he could play a useful role in garnering supporting among all Afghans for these efforts. We welcome the meeting of Afghan representatives in Bonn on 27 November at which the ex-King will be represented.

DEFENCE

Bicester (Defence Estate)

14. Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the defence estate at Bicester. [15088]

Dr. Moonie: There are a number of Ministry of Defence sites in the Bicester area. The Defence Logistics Organisation Caversfield (formerly DCTA Caversfield) is operational. The adjacent Caversfield married quarters are occupied, in the main, by United States forces personnel. RAF Bicester is being promoted through the review of the local plan and is likely to be sold by 2004–05, once the planning issues have been resolved.

At the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency Bicester there are three sites (A, B and G) which are surplus to the long-term requirements of the agency and will no longer be required by them after 2004 or earlier.

The former RAF Upper Heyford site, which became surplus some years ago is subject to a joint venture agreement with North Oxfordshire Consortium.

Aldermaston

18. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes he has made to the level of Ministry of Defence police security at AWE Aldermaston since 11 September. [15092]

Dr. Moonie: There have been no changes to the Ministry of Defence police complement at AWE Aldermaston since 11 September.

The standing level of security at AWE Aldermaston is maintained at a high level, irrespective of fluctuations in the security alert states that may apply to other Government establishments or MOD installations. Security arrangements at AWE Aldermaston are kept under constant review.

Sierra Leone

19. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops are in Sierra Leone. [15093]

28. Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops are in Sierra Leone. [15102]

Mr. Ingram: There are approximately 400 British service personnel deployed ashore in Sierra Leone at the present time. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence announced on 1 September, we are in the process of re-configuring our forces in support of the Sierra Leone Army and the Military Reintegration Process, and this figure will reduce to 360 by 1 January 2002. We are also currently contributing 15 military observers and eight headquarters staff officers to UNAMSIL, the UN operation in Sierra Leone.

RNAS Yeovilton

21. Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will take a decision on the future role of RNAS Yeovilton. [15095]

Mr. Ingram: The Strategic Defence Review confirmed that RNAS Yeovilton will remain a major Royal Naval and Defence establishment, and recommended the transfer of the Sea Harrier squadrons and support staff from RNAS Yeovilton to RAF Cottesmore and Wittering in 2003, as part of the Joint Force Harrier initiative.

The precise mix of aircraft types to be based at RNAS Yeovilton in the next decade remains under review. Any emerging proposals for change would be announced in due course and would be subject, where appropriate, to consultation.

As part of the study into the basing strategy of the Joint Helicopter Command, I have recently agreed to the recommendation, based on operational and cost grounds, that helicopters based at RAF Odiham and 9 Regiment AAC Dishforth should remain in their current locations, rather than move to RNAS Yeovilton.

Exercise Saif Sareea 2

22. Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of exercise Saif Sareea 2 was. [15096]

Mr. Ingram: The estimated cost for Saif Sareea 2 was £90.3 million. A final figure will not be available until later in the financial year. However, initial post exercise figures indicate a slight reduction in anticipated costs. This is mainly due to the withdrawal from the exercise of some elements for operational reasons.

Pensions

23. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give unmarried couples serving in the armed forces pension rights equivalent to those enjoyed by married couples. [15097]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has no current plans to amend the Armed Forces Pension Scheme or the War Pension Scheme to provide unmarried couples with pension rights equivalent to those of married couples. However, following public consultation on a comprehensive review of the Armed Forces Pension Scheme, we will be considering representations on a range of issues including that of benefits for unmarried partners.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the terms of reference of the review of the armed forces pension scheme. [15234]

Mr. Ingram: Following Sir Michael Bett's Independent Review of the Armed Forces Manpower, Career, and Remuneration Structures it was recommended that there should be a review of the Armed Forces Pension Scheme (AFPS). The aim of the AFPS review is to consider future pension arrangements for new entrants and current serving members of the armed forces which will meet the essential needs of the armed services for the foreseeable future for recruitment, retention and motivation in a manner that is fair, cost-effective and affordable. It was agreed that the review would need to examine structures and levels of payment, commutation arrangements, arrangements for future funding, arrangements for dependants, reviews and appeals. An analysis of the comments received on the AFPS review is now being undertaken.

International Terrorism

24. Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his plans for the future involvement of British forces in combating international terrorism. [15098]

Mr. Hoon: As I said earlier today, given the rapid pace of events, I have concluded that it is no longer necessary for all the units placed on 48 hours notice to move 10 days ago to remain at this state of readiness. With the exception of elements of 2 PARA and 16 Air Assault Brigade and their key enablers, the bulk of these forces will revert to their previous readiness state and will be able to move within one week.

Before any decisions are taken to deploy any of these forces to Afghanistan, we will take account of the situation on the ground, including reports from the detachment in Bagram; the progress of the political process being set in train in Bonn this week; and consultation within the coalition.

26. Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his plans for the future involvement of British forces in combating international terrorism. [15100]

Mr. Hoon: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friends the Members for North Durham (Mr. Jones) and for Newcastle-under-Lyme (Paul Farrelly), Official Report, column 668.

27. Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of the Royal Marines in the coalition against terrorism. [15101]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Wirral, South (Mr. Chapman), Official Report, columns 662–63.

36. Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his NATO counterparts on international terrorism. [15111]

37. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his NATO counterparts on international terrorism. [15112]

Mr. Hoon: Since the terrorist attacks on the United States on 11 September, and NATO's decision to invoke Article 5 of the Washington Treaty on 12 September, there have been extensive and continuing discussions at ministerial, official and military levels on how best to counter the threat posed by international terrorism. I have taken part in both formal and informal discussions with my counterparts from other NATO nations on numerous occasions. An enhanced package of counter-terrorist measures has already been adopted by the Alliance, with a range of further actions under consideration.

This robust and swift response to international terrorism has demonstrated once again both the solidarity of the Alliance and its continuing relevance in the post-Cold War era.

Gender and Racial Equality

25. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent steps the armed forces have taken to promote (a) gender and (b) racial equality within the services. [15099]

Mr. Ingram: The armed forces goal is to achieve an environment free from harassment, intimidation and discrimination. All three services have in place a wide range of measures to support and promote that goal. These include confidential advice and support help lines, a network of equal opportunities advisers, equality training programmes and outreach initiatives.

Test Ban Treaty

29. Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with (a) the US and (b) Russia in relation to the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty. [15103]

Mr. Hoon: I have had no recent substantive discussions on the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty with the United States or with Russia.

Strike Fighter Project

30. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the securing of design authority with reference to the joint strike fighter project. [15104]

Mr. Hoon: The exchange of letters in January 2001 with the then United States Defence Secretary Cohen allows for the UK to have a national joint strike fighter (JSF) support capability, if required. Establishment of a UK design authority would fall under this heading.

Ministry of Defence officials are working closely with their US counterparts to ensure that US information is released in a timely manner to enable UK industry to put forward cost-effective options for JSF support.

Prisoners of War

31. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many applications for the ex gratia payment to former prisoners of the Japanese announced on 7 November 2000 have been (a) accepted, (b) rejected and (c) remain to be determined. [15105]

Dr. Moonie: As at 12 November, 22,622 applications for the ex gratia payment have been accepted. 3,741 have been rejected and 1,240 remain to be determined.

Afghanistan

32. Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the deployment of members of the armed forces to assist the humanitarian effort in Afghanistan. [15106]

39. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assets his Department has made available for the delivery of humanitarian aid in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [15114]

Mr. Hoon: We have made available a number of service personnel and service assets to assist the humanitarian effort in Afghanistan.

A detachment of Royal Marines has been deployed to Bagram as part of a coalition mission to help make the airport usable by United Nations and other diplomatic and humanitarian missions.

We also have a small team of armed forces personnel in Islamabad where, along with United States colleagues, they are liaising with aid agencies, as well as other personnel in the United States who are assisting with the planning and co-ordination of the coalition humanitarian effort.

In addition, the Canberra PR9 reconnaissance aircraft which we have deployed to the region can assist in the targeting of humanitarian assistance by identifying concentrations of displaced persons. We will, of course, consider making other assets available as necessary.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many women are on active duty as part of the Afghanistan campaign. [15094]

Mr. Hoon: Approximately 300 women are currently on active duty as part of the UK contribution to the international coalition against terrorism.

European Defence Initiative

33. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made to encourage NATO to share information with the European defence initiative. [15108]

Mr. Hoon: The EU and NATO have been working closely together on the development of the European Security and Defence Policy. NATO has assisted in the analysis of capability requirements and has been involved in the assessment of national offers towards the pool of forces.

The EU's Political and Security Committee (PSC) and NATO's North Atlantic Council (NAC), as well as the EU's and NATO's respective Military Committees, meet on a regular basis and at least once per Presidency. Further meetings may be requested.

NATO has agreed in principle to allow the EU access to its assets and capabilities and we are discussing the details of the arrangements. An EU-NATO security agreement is also being established to allow the exchange of classified information between NATO and the EU.

Cadet Forces

34. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the strength of cadet forces. [15109]

Dr. Moonie: As at 1 April this year, the total strength of the cadet forces was 128,304. Although this represents a decrease of 3,650, or 2.8 per cent., since April 2000, cadet numbers have been relatively stable over recent years. The cadet forces continue to offer a wide range of military, adventurous and sporting activities, and the opportunity to gain nationally recognised qualifications as well as enhance personal development. We strongly encourage young people and adult volunteers to join and the Services will continue to offer practical support for the cadet forces' recruitment activities wherever possible.

Armed Forces Establishment

35. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total establishment of the armed forces is; and how many vacancies are unfilled. [15110]

Mr. Ingram: The current trained requirement of the armed forces, as at 1 October, was 197,243 against a total trained strength of 187,699, showing a shortfall of 9,544.

Armed Forces Recruitment

38. Syd Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes there have been to rates of recruitment and retention in the armed forces since 11 September. [15113]

Mr. Ingram: Apart from an increase in the number of inquiries about armed forces careers, there have been no discernible changes to the rates of recruitment or retention which might normally be expected at this point in the year.

Low Flying

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements are in place to monitor low flying by the RAF. [15081]

Dr. Moonie: The number of hours booked for military low flying in the UK Low Flying System is monitored throughout the training year from April to March. As part of the monitoring process, the RAF police carry out regular covert surveys of military low flying, often assisted by the deployment of a Skyguard radar system which measures accurately the heights and speeds of aircraft. These checks confirm a healthy respect for the regulations. A copy of the statement on the pattern of military low flying for the training year to March 2001 was placed in the Library of the House on 17 July.

Capabilities Initiative

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the defence capabilities initiative. [15090]

Mr. Hoon: NATO's Defence Capabilities Initiative was launched at the Washington Summit in April 1999 with a view to addressing shortfalls in military capabilities across the Alliance. Since then NATO nations have been working hard to implement the initiative. Progress has been made in many capability areas, including air to air refuelling; air and sealift and precision-guided munitions. The UK's own performance within the Defence Capabilities Initiative compares very well with the Alliance average.

Land Mines

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made on new technology to detect and remove land mines; and if he will make a statement. [15133]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The Ministry of Defence's on-going generic mine detection research programme is currently assessing the following technologies:

Ground penetrating radar
Metal detection
Polarised thermal imaging
Ultra wide-band radar
Quadrupole resonance.

This research has resulted in the demonstration last year of an integrated three-sensor portable mine detector and a four-sensor vehicle mounted mine detection system.

Research is also under way on a Portable Humanitarian Mine Detector. A pre-production demonstrator system will be completed by July 2002 for assessment by humanitarian de-mining organisations.

The Ministry of Defence and QuinetiQ have also developed a pyrotechnic torch for destroying anti-personnel and anti-tank mines with minimal collateral damage and improved safety of deployment. Current procurement action for this system is aimed at delivering 2000 units into military service by early 2002.

The Defence Procurement Agency placed contracts in October with Ultra Electronics Ltd. of High Wycombe, Bucks and Hunting Engineering Ltd. (now Insys Ltd.) of Ampthill, Bedfordshire for the Competitive Assessment Phase of the Mine Detection, Neutralisation and Route Marking System (MINDER) Programme, with an initial capability to enter service by 2005.

Progress has also been made to improve the effectiveness of minefield breaching operations, and techniques have been developed to improve ploughing efficiency and survivability. Investigations into individual mine neutralisation are also taking place.

RAF Bases

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the contribution made by RAF Lyneham to the local economy. [17041]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has not produced a formal estimate of the current contribution made by RAF Lyneham to the local economy. As I announced on 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 367W, a study has been commissioned as part of the Department's normal planning process, to consider the future roles of RAF Lyneham, RAF Brize Norton and RAF St. Mawgan and an economic appraisal of all three sites will be conducted as part of this work. It is understood that previous local estimates have placed the contribution to the local economy in the region of £18 million a year and this figure will be validated as part of the study.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many planes are based at (a) RAF Brize Norton and (b) RAF Lyneham; and how this total will change in the next five years to reflect (i) the introduction of the A400M and the C130J and (ii) the phasing out of the VC10 and Tristar. [17154]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently 33 aircraft based at RAF Brize Norton and 54 aircraft based at RAF Lyneham. On current plans, three Hercules C130K aircraft based at RAF Lyneham will be retired within the next five years in the last element of the rolling programme to replace part of the Hercules C130K fleet with C130Js. No other changes in aircraft numbers at RAF Lyneham and RAF Brize Norton are currently planned in the next five years as a result of the procurement of the A400M and C130J or the phasing out of the VC10 and Tristars.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many vacant rooms there are at RAF Brize Norton (a) officers accommodation and (b) other ranks accommodation. [17039]

Dr. Moonie: As at 20 November 2001 there were (a) 31 rooms vacant in Officers' Mess accommodation out of a total of 183 and (b) four rooms vacant in the other ranks single living accommodation out of a total of 1,289. All 31 rooms vacant in the Officers' Mess are out of use as a result of repair work currently being carried out in one wing of the mess.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what square footage of (a) hangers for aircraft maintenance and repairs and (b) apron parking there is at (i) RAF Lyneham and (ii) RAF Brize Norton; and what the total acreage is of each base. [17255]

Mr. Ingram: Hangars used for aircraft maintenance and repairs cover approximately 27,500 square metres at RAF Lyneham and approximately 19,970 square metres at RAF Brize Norton. The area of apron parking is approximately 270,000 square metres at RAF Lyneham and 470,000 square metres at RAF Brize Norton. RAF Lyneham covers approximately 1,164 acres and RAF Brize Norton approximately 1,184 acres.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officers and other ranks live in single accommodation at (a) RAF Lyneham and (b) RAF Brize Norton. [17038]

Dr. Moonie: As at 20 November 2001, there were 112 officers and 861 other ranks living in single living accommodation at RAF Lyneham. On the same date 152 officers and 1,275 other ranks were living in single living accommodation at RAF Brize Norton.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many married quarters' houses there are at (a) RAF Lyneham and (b) RAF Brize Norton; and how many married quarters houses at RAF Brize Norton are unoccupied. [17256]

Dr. Moonie: There are 764 service families' accommodation at RAF Lyneham and 1,286 at RAF Brize Norton. 241 properties at Brize Norton are unoccupied although they are shortly to be handed back to Annington Homes. 68 are being refurbished or awaiting major repairs and 23 have been allocated to service families.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what length the runway is at (a) RAF Lyneham and (b) RAF Brize Norton. [17378]

Mr. Ingram: The length of the main runway available for take off or landing at RAF Lyneham is 2,386 metres. The length of the secondary runway is 1,826 metres. The runway at RAF Brize Norton available for take off and landing is 3,050 metres long.

British War Graves

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has spent on the maintenance of non-world war I and world war II war graves overseas in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [15235]

Dr. Moonie: Precise figures are not available before financial year 1997–98; however it is estimated that £150,000 per annum was spent. A payment is also made to the Commonwealth War Graves Commission (CWGC) who maintain a number of non-world war graves on behalf of the Ministry of Defence. The figures are set out in the table.

£000

Financial year	Actual spend	CWGC payment
1992–93	[1]150	431
1993–94	[1]150	471
1994–95	[1]150	579
1995–96	[1]150	533
1996–97	[1]150	536

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution his Department has made to the South African Heritage Resources Agency for the maintenance of British war graves in each of the last 10 years. [15233]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has contributed the following amounts to the South African Heritage Resources Agency (SAHRA), formerly the National Monuments Council, over the last 10 years:

Year	£
1992	3,100
1993	10,000
1994	10,000
1995	10,000
1996	10,000
1997	10,000
1998	10,000
1999	15,000
2000	15,000
2001	15,000

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his annual departmental budget is for the maintenance of non-world war I and world war II war graves overseas. [15236]

Dr. Moonie: It is estimated that in financial year 2001–02 £627,000 will be paid to the Commonwealth War Graves Commission (CWGC) for the maintenance of overseas non-world war Graves (NWG) which the CWGC maintain on our behalf. A further £185,000 will be spent on the maintenance of NWG in countries where the UK formerly had garrisons, and which are maintained under the auspices of the Defence Attachés, either through contracts or local organisations.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements are in place for the maintenance of British war graves overseas of servicemen who perished in conflicts other than world wars I and II; and if he will make a statement. [15237]

Dr. Moonie: The term overseas non-world war graves (NWG) includes those who have died from normal causes or accidents, and who were buried overseas. It also includes dependants in countries where there are existing garrisons (Cyprus, Falkland Islands, Germany etc.). Non-war graves are maintained by property managers who are under the control of the local commander. In Korea, 885 British NWG are maintained by the UN commission to which we make an annual contribution. In South Africa there are 20,000 graves in 340 sites and these are maintained by the South African Heritage Resources Agency. In Malaysia and Hong Kong there are 3,694 graves in 20 sites maintained by local firms under contracts managed by the local Defence Adviser and Vice Consul respectively. In 11 other countries there are a total of 852 graves which are maintained through a variety of agreements with ex patriots, Christian churches or local communities, for which we pay basic costs. All these are managed through Defence Attachés.

Procurement

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans the Defence Procurement Agency has to centralise the information on the number of small and medium enterprises with which his Department has signed procurement contracts. [16158]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence is considering whether it should centralise information on the number of small and medium enterprises with which it has signed procurement contracts. I will write to the hon. Member when this work is completed, and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Swift Sword II

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions the Army used (a) civilian contractors and (b) the Omani armed forces for the purpose of transporting tanks in connection with exercise Swift Sword II. [17076]

Mr. Ingram: No civilian contractors were used to transport Challenger 2 tanks during the exercise.

Saif Sareea was a combined UK/Omani exercise, designed to practice and improve the interoperability of each nations' armed forces. Working closely together with the Omanis was therefore, by design, a major feature of the exercise. A total of 30 tanks and other heavy armoured vehicles were transported by the Omanis to facilitate their recovery from the exercise area to the port of departure from Oman.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many tank transporters were unserviceable during exercise Swift Sword II; and if he will make a statement. [17075]

Mr. Ingram: Thirty tank transporters were deployed on exercise Saif Sareea. The harsh desert environment and high tempo of activity during the exercise made this a very demanding test. Inevitably, routine maintenance and servicing led to occasional periods of non-availability of individual tank transporters. Overall, however, their average availability during the exercise was in excess of 85 per cent.

Given the known limitations of the current fleet of tank transporters and the testing conditions in which the exercise was conducted, this was an entirely satisfactory figure. Notwithstanding, we are now in the final states of negotiations for a replacement and are confident that this will be in service by late 2003.

Suez Campaign Medal

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 5 November 2001 to the hon. Member for Coventry, South (Mr. Cunningham), Official Report, column 26W, on the Suez campaign, what recent discussions he has had with ex-servicemen's organisations on the question of awarding a medal for service in the Canal Zone in the early 1950s. [17953]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has not had any recent discussions with ex-servicemen's organisations about the retrospective institution of a new campaign medal to mark service in the Canal Zone during the early 1950s.

Public Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list those public bodies to which his Department appoints members and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000; [17579]

(2) if he will list those public bodies which are the responsibility of his Department and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000. [17580]

Dr. Moonie: Public Bodies 2000 sets out information on Non Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs), certain public corporations (including nationalised industries) and NHS bodies. There are four types of NDPB: executive NDPBs; advisory NDPBs; tribunal NDPBs; and boards of visitors to penal establishments. The next edition will be published around the end of the year. Information about taskforces, annual reports and ad hoc advisory groups is set out in an annual report published by the Cabinet Office. Copies of Public Bodies 2000 are in the Library of the House and may be accessed via Cabinet Office's website: http://www.official-documents.co.uk/document/caboff/pb00/pb00.htm. Copies of the annual report on taskforces and similar bodies have also been placed in the Library of the House and the report is being made available on Cabinet Office's website.

The Ministry of Defence currently sponsors 33 Non Departmental Public Bodies (seven executive NDPBs and 26 advisory NDPBs):

Executive NDPBs

Fleet Air Arm Museum
National Army Museum
Oil & Pipelines Agency
RAF Museum
Royal Marines Museum
Royal Naval Museum
Royal Navy Submarine Museum

Advisory NDPBs

Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objectors[1]
Advisory Group on Medical Countermeasures
Animal Welfare Advisory Committee
Armed Forces Pay Review Body
Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions
Dartmoor Steering Group (jointly sponsored with DEFRA)
Defence Nuclear Safety Committee
Defence Scientific Advisory Council
Independent Board of Visitors for the Military Corrective Training Centre
National Employers Liaison Committee
Review Board for Government Contracts
Royal Military College of Science Advisory Council
Nuclear Research Advisory Committee
War Pensions Committees (13 separate committees)

[1] Appointments to the ACCO are made by the Lord Chancellor

The MOD currently sponsors the following reviews/task forces:

Depleted Uranium Oversight Board
Independent Panel on Vaccines Interaction Research Services Families' Task Force.

In addition, the MOD also has a small number of bodies that involve significant membership from outside the civil service, but which are not classified as NDPBs or reviews/taskforces. These are:

The Navy Army Air Force Institute (NAAFI)

Two "ethnics" committees (to provide oversight of defence research)

The Historic Buildings Advisory Group.

NAAFI and the ethnics committees are currently being reviewed to determine whether they should be re-classified as NDPBs.

Ex Gratia Pension Payments

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make ex gratia pension payments to non-commissioned members of the armed forces who served prior to 1975 and did less than 22 years service. [18076]

Dr. Moonie: No. Priory to April 1975, there was no legal requirement for any public or private sector pension scheme to preserve pension rights for those who left service before reaching the normal retirement age. However, in the armed forces a pension could be paid after 22 years' reckonable service (16 years' reckonable service in the case of officers). Engagements for shorter periods were on non-pensionable terms, though gratuities were awarded to those who served less than the 22 years but had completed 12 years' reckonable service (nine years' in the case of officers). Most public and private sector pension schemes offered lesser benefits.

September 11

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the major changes in the Strategic Defence Review following (a) 11 September and (b) the campaign against international terrorism; and if he will make a statement. [17449]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan) on 29 October 2001, Official Report, column 509W.

Commonwealth War Graves

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of Commonwealth war graves in France in relation to the construction of the proposed new airport at Chaulnes. [18638]

Dr. Moonie: The Commonwealth War Graves Commission (CWGC), which has the responsibility for the maintenance of the graves of all British and Commonwealth troops who died during the two world wars and the memorials to those who have no known grave, has asked the French Government to provide more details about the proposals.

If the proposals do appear to affect war graves cemeteries containing British and Commonwealth graves, the CWGC will firmly resist any plans to disturb the war dead.

Gibraltar

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what joint exercises have been held between UK and Spanish forces over the past five years; which have used facilities at Gibraltar; and if he will make a statement. [17975]

Mr. Ingram: The following exercises have been held between UK and Spanish forces over the past five years. None have used facilities at Gibraltar.

Exercise name	Date	Description
Britannia Way/Iberian Focus	September 1997	Infantry company exchange exercise
Tapon 1998	June 1998	Maritime exercise
Britannia Way/Iberian Focus	September 1998	Infantry company exchange exercise
Tapon 1999	June 1999	Maritime exercise
Alcudra	July 1999	Maritime exercise
Britannia Way/Iberian Focus	September 1999	Infantry company exchange exercise
Britannia Way/Iberian Focus	September 2000	Infantry company exchange exercise
Acrobatic Sapper	September 2000	Engineer exercise

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what UK forces visited Gibraltar (a) on their way to and (b) returning from (i) Exercise Saif Sareea and (ii) Operation Veritas; and if he will make a statement. [17981]

Mr. Ingram: The following UK forces visited Gibraltar on their outwards journey to the Middle East:

Exercise Saif Sareea: RFA Oakleaf; HMS Ocean with elements of 40 Commando embarked; and elements of 845 and 847 Squadrons.

Operation Veritas: RFA Brambleleaf.

On the return journey from the Middle East, as of 21 November, the following UK forces have visited Gibraltar:

Exercise Saif Sareea: RFA Fort Austin.

Operation Veritas: None.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what UK forces are deployed in Gibraltar; and if he will make a statement. [17982]

Mr. Ingram: The UK retains a sizeable defence presence on Gibraltar, key elements of which are the Gibraltar regiment (staffed predominantly by Gibraltarians), the Gibraltar Squadron (which includes two coastal patrol vessels and two rigid hull inflatable boats) and the detachment at RAF Gibraltar, as well as Headquarters and support units. There are currently a total of around 427 UK-based military personnel deployed to Gibraltar.

RAF Halton

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 20W, on the Defence

Estates, Aylesbury, which Government accounting rules require him to dispose of surplus sites as quickly as possible. [17807]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to Chapter 24 of paragraph 24.2.1 of Government Accounting, which outlines Treasury policy on the Disposal of Surplus Government Assets.

MOD Police

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been received from the US authorities towards the costs of MOD police activities in the financial year 2000–01. [17971]

Dr. Moonie: The financial arrangements governing the Ministry of Defence Police (MDP) presence at Ministry of Defence establishments made available to the US are covered by a Memorandum of Understanding between the UK and US Governments.

The total amount received from the US authorities towards the cost of MDP policing bases made available to the US authorities during the financial year 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001 was £5.497 million.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Special Advisers and Press Officers

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) special advisers and (b) press officers were employed (i) full-time, (ii) part-time and (iii) on a contract basis by her Department in each year since 1992. [6881]

Ms Hewitt: (a) I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) on 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 340W.

(b) The number of Press Officers (all full-time) is given in the table:

As at 1 March
1995	15
1996	17
1997	17
1998	17
1999	24
2000	[1]21
2001	[1]21
1 September 2001	[2]23

[1] Includes one contract press officer.

[2] Includes two contract press officers.

Note:

Information from earlier years is not available.

Hepatitis C

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will name the (a) grants and (b) laboratories awarded Medical Research Council funds for research into hepatitis C in the last five years; and what the amounts were in each case. [15724]

Ms Hewitt: Over the last five years, the MRC has made new awards for research into hepatitis C for four projects at two MRC units and has also funded 10 projects at universities or other institutes. Details are provided in the table.

Host institution	Title	Amount awarded (£000)	Period
University of Leeds	Functional analysis of the hepatitis C virus non-structural proteins	271	January 1999 to January 2002

Supermarkets

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what mechanisms she has put in place to ensure that individual farmers and other food suppliers are protected from the effects of purchasing practices of large supermarkets; [16399]

(2) what recent discussions she has had with farmers and agricultural industry representatives regarding her Department's Code of Practice for supermarkets engaged in purchase policies with farmers and farmers' groups. [16401]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for South-East Cornwall (Mr. Breed) on 9 November 2001, Official Report, column 442W.

Post Delivery (Bexhill)

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she will take to tackle the problems with the postal delivery service in Bexhill. [16460]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The Government have established an independent regulatory body, the Postal Services Commission, whose responsibilities include setting and enforcing standards of service for Consignia, and a Consumer Council for Postal Services, Postwatch, with powers to investigate customer complaints. I will draw the hon. Member's concern about the postal delivery service in Bexhill to the attention of these two bodies.

Fireworks

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will introduce plans to ban the sale of fireworks to the general public. [16455]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 20 November 2001]: We have no plans to ban the sale of fireworks to the general public.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action her Department is taking to restrict the sale of those category 3 fireworks which cause excessive noise pollution. [16346]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The Fireworks (Safety) Regulations 1997 prohibit from sale to the public several types of noisy category 3 fireworks such as aer[illegible]lls and restrict the size of others. We will, of co[illegible] consider any representations that are made.

Wind Farms

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the operational wind farm sites in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland, giving their output in kilowatt hours. [16333]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The list provided is based on the best available information but it may not be wholly accurate, up-to-date or comprehensive. Very small projects (below 50 kilowatts installed capacity) are excluded.

Output for individual wind farm sites cannot be given for reasons of commercial sensitivity, but the table provides the installed capacity of each wind farm in kilowatts.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the proposed wind farm sites awaiting planning permission in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland, giving their predicted output in kilowatt hours. [16332]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The following list provided is based on the best available information, but it may not be wholly accurate, up-to-date or comprehensive. In particular, some of the wind farm applications shown may have been withdrawn, rejected or approved. There are also schemes in preparation, both onshore and offshore, where planning permission has not yet been sought.

Information on predicted output of the proposed wind farms has not been collected, but the table shows the capacity of each wind farm in megawatts (MW) declared net capacity.

In addition, planning consents for the following proposed larger wind farms over 50 MW installed capacity are being sought under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989. Figures are given for the proposed installed capacity of these wind farms.

Scotland:

Paul's Hill, Morayshire—56MW

Caim Uish, Morayshire—65MW

England:

Scroby Sands, Norfolk (offshore)—75MW

Wales:

Cefn Croes, Ceredigion—60MW

Northern Ireland:

None.

[1] Information as supplied September 2001

Aerospace Industry

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the downturn in the aerospace industry since 11 September. [16721]

Mr. Wilson: Officials in the Department of Trade and Industry remain in close contact with the UK aviation industry in co-operation with the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions.

The Government remain in close contact with the aerospace industry, as we are with other sectors, and with the trade associations in order to understand and evaluate the effect of the events of 11 September. It remains too early to say what will be the effect on the aerospace industry. When the impact has been fully assessed, we will be in a position to consider how best Government and the aerospace industry can work together to ensure a successful future for the industry.

Westinghouse

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which division of Westinghouse is now a part of BNFL. [16743]

Mr. Wilson: In March 1999 BNFL and Morrison Knudsen (MK) completed the joint acquisition of CBS's US nuclear services company, Westinghouse. The Westinghouse acquisition comprised two businesses: Energy Systems—which provided nuclear products and services in the US and internationally, and Government and Environmental Services—which managed and operated environmental clean-up programmes for the US Department of Energy and provided services to the US Department of Defense.

A new structure for Westinghouse was agreed; BNFL became a 100 per cent. owner of the Energy Systems business (renamed Westinghouse Electric Company), took a 40 per cent. economic interest in the 100 per cent. MK owned defence related portion of Government Services (renamed Westinghouse Government Services Company) and 40 per cent. ownership of the non-defence related Government Services business (renamed Westinghouse Government Environmental Services Company), with MK owning the remaining 60 per cent.

Energy Industry

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the effect of deregulation and privatisation of the energy industry. [16740]

Mr. Wilson: The Government's central energy policy objective is to ensure secure, diverse and sustainable energy supplies at competitive prices. They consider that competitive markets and companies are the key to achieving this. Government's role is to set the right framework and to deal with issues that the market alone, as it emerged following energy privatisations, may be unable to address. The Government have, therefore, provided the appropriate legal framework for competitive energy markets and the economic development of Britain's energy resources consistent with safety and environmental protection. They have also further modernised the framework of energy regulation through the Utilities Act 2000 to give primary importance to protecting the interests of consumers, while minimising the regulatory burden on industry wherever possible.

Gas Transportation Tariffs

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has made to (a) Ofgem and (b) Centrica plc concerning the gas transportation tariffs in the United Kingdom, with particular reference to their effect on Northern Ireland. [16783]

Mr. Wilson: In Great Britain gas transportation tariffs are levied by Transco and regulated by Ofgem through licence conditions (including the licence condition relating to the price control). Ofgem recently consulted on proposals for the price control for the period from 2002–07. While the Department has had discussions with Ofgem about its proposals we have made no specific representations regarding transportation tariffs.

Gas is supplied to Northern Ireland under a contract between Centrica plc and Phoenix Natural Gas plc, the main gas supplier in Northern Ireland. Like all other shippers who use Transco's system, Centrica pay gas transportation tariffs and I understand that the level of these charges is reflected in the price Centrica charges customers such as Phoenix. This is however a commercial matter.

Centrica plc

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she last met the Managing Director of CEMG, Centrica plc; and what was discussed. [16784]

Mr. Wilson: My ministerial colleagues and I meet representatives of Centrica plc from time to time to discuss a range of current energy matters.

Most recently my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry met senior management from Centrica on 19 November and I am due to meet representatives from Centrica on 6 December.

Economic Development Zone (Lancaster)

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what concerns were identified as part of the EOI Review about Lancaster city council's priority 3 economic development zone bid. [16696]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 21 November 2001]: Lancaster's "expression of interest" (EOI) in an Economic Development Zone (EDZ) under the North West's Objective 2 Programme for 2000–06 was assessed as high priority and has since resulted in a fully detailed bid for EDZ status and European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) funding. The independent consultants who appraised the EOIs met with Lancaster in October to discuss a range of issues around the nature of activity proposed in the EDZ, the scale of support needed and funding profiles.

Online Trading

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many small businesses trade online in the constituency of East Devon. [17287]

Mr. Alexander: The International Benchmarking Study, which measures the number of businesses trading online, measures trading online at the level of the region but not of the constituency. A copy of the 2001 study is available from the Libraries of the House.

Clean Coal Technology

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total level of investment, in real terms, has been into research into clean coal technology from her Department since 1997. [17279]

Mr. Wilson: The table shows levels of investment into research into clean coal technology both in actual money of the day and : constant 1995 prices using the GDP deflator.

£ million

Year	Actual	At constant 1995 prices
1996–97	7.4	7.1
1997–98	4.1	3.8
1998–99	3.4	3.1
1999–2000	2.9	2.6
2000–01	2.6	2.3
2001–02[1]	4.9	4.2
2002–03[1]	8.4	7.0
2003–04[1]	8.4	6.8

[1] Budget

Local Government Finance

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much of her Department's allocation was spent in the constituency of East Devon (a) in real terms and (b) as a percentage of the total budget in the last financial year. [17286]

Ms Hewitt: The DTI does not hold centrally information on resources spent in particular constituencies. To provide the information requested for most departmental programmes and schemes would require individual examination of a large number of individual cases, which would incur disproportionate cost. It would also raise problems of definition: some expenditure for example supports firms or organisations operating on a national basis. Information on expenditure at constituency level is however available for two departmental schemes and programmes.

1. Government Office South West advise that in 2000–01 £32,753.25 was paid out under the SMART scheme in East Devon (0.14 per cent. of total SMART expenditure and 0.002 per cent. of the Department's total Trade and Industry budget as voted by Parliament).

2. There were no applications for Enterprise Grants—and hence no expenditure—in East Devon in 2000–01. Departmental expenditure on Enterprise Grants in 2000–01 was £3.6 million.

Steel Imports

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with (a) the UK steel industry, (b) the European Commission and (c) the US Government, concerning tariffs on steel imports into the USA. [17383]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry met with representatives of the Iron and Steel Trade Confederation on 18 October and with representatives of Corus on 29 October when issues surrounding international trade in steel were discussed. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and my noble Friend Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean also raised the issue at a high level with the US Administration when they visited the US in July. The Government remain concerned at the prospect of US unilateral action under Section 201 of the Trade Act 1974 which would severely disrupt international trade in steel and damage UK steel manufacturing and employment interests. We support the view that Commissioner Lamy has expressed: the cost of restructuring the US steel industry should not be shifted on to the rest of the world. The appropriate way to address global steel trade issues is through multilateral discussion.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what were the gross costs of the regulatory impact assessment for (a) the Weights and Measures (Intoxicating Liquor) (Amendment) Order 2001 and the Measuring Equipment (Capacity Measures) (Amendment) Regulations 2001, (b) the Unit of Measurement Regulations 2001, (c) the Weights and Measures (Metrication Amendment) Regulations 2001, (d) the Offshore Combustion Installation (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Regulations 2001 and (e) the Company Business Names (Amendment) Regulations 2001; [17696]

(2) what were the gross costs of the regulatory impact assessment for (a) the Shop Now Orders (EC Directive) Regulations 2001, (b) the Offshore Petroleum Activities (Conservation of Habitats) Regulations 2001, (c) the Noise Emission in the Environment by Equipment for Use Outdoors Regulations 2001 and (d) the Wireless Telegraphy (Licence Charges) (Amendment) Regulations 2001; [17697]

(3) what were the gross cost of the regulatory impact assessment for (a) the Part-time Workers (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2001, (b) the Merger (Fees) (Amendment) Regulations 2001, (c) the Employment Tribunals (Constitution and Rule of Procedure) Regulations 2001, (d) the Measuring Equipment (Cold-water Meters) (Amendment) Regulation 2001 and (e) the Wireless Telegraphy (Exemption) (Amendment) Regulations 2001. [17695]

Ms Hewitt: These costs are shown in the published regulatory impact assessments which are in the Libraries of the House.

Miners' Compensation

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made to resolve the potential liability for compensation to those who suffered injury from dust from working in surface areas in the mining industry; and if she will make a statement. [17705]

Mr. Wilson: The Department's initial proposals for handling surface only claims under the Claims Handling Agreement (CHA), put to the Claimants' Solicitors Co-ordinating Group (CG) in July 2000, were rejected.

To move matters forward, the Department and the CG have carried out a joint study of the impact of surface dust on surface only workers. The Department has proposed that the parties' medical experts should meet in December to discuss their findings. Their conclusions will help to inform the way forward. Offers are already being made to 'mixed' claimants (who worked both underground and in surface dusty occupations) with the agreement of the CG.

World Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with her counterparts in other nations represented at the World Trade Organisation mechanisms on reviewing the delivery of promised improvements to developing countries in (a) previous and (b) the current WTO rounds. [16798]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 22 November 2001]: I refer to my statement to the House, reporting on the successful outcome of the WTO Ministerial Conference in Doha, on 15 November 2001, Official Report, columns 997–1008.

As well as agreeing a Ministerial Declaration launching a development-focused trade round, which we believe offers the best route for the developing world to escape from poverty, the WTO Ministerial Conference also agreed a Decision on Implementation-Related Issues and Concerns addressing many of the concerns raised by developing countries over the operation of existing WTO Agreements and, as part of the Ministerial Declaration itself, agreed that other outstanding concerns should be addressed as a matter of priority.

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the value of fairly traded (a) tea and (b) coffee used in her Department in each of the last five years. [17546]

Mr. Alexander: I can answer only in respect of coffee supplied to the Department's preferred catering supplier over the last two years; further information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Nuclear Installations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate has set up a special group to look at the question of security at nuclear power stations and nuclear installations following the events of 11 September. [16803]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 22 November 2001]: My officials have consulted the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate as the safety regulator, and are working closely with the industry to review safety and security at civil nuclear facilities in the light of the attacks in the United States on 11 September.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate have received in relation to security at nuclear installations following the events of 11 September. [16802]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Security at licensed nuclear sites is regulated by the Office for Civil Nuclear Security, the independent security regulator within the Department. The Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate is the independent nuclear safety regulator. All inquiries to Government organisations relating to security at nuclear installations are referred to the DTI. My officials and I have received a number of representations from hon. Members on behalf of their constituents, from the public, and from the nuclear industry in relation to security at nuclear installations.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she has instructed the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate to consider the security at nuclear installations following the incidents on 11 September. [16797]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Ensuring UK civil nuclear installations comply with security regulations is the responsibility of the Office for Civil Nuclear Security (OCNS), the security regulators. OCNS works closely with the Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (NII), the safety regulator. Both regulators are working together to review all relevant precautions in the light of the terrorist attacks in the United States on 11 September.

Telecom Services

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has made to (a) Oftel and (b) BT regarding transfer of existing telephone numbers from former customers of Atlantic Telecom to BT lines. [16811]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 22 November 2001]: I have discussed with the Director General of Telecommunications the issues faced by the customers of Atlantic Telecom. I have also raised this directly with the Chief Executive of BT. A number of options were discussed with the administrators and we are actively pursuing all possible solutions to minimise disruption to Atlantic subscribers. My officials and Oftel are taking these issues forward with BT.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the total cost of electricity generation by (a) gas, (b) coal and (c) nuclear is accounted for by the primary fuel source in the latest year for which figures are available. [17808]

Mr. Wilson: The Department does not publish statistics relating to the cost of fuel as a proportion of the total cost of generating electricity. However, the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency (NEA) and International Energy Agency (IEA) periodically undertake comparative studies of the projected costs of baseload electricity generation in different countries. The most recent study was published in 1998, which forecast the generating costs of various technologies and plant types that could be commissioned by 2005–10.

As a share of the total cost of generation, the latest comparative study estimated the following figures:

Fuel Type	Percentage share of total cost
Gas	64
Coal	36
Nuclear	12

Source:

Pages 68–69, table 16, Projected Costs of Generating Electricity—Update 1998 (NEA and IEA). Figures in the table refer to the percentage shares of levelised costs at 10 per cent. discount rate and are averages of least expensive plant options in each country surveyed.

Space Technology Sector

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment her Department has made of the economic importance of the UK space technology sector in terms of (a) the extent to which it can help the UK's manufacturing industry develop export markets, (b) the extent to which it can help the United Kingdom manufacturing industry create jobs and (c) the impact of her Department's assessment on the United Kingdom's decision to provide funds to support the Galileo project; and if she will make a statement. [R] [17805]

Ms Hewitt: The United Kingdom's space technology is world class in a number of areas including telecommunications payloads, small satellites and synthetic aperture radar. About two thirds of UK space industry turnover results from export business. Latest published figures show that approximately 6,000 people are employed directly in space activities, without taking into account employment in those sectors which are reliant on satellite based services. The size and health of the UK space industry is currently being surveyed by the British National Space Centre and the results should be published early in 2002.

The Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions is the lead department on Galileo. My Department has been working closely with them, and others in Whitehall, to develop the United Kingdom's position on Galileo.

Railtrack

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which (a) local authorities, (b) privatised industries and (c) pension funds held shares in Railtrack prior to the company being taken into administration; and how many shares were held by each. [17283]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

My Department does not hold this information.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what amount of pre-cast concrete products was supplied to Great Britain from Northern Ireland by weight in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and what assessment she has made of the likely change in this figure following the introduction of the aggregates levy. [16705]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

No such figures are available.

Profitability

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the level of profitability of United Kingdom industry was (a) in total for the last 12 months, (b) per quarter since 1997 and (c) by region in each year since 1997. [17280]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Hugo Swire, dated 26 November 2001:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on the level of profitability of United Kingdom industry (17280).

A First Release of the Profitability of UK Companies was published by the Office for National Statistics on 5 October 2001 and is available on the National Statistics website (www.statistics.gov.uk). This release covers UK Private Non-Financial Companies and gives quarterly data from 1989 to the second quarter of 2001.

Profitability data is not available on a regional basis.

Manufacturing Jobs

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) management and (b) shop floor jobs in manufacturing have been lost in (i) Lancashire and (ii) the United Kingdom in each of the last three years. [16720]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Lindsay Hoyle, dated 26 November 2001:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about job losses in manufacturing in Lancashire and the United Kingdom. (16720).

The Labour Force Survey (LFS) provides estimates of the numbers of people employed in manufacturing in Lancashire and the United Kingdom. The LFS does not classify occupations in terms of 'management' and 'shopfloor'. However, it does provide estimates of the numbers of people employed in manufacturing by social class based on occupation (formerly known as Registrar General's Social Class), up to and including winter (December to February) 2000–01.

The attached table gives the LFS estimates of the numbers of people employed in manufacturing in Lancashire and the United Kingdom for winter (December to February) 1997–98 to winter (December to February) 2000–01 by social class.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many households in the Isle of Wight have benefited from the (a) Home Energy Efficiency Scheme and (b) HEES Plus since 1 June. [16121]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The home energy efficiency scheme (HEES) was launched on 1 June 2000. It is managed by two scheme managers, Eaga Partnership and TXU Warm Front Ltd., and offers two levels of grant:

> HEES—£1,000 for households with children under 16 and in receipt of an income-related, disability or long-term illness benefit.
> HEES Plus—£2,000 for over-60s in receipt of an income-related benefit.

The table shows the number of householders, on the Isle of Wight, who have benefited from either a HEES or HEES Plus grant since the launch of the scheme on 1 June 2000.

HEES	Isle of Wight householders who have received help
Householders	660
Plus householders	590

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many complaints have been received in (a) England, (b) the South East and (c) the Isle of Wight in respect of work carried out in the home energy efficiency scheme. [16124]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 November 2001]: Over 250,000 householders have been assisted since the launch of the home energy efficiency scheme (HEES) on 1 June 2000. The table shows the number of complaints received by the scheme managers, Eaga Partnership and TXU Warm Front Ltd., concerning work carried out either in respect of workmanship or faulty equipment. The total number of complaints is 4,700.

	Complaints received concerning work carried out	Percentage of total number of householders completed since 1 June 2000
England	1,400	0.5
South East	220	0.08
Isle of Wight	11	0.004

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many households have made a financial contribution to work carried out under the home energy efficiency scheme since 1 June. [16119]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The home energy efficiency scheme (HEES) was launched on 1 June 2000. It is managed by two scheme managers, Eaga Partnership and TXU Warm Front Ltd., and offers two levels of grant:

> HEES—£1,000 for households with children under 16 and in receipt of an income-related, disability or long-term illness benefit.
> HEES Plus—£2,000 for over-60s in receipt of an income-related benefit.

Where the grant is insufficient to meet the full cost of work the appointed scheme manager will attempt to obtain contributions from other programmes funds such as energy suppliers' energy efficiency commitment schemes. If that is unsuccessful the client will be asked to make the appropriate contribution. Of the 250,000 householders assisted since the start of the scheme, 6,900 (or 3 per cent. of the total) made such a contribution.

We will shortly review the grant levels taking into account advice from the scheme managers on the expected rates of labour and materials for the forthcoming year.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many households in (a) England and (b) the Isle of Wight have qualified for the full grant of £2,000 in respect of the home energy efficiency scheme. [16117]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The home energy efficiency scheme (HEES) was launched on 1 June 2000. It is managed by two scheme managers, Eaga Partnership and TXU Warm Front Ltd., and offers two levels of grant:

HEES—£1,000 for households in receipt of an income-related benefit.

HEES Plus—£2,000 for over-60s in receipt of an income-related benefit.

The table identifies the number of households who have qualified for the HEES Plus grant.

HEES Plus householders

	Number
England	152,200
Isle of Wight	840

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the annual energy savings which would result from the application of minimum energy performance standards as envisaged by the proposed EC Directive on the Energy Performance of Buildings to new residential and commercial buildings; [12101]

(2) if she will estimate the annual energy savings which would result from the application of minimum energy performance standards as envisaged by the proposed EC Directive on the Energy Performance of Buildings to renovation projects on buildings (a) larger than 1000 square metres, (b) larger than 500 square metres and (c) larger than 100 square metres. [12103]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 8 November 2001]: In England and Wales, it is envisaged that the minimum energy performance standards provisions of the draft Energy Performance of Buildings Directive would be implemented through Part L of the Building Regulations, which are estimated to provide annual savings of 1.45 MtC (about 2 per cent.) from improved standards for new buildings and refurbishment of existing buildings.

For the European Community as a whole, the European Commission has estimated that the potential energy savings through energy efficiency measures in buildings as a result of the draft Directive would be around 22 per cent. of present consumption, and that this could be realised by the year 2010. Data have not been made available by the Commission on savings for each of the individual measures in the proposal.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 9 November 2001, Official Report, column 452W, on warm front grants, if her Department has received representations from other sources; and if she will publish for each of the last three years for which information is available, by region (a) the average cost of work under the scheme and (b) the maximum level set for grants paid for individual householders. [15181]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 15 November 2001]: The new Home Energy Efficiency Scheme (HEES) was launched on 1 June 2000 and is marketed as the Warm Front Team. HEES provides two levels of financial assistance:

HEES—£1,000 for low income households with children under 16, disabled persons or suffering long-term sickness on a qualifying benefit; and

HEES Plus—£2,000 for over-60s on an income-related benefit.

In addition, HEES Plus recipients who live in a Home Office designated high crime area may be able to have security measures—door and window locks—provided, though from separate Home Office grant.

The Department keeps the level of grant maximum for individuals under review. From time to time representations are received from trade associations. In addition, the two appointed scheme managers monitor the cost of measures being installed under HEES, taking into account material and labour costs in their appointed areas.

The tables identify the average cost of work in each of the four regions for the 2000–01 to 2001–02 financial years.

HEES—£1,000 grant maximum

Foxhunting

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on the fox population of the ban on hunting during the foot and mouth crisis. [15334]

Alun Michael: There is no information collected centrally which could provide the basis for an answer to this question.

Ovine BSE (Research)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) when she first was informed of the results of the tests conducted by the Laboratory of the Government Scientist in relation to BSE in sheep; and if she will make a statement; [9916]

(2) on what basis the time of publication of the findings of the Government Scientist in relation to the work of the Institute of Animal Health on BSE in sheep was decided. [9917]

Margaret Beckett: The results of DNA testing undertaken by the Laboratory of the Government Chemist (LGC) were made known to me on the afternoon of Wednesday, 17 October. Only at around 6.00 pm on Wednesday evening was information received suggesting that the material analysed by the LGC might be representative of the brain pool used in the Institute of Animal Health experiment.

The finding that there was no sheep material in the sample sent to the LGC was a totally unforeseen development. Nevertheless, a statement was made the same evening and within a few hours of Ministers being informed of the results. This statement was given to the Press Association at about 9.00 pm, then issued to other news organisations.

Educational Attainment (Rural Areas)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of young people living in rural areas in the United Kingdom gained five GCSEs at grade levels A* to C compared to the national average in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [16582]

Alun Michael: The Department for Education and Skills, which is responsible for the publication of statistics on participation in education, does not produce figures on the basis of an urban/rural breakdown. Figures for individual local education authorities and local skills councils are available in their statistical bulletins available on their website.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of young children living in rural areas in the United Kingdom did not reach the national average for Key Stage 2 assessment in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [16534]

Alun Michael: The Department for Education and Skills, which is responsible for the publication of statistics on participation in education, does not produce figures on the basis of an urban/rural breakdown. Figures for individual local education authorities and local skills councils are available in their statistical bulletins. The Key Stage 2 publication is a Statistical First Release 40/2001 "National Curriculum Assessment Assessments of 7, 11 and 14-year-olds by Local Education Authority" available on their website.

Lord Haskins

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she has taken to ensure that the responsibilities of Lord Haskins within the Prime Minister's office are co-ordinated with the priorities, objectives and work of her Department. [16395]

Alun Michael: My noble Friend Lord Haskins does not have any responsibilities within the Prime Minister's office. His report as rural recovery co-ordinator for Cumbria was submitted to me on 2 October. My noble Friend Lord Haskins continues to chair the Better Regulation Task Force, which submits reports to Government on regulatory issues. The response of Government to any specific report is co-ordinated by the Government Department which has lead responsibility for the policy area covered by that report.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the outcome was of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 20 November; what the Government's stance was on each issue discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [17454]

Margaret Beckett: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Agriculture Council in Brussels on 20 November, Agriculture Ministers of the devolved Administrations in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland attended.

It was not possible to reach agreement on the main item of business, the proposed reform of the sheepmeat regime. I am disappointed with this outcome since I believe that a satisfactory outcome was close. I hope that the Council will be able to complete discussions at its next meeting.

The Council reviewed the situation in the beef and veal market and the Commission, while not proposing any new action, agreed to monitor developments closely. I supported several member states who stressed that high standards of animal welfare should be maintained when cattle are exported live from the EU; the Commission did not however accept that export refunds on this trade should be discontinued. The Council received information on the current situation with regard to action to control BSE in the member states. The Commission reported that it was examining the compatibility with EU law of recent action by the French trade in respect of beef imports from other EU members. I reminded the Council that one member state had still to lift its ban on imports of British beef.

On sheepmeat, the Commission noted that the EU's Scientific Steering Committee (SSC), which provides advice on food safety and risk management issues, had considered but not approved the further requirements that France proposed to introduce in respect of Specified Risk Material (SRM), especially spinal cord, in carcases. France was invited to supply further information for consideration by the SSC and meanwhile to defer implementation of the measures.

The Council took note of a report from the Commission to the European Parliament and the Council on the evaluation of active substances in pesticides. The Council also congratulated the Commission on the successful conclusion of the discussions on agriculture at the Doha meeting of the WTO.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what was the average time taken between the initial identification of positive cases of foot and mouth disease and (a) disinfection of carcases and (b) disposal of carcases in each month from February to October. [11739]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 1 November 2001]: The table provided shows average times from the initial report of potential foot and mouth disease to disposal. Information on disinfection of carcases is not available as the initial cleansing and disinfection relates to the whole premises.

Month	Average time taken (hours)
February	201
March	135
April	93
May	93
June	45
July	36
August	83
September	26
Average	105

DEFRA Disease Control System Database as at 17:30 30 October 2001. Figures subject to revision as more data become available.

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the risks of spreading foot and mouth disease associated with (a) fox hunting with dogs, (b) riding a horse, (c) walking a dog and (d) rambling; and if she will make a statement. [14402]

Alun Michael: A full list of Veterinary Risk Assessments relating to foot and mouth disease can be found on the DEFRA website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/footandmouth/disease/risks/index/htm. No. 4 deals with opening footpaths to the public; No. 10 deals with Horse Race meetings; No. 12 deals with specified equestrian events; No. 14 deals with official equestrian events and non agricultural land, and No. 26 covers activities relating to hunting with dogs.

Information is also available to advise dog owners how they can guard against spreading foot and mouth disease. This can be found at http://www.defra.gov.uk/footandmouth/about/animals/dogs.asp.

I have placed a printed copy of this information in the Library of the House of Commons.

Green Minister's Report

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish the next Green Minister's report. [18840]

Mr. Meacher: I am delighted to announce that "Greening Government: Third Annual Report 2001" will be published tomorrow. The report will be presented in two parts; Part 1 is a summary of the achievements across Government against the commitments set out in the work programme in last year's report. Part 2 of the report will be in the form of a database giving details of the performance of every Department. The database will be available on the Government's sustainable development website: www.sustainable-development.gov.uk.

The information contained within Part 2 will be transferred to a CD-Rom and placed alongside copies of Part 1 in the Libraries of both Houses.

Jet Skis

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the insurance industry about compulsory third party cover for jet skis operated in coastal waters. [12594]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 5 November 2001]: I have been asked to reply.

My Department takes the view that compulsory third party insurance is not an option that should be pursued and discussions with the insurance industry have therefore not been necessary.

It is the responsibility of UK local authorities and harbour authorities to regulate personal watercraft using local byelaw powers. However, the Department has produced a nationally distributed 'Voluntary Code of Practice for Leisure Users' which provides safety guidelines and encourages third party insurance.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with her European counterparts about the regulation of jet skis operated in coastal waters. [12595]

Mr. Jamieson: [holding answer 5 November 2001]: I have been asked to reply.

My Department has not consulted European colleagues about the regulation of jet skis operated in coastal waters as regulation through local byelaw powers is considered to be adequate. The Inter Departmental Review of byelaws in 1998 recommended that local authorities should be given more general powers to regulate activities affecting the wider environment and coastal zones, including the use of recreational craft.

Social Housing

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much social housing by local authority defined as rural was available to rent in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001; and what proportion of such housing was filled during these years. [15907]

Ms Keeble: I have been asked to reply.

Estimates of residential housing stock and vacancy levels are reported by local authorities annually on Housing Investment Programme returns. Total social housing stock and derived levels of occupation as at 1 April in each year, distinguishing between stock owned by local authorities and by Registered Social Landlords, in authorities categorised as either "mixed rural" or "deep rural", are as follows:

Social housing stock

Thousand

As at 1 April	Number	of which occupied: (percentage)
Local authority owned
1996	508.1	98.5
1997	489.0	98.4
1998	472.2	98.3
1999	436.9	98.1
2000	410.7	97.9
2001	374.1	98.0

Social housing stock

As at 1 April	Number	Thousand of which occupied: (percentage)
Registered Social Landlord owned
1996	176.4	98.6
1997	193.5	98.5
1998	206.9	98.6
1999	235.1	98.5
2000	254.8	98.5
2001	291.2	98.6

A certain level of vacancy is a usual feature of housing management, reflecting turnover and movement within the stock, including those vacant for very short periods between tenants and those requiring minor repairs before re-letting.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she is taking to support the development of photo-voltaic technology. [15510]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 16 November 2001]: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has had a Solar Photovoltaics Research and Development Programme for a number of years, in collaboration with industry, and the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) has also had a programme of basic and applied research with the Universities. Research and development projects on PV technology continue to be supported under the Department's Sustainable Energy Programme, via a six monthly call process, and PV secured the largest share of any renewable technology under the EPSRC's Renewable and New Energy Technologies Programme.

We are also funding around thirty demonstration projects on clusters of homes under the DTI's Domestic PV Systems Field Trial, with a budget of £5.4 million, and have just launched the Large Scale Building-Integrated Field Trial for Public Buildings with a budget of £3 million. This should enable us to support around 15 projects on schools, universities, hospitals, visitor centres and central and local Government buildings.

Looking to the future, we are currently designing the first phase of the Major PV Demonstration Programme, which was announced in the Government's "Opportunity for All" White Paper in February this year. We have a £20 million budget for this over the next 2–3 years, and it is intended that capital grants will be available for all sizes and types of PV installations on both domestic and non-domestic buildings.

Fuel Cell Research

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she proposes to support the development of fuel cell research. [15511]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 16 November 2001]: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has been supporting fuel cells research and development for many years, through the DTI Sustainable Energy Programme and the Engineering and Physical Science Research Council. Since 1992 the DTI has supported 147 fuel cell projects with a total DTI spend of £11.8 million. The current DTI programme is spending about £2 million per annum, with the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) spending about the same on basic research related to fuel cells.

The Energy Review currently being conducted by the Performance and Innovation Unit is considering the role of new technologies including fuel cells, in conjunction with other energy matters, as part of its review of strategic issues surrounding energy policy. It is due to report to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister by the end of the year. Fuel cells may also be used to replace or supplement the internal combustion engine in vehicles. The Government will shortly be issuing a consultation draft of their "Powering Future Vehicles" strategy for promoting the development, introduction and take-up of hybrid, fuel cell and other low-carbon vehicle technologies.

Refrigerants

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assistance and guidance she has given to local councils for the disposal of refrigerators after 1 January 2002. [12688]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 8 November 2001]: From 1 January 2002, the EC Regulation on Ozone Depleting Substances will require 'controlled substances' (including CFCs) in coolants and in insulating foam to be removed before recycling or reclamation of domestic refrigerator units. All local authorities have been informed of the requirements of the Regulation and my Department is currently assessing what financial assistance local authorities will require, in keeping with the new burdens procedure. We expect to finalise shortly guidance on the storage of waste refrigeration equipment, prior to CFC extraction.

Countryside Visitors

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of people travelled by (a) private transport, (b) train, (c) bus and (d) other forms of transport to the countryside in the 12 months from November 2000. [16727]

Alun Michael: Figures are not currently available on the mode of transport used to visit the countryside since November last year. However, I understand that the English Tourism Council's United Kingdom Tourism Survey reports annually, and that information is collected on the mode of transport used to visit the countryside. Figures for 2001 should be available early in 2002.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Embezzlement of Public Funds

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the costs to public funds of (a) criminal damage and (b) embezzlement of public funds and investigations thereof in the latest year for which figures are available. [15245]

Mr. Denham: I have been asked to reply.

The most recent Home Office estimate of the economic and social cost of crime was published in a report in December 2000, "The economic and social cost of crime" (Home Office Research Study 217). This includes estimates of the costs to public funds of crime, as well as estimates of the costs to victims of crime. All figures mentioned here relate to costs in the 1999–2000 financial year.

The study estimates that criminal damage, both to private and public property, had a cost to public funds of £360 million in 1999–2000.

Home Office figures for fraud are based on the legislative definition of fraud; this includes all fraud and does not separate frauds committed against the public sector from other types of fraud.

However, a Home office commissioned study carried out by National Economic Research Associates (NERA) estimated that the cost of fraud committed against Government and the amount of public funds engaged in counter-fraud activity to be between £4 and £9 billion. These costs include the estimated value of fraud as well as expenditure on counter-fraud activity, but excluded Criminal Justice System (CJS) costs.

Estimated cost to public funds of public embezzlement

£ million

	Low estimate	High estimate
Benefits Fraud	2,600	5,600
Civil Service employee fraud	2	2
Customs and Excise + VAT fraud	900	2,500
Local authorities	10	10
NHS fraud	7	150
Inland Revenue	50	400
Total Public Sector Fraud	4,000	9,000

Notes:

1. Totals may not sum due to rounding of figures.
2. Figures exclude any costs to the criminal justice system.

Asylum

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for reducing asylum appeals decision time. [16925]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Lord Chancellor's Department does not have a public service agreement for reducing asylum appeals decision time for the year 2001–02. The Service Delivery Agreement target for the Immigration Appellate Authority for the year 2002–03 is to process 65 per cent. of all cases through both tiers within four months of receipt.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement on the public service agreement target for the respect of the rights of defendants and their fair treatment. [17061]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 23 November 2001, Official Report, columns 550–51W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for reducing delay in the criminal justice system. [17056]

Mr. Wills: The Government regard the removal of unnecessary delay from the criminal justice process to be one of its most important tasks. They have taken a number of steps, notably those contained in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, to reduce delay. In June 1997, the average time for defendants in all criminal proceedings in the magistrates courts from first listing to completion was 35 days. By March 2001 this had reduced to 30 days, an improvement of over 14 per cent.

Public expenditure settlements for the various Departments within Government were set in July 2000 for three years expiring at the end of March 2004. The Government are considering carefully what targets to set for the balance of that period.

Nottingham Crown Court

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment the Lord Chancellor has made of the support available to barristers who are disabled at Nottingham Crown court; and if he will make a statement. [15758]

Mr. Wills: In 1999 a Disability Discrimination Act accessibility audit was conducted at Nottingham Crown court, and all other Court Service courts. The audit found that the court at Nottingham is accessible to disabled court users. Court managers are willing to discuss the needs of all users in advance of them attending court.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Warden Force

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has (a) to assess the success of the warden force within the Metropolitan police area and (b) to reproduce it in police forces (i) across the country and (ii) in Cleveland. [16441]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The Government have commissioned a national evaluation of the Neighbourhood Wardens programme. This is now under way and due for completion by mid-2003. The evaluation is intended to provide an assessment of scheme impacts and to understand the processes of scheme implementation. The methodology includes in-depth investigations in eight case study schemes, comprehensive household surveys in a further seven, and surveys of wardens and scheme managers in all areas.

It is not possible to consider each and every scheme in the same detail but care is taken to ensure that all regions receive roughly equal coverage that enables a picture of national-level impact to be established.

In addition, schemes are encouraged to undertake local-level evaluations appropriate to their needs.

Street warden schemes in England have yet to start and will be subject to a similarly rigorous evaluation process.

Chemical or Biological Attack (Civil Defence)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on establishing (a) a local emergency and (b) civil defence services to deal with a chemical or biological attack. [16690]

Mr. Denham: There have been a small number of representations received from individual members of the public suggesting the establishment of civil defence services to respond to a variety of local or national threats, including chemical or biological (CB) attack.

I am not aware of any representations from civil protection professionals or organisations, either directly in response to the events of 11 September or as part of the Emergency Planning Review following the publication of the consultation document on 23 August, which have called for the establishment of civil defence services. There are comprehensive and well-developed inter-agency arrangements for dealing with emergencies in the United Kingdom whatever their cause. It has long been accepted by civil protection professionals, including the emergency services, that disaster response would not be helped by the creation of anything in the nature of a national squad and that prime responsibility for handling disasters should be at the local level where the resources and expertise are found.

An analysis of all the responses to the Emergency Planning Review will be made to Ministers and a report on the outcomes will be made to the Central Local Partnership.

There have been requests from local authorities, both directly and through the Local Government Association and the Emergency Planning Society for specific guidance about CB and other novel threats. In mid-October, guidance 'Response to the Deliberate Release of Chemicals and Biological Agents' was issued to local authorities. Separate specific guidance about anthrax was issued to general practitioners and health authorities, also in October.

Emergency Strategies (Yorkshire and Humber)

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on emergency planning strategies in Yorkshire and the Humber. [9283]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 31 October 2001]: Emergency planning strategies are a local matter and, in this instance, are a matter for the responding agencies in Yorkshire and Humber.

Guidance has been issued on emergency planning which promotes the principles of Integrated Emergency Management, under which all organisations likely to be involved in the response, including the emergency services and local authorities, share their plans and participate in strategic meetings, joint exercises and training.

The Cabinet Office Review into the Future of Emergency Planning in England and Wales raises the issue of monitoring local emergency planning services and has invited specific comments and suggestions about it.

Communications Interception

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many requests he has received to approve a warrant for the interception of a person's communications in each of the years since 1997; and how many he has refused. [17170]

Mr. Blunkett: The figures relating to the numbers of warrants issued are published annually in the reports of the Commissioners initially appointed under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 (IOCA) and now the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 (RIPA) Copies are placed in the Library.

Records of refusals or withdrawal of requests are not kept in a form which would enable the information requested to be extracted without disproportionate cost.

Police Specials

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police specials are working in the police service. [15163]

Mr. Denham: The number of serving special constables in England and Wales as at 31 March 2001 is 12,738.

The Government are committed to increasing the Special Constabulary and we are looking at radical improvements in their management, welfare and deployment as part of the police reform process.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the Public Service Agreement target (1) for the reconviction rate for offenders serving prison sentences; [17073]

(2) for the reconviction rate for offenders serving community sentences; [17071]

(3) of ensuring just processes and just and effective outcomes. [17062]

Beverley Hughes: Ensuring just processes and just and effective outcomes is one of the key objectives in the 2001–02 Criminal Justice Business Plan. It will be measured using the Public Service Agreement target to reduce the rate of reconvictions of all offenders punished by imprisonment or by community supervision by 5 per cent. by 2004 compared to the predicted rate.

Reducing the rate of reconvictions is one of this Government's key delivery priorities with a delivery plan in place. The delivery strands which will contribute towards the target have been selected on the principles of 'What Works' based on research evidence of effectiveness.

The Public Service Agreement target also included a commitment to reduce the rate of reconvictions of all young offenders by 5 per cent. by 2004 compared to the predicted rate. The Youth Justice Board is taking this forward using a similar approach.

I have asked to see regular reports on the progress towards this target.

Data Protection

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of whether the notification of the Security Service in relation to Part III of the Data Protection Act 1998 is accurate and up to date; whether the Service is to notify purposes associated with the processing of personal data (a) to assist the police in relation to serious crime and (b) to protect the economic well-being of the state; and if he will make a statement. [17192]

Mr. Denham: I understand from the Security Service that it has notified the Information Commissioner that it processes data for three purposes. These are staff administration, building security Closed Circuit Television (CCTV) and commercial agreements. The Security Service has also acknowledged in its notification that it processes data for other purposes, although these have not been separately notified. The notification is accurate and up to date.

At the moment, the Security Service does not intend to make any notification in respect of its statutory duties as defined by the Security Service Acts 1989 and 1996, sections 1 and 1(1) respectively.

Police Funding

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on whether he takes into account (a) actual and (b) anticipated levels of external funding to police forces for the neighbourhood local renewal fund when allocating funds for the (i) recruitment and (ii) training of police officers. [16354]

Mr. Denham: The only funds allocated to police forces specifically for the recruitment and training of police officers are provided through the crime fighting fund. Allocations of crime fighting fund recruits to forces took no account of the neighbourhood local renewal fund.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the cost in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02 of antisocial behaviour orders. [17325]

Mr. Denham: Information on the cost of antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) for each year since their introduction is not held centrally. Nevertheless, based on a survey of 21 cases conducted in April this year, the average cost of applying for an antisocial behaviour order was calculated to be £4,800. This is the cost to either the local authority or the police, and includes staff costs associated with evidence gathering, preparing the case and attending court. It does not include dealing with appeals and breaches. Fuller details will be included in the review of ASBOs which we are aiming to publish shortly.

CARATS Programmes

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the cost in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 of CARATS programmes in prisons. [17320]

Beverley Hughes: Funding provided under the Comprehensive Spending Review and Spending Review 2000 for Counselling, Assessment, Referral, Advice and Throughcare services (CARATS) in prisons was (a) £9,000,000 in 2000–01 and (b) £12,000,000 in 2001–02.

Prisons

Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change male prisons to female use. [18424]

Beverley Hughes: The number of women in prison continues to rise steeply, dramatically exceeding the most recent population projections. Extra capacity is urgently needed and the Prison Service has decided that the best way of providing this is a further change of function of male accommodation. Buckley Hall prison near Rochdale has been selected as the most suitable option in terms of suitable accommodation, geographical location, staffing arrangements and other related factors. The prison is expected to be ready to accept female prisoners from early next year.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Fair Employment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what fair employment measures his Cabinet Secretary has put in place in each Government Department to encourage applications from Northern Ireland. [17236]

Mr. Leslie: Home civil service Departments and agencies have a great deal of autonomy in their personnel policies. However, corporate civil service equal opportunities policy provides that all eligible people must have equality of opportunity for employment and advancement on the basis of their suitability for work. There must be no unfair discrimination on the basis of age, disability, gender, marital status, sexual orientation, race, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, or (in Northern Ireland) community background.

There are 10 home civil service Departments and agencies in Northern Ireland covered by Northern Ireland's fair employment legislation. These Departments and agencies are taking measures to improve the balance of representation in their work force. These include: the publication of Affirmative Action Plans; increasing outreach measures in under-represented sectors of the community; setting recruitment and promotion goals and monitoring closely job applications from each community. The Cabinet Office reports on fair employment issues in HCS Departments and agencies to the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland.

The civil service reform programme aims to achieve a dramatic increase in diversity and tackle under-representation. The Cabinet Secretary reports to the Prime Minister annually on the range of action being taken by the Cabinet Office and Departments to ensure the civil service accelerates progress on diversity.

Fair Trade Goods

Mr. Weir: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his Department's policy is in relation to departmental spending for supplies concerning the purchase of Fair Trade goods. [15201]

Mr. Leslie: Cabinet Office purchasing policy is based on value for money principles. We have no specific policy on Fair Trade goods. Purchases are considered on the basis of fitness for purpose and whole-life cost. Where these considerations are equal, the choice of goods would be influenced by ethical and environmental factors. The Cabinet Office will, however, consider the availability of Fair Trade goods in the Department's refreshment facilities.

Energy Review

Mr. Key: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if the (a) Scottish Executive and (b) Scottish Parliament are represented on the Advisory Group for his review of the UK's future energy needs; [10654]

(2) if the Scottish (a) Executive and (b) Parliament are represented on the Advisory Group for the review of the UK's future energy needs. [10117]

Mrs. Roche: Since energy policy is a reserved matter, the Minister of State at the Scotland Office represents Scotland's interests on the Advisory Group.

The Scotland Office and other UK Government Departments have been continuing to work in close co-operation with the Scottish Executive on energy issues which impinge on devolved responsibilities. The Minister of State has had regular discussions with Scottish Executive Ministers and officials about the issues raised by this Energy Review.

Mr. Key: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the progress of the Energy Review. [10653]

Mrs. Roche: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth) by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 546W.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Disability Discrimination Act

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when a code of practice on the final phase of the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 on access to goods, facilities and services will be laid before Parliament. [18839]

Maria Eagle: A Code of Practice prepared by the Disability Rights Commission was laid before Parliament today. This explains the current duties on service providers and the duties that will come into force on 1 October 2004. Under the new duties, where reasonable, a service provider may have to remove, alter or avoid physical features that make access to his service impossible or unreasonably difficult for a disabled person. In addition, a report of the consultation on the code and on regulatory proposals was placed in the Library today.

Service providers have no need to be apprehensive about these new duties, as they will never have to make unreasonable changes because of them. The code will help service providers decide what it might be reasonable to do in particular circumstances. There are over 8.5 million disabled people in the UK with a collective spending power in excess of £45 billion a year. It makes good economic sense as well as being right to attract as many of these customers as possible by improving access to services. The Government have allowed a long transitional period for the new duties, and the Commission will be publishing the code early, so that service providers can plan adequately and, for example, make access improvements before 2004 as part of refurbishment or other work. I would strongly encourage them to do this.

New Deal

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison), of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 569W, on new deal programmes, if the number of sanctions imposed on people participating in the new deal for the long-term unemployed is now available. [18841]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Up to September 2001, 10,719 sanctions had been imposed on people participating in New Deal 25 plus.

Employment Service Labour Market Statistics

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of the pre-April 2001 entrants to the new deal for the long-term unemployed who undertook the full time education and training option (a) left the option for employment before completing their course, (b) completed their course and (c) obtained an accredited qualification. [9423]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The latest results for the new deal for long-term unemployed are contained in the Statistical First Release which is available in the Library. Information on numbers completing options and on qualifications gained is not available.

Lone Parents

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what changes have been made to housing benefit to support the policy that 16 to 17-year-old lone parents should be housed in semi-independent adult-supervised accommodation. [7907]

Malcolm Wicks: The Social Exclusion Unit report on Teenage Pregnancy recommended that parents under 18 years old who are unable to remain at home with their parents are provided with supported housing.

This will be achieved by using existing accommodation, with on-site or floating support, and the provision of new purpose-built facilities mainly provided by Registered Social Landlords.

So far the Housing Corporation has approved funding for over 720 new supported units, estimated to constitute between a third and a half of the total additional supported accommodation needed for full implementation of the policy. They are currently considering a further round of bids.

After careful consideration we concluded that, pending further progress in providing supported housing, it would not be appropriate to make changes to the Housing Benefit entitlement of 16 to 17-year-old lone parents at the present time.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place a copy of the new piloted minimum income guarantee claim form in the Library. [8964]

Mr. McCartney: The new minimum income guarantee form was placed in the Library on 29 October 2001.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the new minimum income guarantee claim form will be introduced for all applicants, and if he will place a copy in the Library. [9810]

Mr. McCartney: The new minimum income guarantee claim form was introduced on 29 October 2001 and placed in the Library on the same day.

Pension Fund Transfers

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to ensure pension providers transfer funds from one provider to another in a timely and proper fashion. [9428]

Mr. McCartney: The law sets requirements as to the time allowed to trustees and managers of occupational pension schemes to calculate and provide cash equivalent transfer values, and the manner in which they do so. Members' interests are adequately protected by those requirements. We have no plans to make any further provision.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if the CSA is required to recalculate maintenance liabilities back to the beginning of a claim in cases where a parent with care is shown to have been fraudulently claiming income support for some or all of the period during which the CSA was involved. [10432]

Malcolm Wicks: The CSA can supersede a maintenance assessment from the date that it came into effect if a parent with care is discovered to have given false information that has resulted in an increase in maintenance liability. In practice, however, few parents with care have sufficient income to affect the maintenance assessment. The discovery that a claim for income support was fraudulent will, therefore, often have no effect on the amount of maintenance due.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints have been made to the Child Support Agency in each of the last five years by hon. Members on behalf of their constituents. [10826]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Norman Lamb, dated 23 November 2001:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions about the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Smith is unavailable and therefore I am writing to you on his behalf.

You asked how many complaints have been made to the Child Support Agency in each of the last five years by honourable Members on behalf of their constituents.

Some of the information you have requested is not available, as it is not collected in the format you have asked for.

The Agency began counting the number of complaints received from Members of Parliament as a separate statistical figure from July 2000.

From July 2000 to September 2001, the number of complaints received by the Agency from Members of Parliament on behalf of their constituents was 6,640.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what is the average waiting time between submission of the complaint and completion of the investigation of CSA cases referred to the Independent Case Examiner in the last 12 months. [15650]

Malcolm Wicks: The Independent Case Examiner's average clearance time, from November 2000 to October 2001, was 33.5 weeks.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what was the backlog of Child Support Agency cases awaiting the attention of the Independent Case Examiner at (a) 1 January 2000, (b) 1 July 2001, (c) 1 January 2001 and (d) 1 July 2001. [13726]

Malcolm Wicks: Details of the Child Support Agency cases which were awaiting the attention of the Independent Case Examiner, on the specified dates, are in the table.

Date	Number of cases awaiting initial action	Number of cases awaiting investigation of evidence	Total
1 January 2000	16	130	146
1 July 2000	152	8	160
1 January 2001	213	36	249
1 July 2001	290	51	341
Current position	0	182	182

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what recent representations he has received on delays in estimation of absent parents' contributions to child support; [17292]

(2) what measures are available to ensure that parents with care do not lose financially as a result of delayed estimation of absent parents' contributions to child support; [17293]

(3) what targets he has set the Child Support Agency to improve times taken to determine absent parents' contributions to child support; [17291]

(4) when he last discussed with the Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency the time taken to determine absent parents' contributions to child support; [17289]

(5) what assessment he has made of the time taken by the Child Support Agency to determine absent parents' contributions to child support. [17290]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 21 November 2001]: My right hon. Friend holds regular meetings with the Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency, Mr. Doug Smith, to discuss all aspects of Child Support Agency performance. The time taken to complete a child support assessment is monitored on a monthly basis. For information about the latest performance information I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 15 November 2001, Official Report, column 1339. The agency has received 6,375 complaints from customers and 1,584 from Members of Parliament about delays in making maintenance assessments in the last 12 months.

Delays in completing assessments are largely due to the complexity of the current scheme. The simpler child support arrangements to be introduced for the new cases from April 2002 will allow this work to be completed more quickly. We will expect the agency to get child support flowing within six weeks for the majority of applicants.

In common with other agencies, the Child Support Agency compensates clients for financial loss arising from maladministration. Delays caused by the clients themselves, however, and the inevitable length of the current process are not covered by these arrangements.

Child Benefit

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many child benefit payments have been (a) suspended pending further inquiries and (b) terminated as a consequence of this summer's identity confirmation exercise; and what proportion each figure constitutes of the number of claimants for each region of the UK. [10565]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department carries out a number of initiatives to confirm identity information each year. An initiative to which this question may be referring is one that checks a sample number of child benefit recipients who receive payment by automated credit transfer.

This initiative is continuing and the latest figures available are for the period June 2000 to March 2001:

168,000 customers included in exercise

3,711 ChB accounts suspended.

Information is not available on the number of payments terminated or on a regional basis.

Benefit Take-up

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent estimate he has made of the total annual amount of unclaimed benefit, broken down by individual benefits, in (a) Scotland and (b) the United Kingdom. [10755]

Malcolm Wicks: Information is available only for Great Britain. This is contained in the publication "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up in 1999/2000", a copy of which is in the Library.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the reports on (a) take-up of income-related benefits and (b) households below average income in 1999–2000 can be accessed through his Department's website; and if he will take steps to clarify the procedure to be followed by users of the site. [13725]

Mr. McCartney: Reports on the take-up of income-related benefits can be found at: http://www.dss.gov.uk/asd/tu9900f.pdf

The households below average income survey can be found at: http://www.dss.gov.uk/publications/dss/2001/hbai/index.htm

An improved Department for Work and Pensions website will be launched in December. The homepage of this site will include a link to research reports produced by the Department.

Disability Benefit

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many disability benefit claimants there are in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the constituency of Gordon; and how many disability benefit claimants will be liable to attend work-focused interviews as a result of the Social Security (Jobcentre Plus Interviews) Regulations 2001 in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the constituency of Gordon. [11496]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Jobcentre Plus will ensure that for the first time there is a single gateway to the benefit system for people of working age. We want to make sure that everyone of working age has the opportunity to find out what support is available to help them to work. At the same time, this gives us the opportunity to get more help to people who cannot work.

National roll out of Jobcentre Plus will start next year. At present, only people of working age living within areas that are served by Jobcentre Plus pathfinders or work-focused interview sites making new or repeat claims will be required to attend a work-focused interview. No such office is currently serving the Gordon constituency. Information on the number of people who have attended interviews since Pathfinder offices were opened on 22 October will be available in December.

The number of people of working age claiming benefit on the basis of sickness or disability is in the table.

	Thousand
May 2001
Great Britain	2,984.1
Gordon	2.0

Notes:

1. Working age is 16–59 for women and 16–64 for men. The table includes people claiming incapacity benefit, severe disablement allowance, disability living allowance and income support with the disability premium.

2. Cases are allocated to each Parliamentary Constituency by matching the postcode against the 2000 version 1 of the Postcode Directory and represent Parliamentary Constituency boundaries as at May 1997.

3. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.

4. Figures for Northern Ireland are not included. Social security matters in Northern Ireland are the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Assembly.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many representations he has received from individual local authorities, local government associations and pressure groups on the administrative complexity of the housing benefit/council tax benefit system. [12946]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 14 November 2001]: Information on representations made to the Department is not held in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Medical Assessments

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the work conducted by SEMA doctors on behalf of his Department in Cambridgeshire; and if he will make a statement. [17479]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The work of all SchlumbergerSema doctors on behalf of the Department for Work and Pensions is closely monitored by SchlumbergerSema and the Department. The performance of doctors in Cambridgeshire has in general met the required standards and no major issues of concern over quality standards have emerged. Where monitoring identifies there is room for improvement of a doctor's performance, appropriate feedback is given to the doctor concerned.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the extension of SEMA's contract. [18227]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave to my right hon. Friend the Member for Coatbridge and Chryston (Mr. Clarke) on 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 447W.

Basic Pension

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to review the £85 pension threshold for clawback of incapacity benefit. [14365]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 13 November 2001]: While we keep all social security benefits constantly under review we have no plans to change the threshold at which occupational and personal pensions are taken into account in assessing incapacity benefit for new claims.

Disabled People (Heating Costs)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent studies he has (a) conducted and (b) commissioned into the exceptional heating costs of different categories of disabled persons. [14366]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 13 November 2001]: The Department itself has not conducted or commissioned studies of this sort. For England the main source of information on fuel poverty is the five-yearly English House Condition Survey (ECHS). The survey does not look at the different categories of disabled persons. The latest edition for which figures on fuel poverty are available relates to 1996. Figures for households in fuel poverty in 1998 have been produced from the 1998 Energy Follow Up Survey to the English House Condition Survey, although the analysis available from this survey is more limited than that from the ECHS.

The UK Poverty Strategy, published by the Government in February 2001, aims to seek an end to fuel poverty and the first priority is to ensure that by 2010 no vulnerable household in the UK need risk ill health due to a cold home.

Hospital Downrating

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many persons had their state pensions cut as a result of a hospital stay of more than (a) six weeks and (b) 52 weeks in each year since May 1997. [14384]

Mr. McCartney: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

The number of people as of 31 March in each individual year with their pension downrated was:

	Number downrated
	6–52 weeks	Over 52 weeks	Total
March 1998	19,000	13,000	32,000
March 1999	20,000	12,000	32,000
March 2000	22,000	10,000	32,000
March 2001	23,000	10,000	33,000

Notes:

1. Figures rounded to nearest 1,000

2. Information is not available prior to 1997–98

3. Administrative data only records information at an individual point in time. It is therefore not possible to give the total number of people that have their pension downrated during the course of a year, only the total number at a particular point in time.

Automated Credit Transfer

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 26 October 2001, Official Report, column 442W, on benefit payouts (ACT), what information is collected about benefit recipients and automated credit transfer. [15173]

Malcolm Wicks: Statistical information, by benefit, is collected quarterly and annually on the number of customers currently receiving benefit by ACT in GB and overseas. Data are also collected on the number of GB customers choosing ACT when they make a new claim to benefit. Historical data on the percentage of new and existing GB customers receiving payment by ACT are also collated.

Currently around 40 per cent. of customers choose ACT as their method of payment.

Public Appointments

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many appointments he has made to public bodies since 7 June; and how many are in his gift. [15479]

Mr. McCartney: Information about numbers of ministerial appointments to public bodies is included in the Cabinet Office's annual report, "Public Bodies". Copies of this are placed in the Library of the House and the report is published on the Cabinet Office's internet website. The next edition of "Public Bodies", which will include number of appointments at March 2001, will be published around the end of the year.

DWP—Public Bodies—Appointments 7 June to 31 October 2001

	Total	In gift of Secretary of State	Since 7 June 2001

[1] Following Ministerial agreement on 28 August 2001 to extend the term of ACDET until March 2002 all appointments for the Committee were extended until 31 March 2002.

Notes:

1. Information based on DWP public bodies as in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies".
2. The Appeals Service information is not included as the Lord Chancellors Department makes the appointments.

Income-related Benefits

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people living in the Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency were in receipt of income-related benefits in each of the last four years. [16437]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 20 November 2001]: The available information is in the tables.

Income-related benefit recipients in the Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency

	May 1998	May 1999	May 2000	May 2001

Social Exclusion (Wycombe)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) men, (b) women and (c) children of each ethnic group in the Wycombe constituency are classified as socially excluded. [14872]

Malcolm Wicks: Poverty and social exclusion are complex multi-dimensional issues, affecting many aspects of people's lives—including income, health, housing, the quality of their environment and opportunities to learn. There is therefore no single measure that can be used to classify people as socially excluded.

Miners' Compensation

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much benefit was paid by the Department of Trade and Industry to the Department of Social Security and the Department of Work and Pensions in respect of miners' occupational lung disease claims under the Social Security Act 1997 (Recoupment of Benefit Provisions); how many cases were involved; and how much benefit in those cases was set off and deducted from the compensation by the Department of Trade and Industry. [17111]

Maria Eagle: The amount recovered is in respect of payments to miners as a consequence of their illness and is recovered direct from the Department of Trade and Industry, not the miners themselves.

The available information is in the table.

Miners occupational lung diseases	Number of cases	Amount paid (£)
Chronic bronchitis and emphysema	2,020	7,673,339.86
Asthma	7	115,304.50
Mesothelioma	7	55,437.89
Chest/lung condition	1	8,399.40
Pneumoconiosis	1	3,309.88
Total	2,036	7,855,791.53

Information about the amount of deductions made by the Department of Trade and Industry in lieu of benefit paid is not currently available. My hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and Industry will write to my hon. Friend with the information when it becomes available.

Parliamentary Questions

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will answer question no. 11496, tabled on 26 October, relating to disability claimants; and for what reason it was not answered on the due date of 30 October. [17328]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him today at columns 708-09W.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will reply to WPQ numbers (a) 13442 and (b) 11001. [17826]

Maria Eagle: The questions were answered on 23 November and 19 November respectively.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been paid to the private sector in refunded contributions on account of opted-out occupational pensions schemes in each of the last five years. [18025]

Mr. McCartney: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

National Insurance contribution rebates for occupational pension schemes

HEALTH

Anti-bioterrorism Strategy

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to inform the medical profession of the Government's anti-bioterrorism strategy. [9857]

Ms Blears: As part of on-going contingency planning, arrangements are in place to mitigate the effects of a bioterrorist act and to ensure response and recovery in conjunction with other Government Departments, the national health service and key public health agencies. Further guidance was issued in October to regional directors of public health and health authorities to ensure the NHS is ready to address bioterrorist threats, including anthrax, smallpox, botulism, plague or other unknown biological or chemical agents. At the same time, guidance for medical staff was made available on the Public Health Laboratory Service website.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the role of vaccination in countering terrorist biological threats. [13828]

Jacqui Smith: The Department's on-going planning activity includes a review of the impact of terrorist biological threats and the countermeasures necessary, including vaccination where appropriate. We are working closely with the Ministry of Defence to address the issues of possible biological threats. We are in discussions with the United States of America, the European Union and other Governments to share information on planning and response, including vaccine supplies. There is a strategic reserve of vaccination, which could be rapidly deployed.

Halifax Hospital

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the original estimate was of the cost of the new Halifax hospital; and what the latest estimate is of the total cost. [10663]

Jacqui Smith: In 1994, the board of the Calderdale Healthcare National Health Service Trust submitted an outline business case (OBC) to rationalise services from three hospital sites on to one. The costs in this OBC, £34.85 million, related to construction costs only for a combination of new build and refurbishment.

Further work led to a full business case (FBC) being developed in 1996. The scheme that was put forward was significantly enhanced from the OBC proposal. This included detailed internal design work, creating additional clinical space and more single areas with en-suite facilities. It also included the addition of new build mental health villas that were excluded from the original OBC. The cost of the FBC was £60.96 million.

The original costs of £34.85 million did not include all the elements of the scheme; it covered only a distinctly different and small scheme. It therefore is not possible to make comparisons between the costs at OBC stage and at FBC stage.

The FBC included a three-level diagnostic ward block, new mental health villas, a refurbished children's and women's block, other refurbished buildings, and modern systems to support the new facilities.

The design strategy was further changed in 1998, as it became apparent that the layout would still not meet the need. These changes added a fourth level to the diagnostic ward block to house a new maternity block, and demolition of the existing women and children's block.

These changes resulted in a new build and refurbishment scheme totalling £76 million. When the costs of borrowing and insurance of the private sector partner, Catalyst, are included in the total cost, the figure is £103 million.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to reduce waiting lists in Boston and Skegness. [11549]

Jacqui Smith: As part of the NHS plan, the national health service is working towards reducing the current maximum in-patient wait of 18 months to 15 months by March 2002, 12 months by March 2003, nine months by March 2004 and finally six months by the end of 2005. The maximum out-patient waiting time will fall from over six months today to six months by March 2002 and three months by 2005.

The health community in Lincolnshire has an excellent record in consistently reducing waiting times across the majority of specialties. It is acknowledged that there are short term pressures around some waiting lists at present. A number of innovative schemes have been introduced to address this. The situation is kept under regular review and the health community is confident that it will be able to maintain its agreed action plan.

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled in Oxfordshire in each of the last five years. [16020]

Ms Blears: Statistics on the number of operations cancelled for non-medical reasons in each health authority are collected on a quarterly basis. Copies are available in the Library. The latest figures are for quarter one (April–June) of the 2001–02 financial year.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of people in contact with specialist mental health services are able to access crisis resolution services at any time. [11525]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 31 October 2001]: The latest information held centrally indicates that there were 35 crisis resolution teams in place as at October 2000. The NHS plan has a set target of having 335 crisis resolution teams established by 2004. Progress towards meeting this target is being monitored through the comprehensive review process. By 2004 all people in contact with specialist mental health services will be able to access crisis resolution services.

Secure Hospitals

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have moved from high secure hospitals to more appropriate accommodation in the current financial year. [11533]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 31 October 2001]: Between 1 April 2001 and 30 September 2001 (the last date for which accurate information is available) 65 people moved from high secure hospitals to more appropriate accommodation.

Additional Health Services

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) early intervention teams, (b) crisis resolution teams and (c) assertive outreach teams (i) have been and (ii) will be established in the current financial year. [11524]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 31 October 2001]: The information available in response to the number of assertive outreach teams at (i) have been and (ii) will be established in the current financial year, is set out in the table.

The precise numbers of early intervention teams and crisis resolution teams that (i) have been and (ii) will be established in the current financial year are being collected. A census earlier this year showed there were 35 crisis resolution teams and 12 early intervention teams in England.

Insulin Pumps

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the supply of insulin pumps to people with uncontrolled diabetes. [12548]

Ms Blears: We announced on 31 July that we were referring insulin pump therapy to the National Institute for Clinical Excellence for appraisal. The institute appraises the clinical and cost effectiveness of treatments and issues authoritative, evidence-based guidance to the national health service, to help to deliver equity of access to effective treatments wherever patients may live.

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the work of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence. [12376]

Ms Blears: We welcome the progress which the National Institute for Clinical Excellence has already made. Authoritative, evidence-based guidance has been issued on a wide range of subjects, particularly drug treatments. NICE has also established six collaborating centres for the development of clinical guidelines, and has already published four guidelines.

Local Authority Performance Indicators

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the methodology was used in determining the local authority social services departments' performance rating announced on 19 October; which social services performance assessment framework indications were used to make the judgments and how they were prioritised; when local authorities were informed of the judgments; what measurements of quality of provision were undertaken in addition to measurements of activity; and if he will make a statement. [11323]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 6 November 2001]: The methodology used to calculate the top and bottom Social Services Departments was as follows:

A council was classified as one of the best performing if it was in the top one third of councils based on the proportion of indicators banded three or higher this year and had on average three quarters or more of its indicators banded as three or higher over the past three years.

A council was classified as one of the least well performing if it was in the bottom third of councils based on the proportion of indicators banded three or higher this year and had on average 55 per cent. or less of its indicators banded as three or higher over the past three years.

Banding of the performance indicators was introduced last year to help clarify what level of performance is generally good in relation to a performance indicator. Bands range from "investigate urgently" to "very good". Band three represents a council performing at a level which is "acceptable but with possible room for improvement".

This calculation excluded the three authority based interface indicators (A5, A6 and D41) in each year; excluded indicators that were not applicable for a council in that particular year; only included indicators for which data are available for that particular year, for example data for indicators C33 and E45 are not available for 2000–01 and therefore were excluded from the calculation of the percentage for that year; and included indicators for which data were missing (and therefore awarded the lowest band).

A list of the indicators which were included in the calculation of the proportion for each year is as listed. There were 32 such indicators in 1998–99, 34 in 1999–2000 and 43 in 2000–01. None of these were prioritised—each had the same weight as all the other indicators.

List of the indicators included in the calculation of the proportion of indicators banded as acceptable or better in each of the last three years

1998–99

A1, A3, B7, B8, B9, B10, B11, B12, B13, B14, B15, B16, B17, C20, C21, C22, C23, C25, C26, C27, C28, C29, C30, C31, C32, C33, C34, D35, D37, D38, D39, E44.

Total number of indicators: 34

2000–01

A1, A2, A3, B7, B8, B9, B10, B11, B12, B13, B14, B15, B16, B17, C18, C19, C20, C21, C22, C23, C24, C25, C26, C27, C28, C29, C30, C31, C32, C34, D35, D36, D37, D38, D39, D40, D42, E44, E46, E47, E48, E49, E50.

Total number of indicators: 43.

Local authorities were informed of these judgments when the data were analysed just before my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's announcement on 19 October. The judgments were based solely upon social services performance indicators, not upon qualitative data. From next summer we will introduce star ratings based upon all information about council's performance including indicator data, inspections and in-year assessments of performance. The indicator data give important information on performance showing where action may need to be taken either to spread good performance in service delivery or to turn around poor performance.

Hospital Trusts (North West)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for each acute hospital trust in the north west region, what is (a) the size of population it serves, (b) the number of CT and MRI scanners available, (c) the number of each type of scanner per thousand head of population served by each trust and (d) the age of each scanner. [11888]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 6 November 2001]: The table details the CT and MRI Scanners in acute hospital trusts within the north west region and the age of each. Information is not available on the population served by each trust.

However, the 45 CT and 24 MRI scanners in the north west region serve a population of approximately 6.6 million people. This equates to figures of approximately 6.8 CT and 3.6 MRI scanners per million head of population. English national average figures are approximately six CT and four MRI scanners per million head of population.

Health Funding

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which primary care trusts receive funding centrally at an (a) regional and (b) sub-regional level to meet the cost of expensive drugs or treatment. [13266]

Ms Blears: The Department makes unified allocations annually to health authorities. Health authorities then allocate resources directly to their primary care groups/trusts within national guidelines.

Health authorities in partnership with PCG/Ts and other local stakeholders determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services. PCTs do not therefore receive direct funding from the Department for specific drugs or treatments.

Prescribed Heroin

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the numbers of individuals who have been prescribed heroin in each of the past 12 years. [13721]

Ms Blears: The figures give details of heroin prescribing between 1997 and 1996. As the addicts index from which these figures were taken ceased in 1997 we are not able to provide any statistics for later years.

Breast Cancer

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of patients presenting with breast cancer are seen within 14 days when GP written referral request was received within 24 hours for (a) each health authority and (b) in total in England for the last two years for which figures are available. [13615]

Ms Blears: The two week waiting time standard was introduced for urgent cases of suspected breast cancer from April 1999. Performance data for the last two years by health authority are shown in the table.

Department of Health form QMCW

Scottish Devolution

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is regarding consultations prior to the publication of proposals involving the transfer of powers to the Scottish Executive by (a) primary legislation and (b) Order in Council. [13827]

Ms Blears: Transfer of powers to the Scottish Executive takes place only after agreement between the Administrations. There are two routes: when power is conferred by primary legislation the Sewell Convention requires the prior approval of the Scottish Parliament through the Scottish Executive. When conferred by secondary legislation, the Order follows procedures set out in the Scotland Act 1998; approval by both Houses of Parliament and the Scottish Parliament is required.

Smoking

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to ban smoking in (a) the workplace and (b) all public places. [13605]

Jacqui Smith: We have no plans for legislation in these areas.

Following a consultation process the Health and Safety Commission has recommended the introduction of an Approved Code of Practice on smoking in the workplace. We are giving careful consideration to this proposal.

Control of smoking in public places is the responsibility of the management of such premises. The Public Places Charter, agreed with the hospitality industry, provides customers with clear information on the type of smoking policy operating in a particular establishment, and allows them to make an informed choice.

Carers and Disabled Children Act

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to monitor the duties of local authorities in implementing the Carers and Disabled Children Act 2000; [14004]

(2) what research he has commissioned into the implementation of the Carers and Disabled Children Act 2000; [14003]

(3) if he will make a statement about the duties of local authorities in implementing the Carers and Disabled Children Act 2000. [14008]

Jacqui Smith: The provisions in the Act relating to assessment, carer services, and direct payments for disabled 16 and 17-year-olds, carers and people with parental responsibility for disabled children came into force in England in April. The provisions relating to vouchers are planned to come into force in April 2002. The social services inspectorate monitors the performance of local authority social services departments. The Department also has regular contact with voluntary organisations who are able to share their local knowledge about the delivery of services to carers. We will be considering the nature of the research which we should commission when the voucher system comes into force. The implementation of the Act in Wales is a matter for the National Assembly of Wales.

Child Psychiatric Posts

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there are in consultant child psychiatric posts (a) nationally and (b) in north-west Lancashire. [14537]

Jacqui Smith: Information about consultant vacancies is collected through the national health service vacancy survey, which has been conducted in March each year since 1999. Vacancy rates are not, however, collected separately for all disciplines within the mental health sector and information is not held about vacancies in consultant child psychiatric posts. Vacancy rates in consultant child psychiatry posts are included in the total consultant vacancy rate figure.

Beta Interferon

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will complete his discussions with the pharmaceutical industries on the provision of beta interferon for relapsing-remitting MS sufferers. [14799]

Ms Blears: We have no precise timetable, but are aiming to conclude the discussions as soon as possible in the light of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence's final guidance.

Porton Down (NHS Data)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what dates since 3 August officials in his Department have held meetings with the Medical Research Council regarding the provision and confidentiality of National Health Service data for an epidemiological study into volunteers who took part in experiments at the chemical and biological defence establishment, Porton Down. [14750]

Jacqui Smith: Officials were made aware of this study by the Medical Research Council but there have been no meetings or substantive discussions on the subject.

Blood Donors (South Tyneside)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people gave blood in South Tyneside in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001; how many are projected to do so in 2002; and what plans he has to encourage blood-giving. [15025]

Jacqui Smith: Information on blood donation is available only by financial year. In south Tyneside, the number of blood donors were:

	Number
1999–2000	6,258
2000–01	5,979
April 2001 to end of October 2001	3,449
2001–02[1]	5,767

[1] Projected figure

This year the National Blood Service (NBS) are working with south Tyneside council's 'Partners for Life' initiative, south Tyneside hospital's 'Saving Lives Together' campaign and south Tyneside college to recruit new blood donors.

The NBS have undertaken national and regional television and radio advertising, as well as direct mailing, to target new and existing donors. They have also run more public blood donor sessions and are reviewing the donation process to find ways of reducing waiting times for donors.

Medicines (Safeguards)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment his Department has made of the adequacy of the safeguards in place in (a) care homes, (b) NHS hospitals and continuing care, (c) private hospitals and (d) the community in respect of covert administration of medicines by nurses, midwives and health visitors. [14957]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 15 November 2001]: As regulated professionals, registered nurses, midwives and health visitors are expected to work to guidance issued by the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting. Registered nurses, midwives and health visitors may administer medicines in the absence of consent where doing so is in the best interests of the patient, where it has been agreed following discussion within the full care team and with the involvement of the person's family or representative.

The covert administration of medicines should be exceptional, determined on a case-by-case basis, and never a matter of routine practice. Where it is determined to be appropriate, the decision and the medicines administered must be fully documented.

We expect national health service hospital and community organisations to have local policies about the administration of medicines as part of its clinical governance responsibilities for standards of clinical care, for which each chief executive is accountable. For people in care homes, "The National Minimum Standards for Care Homes", produced by the National Care Standards Commission, apply. The Department finished consultation on draft standards for private acute care in October and is currently considering the responses.

For the treatment of mental disorder in situations where patients cannot or do not consent to medication, nurses are required to act in accordance with the provisions of the Mental Health Act 1983.

Mental Illness

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he gives to medical practitioners on prescribing medicines for those suffering from mental illness, in relation to obtaining patients' consent to treatment. [17339]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Chapter 16 of the 'Code of Practice on the Mental Health Act 1983' provides guidance on the provisions in Part IV of the Act relating to consent by patients being treated for mental disorder.

Except where provisions of Part IV on the Mental Health Act 1983 apply, consent to treatment is governed by the common law. In March 2001, the Department issued the 'Reference Guide to consent for examination or treatment', which provides guidance to practitioners on law and good practice in this field.

Nurses

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many nurses (a) in the mental health field and (b) in total left the NHS in each of the last 10 years; [14143]

(2) how many nurses worked in mental health in the NHS in each of the last 10 years. [14144]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 15 November 2001]: Data collected by the Department do not identify the number of nurses who leave the national health service or the total number of nurses working in mental health. The non-medical work force census does identify the number of community psychiatry and other psychiatry nurses. The data are in the table.

NHS hospital and community health services (HCHS) qualified nursing staff in the community psychiatry and other psychiatry areas of work in England as at 30 September each year

Hearing Aids

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what private sector companies were used to (a) design, (b) provide facilities for and (c) manage the modernising NHS hearing aid services project. [15599]

Jacqui Smith: Discussions were held with all hearing aid companies during the design of the modernising national health service hearing aid services project. The following companies supplied goods and or services and training:

A&M Hearing Ltd.

GN Resound Ltd.

Starkey Laboratories UK

Oticon Ltd.

PC Werth Ltd.

Lavis Medical Systems Ltd.

The project is managed on behalf of the Department by the Royal National Institute for the Deaf.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for the allocation of funding for the purchase of digital hearing aids; and if he will make a statement. [15807]

Jacqui Smith: The Institute of Hearing Research is evaluating the modernisation project on behalf of the Department. Subject to favourable evaluation, we will make decisions about how best to spread the modernised services, including the provision of digital hearing aids throughout the national health service. We have earmarked funds to begin roll-out and have said that up to £25 million will be invested by 2003–04. Funding decisions for 2002–03 will be made in time to allow sites to make plans for delivering services for that financial year.

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many salaried dentists have been employed in each health authority area in England since the publication of the Government's plan for NHS dentistry. [15470]

Ms Blears: Information on the number of salaried dentists employed in each health authority as at September 2000—the month of publication of "Modernising NHS Dentistry—Implementing the NHS Plan" is shown in table 1. The same information as at September 2001 is shown in table 2.

The figures are for number of dentists and take no account of part-time working. Some dentists work in more than one HA and are included each time in the individual HA figures but only once in the England total. Dentists working in more than one dental service are included each time.

Information on salaried dentists employed in community dental services and hospital dental services is available only for September 2000.

[1] The number of salaried dentists in the CDS and HDS is not available centrally

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what central Government funding programmes will be available to support NHS dentistry after March 2002. [15309]

Ms Blears: An estimated £1.1 billion will be spent on the general dental service and a further £57 million will be invested on personal dental service pilot schemes in the current financial year. Figures for future years are not yet available.

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support his Department is giving to health authorities and individual practices to provide NHS dental services. [15306]

Ms Blears: We have invested almost £100 million extra over the last two years towards helping health authorities and individual practices provide NHS dental services.

In addition to this financial support the Government have made it easier for health authorities to influence dentistry provision in their area. Health authorities can now commission local spot contracts with dentists. Health authorities can also bid for Government money to support the establishment of personal dental service pilot schemes, which are an alternative way by which to provide NHS dentistry and allow for the creation of a service more tailored to the needs of local communities.

Information Management

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how data quality for information management purposes is managed within the NHS. [15401]

Ms Blears: Information used for management purposes should be accurate, relevant and timely to inform decision making which is appropriate and based on evidence. National health service managers are responsible for ensuing that the data collected and used by their organisation are of sufficient quality to meet their needs. Ideally, data should be collected once only, and verified as close as possible to the source of the data. Most NHS information systems have in-built validation routines which can check the quality of data as they are entered on to the system.

Further data quality checks are usually made as data pass between organisations. Data used to support commissioning, for example, are exchanged via the NHS-wide Clearing Service. Within this process, data quality reports are produced and returned to the data originator. In addition, the Department's regional offices provide feedback to NHS hospital trusts on the quality of data held in the NHS-wide clearing service database. The Department also produces data quality reports on the records received as hospital episode statistics, as well as validating other centrally required returns based on aggregated information.

Information Technology

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which body within the Department of Health has responsibility for drawing up information technology strategy. [15398]

Ms Blears: The Department's information services group has responsibility for drawing up the information technology strategy for the Department.

The information policy unit has overall responsibility for the delivery of the information strategy for the national health service, ensuring that it is kept up to date and is co-ordinated with information and IT issues surrounding policy development.

Professor Denis Protti

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has received the assessment of Professor Denis Protti of the information for Health Strategy; and if he will make a statement. [15400]

Ms Blears: The report of professor Denis Protti has not been received.

Dental Care Development Fund

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health authorities benefited from the dental care development fund in 2000–01; and how much finance was awarded in each case. [15305]

Ms Blears: Information on the health authorities receiving dental care development fund awards and the amounts awarded are shown in the table.

Care Homes for Young People

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the planned national standards for care homes for young people. [16024]

Jacqui Smith: Draft national minimum standards for younger adults' care homes were published for consultation between 29 June 2001 and 21 September 2001. 500 responses were received, expressing a range of views. We are now considering those responses and will publish the final version of the standards shortly.

Registered Nursing Beds

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many registered nursing beds in (a) general and mental nursing homes, (b) private hospitals and (c) clinics there were in the North Yorkshire Health Authority area in (i) 1999 and (ii) 2000; and how many there are now. [15949]

Jacqui Smith: The information available is given in the table. Details relating to 31 March 2001 will be published at the end of November 2001, in the Statistical Bulletin "Community Care Statistics 2001: Residential personal social services for adults, England".

Community Care Plans (Replacement)

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to launch the consultation on replacing community care plans; and if he will make a statement. [17262]

Jacqui Smith: The consultation process seeking views to remove section 46 of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990, which requires councils to produce a community care plan, was completed on 5 November 2001. By that date, 115 responses were received.

Prisons

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS trusts provide psychiatrists and other staff to prisons. [16629]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Psychiatrists and other mental health staff work in prisons under a range of different organisational arrangements, full details of which are not held centrally.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practices provide primary care services to prisons; and if he will make a statement. [16630]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Information on the number of general practices providing primary care in prisons is not held centrally. However, a survey this year of doctors who work in prisons showed that from the 225 who identified themselves as general practitioners, 180 were part time with 120 contracted to work for less than 10 hours a week.

There is no single model governing the recruitment of doctors to prison health care. Historically the system is one of mixed provision in which primary care is provided by doctors directly employed by the Prison Service, general practitioners under contract and locums, or by a combination of these arrangements. This flexibility allows for the most effective use of local labour markets.

Prisoners (Mental Health)

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prisoners have been transferred to NHS mental health facilities on temporary licence since 13 July 2000; and what funding arrangements have been made in respect thereof. [16609]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The Prison Service does not collect information about the number of prisoners transferred to national health service mental health facilities on temporary licence but it would expect there to be few, if any, such cases. The objective is to ensure that prisoners who are so severely mentally disordered that they required in-patient treatment in hospital are diagnosed, assessed and transferred as quickly as possible. Some 750 prisoners a year are transferred from prison to hospital by direction of my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary under sections 47 and 48 of the Mental Health Act 1983. The costs of their treatment in hospital are borne by the national health service.

Atypical Anti-psychotic Drugs

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of patients not receiving atypical anti-psychotic drugs who could benefit from them. [17217]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: This estimate has not been made. The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) has been asked to appraise the clinical and cost effectiveness of atypical antipsychotics in schizophrenia. This guidance is due to be published in March 2002.

Mind Out for Mental Health Campaign

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he intends to continue to provide funding for the Mind Out for Mental Health campaign in 2002–03. [16618]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Decisions have not yet been made on communications expenditure for 2002–03.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the availability of leaflets for employers under the Mind Out for Mental Health campaign. [16619]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: One thousand Working Minds tool kits were produced for use by human resource managers as part of the Mind Out for Mental Health campaign. The tool kits have been extremely popular and have now been distributed to employers and groups working with employers. There are currently no stock of the tool kit available. However, the information contained in the tool kit is available on the campaign website www.mindout.net, and can be downloaded free of charge by users.

Working Minds Programme

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes in employers' policy and practice the Working Minds programme seeks to achieve; and if he will make a statement on how he intends to monitor progress and measure success. [17091]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The Working Minds programme is working in partnership with employers to: increase awareness and improve understanding of mental health issues among employers and employees; eliminate discrimination on the grounds of mental health within the workplace and during employee recruitment; improve workplace policies on mental health and promote best practice in the management of mental health at work; and promote improved management and fair treatment of staff experiencing mental health problems in the workplace.

The campaign does not dictate changes in policy and practice, but provides the information to encourage employers to take action, along with signposts to further resources provided by specialist organisations. Every employer is different, so each will want to develop specific policies and practices that are appropriate for their own size, structure, objectives and culture, within a time scale that is appropriate for them.

Changing individual behaviour and organisational culture will take a sustained effort on behalf of employers and a considerable amount of time. We would therefore not expect to see immediate improvements in workplace policy and practice on mental health. However, we are able to monitor the immediate impact of the campaign. At the start of the Working Minds programme, we conducted research among human resource managers to evaluate their awareness of, and approach to, mental health in the workplace. We will repeat this research at intervals to measure the progress the campaign is making in putting mental health on the workplace agenda. We are also embarking on an evaluation programme which will measure take-up of campaign materials and specifically evaluate how useful employers have found the information, and what action they are taking as a result of the campaign.

Heart Operations

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) longest and (b) shortest waiting times were for heart operations (i) in South Tyneside and (ii) nationally in (A) 1997, (B) 1998, (C) 1999, (D) 2000 and (E) 2001. [17405]

Jacqui Smith: Information relating to in-patient waiting times for cardiology and cardiothoracic specialities for Gateshead and South Tyneside health authority and England is shown in the tables.

Social Services (Winter Pressures)

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by local authority the money allocated to social services to alleviate winter pressures for (a) winter 2000–01 and (b) winter 2001–02. [17627]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 23 November 2001]: In order to manage winter pressures it is crucial that the national health service and social services work closely together. In winter 2000–01, we allocated an additional £116 million for winter pressures via the NHS for use in joint planning to address local issues in both health and social care. This was followed up with an additional £100 million for social services in 2001–02 to enable them to continue to meet commitments from last winter. On 9 October we announced a further £100 million for social services in 2001–02 to tackle capacity issues and reduce delays in discharge from hospital.

Ambulance Service

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to waive the requirement for applicants for posts in the Ambulance Service to hold a category D1 driver's licence. [15943]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

All drivers, including ambulance drivers, are required to hold the appropriate driving entitlement relative to the types of vehicle they drive. Category D1 entitlement is required for vehicles with more than eight but no more than 16 seats. The Government have no plans to change the driver licensing rules in this area.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Solicitor-General what is the value of fairly traded (a) tea and (b) coffee used in her Department in each of the last five years. [17548]

The Solicitor-General: Nil.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Solicitor-General what fairly traded products, other than tea and coffee, have been purchased by her Department in each of the last five years; and what was their value. [17555]

The Solicitor-General: None. The Crown Prosecution Service is currently exploring the provision of fairly traded confectionery by its catering service provider.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

London Underground

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects to (a) receive and (b) publish the Ernst & Young report on the value for money of the proposed PPP for London Underground; and if he will make a statement. [14483]

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to (a) order and (b) publish an independent review of the value for money of the proposed public private partnership of the London Underground; and if he will make a statement. [14515]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply given to my hon. Friend, the Member for Hendon (Mr. Dismore) on 23 November 2001, Official Report, column 493W. Ernst & Young are due to deliver their conclusions before decisions are taken on the value for money of final bids for the Government's modernisation plans for the London Underground. The Secretary of State is still considering the timing of publication.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 7 November 2001, Official Report, column 289W, if he will place in the Library the PricewaterhouseCoopers and the Ernst & Young studies and if he will make a statement. [16594]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Regent's Park and Kensington, North (Ms Buck) on 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 503W, and to the answer given today to my hon. Friend, the Member for Hammersmith and Fulham (Mr. Coleman) (PQ 14515) at column 745W.

New Deal for Communities

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects to commence the funding mechanism that will replace the new deal for communities programme; and if he will make a statement. [16049]

Ms Keeble: There will be no third round of NDC but the existing 39 partnerships will continue piloting many of the ideas in the National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal. The Government are committed to learning as much as possible from them over the next 10 years and spreading best practice.

Real delivery in turning round deprived areas requires high-quality public services in all neighbourhoods, rather than specific programmes shoring up poor public services in only a few areas. The main focus of Neighbourhood Renewal is to reshape the way mainstream resources are used and the lessons learned from NDC will help identify ways to achieve this.

Railtrack

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on what date he instructed parliamentary drafters to draft (a) the Railway Administration Order Rules 2001 and (b) legislation to give him powers to direct the Rail Regulator. [15624]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 16 November 2001]: Details of internal communications are exempt from disclosure under section 2 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will announce the (a) board of (b) financial backers of and (c) advisers to the proposed not-for-profit company he wishes to take over the assets and liabilities of Railtrack plc. [16369]

Mr. Spellar: A bid team is being established to propose a company limited by guarantee which will put a bid to the Administrator to have transferred to it Railtrack plc's railway assets and its role as Network Operator. Information on the company's board, financial backers and advisers will be announced at the appropriate time.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he has made a revised estimate of the total cost of the rail element of the 10-year transport plan since the administration of Railtrack; and if he will make a statement on alterations to previous forecasts, broken down by the (a) private and (b) public elements of the plan. [17743]

Mr. Spellar: The level of rail funding provided for the 10-year plan for transport has not changed as a result of the Railtrack administration.

Street Lighting

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what progress he has made in developing (a) comprehensive inventories, (b) risk management strategies and (c) management systems to fund street lighting. [16080]

Mr. Jamieson: A working group representing DTLR and representatives from local government and industry was set up in September to take forward these issues. The need for a comprehensive inventory has been recognised as an important step and proposals in draft form are being produced in a form which could be readily adopted by local authorities.

Research into a street lighting risk management strategy is being considered. This will be dependent on the collection of accurate information on street lighting stock and condition which is one of the aims of the street lighting inventory.

When inventories are in place showing sufficient information on street lighting stock at a local and national level, DTLR will consider ways in which this information could be used to allocate funding to highway authorities that would allow them to deal with their street lighting backlog.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to deal with street lighting dereliction; and if he will make a statement. [16081]

Ms Keeble: The Government are committed in the 10-year plan for transport to tackling the local road maintenance backlog, including the backlog for street lighting. Over £30 billion is being provided for local road maintenance over the next 10 years, and extra £9 billion above the funding levels in the previous 10 years.

Homeless Families

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what was the average cost in the last 12 months of housing a homeless family in (a) bed and breakfast and hostel accommodation and (b) private leasing of unsold properties from property developers. [16096]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 19 November 2001]: Information reported to the Department by local authorities about expenditure on accommodation provided under homelessness legislation does not identify average unit costs. Available information derived from the report "Homelessness Statistics 1999–2000 Actuals", published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA) is as follows:

Average weekly charges per unit[1]

	England	Wales
Bed and breakfast	276.92	246.54
Hostels[2]	90.42	76.90

[1] Based on gross charges before deduction of any rent rebate. The figures for bed and breakfast accommodation represent an average for the year 1999–2000, while those for hostels reflect charges in the last rent week of March 2000.

[2] Includes any units in privately-owned hostels (e.g. owned by charities or voluntary organisations) used by local authorities to house homeless families.

Average rental costs for properties leased from the private sector are not collected centrally.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the methodology changes made since 1997 to the formulae for calculating the standard lending assessment and aggregate external finance figures for (a) Devon county council and (b) east Devon district council; and if he will make an assessment of the net financial effect of these changes. [17272]

Dr. Whitehead: There were 15 changes in the method of determining Standard Spending Assessments (SSAs) for the 1998–99 Local Government Finance Settlement; and 20 changes for the 1999–2000 Local Government Finance Settlement.

In 1999–2000 the Government introduced a new damping grant, Central Support Protection Grant (CSPG), to ensure that no authority received less grant than the year before, and that authorities which had education and personal social services responsibilities received at least 1.5 per cent. more than the year before.

The July 1998 Local Government White Paper announced a three-year review of Revenue Grant Distribution. It said that the Government did not expect to make fresh changes to the method of calculation of SSAs except where there are changes in the functions of councils, or the funding of particular services.

In 2000–01 there were therefore only limited adjustments to SSAs to accommodate the establishment of the Greater London Authority and related changes, most notably those arising from the alterations to the boundary of the Metropolitan Police District and the Essex Hertfordshire and Surrey police areas. CSPG was retained in 2000–01.

In 2001–02 there was only one change in the method of determining SSAs to reflect the transfer of funding for nursery education for four-year-olds. CSPG was replaced for those authorities with education and personal social services responsibilities by floors and ceilings, which guaranteed that no authority would receive less than a 3.2 per cent. increase and that no authority could get more than a 6.5 per cent. increase.

Changes in the method of determining SSAs are contained in circular letters to local authorities, dated 2 December 1997, 2 December 1998, 25 November 1999 and 27 November 2000, copies of which are in the Library. For convenience, copies of the relevant extracts have been placed in the Library.

The following table shows the net percentage change in SSAs against adjusted SSAs for the previous year for Devon and east Devon over the period, together with the percentage change due to changes in methodology. It is inappropriate to compare actual SSA between years because of changes to the services financed by grants allocated using SSAs. Adjusted SSAs enable a like-for-like comparison between years.

Percentage

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
Devon
Percentage change against adjusted SSAs	3.2	5.7	5.0	5.0
Of which: percentage change due to methodology	–0.7	–0.6	0.0	0.0
East Devon
Percentage change against adjusted SSAs	–1.0	4.3	2.9	5.0
Of which: percentage change due to methodology	–0.8	–0.6	0.0	0.0

Note:

It is not possible to perform a similar analysis for aggregate external finance.

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 914W, on the local government finance settlement, what plans he has made regarding the announcement of the provisional local government finance settlement. [19269]

Mr. Raynsford: We now expect to make an announcement to the House on Tuesday 4 December, subject to the progress of parliamentary business.

Homelessness

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer, 15 November 2001, Official Report, column 832W, on homelessness, if he will list by (a) bed and breakfast accommodation and (b) temporary local authority accommodation where in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2000 members of households identified as vulnerable due to old age resided. [17575]

Ms Keeble: The information requested is not held centrally.

Automatic Train Protection

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if the automatic train protection equipment built in to Pendolino trains will be fully operable following the cancellation of phase II of the west coast mainline upgrade. [17373]

Mr. Spellar: Discussions on the options for taking forward the west coast main line upgrade are still under way between the Government and stakeholders. At this stage we cannot predict the outcome of those discussions. The protection system for the Pendolino trains will be subject to an acceptance procedure under the aegis of Railway Safety, which will ensure that it meets the requirements of HSE.

The HSE is considering with the Government and industry the implementation of the recommendation of the Joint Inquiry into Train Protection Systems that the European Train Control System (ETCS) should be installed on principal routes of the network.

Departmental Intervention

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made with regard to possible interventions by (a) his Department, (b) Department of Health and (c) the Department of Education and Skills into the running of services by (i) Walsall MBC, (ii) Hillingdon LBC, (iii) Derby City Council, (iv) Malvern Hills DC and (v) Waltham Forest LBC. [17733]

Mr. Byers: My policy is to take intervention action based on clear evidence of a local authority's failure to comply with the best value requirements in Part I of the Local Government Act 1999. Such evidence would usually be identified in a best value inspection conducted by the Audit Commission and I would expect the Commission to make recommendations to me about the use of intervention powers. I have received no recommendations from the Audit Commission regarding any of these authorities.

Underground Environment

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the formulas (a) stated for the calculation of the state of the Underground environment as follows:

$$A=\frac{\sum_{p}QASAS_{p}\times W^{S}_{p}+\sum_{jL}QATAS_{jL}\times W^{T}_{jL}+\sum_{kL}QATAS_{kL}\times W^{T}_{kL}}{\sum_{p}W^{S}_{p}+\sum_{jL}W^{T}_{jL}+\sum_{kL}W^{T}_{kL}}\text{ and (b)}$$

for the state of the train ambience as follows:

$$TMS=\sum_{j}\left(\frac{QATAS_{j}\times W^{T}_{j}}{\sum_{j}W^{T}_{j}+\sum_{k}W^{T}_{k}}\right)+\sum_{k}\left(\frac{QATAS_{k}\times W^{T}_{k}}{\sum_{j}W^{T}_{j}+\sum_{k}W^{T}_{k}}\right);$$

what each of the letters stand for; where it is a value, how that value is calculated; and what methods were used in the formulas' production. [17123]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 22 November 2001]: (a) The formula the hon. Member refers to is a weighted average of scores for different aspects of the passenger environment. The PPP contracts refer to this environment, which is an important part of the infrastructure companies' performance, as Ambience.

The letters in the formula represent:

A—is the total ambience score, which is calculated each quarter and used to adjust the payments London Underground makes to the infrastructure companies. Total Ambience covers both trains and stations on all lines for which an infrastructure company is responsible.

$QASAS_{ks}$—is the quarterly average survey score for a particular aspect of Ambience, such as the level of litter or graffiti, at a particular station.

$QATAS_{jL}$—is the quarterly survey score for similar aspects of Ambience on trains on a particular line.

$QATAS_{kL}$—is the quarterly score for specific aspects of Ambience on trains that are measured according to engineering techniques rather than surveys, for example smoothness of ride and on-train noise.

W^{S}_{ks}, W^{T}_{jL}, W^{T}_{kL}—are the weights applied by London Underground to these various scores in order to calculate the weighted average.

In each case the letter used in the formula represent values. The scores are calculated primarily from periodic surveys undertaken by mystery shoppers, a technique for measuring Ambience that London Underground has used for a number of years and which has been adapted for the PPP contracts. Where appropriate, some scores are calculated from engineering tests. The weights are fixed values, set out in the contracts, which have been derived from London Underground's customer research.

(b) The formula referred to is a weighted average of the Ambience scores for trains only. Under the PPP contracts, the infrastructure companies are measured according to the level of Ambience on trains and stations separately, as well as according to the total level of Ambience on the lines for which they are responsible.

The letters in the formula represent:

TMS—is the train Ambience score, which is calculated each quarter.

$QATAS_{j}$—is the quarterly average survey score for a particular aspect of Ambience, such as the level of litter or graffiti, on trains.

$QATAS_{k}$—is the quarterly score for specific aspects of Ambience on trains that are measured according to engineering techniques rather than surveys, for example smoothness of ride and on-train noise.

W^{T}_{j}, WT_{k}—are the weights applied by London Underground to these various scores in order to calculate the weighted average.

In each case the letters used in the formula represent values. The scores are calculated primarily from periodic surveys undertaken by mystery shoppers, a technique for measuring Ambience that London Underground has used for a number of years and which has been adapted for the PPP contracts. Where appropriate, some scores are calculated from engineering tests. The weights are fixed values, set out in the contracts, which have been derived from London Underground's customer research.

Housing (London Boroughs)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many (a) private rented units, (b) social rented units and (c) owner-occupied units there were in each London borough in (i) 1990, (ii) 1995 and (iii) 2000. [17687]

Ms Keeble: A breakdown of owner-occupied units on a borough by borough basis is not currently available for the years in question. However, the Survey of English Housing (SEH) gives a breakdown of social rented, private rented and owner-occupied units at a regional level as follows:

As at 31 March 2000, London had:

1,806,000—owner-occupied dwellings

472,000—private rented dwellings

779,000—social rented dwellings

3,057,000—total dwellings

Local Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list those local bodies which were set up under legislation which is the responsibility of his Department and its predecessors since May 1997. [17611]

Dr. Whitehead: The Greater London Authority Act 1999 created the Greater London Authority and its five functional bodies: the London Development Agency, the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority, the Metropolitan Police Authority, Transport for London and the London Transport Users' Committee. As far as I am aware, there are no other bodies at local level, created under primary legislation which has been introduced since 1997 and is the responsibility of my Department.

Public Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he will list those public bodies which are the responsibility of his Department and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000; [17610]

(2) if he will list those public bodies to which his Department appoints members and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000. [17609]

Dr. Whitehead: 'Public Bodies 2000' sets out information on non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs), certain public corporations (including nationalised industries) and NHS bodies. There are four types of NDPB: executive NDPBs; advisory NDPBs; tribunal NDPBs; and boards of visitors to penal establishments. The next edition will be published around the end of the year. Information about task forces, annual reviews and ad hoc advisory groups is set out in an annual report, published by Cabinet Office. Copies of Public Bodies 2000 are in the Library of the House and this publication may be accessed via Cabinet Office's website: http://www.official-documents.co.uk/document/caboff/pb00/pb00.htm.

Copies of the annual report on task forces and similar bodies have also been placed in the Library of the House and the annual report is being made available on Cabinet Office's website.

Since publication of Public Bodies 2000 the Department has created two further executive NDPBs, the Standards Board for England and the Strategic Rail Authority.

In addition Ministers make appointments to the following bodies for which the Department is also responsible:

Arson Control Forum
Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council
Fire Service Examinations Board
Fire Service Research and Training Trust
Inner Cities Religious Council
Mersey Conservancy (Acting Conservator for the River Mersey)
National Cycling Strategy Board for England.

The Secretary of State appoints the Chair of the national Rail Passengers' Council and seven of the regional Rail Passengers' Committees.

The Secretary of State make appointments to the following Trust Ports:

Poole (Chair only)
Dover
Harwich
London
Milford Haven
Shoreham
Tyne.

The Department has responsibility for the School Travel Advisory Group.

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what is the value of fairly traded (a) tea and (b) coffee used in his Department in each of the last five years. [17564]

Dr. Whitehead: Fair traded tea and coffee is available through the staff restaurant and for internal meetings. Information on the value of these products is not available due to disproportionate costs.

Smoke Alarms

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 43W, what smoke alarm installation work he encourages; and if he will make a statement. [17879]

Dr. Whitehead: We encourage the fire service to provide and install smoke alarms to householders as part of their general community fire safety work. Brigades focus their efforts mainly on those households deemed to be at high risk from fire. The implementation of such work is down to individual brigades to determine, using local data and statistics to highlight where within their brigade area fires are most likely to occur.

Supporting People Strategy

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much money is being given to local authorities to fund the Supporting People Strategy; and if he will make a statement. [17955]

Ms Keeble: The Government have allocated £40 million to local authorities to fund the implementation of the Supporting People Programme in 2002–03. This is in addition to the £15.2 million allocated to local authorities in 2001–02.

East Coast Main Line

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans exist for special purpose vehicles to be created to undertake works in connection with the East Coast Main Line; and if he will place the plans in the Library. [17789]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 23 November 2001]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Angela Smith) on 2 April 2001, Official Report, column 8W.

Terminal 5

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his statement of 20 November 2001, on Terminal 5, what the first date would be on which (a) a new regime for night flight quotas and (b) other arrangements to reduce noise nuisance from night flights would come into practice following completion of the consultation exercise. [17793]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Any changes would be introduced after appropriate consideration but before the opening of Terminal 5.

Children's Social Services (Seaside Authorities)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the ability of the children's social services SSA to meet the demands found in seaside resort unitary authority areas; and if he will make a statement. [17962]

Dr. Whitehead: The overall level of formula grant that Government make available to local government, including that for social services, is decided as part of our spending review process. Decisions are based on an assessment at the national level of pressures on services, the scope for greater cost-effectiveness, and what is affordable. We have not made an assessment specific to seaside resort authorities. The SSA formulae are the means by which we allocate this total level of grant between authorities. The grant distribution formulae are currently being reviewed in order to develop a system that is more transparent and fairer to all authorities. To date, the review has not made an assessment of the fairness of the current children's social services SSA formula as it relates specifically to seaside resort authorities. As part of the review, the Department of Health are commissioning research on the children's formula. Such an assessment would be difficult to make until further progress has been made.

Timber

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what guidance he provides for local authorities regarding their procurement of timber and timber products which have been independently certified as originating from well-managed forests. [18009]

Dr. Whitehead: Local authorities are independent and autonomous and responsible within the law for making their own decisions on procurement matters. It is for them to decide whether or not to procure timber and timber products which have been independently certified as originating from well-managed forests. In doing so they will need to have regard to the need to achieve value for money.

Central Government Departments were formally reminded of the Government's policy to procure timber and timber related products from sustainable and legal sources in a note dated 2 January 2001 issued jointly by HM Treasury and the then Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Central Government have not given advice on this subject directly to other parts of the public sector but the Government's advice is widely available and can be adapted or adopted by other organisations.

Parish and Town Councils

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the average level of precept was for (a) parish and town councils, (b) parish councils and (c) town councils in England in each of the last five years. [18063]

Dr. Whitehead: The only information on parish and town council precepts collected by the Department is the total amount received by each English billing authority on behalf of parish and town councils in its area. Separate amounts for parish and town councils are not therefore available, nor are precise figures for the number of parish or town councils in England in any particular year. Total precepts for each year from 1997–98 to 2001–02 inclusive are given in the following table:

Financial year	Parish and town council precepts, England total (£ million)	Percentage increase over previous year
1997–98	144	8.3
1998–99	154	6.9
1999–2000	165	7.1
2000–01	181	9.7
2001–02	193	6.6

The Department estimates that there are currently about 8,700 parish or town councils in England, so the average precept in 2001–02 is about £22,000, with precepts for individual councils ranging from zero to several hundred thousand pounds.

Voting Age

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he plans to grant 16-year-olds the vote; and if he will make a statement. [18017]

Dr. Whitehead: We have no plans to propose legislation to lower the voting age. We would, however, welcome a public debate on the issue. It is also open to the Electoral Commission to consider it and make recommendations for future policy.

Aviation Industry

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assistance he is giving to (a) airports, (b) airlines and (c) other service providers in respect of insurance premiums to cover against acts of war or terrorism. [18453]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government have made available third-party war risk insurance to UK airports, airlines and other service providers in accordance with Community rules and guidance on state aid. In the case of airlines, premiums were waived initially but are now being applied in accordance with guidelines issued by the European Commission on 23 October 2001. Airports and ground service providers have been charged premiums since the inception of assistance on 23 September 2001.

Challenge for Home Zones

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will announce the successful bids under the Government Challenge for Home Zones. [18185]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 26 November 2001]: We hope to announce the winners before Christmas.

A556

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many (a) road fatalities and (b) road accidents there were on the A556 in each of the last 10 years. [18448]

Mr. Jamieson: The numbers of personal injury road accidents and fatalities on the A556 were as shown.

Year	Road accident fatalities	Personal injury accidents
1991	1	96
1992	3	97
1993	2	99
1994	7	100
1995	2	86
1996	4	78
1997	3	101
1998	5	108
1999	1	76
2000	1	46

Detling Beacon

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether the air corridor either side of Detling Beacon in Kent has been altered since 11 September. [18470]

Mr. Jamieson: The Civil Aviation Authority has confirmed that there has been no alteration to the airspace route structure either side of the Detling Beacon since 11 September.

Rents

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what he estimates to be the maximum capped rent payable in 2002–03 at current prices for tenants in (a) four bed, (b) three bed, (c) two bed, (d) one bed and (e) bedsit properties. [18660]

Ms Keeble: The maximum capped rent payable by tenants of councils and housing associations in 2002–03 at current prices will be (a) £100 a week, (b) £95 a week, (c) £90 a week, (d) £85 a week and (e) £85 a week.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many formal notices his Department has received in the last year from the Parliamentary Ombudsman expressing an intention to carry out an investigation; and in respect of each notice how long it took to respond. [18767]

Dr. Whitehead: The number of cases received since last November by DETR or (after 11 June 2001) DTLR is as follows.

Number/date received from PCA	Due date to PCA	Date replied	Number of working days taken
1. 13 November 2000	27 December 2000	4 January 2001	36
2. 16 February 2001	12 March 2001	13 March 2001	18
3. 21 February 2001	14 March 2001	15 March 2001	17
4. 8 June 2001	20 July 2001	24 July 2001	33
5. 21 June 2001	11 July 2001	9 July 2001	13
6. 11 September 2001	2 October 2001	26 September 2001	12
7. 17 September 2001	15 October 2001	15 October 2001	21

Motorway Speed Limits

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to impose 50mph speed limits on motorways; and if he will make a statement. [17649]

Mr. Jamieson: There are no plans to introduce 50mph speed limits on motorways.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on reducing speed limits on motorways in order to increase traffic flows. [17651]

Mr. Jamieson: The Highways Agency is currently trialling variable speed limits on sections of the M25. The Controlled Motorway Project automatically adjusts the speed limit to reflect prevailing conditions, and is enforced with speed cameras.

Independent monitoring and assessment of the scheme by TRL during the first year of operation confirmed its success. The monitoring indicated that traffic flow had improved, with drivers reporting more "comfortable", less aggressive driving conditions, with fewer very short, dangerous spaces between vehicles and fewer long (inefficient) spaces and more even use of the carriageway. There were also indications of improved road safety, and shorter and more reliable journey times.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what factors underlay the decision to introduce variable speed limits on motorways. [17650]

Mr. Jamieson: Research into traffic congestion and traffic flow improvement found that road capacity was not being maximised.

Effective speed control has the capability of increasing the capacity of the existing motorway network without the need for an extensive road building programme and evens out speed distribution increasing capacity.

Physical Agents (Vibration) Directive

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the costs to British business of the Physical Agents (Vibration) Directive. [17424]

Dr. Whitehead: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 8 November 2001, Official Report, column 337W.

Press Interviews

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the press interviews he gave between 5 and 12 October. [18776]

Mr. Byers: As is already a matter of public record, I gave a number of press interviews in the period between 5 and 12 October.

RenewCo

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the decisions outstanding on the establishment of RenewCo as at 1 October. [18760]

Mr. Byers: As at 1 October the Government awaited the decision of the Office for National Statistics on whether the RenewCo proposal would be classified as Government borrowing.

In addition, I wished to consider the RenewCo proposal in the light of Railtrack's request for further Government support under its "Rainbow" proposal.

Housing (Radon Emissions)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what financial provision his Department gives local authorities and housing associations to undertake remedial work on housing stock to protect against radon emissions. [18355]

Ms Keeble: Local housing authorities may provide discretionary Private Sector Renewal Grants to assist homeowners with radon remedial works to their properties where the annual average concentration of the gas exceeds the action level.

The cost of such works to existing registered social landlord (RSL) dwellings contaminated by radon is eligible for Social Housing Grant, funded through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme. The funding is subject to the RSL obtaining a survey report from the National Radiological Protection Board indicating that the remedial works are necessary.

Mushrooms

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in how many instances trading standards officers have discovered since December 2000 Dutch mushrooms being sold in United Kingdom supermarkets as British mushrooms; what steps are taken to authenticate the source of mushrooms sold as British; and if he will make a statement. [16392]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available. It is not obligatory for the country of origin of mushrooms to be declared, although general food labelling rules require this information to be given if its omission would be misleading. Consideration is being given to the inclusion of mushrooms in EC Horticultural Marketing Standards which do require the country of origin to be given.

DEFENCE

HMS Renown

Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has reached a decision on the proposals to dismantle HMS Renown; and if he will make a statement. [18933]

Dr. Moonie: In my answer on 11 May 2000, Official Report, column 447W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Dunfermline, West (Rachel Squire), I announced that we would be investigating the options for the land storage of decommissioned nuclear-powered submarines. I also informed the House that we had separately received an unsolicited commercial proposal from Babcock Rosyth Defence Ltd. (BRDL), the owners of Rosyth Royal Dockyard, to dismantle the reactor compartment of the decommissioned nuclear-powered submarine, HMS Renown, and store the components. At that time we had agreed that planning and feasibility work could proceed, but I assured the House that the proposals would not be implemented until Ministers and the relevant regulatory authorities were entirely satisfied and that I would make a further statement.

Since May 2000, much valuable work has been undertaken by BRDL to demonstrate the feasibility of their proposals. While I am satisfied on the matter of feasibility, it is clear that the necessary regulatory approvals to commence dismantling Renown will not be in place until next year. Even if the approvals are granted, and that is a matter for the independent regulators, it would be many months before the work to dismantle Renown could be completed. We have already begun the process of inviting industry proposals on the best solution for the land storage of decommissioned nuclear submarines generally and it would therefore be too late for the knowledge gained from dismantling Renown to inform this process. As a result, I have decided that there would be no advantage in proceeding with the dismantling of Renown ahead of the other decommissioned submarines stored at Devonport and Rosyth.

Renown will continue to be stored afloat at Rosyth until such time as the final decisions on land storage are implemented. These decisions are unlikely to be taken for some two to three years and will be subject to full and open consultation.

Plastic Baton Rounds (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to bring guidelines covering the use of plastic baton rounds in Northern Ireland into line with the regime governing use of these weapons by the police; what remedies are available for those who wish to complain about any aspect of army use of baton rounds; and if he will place the operational guidelines in the Library. [17752]

Mr. Ingram: Differences between the guidelines for the police and the Army on the use of baton rounds stem entirely from the differences in their respective operational structures and practices. In the case of the Army the guidelines have worldwide applicability. There are therefore no plans to bring the guidelines exactly into line with the regime governing the use of those weapons by the police.

If a member of the public had cause to complain about the Army firing a baton round, for example if they were injured, it should be reported to the police so that they can conduct an investigation. They would receive the full co-operation of the Army and would be able to confiscate any items (ie a baton gun) that they deemed necessary for them to conduct their inquiries effectively. If a member of the public wishes to complain on other aspects of the use of baton rounds by the Army then they can write to headquarters Northern Ireland.

I am unable to place a copy of the guidelines in the Library of the House as it is a classified document.

September 11

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to consult the public on work to meet the additional challenges posed by asymmetric threats following 11 September; and if he will make a statement. [17448]

Mr. Hoon: As I informed the House on 4 October, it is my intention to conduct the work on the new chapter to the Strategic Defence Review in an open and inclusive manner. As part of this, I welcome views and contributions from the public at any time. I expect to publish discussion material early in the new year outlining the areas we are examining, reflecting emerging thinking and seeking views.

Afghanistan

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what legal protection is available for individuals detained by Her Majesty's armed forces engaged in duties in or around Afghanistan; what facilities are available to house prisoners captured in the course of the conflict; and what codes of conduct govern their interrogation. [17753]

Mr. Hoon: The treatment of prisoners of war is governed by national and international law, which also prescribes how they are interrogated. The international coalition currently has no facilities to house prisoners captured in the course of the conflict, although this will be kept under review as circumstances change.

Royal Marines

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers in the Royal Marines have been discharged for drug offences in each of the last four years. [17346]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 23 November 2001]: A total of 17 Royal Marines have been administratively discharged in the last four years through illegal drug use as follows:

Year	Number
1997	2
1998	2
1999	5
2000	8

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the value is of fairly traded (a) tea and (b) coffee used in his Department in each of the last five years. [18160]

Dr. Moonie: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Depleted Uranium

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many depleted uranium shells have been used in the Afghan conflict. [17486]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Service Vacancies

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many vacancies there are at present in the (a) Army, (b) Navy and (c) Air Force; and if he will make a statement. [18751]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin) on 26 October 2001, Official Report, column 403W.

"Survive to Fight"

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the new edition of "Survive to Fight" will be (a) published and (b) distributed throughout the armed forces; [17704]

(2) if he will make a statement setting out the budgetary arrangements for paying for the new edition of "Survive to Fight". [17706]

Mr. Ingram: The new edition of the publication "Survive to Fight" (Joint Services Publication 410) is currently in the final stages of editing. Barring technical problems, it is anticipated that the issue programme of this publication will commence in early 2002. The publication is currently funded from the adjutant-general's top level budget.

Local Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those local bodies which were set up under legislation which is the responsibility of his Department since May 1997. [17581]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has not set up any local bodies since May 1997.

Territorial Army (Civil Defence)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the role of the Territorial Army in civil defence since 11 September. [17874]

Dr. Moonie: As part of the work announced in March 2001, under the Strategy for the Army (a version of which was placed in the Library) we were already looking at ways of increasing the contribution the Territorial Army makes to our Defence Plans. Following the attacks on 11 September, work is being undertaken to ensure that we have the right capabilities in place to deal with international terrorism. The range of options being considered includes the role of the TA in providing assistance to the civil community in an emergency.

Recruitment

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many have been recruited through Operation London Soldier. [18064]

Mr. Ingram: During the month of October, the number of inquirers at London area recruiting offices has shown an increase of some 25 per cent. over the same period last year. This is a direct result of Operation London Soldier. As yet, it is too early to know what proportion of these additional inquiries are converting into actual enlistments.

Gibraltar

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK ships or aircraft have been (a) refused entry and (b) had additional operational restriction placed on them by the Spanish Government in the last five years with respect to access to (i) ports and (ii) airports after visiting Gibraltar; and if he will make a statement. [17979]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 November 2001]: We have no record of any such instances involving military ships or aircraft.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what deployments outside Gibraltar have been made in the past five years by the Royal Regiment of Gibraltar; and if he will make a statement. [17978]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 November 2001]: In the past five years, units of the Royal Gibraltar Regiment of between platoon and company size have deployed to the UK nine times, Kenya once, Canada once, Cyprus once and Morocco twice, all for training purposes. Individual career development training is also conducted in the UK.

Many individuals from the Regiment have also deployed in support of operational deployments in Northern Ireland, Bosnia, Kosovo and Sierra Leone.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the visits to HM Base Gibraltar over the past two years by NATO forces; and if he will make a statement. [17974]

Mr. Ingram: [holding answer 26 November 2001]: In addition to the many UK military visits to Gibraltar, ships and aircraft from other NATO nations visit on a regular basis for training, logistic support and stand-off. Since November 1999, a total of 40 non-UK warships and 59 non-UK military aircraft have visited or operated from Gibraltar. Land forces from non-UK NATO nations also make use of Gibraltar for training purposes.

The only visit to Gibraltar actually under the NATO flag over the past two years was a joint UK/Canadian detachment of Maritime Patrol Aircraft, which operated out of Gibraltar in support of NATO exercise Linked Seas in May 2000.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many citizens of (a) Spain and (b) Gibraltar applied to join HM armed forces over the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [17977]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 November 2001]: Details are not available for the five year period requested. Since 1998 two citizens of Gibraltar have applied to join the armed forces. In that time there have been some inquiries from Spanish citizens about UK armed forces employment but these people were ineligible because they did not qualify under our nationality entry rules. A number of British citizens have made inquiries and applied to join the armed forces while living in Spain or Gibraltar but records of this are held separately from the recruitment of British citizens living in the United Kingdom.

RAF Halton

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department gave instructions to their agents to submit a planning application to Aylesbury Vale district council in respect of the Princess Mary Hospital site, RAF Halton. [17645]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 26 November 2001]: Instructions were given to the agents in December 2000.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason his Department has submitted two identical planning applications to Aylesbury Vale district council in respect of the Princess Mary Hospital site, RAF Halton. [17643]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 26 November 2001]: This is known as a 'twin track' application, a practice widely used in the planning system, and one which Defence Estates uses to avoid delays in dealing with planning applications. Such a twin track approach allows one application to be appealed if the eight-week determination period has elapsed without a decision (in this case 16 weeks due to the Environmental Impact Regulations). The remaining application can be subject to further negotiations and if considered satisfactory, the outstanding appeal can then be withdrawn.

Defence Procurement

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many defence contracts made between 1997 and 2001 are expected to over-run in (a) cost and (b) time. [17242]

Dr. Moonie: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use of cost-plus contracts. [17243]

Dr. Moonie: Cost-plus contracts are the contracting method of last resort. They now account for less than 1 per cent. of the Ministry of Defence's business (both by value and number). Within a stated limit of liability the contractor is paid all costs reasonably and properly incurred, together with a sum for profit, calculated by applying either a percentage profit or a fixed fee to the costs so incurred. The rate of profit applied to cost-plus work is calculated by reference to the Government Profit Formula which includes a "Non Risk" rate, which is set below that used for prices agreed before work commences; thus the MOD recognises the reduced risk to the contractor.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on (a) partnering, (b) smart acquisition, (c) post-costing and (d) should-cost-data in UK defence procurement. [17244]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of defence procurement deals were put to competition in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [17245]

Dr. Moonie: Obtaining the greatest advantage from competitive leverage at prime and sub-contract level remains our primary tool in defence procurement. Over the last three financial years, the percentage of Ministry of Defence contracts (including amendments), by value, placed by competition was as follows:

Financial year	Percentage
1998–99	68
1999–2000	71
2000–01	65

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the responsibilities of the integrated project teams in procurement; and if he will make a statement. [17246]

Dr. Moonie: The Integrated Project Team (IPT) was born out of Smart Procurement's objective to deliver projects within the performance, time and cost parameters approved at the time that major investment decisions are taken. The IPT is responsible for managing the project from concept to disposal.

This means that the IPT is responsible for translating the equipment capability customer's requirements into an output-based statement of what a system or equipment must do to meet these requirements. The IPT devises and costs equipment solutions, and produces the material required to support the customer's main gate approval, and manages the development, manufacture, in-service support and eventual disposal of the equipment.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of contracts (a) had an agreed fixed price at the start and (b) arrived to cost and on schedule in the last 12 months. [17247]

Dr. Moonie: The latest available data relate to the 12 month period from October 2000 to September 2001. During this period, over 99 per cent. of contracts by number had agreed prices at the outset.

Information on the percentage of contracts that arrived to cost and on schedule is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Cluster Bombs

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what types of cluster bombs are used by the British Army; and what stockpiles of each are held. [18352]

Mr. Ingram: Although the Army does not use cluster bombs, BL755, IBL755 and RBL755 cluster bombs are used by the RAF.

I am withholding information on the stockpiles of these weapons in accordance with Exemption 1 (Defence, Security and International Relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government information.

Veterans' Affairs

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 13 November 2001, Official Report, column 630W, if he will list the representatives of the veterans community who attended his task force meeting on 6 November. [16141]

Dr. Moonie: The veterans community was represented at the Task Force meeting on 6 November by Major General (Retired) Nigel Richards CB, OBE, Chair of the Confederation of British Service and Ex-Service Organisations (COBSEO) and by Brigadier (Retired) Ian Townsend, General Secretary of The Royal British Legion (TRBL).

A400M

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is (a) the preferred and (b) the minimum length of runway for the A400M; and what discussions he has had with his (i) German and (ii) French counterparts about their preferred length of runway for the A400M. [17379]

Dr. Moonie: We are not planning on the basis of 'preferred' or 'minimum' runway lengths. The requirement is to support operations at the aircraft's Maximum All Up Weight. Our preliminary assessment is that this will mean a runway length of around 8,000 feet. However, runway length requirements for A400M operations will not be confirmed until the aircraft's Performance and Flying Qualities test programme is completed, on current plans, in 2008. The Secretary of State for Defence has not discussed the issue of A400M runway lengths with his French and German counterparts.

Defence Exports (Employment)

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many jobs are dependent on defence exports in (a) the regions of England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland. [17361]

Dr. Moonie: We are currently reviewing our methodology on the estimation of employment figures dependent on UK defence expenditure and exports. Therefore, "UK Defence Statistics 2001" does not contain any new figures for employment. The Defence Analytical Services Agency expects to publish relevant employment estimates in the first part of 2002. I will write to my hon. Friend in due course and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ballistics Protection

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's budget for developing techniques for ballistics protection. [17702]

Dr. Moonie: Funding for research into ballistic protection for personnel in the current financial year is approximately £2 million.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was spent by his Department on developing techniques for ballistics protection in each of the last 10 years. [17703]

Dr. Moonie: Figures covering the last 10 years are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The amount spent on developing ballistic protection over the past three years for which figures are available is:

Year	Amount spent (£ million)
1998–99	3.0
1999–2000	2.9
2000–01	3.2

These figures include the costs of developing ballistic protection work within the Corporate Research Programme undertaken by Dstl at Porton Down and other developmental work by the Defence Clothing and Textiles Integrated Project Team, now part of the Defence Logistics Organisation.

Military Exports

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects his Department's report into financial support for military exports will be published. [18605]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Aircraft Procurement

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his future procurement objectives in relation to (a) fixed wing aircraft and (b) helicopters. [18758]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence gave on 29 October 2001, Official Report, columns 513–14W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Bassetlaw (John Mann).

Defence Equipment Demonstrations

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what has been the cost to his Department of providing armed service personnel support to defence equipment demonstrations in the financial years (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01; [18606]

(2) what were the net operating costs of DESO and related support functions in financial years (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [18607]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on 17 July 2001, Official Report, column 144W.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parades Commission

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give further details of the proposed review of the Parades Commission. [18974]

Jane Kennedy: The Government have appointed Sir George Quigley to undertake the review of the Parades Commission, which forms part of the measures proposed on 1 August following the Weston Park talks.

The review has the following terms of reference:

> "To review the operation of the Parades Commission, since it took its current form in February 1998, and the legislation under which it was established and to consider whether there are any changes which could promote further public confidence on all sides, respect for the rights of all and the peaceful resolution of disputes on parades."

The review is to report to the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. Any recommendations for legislative change would not be implemented until after summer 2002.

Terrorist Prosecutions

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by what process suspected terrorists who are wanted for alleged crimes are having prosecutions against them stopped; and if he will list their names, giving in each case the details of the charges that are being dropped and the known paramilitary affiliations. [12932]

Jane Kennedy: Where decisions as to prosecution arise, the prosecuting authorities, who act independently of Government, reach decisions in accordance with the Test for Prosecution.

In the light of the proposal emerging from the Weston Park talks, the Government have agreed to provide new arrangements to facilitate the return to Northern Ireland of persons who may otherwise be liable to possible prosecution in respect of certain qualifying offences. We are currently considering the mechanism for delivering this.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Conflict Diamonds

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action her Department is taking to address the issue of (a) conflict diamonds and (b) exploitation of other minerals from conflict zones. [18191]

Clare Short: (a) DFID is working with other Government Departments to support the Kimberley Process, in order to build support for an international certification scheme for rough diamonds.

Together with the Government of Sierra Leone, DFID has commissioned a study to investigate different approaches for the management of diamond producing areas in Sierra Leone. This focuses on how the Government can re-establish control of the diamond areas and industry, establish and maintain a secure environment and effectively manage the industry.

DFID together with other agencies is supporting the work of Partnership Africa Canada, which aims to build the capacity of Civil Society Organisations to monitor the use of revenues from the trade in diamonds in Africa.

(b) DFID is currently preparing a joint strategy with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Ministry of Defence to address the Economic Causes of Conflict, including the exploitation of mineral resources from conflict areas.

DFID has commissioned research on the exploitation of minerals from conflict zones, to find practical ways of addressing this issue, including research on the impact of oil in Sudan.

HMG are also providing support and information to a UN Experts Panel, looking into links between specific conflicts and the exploitation of economic resources.

Zimbabwe

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made to the Government of Zimbabwe regarding their involvement in mineral exploitation in the Democratic Republic of Congo. [18186]

Clare Short: No representations have been made to the Government of Zimbabwe concerning resource exploitation in the Democratic Republic of Congo. We welcome the report from the UN Panel investigating the illegal exploitation of mineral resources in DRC, which was presented to the international community last week. We are reading the recommendations contained in the report with interest, and are presently considering what action to take to respond.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made to the Government of Zimbabwe regarding their policy on allowing aid agencies to distribute emergency food supplies to those affected by the famine. [18190]

Clare Short: We have been closely involved in the development of a humanitarian assistance plan by the United Nations Development Programme in Zimbabwe which assigns a key role to United Nations agencies and non-governmental organisations in ensuring that assistance is properly targeted. This plan is being discussed by UNDP with the Government of Zimbabwe on behalf of all potential providers of funds.

Afghanistan

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans the Government have to provide long-term support to de-mining operations in Afghanistan. [18193]

Clare Short: I announced an allocation of £2 million for immediate humanitarian mine action assistance to Afghanistan on 15 November. Our assistance will be channelled through the United Nations Mine Action Service (UNMAS) with whom we will discuss appropriate requirements.

Agricultural Export Subsidies

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the impact of agricultural export subsidies of (a) the EU and (b) other countries in the developed world on the economies of the countries which her Department is committed to help; and what plans she has to phase out the subsidies. [17921]

Clare Short: Many developing countries suffer from subsidised food being dumped on their markets. Due to the complexity of subsidies and the widespread use of subsidies in industrialised nations, it is difficult to determine exactly which developing countries are being harmed by dumped subsidised food and to what extent. However, the EU is one of the principal users of subsidies. In response to this, my department is working with DEFRA to push for fundamental reform of the CAP.

Tariff/Quota-Free Exports

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to act to make developed countries' exports for the developed world (a) tariff and (b) quota free. [17919]

Clare Short: The UK supported the European Commission's 'Everything But Arms' initiative that was implemented in March this year providing immediate duty-and quota-free access to the EU for most products from the least developed countries. The European Commission has been calling for other developed countries to follow his lead, and objective that all WTO Members signed up to at the Ministerial meeting in Doha earlier this month.

We have to ensure a reform of the European Union's generalised system of preferences that is as generous as possible to developing countries.

The agreement at Doha to launch a new round of trade negotiations put the interests of developing countries at its core. This should be a development round, which includes serious improvements in market access for developing countries.

Democratic Republic of Congo

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the UN Addendum report on the illegal exploitation of natural resources in the Democratic Republic of Congo regarding the involvement of Uganda and Rwanda. [18187]

Clare Short: We welcome the publication of the revised report last week. We are studying it in detail. We shall raise any specific allegations with the Governments concerned and press them to take action to investigate substantiated allegations against groups and individuals.

Angola

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if the Government will increase financial assistance to humanitarian projects to provide basic health care assistance and clean water to internally displaced persons living in Angola. [18192]

Clare Short: We recognise that the situation of many people in Angola is very bad. Since 1999, my Department has provided more than £8.5 million in humanitarian assistance. The absence of peace and a lack of Government commitment to pro-poor policies cause continuing suffering.

Street Children

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial help is being given by her Department to organisations who work with street children. [17885]

Clare Short: We are currently providing financial support of nearly £2 million to a number of organisations, such as CHILDHOPE, Concern Worldwide, GOAL, Save the Children and World Vision who are working directly with street children. We also support many more organisations working to tackle the poverty, deprivation and social exclusion which force children to live on the street.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Ageism

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action her Department has taken to tackle discrimination against older people. [14954]

John Healey: The Department for Education and Skills is committed to tackling age discrimination against older people. Our commitment is demonstrated through raising awareness of age issues throughout the Department and eliminating age discrimination against older people. Age is a key element of the Equal Opportunities Strategy and Policy.

We have recently upgraded our membership with the Employers Forum on Age (EFA) to a 'core member', and have provided access to the EFA website through our intranet. In addition we continuously improve our systems to analyse management information relating to age, which includes information on internal vacancy filling and promotion competitions.

The Department promotes age diversity and tackles age discrimination when translating its commitment to equality of opportunity into effective strategies and actions. We supported the Better Government for Older People Programme and contributed to the Performance and Innovation Unit report on Active Aging, "Winning the Generation Game".

Buckingham

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to visit the Buckingham constituency to meet teachers. [16898]

Mr. Timms: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State regularly visits schools and values the opportunity to meet teachers and to hear their ideas and their concerns. At present, she has no plans to visit the Buckingham constituency.

New Schools

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what provision has been made in budgetary planning for new schools in areas of new housing development in south east England in the last three years. [17117]

John Healey: The table shows those local education authorities in south east England, including London, which have benefited from central Government support for new pupil places in the three years from 1999–2000 to 2001–02. This support reflects the need for additional school places in areas of population growth where there is no more capacity in all schools in the surrounding area. It is shown in the context of the total capital support allocated to those authorities in the same period.

Information on whether this capital support is used to build new schools in areas of new housing development, or to expand existing schools, is not kept centrally. Local authorities may supplement the centrally provided support from their own resources, particularly where there is new housing development which can generate developer contributions to building new schools. This information will be held by local authorities.

[1] In addition to the allocations made specifically for new pupil places, some other schools capital programmes, such as PFI, may also be used for this purpose.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) new and (b) replacement (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools were built in (A) 1997, (B) 1998, (C) 1999 and (D) 2000. [17473]

John Healey [holding answer 23 November 2001]: We do not hold information about the number of new and replacement schools that have been built.

We have, however, made significant amounts of funding available to expand, replace and repair school accommodation. Details of the level of central Government support for capital investment made available for schools since 1997 follow:

Central Government support for capital investment in schools 1996–97 to 2003–04

Year	£ billion
1996–97	0.7
1997–98	0.8

Classroom Assistants

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent representations she has received from Ofsted about the use of classroom assistants. [17134]

Mr. Timms: None, but the increasing use of teaching assistants means that they are mentioned in many Ofsted reports, whether thematically or in relation to individual schools.

PPP/PFI

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) local education authorities and (b) individual schools and colleges have applied for PPP/PFI funding in the past three years. [17135]

John Healey: There have been two application rounds since November 1998. In the first round, the Department received a total of 66 applications from 60 local education authorities (with six authorities applying for funding for two separate projects). In the second round, a further 46 applications were received from 46 local education authorities, 23 of which had also applied in the first round.

Local authorities receive the benefit of PFI Credits through Revenue Support Grant. All applications to the Department are therefore submitted by local authorities, even if they relate to individual schools.

Further education colleges can apply to the Learning and Skills Council for a contribution to the cost of capital projects, including PPP/PFI projects. Higher education colleges do not need to apply for specific PPP/PFI funding because they have discretion over the use of their total resources.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of capital spending on education will come from PPP/PFI sources (a) in 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) estimated for the next five years. [17136]

John Healey: The table shows the proportion of central Government investment in school buildings from PPP/PFI sources for 2001–02, 2002–03 and 2003–04. For 2004–05 and beyond, the amount of schools capital that will be available, and the proportion of PPP/PFI funding within it, will depend on the outcome of the Spending Review in 2002.

	Total schools capital available (£ million)	PFI/PPP funding (£ million)	PFI/PPP funding as percentage of total
2001–02	2,200	467	21.2
2002–03	2,800	750	26.8
2003–04	3,500	850	24.3

Note:

For 2001–02, £467 million of PFI/PPP funding is made up of £450 million of PFI credits and £17 million of PPP funding from the New Deal for Schools programme. We are not providing specific PPP funding from schools capital in 2002–03 or 2003–04, but it is open to local education authorities and others to use the capital funding we allocate to them for PPP projects.

Polling Stations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the schools in each local education area which were (a) closed and (b) partly closed for use as pollling stations on 7 June. [17171]

Mr. Timms: The Department does not collect this information.

Special Measures

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools have been placed in special measures in each of the last three years for which figures are available, broken down by local education authority. [17178]

Mr. Timms: The table indicates the numbers of schools placed in special measures in the last three academic years 1998–99, 1999–2000 and 2000–01.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of schools placed in special measures have been closed by the local education authority in each of the last three years. [17179]

Mr. Timms: In 1998–99 38 schools in special measures were closed, representing 8 per cent. of the total number of schools in special measures at the end of that year. In 1999–2000 the equivalent figures were 40 and 9 per cent., and in 2000–01 16 and 5 per cent.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what guidance she gives to local education authorities about consultation on closure before (a) an action plan to help a school in special measures is drawn up and (b) the local education authority's plan of support is known; [17181]

(2) what role the local education authority plays in helping schools out of special measures; [17180]

(3) what guidance she gives to local education authorities on the amount of time an action plan for recovery for a school in special measures should be accessed before closure of a school is considered; [17182]

(4) if she recommends closure of a school in special measures before an inspection of progress on an action plan is made; [17196]

(5) what guidance she gives to local education authorities on the control of school budgets for schools in special measures; and if control of the budget is automatically vested in the local education authority. [17187]

Mr. Timms: The Government are committed to continuing to reduce the number of schools found to require special measures year-on-year, and to ensuring that no school is allowed to remain in special measures for longer than two years.

Where a school is found to require special measures, the Department writes to the governing body and the local education authority, and where appropriate the relevant Diocesan authority, to offer guidance on the action required. The governing body, in consultation with the LEA, must draw up an action plan to address the key issues identified.

The LEA must also submit its own commentary and statement of action, which should include an assessment of the scope for the school to be closed. If an LEA concludes that the school should be closed, it must consult on the proposal in the normal way.

Under Section 19 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State may at any time direct an LEA that a school subject to special measures should be closed. The Secretary of State must consult the LEA and the governing body, and if appropriate the Diocese, before giving such a direction. It may do so at any stage of the process.

Under Section 17 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, LEAs may suspend a governing body's right to a delegated budget where the school is found to require special measures.

The Department's Circular 6/99, "Schools Causing Concern", offers schools, LEAs and Diocesan authorities guidance on all these issues. A copy is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what is the minimum (a) number of lessons, (b) number of teachers and (c) percentage of lessons to be deemed unsatisfactory for a school to be placed in special measures. [17183]

Mr. Timms: A school requires special measures when it is judged to be failing or likely to fail to give its pupils an acceptable standard of education. The criteria used in reaching this decision are a matter for HM Chief Inspector of Schools. I have therefore asked Mike Tomlinson to write to the hon. Gentleman, and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the average score in (a) England and (b) Essex County Council was for Key Stage 2 in (i) mathematics, (ii) science and (iii) English in the last three years for which figures are available; [17186]

(2) what the average score is for a school placed in special measures for key stage 2 in (a) mathematics, (b) science and (c) English in the last three years for which figures are available. [17184]

Mr. Timms: Information on average scores at Key Stage 2 will not be available until the publication of the primary school performance tables next month. I shall write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested as soon as possible thereafter. However, we do not collate this information separately for schools placed in special measures.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average length of time a school stays in special measures is. [17185]

Mr. Timms: The average length of time for schools in special measures is 21 months.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what guidance she issues to local education authorities on the retention of staff while a school is in special measures; [17189]

(2) what powers local education authorities have for the control of personnel issues where a school is placed in special measures. [17188]

Mr. Timms: The Department's Circular 6/99 "Schools Causing Concern", which advises local education authorities on dealing with schools in special measures, does not specifically cover staff retention. However, the circular does make clear that, where an LEA withdraws a school's delegated budget because it is subject to special measures, it automatically takes over responsibility for most personnel issues, including the appointment and dismissal of staff.

School Children (Statistics)

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children there were in each school year in England in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [17385]

Mr. Timms: Information on the number of pupils in each year group is not collected centrally. Information on the age of pupils in schools is shown in the table.

School Grants (Shropshire)

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what are the total grants made by her Department in 2001–02 to date to schools administered by (a) Telford and Wrekin council and (b) Shropshire county council. [17434]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 15 November 2001, Official Report, columns 861–62W.

Bullying

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proposals she plans to introduce to combat bullying in post-16 education. [17443]

Mr. Timms: Schools are required by law to have anti-bullying policies covering all their pupils, and in December 2000 we launched a new anti-bullying pack for schools entitled "Bullying: don't suffer in silence" with an accompanying video aimed at pupils.

The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is responsible for the remaining post-16 learning other than in higher education. I have therefore asked John Harwood, the Council's Chief Executive, to write to my hon. Friend with the information requested and to place a copy of his reply in the Library.

Following the tragic events of 11 September and subsequently we have placed some new guidance for all educational establishments on our departmental website. This reminds establishments to be vigilant for any name calling, racial abuse or bullying and deal with any incidents promptly and sensitively. A copy of the guidance has been sent to the LSC.

A-levels

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what information she has collated on the length of time it is taking to re-mark A-levels on appeal; and if she will make a statement. [17913]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on the length of time it is taking to re-mark A-levels on appeal for 2001 is not yet available because the 'Enquiry about Results' and appeals process is incomplete. The information will be published by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) at the end of March 2002.

School Exclusions

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what advice she gives to local authorities on acceptable time limits for pupils to spend out of school following permanent exclusion for (a) primary and (b) secondary schools; what information she has by local authority on (i) numbers and (ii) length of exclusion in the latest year for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [17914]

Mr. Timms: The advice given to local education authorities is that ideally many permanently excluded pupils should rejoin a mainstream or special school within days or weeks, or exclusion. Rapid re-integration is particularly important for excluded primary pupils and I expect that most of them would be re-integrated within one term. Conversely, for pupils approaching the end of compulsory schooling, a return to school may be unrealistic.

Reintegration Panels are responsible for co-ordinating services for excluded pupils. They must draw up an individual re-integration plan for each excluded child. This plan should be in place within a month of the governors upholding the exclusion and it is reviewed on a monthly basis. It should include a target date for return to school, once the school to which the child will return has been identified.

The latest figures available on permanent exclusions in England for 1999–2000 were published in a Statistical First Release on 19 July. A break down by local authority is available on the Department's website at www.dfes.gov.uk/statistics/DB/SFR/s0275/index.html. The Department does not collect data on the length of time between a pupil's permanent exclusion and their subsequent return to full time education.

Drugs (Disciplinary Guidance)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to issue revised guidance to schools and local education authorities regarding disciplinary arrangements for pupils found (a) in possession of, (b) dealing in and (c) under the influence of illegal drugs. [18364]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We plan to issue revised guidance on the use of exclusion by schools early in the new year. The guidance will restate the right of head teachers to exclude permanently when necessary students involved in drug misuse and other drug related incidents.

Key Stage Test Results

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects her Department's inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the release of the 2001 Key Stage results to conclude; and if she will publish the report. [18526]

Mr. Timms: I expect the inquiry to make a preliminary report before Christmas. A statement will be made as soon as possible thereafter. The National Statistician will comment more generally on the operation of statistical release practices across Government in his National Statistics Annual Report 2001/02 next summer.

Local Education Authority Performance

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what options her Department can take in respect of a local education authority which does not address problems highlighted by Ofsted to her satisfaction. [17956]

Mr. Timms: Where she judges that an LEA is failing or lacks the capacity to take the necessary measures to improve its performance, the Secretary of State has a range of options depending on the nature of the failings identified and on local circumstances. To date, these have included full or partial outsourcing of LEA services, private sector management delivery and non-outsourcing solutions, usually based on the re-structuring of internal strategic management, partnerships with other LEAs and/or structured arrangements for involving elected members, local stakeholders and independent expertise, as in partnership boards.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether her Department has been approached by Torbay Unitary Authority for support following the Ofsted report into the performance of Torbay Local Education Authority; and if she will make a statement. [17958]

Mr. Timms: My Department has not been approached by Torbay Unitary Authority since the publication of the Ofsted report on the LEA. The Authority is preparing its Post-Inspection Action Plan, which will be submitted to my Department by 15 January 2002.

Online Centres (Norfolk)

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills who the applicants were for Phase 3 Capital Modernisation Fund funding to establish United Kingdom online centres in the North Norfolk constituency; and for what reasons these applicants were unsuccessful. [18174]

John Healey: Government Office East received two applications. These were from separate areas of the Norfolk Library and Information Service. In consultation with the applicants, the two applications were trimmed to one without cutting any proposed provision, and the combined application was successful in securing phase 3 Capital Modernisation funding. There were no unsuccessful applications from North Norfolk in phase 3.

Expenditure Per Pupil

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if data showing the expenditure per pupil in individual schools (a) are and (b) could practicably be made available centrally to her Department. [18265]

Mr. Timms: Data are submitted, on an annual basis by Local Education Authorities, to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in the form of financial statements under section 52 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998.

Teacher Vacancies

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teacher vacancies there are at each (a) primary and (b) secondary school in the Tatton constituency. [18443]

Mr. Timms: The information is not collected centrally.

In the Cheshire local authority area in January 2001 there were 12 full-time teacher vacancies in nursery and primary schools, or 0.5 per cent. of teachers in post. In secondary schools there were 11 full-time teacher vacancies, or 0.4 per cent. of teachers in post.

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations she has received from (a) Pitman Training and (b) the Association of Computer Trainers on solutions to the problems concerning individual learning accounts. [18296]

John Healey: We have received papers from Pitman Training and from Internet Exchange acting on behalf of the Association of Computer Trainers. Officials have already met Internet Exchange and plan to meet Pitman Training shortly. The papers and meeting were extremely helpful and the issues raised will be taken into account as we continue to develop future plans which build on the successful elements of the ILA programme.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Stop Now Orders

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what (a) training and (b) additional resources have been given to bodies, other than trading standards departments, towards the (i) legal and (ii) administrative requirements of the Stop Now Order Regulations; and if she will make a statement; [16578]

(2) pursuant to her answer of 9 November 2001, Official Report, column 442W, on Stop Now Orders, how much money has been transferred to cover the additional costs associated with the implementation of the Stop Now Order Regulations; from which bodies the money has been transferred; which bodies are receiving this money; and if she will make a statement; [16576]

(3) pursuant to her answer of 9 November 2001, Official Report, column 442W, on Stop Now Orders, how many trading standards departments have received training in the legal and administrative requirements of the Regulations; whether more seminars are planned; and if she will make a statement. [16577]

Miss Melanie Johnson: As I said in my answer of 9 November 2001, Official Report, column 442W, DTI has agreed with the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, a transfer of resources to local authorities in England to cover the additional costs associated with the enforcement by county councils, metropolitan districts, unitary authorities and London boroughs of the Stop Now Orders Regulations. Subject to Parliamentary approval, additional provision is being made to the general grant in 2002–03 and beyond.

The National Assembly for Wales has agreed with DTI a transfer of resources to local authorities in Wales to cover the additional costs associated with the enforcement of the Regulations by county councils and unitary authorities. Additional provision for this new provision will be added to the general revenue settlement in 2002–03 and beyond. It will be distributed through the Consumer Protection Standard Spending Assessment. The Assembly's provisional settlement was announced on 15 November and the final settlement will be announced on 8 January 2002 and debated on 24 January.

DTI has also agreed with the Scottish Executive that they will receive formula consequentials for this transfer. These will be included within Scottish local authorities' revenue grant allocations.

Figures provided by the Trading Standards Institute indicate that over 90 per cent. of trading standards departments (182) attended the six seminars that the Institute organised for the DTI on the legal and administrative requirements of the Stop Now Orders Regulations. We are considering with the Office of Fair Trading, LACOTS and TSI what further training or other support might help. The OFT organised a conference on 16 November to educate other regulators. We do not foresee any transfer of resources to these regulators.

Airlines (Competition)

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what research her Department has undertaken to evaluate the effect the proposed alliance between British Airways and American Airlines would have on competition in the north Atlantic market place; and if she will publish the conclusions of such research; [17282]

(2) what her policy is on the proposed alliance between British Airways and American Airlines. [17281]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Analysis of the effects of the proposed alliance on competition is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading, who, as the UK's independent competition authority, has the final decision making powers in such cases.

Publication of such analysis is also a matter for the Director General.

Responsibility for deciding on the competition issues raised by the proposed alliance also lies with the Director General of Fair Trading.

Electricity Generation

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on current station lifetime plans, what her Department's projections are for the percentage contribution nuclear power will make to electricity generation in (a) 2005, (b) 2010, (c) 2015 and (d) 2020. [17369]

Mr. Wilson: The DTI published, in Energy Paper 68 (EP68), energy demand projections for the period 2000 to 2020 in November 2000. Figures in Annex D of EP68 show the projected amounts of electricity generation for a range of generating plant. Generation from nuclear plants is projected to be 86TWh in 2005, 66TWh in 2010, 40TWh in 2015 and 27TWh in 2020. These levels of nuclear generation represent approximately 24 per cent., 17 per cent., 10 per cent. and 7 per cent. of the total projected generation by the major power producers respectively.

Plant lifetimes are a matter for the operators but the projections were based on lifetime assumptions believed to be in broad agreement with those of the nuclear generators at the time of publication. There have been some recent indications from the industry that nuclear output in 2010 may be a little lower than previously projected. Small reductions in output would not endanger the UK's ability to meet its Kyoto targets.

Energy Paper 68 is available in the Libraries of the House.

CFCs (EC Regulation)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assistance is being offered by her Department to retailers to allow them to continue to take back used fridges and freezers as part of their home delivery service, once the EC Regulation 2037/2000 has been implemented; [17897]

(2) what representations her Department has received from (a) retailers, (b) local authorities and (c) environmental groups regarding EC Regulation 2037/2000; [17899]

(3) what guidance she has given on the safe disposal of goods containing CFCs as required by EC Regulation 2037/2000; [17898]

(4) what measures her Department is taking to ensure that the UK conforms to EC Regulation 2037/2000. [17896]

Mr. Wilson: EC Regulation 2037/2000 on substances which deplete the ozone layer is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

Officials in my Department have been working closely with officials in the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) to encourage retailers either to continue their take-back service or, in the case of retailers that have withdrawn their service, to consider ways in which it might be restarted. Proposals are being developed by DEFRA in consultation with retailers, local authorities and other stakeholders that might help to facilitate this.

The Department has received a number of representations from retailers, local authorities and environmental groups concerning EC Regulation 2037/2000, and has taken steps to keep in regular contact with both retailers and local authorities, in particular through stakeholder meetings held by officials in DEFRA.

Officials in DEFRA have written to all local authorities and other interested parties informing them of the new requirements. Draft guidance on standards for facilities to extract ozone depleting substances from foam in refrigeration equipment and on standards for storage of waste refrigeration equipment has already been circulated to stakeholders for consultation and final versions will be issued shortly.

Officials in the Department have been working closely with officials in DEFRA to help make stakeholders aware of the new requirements.

Motor Vehicles

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the future of the EU block exemption of the selective and exclusive distribuiton of motor vehicles. [18467]

Ms Hewitt: The Government await with interest the European Commission's proposals concerning the block exemption. We are pressing the Commission for radical pro-consumer change.

Gas and Electricity Consumer Council

David Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to ensure the Gas and Electricity Consumer Council provide more staff at the Energywatch office in Birmingham to deal with calls and inquiries. [18663]

Mr. Wilson: It is for Energywatch to determine, within the budget agreed with the Department, the staffing levels required for it to carry out its duties under the Utilities Act 2000 and the particular activities identified in its Forward Work Programme. Energywatch is aware of the importance of responding in a timely and efficient manner to inquiries and complaints and is working to improve its response times further. Over the next coming months, a one-stop lo-call telephone number for all gas and electricity consumers, and a more sophisticated call management system that will reduce the time it takes consumers to reach a consumer adviser will be installed at Energywatch's Birmingham and other regional offices, which will be fully operational by May 2002.

Galileo Project

Syd Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment her Department has made of the European Commission's estimate of the number of jobs that would be created directly and indirectly by the Galileo Project; and what measures her Department is taking through (a) providing development and validation funding and (b) other measures, to ensure the UK maximises its ability to benefit from jobs created; and if she will make a statement. [18524]

Ms Hewitt: At the end of last year, the European Commission provided a Cost Benefit Analysis for Galileo which predicted the growth in employment resources for Europe as a whole at around 3,800 jobs a year for the four to five year development phase, rising to 19,000 a year over the two-year deployment phase. On the basis of these figures the UK could be expected to attract 15 to 20 per cent. of these jobs. Some of these may, however, displace existing jobs.

My Department is working closely with the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions and others within Whitehall to examine the economic case for providing further funding to the Galileo project, if it goes ahead.

Liabilities Management Agency

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the objectives of the proposed Liabilities Management Agency. [17423]

Mr. Wilson: Arrangements for managing public sector civil nuclear liabilities have been considered as part of the quinquennial review of the UK Atomic Energy Authority and of related work on the future of BNFL. One of the options put forward by the review team is the establishment of a Liabilities Management Authority to bring sharper focus and stronger strategic direction to nuclear clean up.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, will be making a statement to the House shortly on how the Government intend to proceed.

European Energy Market

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she is taking to encourage competition in the energy market in Europe. [17426]

Mr. Wilson: The Government support the proposals published earlier this year by the Commission to complete the internal energy market by 2005. These measures would provide the mechanisms and regulatory structures needed for a functioning single market in electricity and gas.

The proposals are currently being negotiated in the Energy Council, where we are seeking their early adoption.

Pyrolysis and Gasification

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the location of the pilot plants using (a) pyrolysis and (b) gasification. [17425]

Mr. Wilson: The Department is supporting with Border Biofuels a project to build, test and run by July 2003 a fully integrated combined heat and power facility, including a pyrolysis plant capable of processing a minimum of 25 tonnes per day. The total project cost is £4.65 million, with my Department's contribution being £1.16 million. The location of the proposed demonstration site is under consideration.

So far, the leading gasification pilot plant has been the Arable Biomass Renewable Energy (ARBRE) project at Eggborough, Yorkshire, which is currently in the final stages of commissioning. The project has been developed by First Renewables Limited (FRL) with support from the European Commission THERMIE programme and from NFFO. ARBRE will consume about 43,000 tonnes of wood fuel per year supplied from forestry residues and short-rotation coppice, and will generate 10 megawatts of electricity per year, of which 8 megawatts will be transported to the grid.

Research is concentrating on scaling-up and developing the technology deployed in ARBRE. The Department has recently approved a project with ALSTOM Energy Limited, First Renewables Limited and Cambridge University which will involve setting up a plant about four times as big as ARBRE. The total cost of this project will be £7.3 million, with the Department contributing £2.9 million. Possible sites are being investigated.

Small-scale biomass gasification projects are being taken forward in Swansea and in Newton-le-Willows near Warrington. There are also two small-scale gasification demonstrator facilities in Northern Ireland that are already in operation. These are at Brook Hall Estate, County Londonderry and the Blackwater Valley Museum, County Armagh.

Spacecraft

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her policy is on (a) the location and movement of satellites and (b) the movement of spacecraft; and if she will make a statement. [17431]

Ms Hewitt: The launching and operation of satellites by United Kingdom nationals is governed by the Outer Space Act 1986 which introduced a licensing regime for the activities of launching and operating a space object and for any activity in outer space. UK nationals wishing to carry out such launch and movement activities must apply to my Department for a licence. I have discretion as to whether to grant a licence and on the conditions to which a licence should be made subject, but before granting a licence I must be satisfied that the activities (i) will not jeopardise public health or the safety of persons or property, (ii) will be consistent with the international obligations of the UK, and (iii) will not impair national security. Satellites are also subject to International Telecommunications Union (ITU) regulations and procedures in respect of the orbital locations and frequencies used.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with other Departments and Government bodies to encourage them to increase their use of renewable energy. [18350]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and I regularly communicate with the Minister for the Environment and other Green Ministers on matters including the promotion of renewable energy in departments and other public bodies.

The Green Ministers have set a target for 31 March 2003 for at least 5 per cent. of Government Departments' electricity to come from renewable sources that are exempt from the climate change levy, or from self-generation, and for 31 March 2008 for at least 10 per cent. to be obtained from such sources, provided that this does not entail excessive cost. The target will be reviewed by 31 March 2003.

Earlier in the year my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry wrote to her Green Ministerial colleagues calling for Departments to give active consideration to the use of solar-photovoltaic (PV) panels on Government buildings in support of a major market stimulation programme and to provide a highly visible demonstration of the Government's commitment to renewable energy.

All facilities managers for the Government Estate have been issued with guidance on the use of PV, and Government buildings are eligible to apply for funding under the DTI's Large-Scale Buildings Integrated PV programme.

Electrical Goods

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on how many power stations would not need to be used if everyone stopped leaving their televisions and computers on standby; and what plans there are for a European Union directive that would reduce the power consumption of electrical goods while in standby mode. [16747]

Mr. Wilson: Estimates from DEFRA's Market Transformation Programme suggest that in 2000 electricity consumed in standby mode by televisions was 980 GWh, domestic PCs consumed 670 GWh, while office PCs consumed 1,300 GWh. On the basis of these estimates, total electricity consumption by these appliances equate to just under 1 per cent. of all electricity consumed in the UK in 2000. This is roughly equivalent to the output of one mid-range CCGT power station. However, since many of these appliances would not be in standby at peak times there is still a need for this power station.

While I am not aware of any plans for a directive governing the power consumption of electronic equipment in standby mode, there are already a number of voluntary agreements in place which seek to establish minimum standards for the power consumption of electronic equipment in standby mode. These include voluntary agreements with industry in respect of TVs, VCRs, digital TV services and external power supplies.

In addition, the recent EU/US agreement will extend into Europe the use of voluntary energy labelling of office equipment via the US EPA's Energy Star scheme which requires minimum standards for computers and other office equipment in standby mode before the label can be used.

The European Commission will also shortly be making proposals for a Framework Directive for Minimum Energy Efficiency Requirements for End-Use Equipment which may cover this area too.

Public Service Orders

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to extend the provision of public service orders. [18724]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

Any application for the imposition of a public service obligation will be considered by the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions against the criteria set out in European Regulation 2408/92.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria have to be met in order for a route to be granted a public service order. [18729]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

The use of public service obligations is governed by European Council Regulation 2408/92 on access for Community air carriers to intra-Community air routes. This empowers members states to impose a PSO in respect of scheduled air services on a route serving a peripheral or development region or on a thin route to any regional airport, where such a route is considered vital for the economic development of the region in which the airport is located and where an adequate standard of service would not be provided by carriers having regard solely to their commercial interest. Standard of service covers continuity, regularity, capacity and pricing. In assessing adequacy, member states are expected to have regard to the public interest and to the availability of other forms of transport and whether these offer a reasonable alternative to flying.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Publications

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many publications were issued by her Department in each of the last four years. [11822]

Mrs. Liddell: In 1997–98 the Scottish Office issued 92 publications, in 1998/99 it issued 121 publications and in the period 1 April 199 to 30 June 1999 it issued 13 publications.

The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since then the Department has issued seven publications.

Consultation Documents

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many consultation documents were issued by her Department from (a) 15 October to 14 January, (b) 15 January to 14 April, (c) 15 April to 14 July and (d) 15 July to 14 October in each year from 1996. [12877]

Mrs. Liddell: From 1996 the Scottish Office issued the following number of consultation documents for the periods 15 October to 14 January. 15 January to 14 April, 15 April to 14 July and 15 July to 14 October:

Scottish Office Consultation Documents

Issued:	1996	1997	1998	1999
15 October—14 January[1]	23	18	31	–
15 January—14 April	29	11	33	27
15 April—14 July	26	16	27	12
15 July—14 October	28	20	20	–

[1] Of following year

The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. The Department since that date has issued no consultation documents. The Scotland Office is a small Government Department with minimal programme expenditure and no responsibility for service delivery functions.

Scottish Borders Council

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will make a statement on the ability of Scottish Borders Council to carry out its statutory functions in relation to reserved matters. [17388]

Mrs. Liddell: Most of the statutory functions of the Scottish Borders Council relate to devolved matters. To the best of my knowledge, reserved matters have been dealt with appropriately by the Council.

Nuclear Installations

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what representations she has made to the Nuclear Inspectorate relating to security at nuclear installations in Scotland following the events of 11 September; [16781]

(2) what representations she has made to the Energy Review Group relating to security at nuclear power stations in Scotland following the events of 11 September; [16780]

(3) what discussions she has had with the Scottish Executive on the security of (a) nuclear power stations and (b) nuclear installations in Scotland folllowing the events of 11 September. [16777]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Security at nuclear installations is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry acting through the Office for Civil Nuclear Security (OCNS). The OCNS works closely with the Health and Safety Executive—the safety regulator for the industry—and which provides advice on the safety implications of events including external hazards, at nuclear installations. Security and safety precautions at nuclear sites are kept under constant review. Both regulators are reviewing all relevant precautions in the light of the recent terrorist attacks in the USA. It is not Government policy to disclose details of security measures taken at civil nuclear sites.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Sports Clubs

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what European Union funding schemes are available to sports clubs in the United Kingdom for (a) capital and (b) training projects. [17466]

Mr. Caborn: All European Union funding is channelled towards precise objectives and priorities under the various common policies, which, in turn, are based on provisions of the EU Treaties. The European Union does not have a legal base for sport in its Treaties. As such, there are no funding programmes designated specifically to sport.

However, sports clubs in the United Kingdom may be eligible for funding under other European Union programmes which integrate sport into such actions as regional development or training and education. These programmes include:

Structural Funds/Regional Development Programmes—such as the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) may be relevant to sports organisations where their activities include vocational training opportunities and/or are part of the economic development of deprived areas. Many of these funding programmes are restricted to specific regions and it is usually national or regional authorities specified in each programme that are fully responsible for the choice of projects. These programmes tend to focus on the development of small and medium enterprises to encourage job creation and social inclusion and require applicants to identify the specific economic and local benefits their scheme will achieve.

Vocational Training/Education for young people/Youth Programmes—initiatives such as Leonardo and Socrates support vocational training and cultural exchange programmes for young people. There is a clear emphasis on any Europe-wide dimension to the activities.

Playing Fields

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many playing fields were disposed of in each of the last five years. [17463]

Mr. Caborn: Information on the number of playing fields disposed of for the last five years is not collected. Sport England does, however, monitor the number of planning applications concerning playing fields in their role as statutory consultee. The Government intend to publish, with Sport England, detailed statistics on planning applications concerning playing fields when the data are finalised, in the new year.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills has published figures on applications by state schools to dispose of or change the use of school playing fields since October 1998 when the Amendment to Section 77 of the School Standards and Framework Act was brought in to halt the previous administration's policy of forcing schools to sell off playing fields. I would refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for School Standards gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 18 October 2001, Official Report, column 1292W.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) school and (b) community playing fields have been sold for development in East Devon in each of the last five years. [18283]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills has not approved any applications made by schools under Section 77 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 to sell school sports pitches sized areas or larger in the constituency of East Devon.

Information on the number of local authority owned playing fields available to the local community and disposed of in the last five years is not collected. Sport England does, however, monitor the number of planning applications concerning playing fields in their role as statutory consultee. The Government intend to publish, with Sport England, detailed national statistics on planning applications concerning playing fields when the data is finalised, in the new year.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) community and (b) school playing fields have been sold for development in the Buckingham constituency in each of the last five years. [17843]

Mr. Caborn: Information on the number of local authority owned playing fields available to the local community and disposed of in the last five years is not collected. Sport England does, however, monitor the number of planning applications concerning playing fields in their role as statutory consultee. The Government intend to publish, with Sport England, detailed national statistics on planning applications concerning playing fields when the data is finalised, in the new year.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills has not approved any applications made by schools under Section 77 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 to sell school sports pitches in the constituency of Buckingham.

Sports Projects

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her latest estimate is of the funds available annually through the Sports Lottery Fund for community sports projects. [17465]

Mr. Caborn: Sports England's income from the National Lottery for 2000–01 was £225.5 million while the forecast for 2001–02 is £214,233. As Sports England's lottery strategy makes clear, at least two thirds of funding will be invested in community facilities or activities.

Museum Attendance (South Tyneside)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the level of museum attendance in South Tyneside was in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001; and what is the projected figure for 2002. [17407]

Mr. Caborn: I am advised by Tyne and Wear Museums and South Tyneside district council that visitor attendance at the South Tyneside museums is as follows:

	2000	2001[1]	2002[2]
Arbeia Roman Fort	76,613	98,605	100,000
South Shields Museum/Art Gallery	261,924	217,432	145,000
Bede's World	44,360	38,000	50,000
Customs House (Art Gallery only)	9,000	10,000	12,000
Total	391,897	364,337	307,000

[1] 2001 figures are year to date plus estimate to the end of December

[2] Projected

Gambling Review

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many responses the Government have received to Recommendation 43 of the gambling review report; of these, how many (a) supported, (b) opposed and (c) were neutral. [18072]

Mr. Caborn: Seventy submissions commented specifically on this recommendation. Sixteen expressed varying degrees of support; and 54 varying degrees of opposition.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what assessment the Government have made of the compatability of Recommendation 43 of the Gambling Review report with the Human Rights Act 1998; [18083]

(2) what estimates the Government have made of the impact on employment if all local authorities used their powers under Recommendation 43 of the Gambling Review report to ban all types of gambling in their locality; [18074]

(3) what estimate the Government have made of the impact on levels of illegal gambling activity of local authorities using their powers under recommendation 43 of the Gambling Review report to ban all types of gambling in their locality. [17960]

Mr. Caborn: We have not yet completed our assessment of the impact of this recommendation.

Voluntary Athletics Officials

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans her Department has for providing further support for voluntary athletics officials; and if she will make a statement. [17942]

Mr. Caborn: The Government fully recognises the contribution of volunteers to the running of sport and the need to continue to invest in their training, recruitment and support. The Government's Plan for Sport provides that Sport England should be the national advocate of volunteering in sport in England and to provide support to national governing bodies of sport in the development and implementation of volunteering strategies. Key to these strategies will be the appointment by governing bodies of National Volunteer Managers to implement the strategies and Volunteer Co-ordinators at Regional and county level to provide support and raise the profile of volunteering.

A further recognition of the importance which the Government attach to volunteers in sport, particularly in ensuring that they are well trained, is the introduction of a £7 million training programme which the Department is currently developing. The programme will aim to build on existing schemes such as the Community Sports Leader and the Junior Sports Leader Awards run by the British Sports Trust and the Youth Sports Trust's Millennium Volunteers programme to provide training for up to 50,000 volunteers, of whom around 8,000 would be older people, to be coaches, administrators, officials, leaders and mentors. The programme will run for two years beginning in April 2002.

Resorts Task Force Group

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how often the resorts task force group has met since its creation; [17870]

(2) what work has been undertaken by the Resorts Task Force Group; and if she will make a statement. [17869]

Mr. Caborn: The Resorts Task Force was set up by the English Tourism Council (ETC) in response to the Government's tourism strategy "Tomorrow's Tourism", published in 1999, which highlighted the regeneration of our traditional resorts as one of its 15 key action points. The Task Force's remit was to suggest ways in which resorts could be repackaged for tourism purposes and to highlight examples of best practice in successful resort regeneration for tourism.

The group met five times and in the light of its advice the English Tourism Council's published its Sea Changes report in February 2001. The Government have welcomed the report and this Department has asked the ETC to consider how it can best be implemented and to what timescale. To that end, the ETC is working closely with the British Resorts Association and relevant tourism officers.

Tourism

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effect on tourism in the Buckingham constituency of (a) the foot and mouth disease outbreak and (b) the terrorist attacks on the United States on 11 September; and if she will make a statement. [17844]

Mr. Caborn: Our best estimate at this stage is that the revenue loss to the English tourism industry for March to October is likely to be around £3.3 billion in "value added" terms. We have not attempted to apportion an overall estimate to individual regions, such as the Buckingham constituency, or individual tourism destinations since the available data does not enable this to be done with a sufficient degree of reliability.

It is too early to predict with any accuracy what the effects of the terrorist attacks in the US are likely to be on UK tourism. Early indications are that there was a small drop in incoming tourists in September, but on the other hand a survey by the English Tourism Council found that nearly one million Britons have changed their plans from holidaying abroad to taking a trip in this country. Reports also suggest that the main impact of the drop in overseas tourists has been felt in London rather than in the regions.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made as to the effect on tourism in Arundel and South Downs of (a) the foot and mouth disease outbreak and (b) the terrorist attacks on the United States on 11 September; and if she will make a statement. [18327]

Dr. Howells: Our best estimate at this stage is that the revenue loss to the English tourism industry for March to October is likely to be around £3.3 billion in "value added" terms. We have not attempted to apportion an overall estimate to individual regions, such as Arundel and South Downs, or individual tourism destinations since the available data do not enable this to be done with a sufficient degree of reliability.

It is too early to predict with any accuracy what the effects of the terrorist attacks in the US are likely to be on UK tourism. Reports also suggest that the main impact of the drop in overseas tourists has been felt in London rather than in the regions.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the level of Government grant-in-aid was to the (a) English Tourism Council, (b) Welsh Tourist Board, (c) Scottish Tourist Board and (d) Northern Ireland Tourist Board per head of population in 2000–01. [18415]

Dr. Howells: Grant-in-aid available to each national tourist board in 2000–01 was as follows:

	GIA (£ million)	Population (million)	GIA per head (£)
English Tourism Council	11.0	49.6	0.22
Visit Scotland	25.9	5.1	5.08
Wales Tourist Board	15.4	2.9	5.31
Northern Ireland Tourist Board	13.9	1.7	8.18

Sport England

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress has been made on the Quinquennial Review of Sport England; and if she will make a statement. [18484]

Mr. Caborn: DCMS is currently engaged in the second stage of the quinquennial review of Sport England, in which we are looking at its strategic management function, its regional role, and the way in which it carries out partnership working and forges alliances. I expect the review to be completed early in the New Year, at which point I will discuss its findings with the new Chief Executive of Sport England and with Sport England's Council members, with a view to implementing the recommendations as promptly as possible.

Lottery Funds

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) at the end of each financial year from establishment of the fund to the latest date for which figures are available, how much lottery money was held and not committed to projects by (a) the new opportunities fund, (b) the heritage lottery fund, (c) the Millennium Commission, (d) UK Sport, (e) Sport England, (f) the Community Fund, (g) the Arts Council of England and (h) the Film Council; [18167]

(2) what level of funds unallocated to good causes has been held by each of the lottery fund distributors in each of the past five years; what percentage of their total balance this represented in each year; and if she will make a statement; [17946]

(3) if she will list the amount of lottery money held and uncommitted that has been carried forward at the end of each financial year, from establishment of the fund to the latest date for which figures are available by (a) the New opportunities fund, (b) the heritage lottery fund, (c) the Millennium Commission, (d) UK Sport, (e) Sport England, (f) the Community Fund, (g) the Arts Council of England and (h) the Film Council. [18169]

Mr. Caborn: This information is not readily available and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the statistics have been collated, placing copies of my letter in the Libraries of both Houses.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what the average period was between a project being approved for lottery funding and first payment being made to the project, for each of the Lottery distribution bodies in the last 12 months, and if she will make a statement; [18245]

(2) what recent representations she has received concerning delays between the approval of projects by lottery distributors and the eventual transfer of funds; and if she will make a statement; [18246]

(3) what the average level of allocated, but unspent, funds has been for each of the lottery fund distributors at the end of the financial year in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement; [18247]

(4) pursuant to her answer of 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 21W, on the National Lottery, how much money which is not committed to specific projects has been held by the National Lottery

Distribution Fund at the end of each financial year since the National Lottery's inception; what proportion of the NLDF's total balance at the end of each year this sum constituted; and if she will make a statement. [18244]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 26 November 2001]: This information is not readily available. I will however, write to the hon. Member as soon as the statistics have been collated, placing copies of my letter in the Libraries of both Houses.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

13. Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's intentions for encouraging the involvement of the female population in a post-Taliban Government in Afghanistan. [15436]

Mr. Bradshaw: One of the most appalling features of the Taliban regime was their treatment of women.

We are working closely with the UN and a wide range of other interested parties to help the Afghan people establish a broadly based Government representative of all Afghans, including women. Afghan women are participating in the talks on the future of Afghanistan that begin in Bonn today.

It is also worth noting the very real improvements in the condition of women in those parts of Afghanistan that are no longer controlled by the Taliban.

15. Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent meeting with United Nations special envoy to Afghanistan, Lakhdar Brahimi. [15438]

Mr. Straw: I have held a number of meetings with Lakhdar Brahimi and saw his deputy, Francesc Vendrell, in Islamabad on 22 November, in each case to discuss the process of building a broad-based, multi-ethnic future for Afghanistan. I am sure the whole House will join me in paying tribute to Ambassador Brahimi's efforts, which have led to the meeting of Afghan groups taking place in Bonn today, and in hoping for a successful outcome.

18. Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the prospects for Government in Afghanistan. [15441]

Mr. Bradshaw: The international community set out its vision for Afghanistan's future in UN Security Council Resolution 1378, adopted on 14 November. This Resolution sets out the UN's central role in the political process and establishing the essential conditions for stability, peace and security in Afghanistan.

21. Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on developments in Afghanistan. [15444]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Taliban is being defeated across Afghanistan. Its rule has collapsed in all but two provinces. But we should remember our primary goals are to bring Osama bin Laden and al-Qaeda to account and to end international terrorism—the defeat of the Taliban is a step towards that.

The humanitarian situation is improving. An average of over 2,000 tonnes of food per day had been despatched since 4 November. This is four times the amount in October.

We welcome the efforts of Lakhdar Brahimi and the UN in convening today's meeting of Afghan factions in Bonn. We hope that the talks will mark the first step towards establishing the broadly based Government so vital to rebuilding the country.

26. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of the UN in the future Government of Afghanistan. [15449]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I welcome the new UN Security Council Resolution 1378 (2001), adopted unanimously on 14 November, which sets out the international community's vision for the future of Afghanistan. The resolution outlines the principles that should govern the formation of a new Administration and affirms that the UN should play a central role in supporting the efforts of the Afghan people to establish their new Government.

We also welcome the UN Secretary-General's nomination of the Administrator of UNDP, Mark Malloch Brown, to lead the early recovery effort in Afghanistan. We will continue to work closely with the UK on rebuilding Afghanistan.

34. Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's intention to support a post-Taliban Government in Afghanistan. [15458]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK fully supports UNSCR 1378 (2001) which expresses its strong support for the efforts of the Afghan people to establish a new and transitional administration leading to the formation of a government, both of which:

> should be broadly based, multi-ethnic and fully representative of all the Afghan people and committed to peace with Afghanistan's neighbours, > should respect the human rights of all Afghan people, regardless of gender, ethnicity or religion, > should respect Afghanistan's international obligations, including by co-operating fully in international efforts to combat terrorism and illicit drug trafficking within and from Afghanistan, > and should facilitate the urgent delivery of humanitarian assistance and the orderly return of refugees and internally displaced persons, when the situation permits.

Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has received from Afghan women about their role in the future Government of Afghanistan. [15430]

Mr. Bradshaw: While we have received no specific representations from Afghani women, we are working closely with the UN Special Representative for Afghanistan, Lakhdar Brahimi, and a wide range of other interested Governments and parties to help the Afghan people establish a broad-based government representative of all Afghans, including women.

However, the form of that government and the process leading to its establishment must be up to the Afghan people themselves, with the support of the international community. As part of this process UN Security Council Resolution number 1378, unanimously adopted on 14 November, sets out a blueprint for such a government.

Middle East

14. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with Muslim regimes in the middle east about their response to terrorism. [15437]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had recent discussions about the international community's response to terrorism with his counterparts from Egypt, Iran, Jordan, the Palestinian Authority, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Sudan, Tunisia and, most recently, a visit to Iran Pakistan and Bahrain on 22–23 November. Governments in the middle east, like to rest of international community, have condemned the 11 September attacks and made very clear their determination to combat terrorism.

19. Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent discussions to take forward negotiations between Israel and the Palestinian Authority. [15442]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier in the House today to my hon. Friend the Member for Wimbledon (Roger Casale), at column 827.

22. Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department is taking to ensure greater peace and stability in the middle east. [15445]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier in the House today to my hon. Friend the Member for Wimbledon (Roger Casale), at column 827.

Greece

16. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to meet the Foreign Minister of Greece to discuss bilateral relations. [15439]

Mr. Bradshaw: Both the Foreign Secretary and I frequently meet the Greek Minister for Foreign Affairs. The last full bilateral being on 4 October 2001.

Euro

17. Rosemary McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how widely he circulated the leaflet published by his Department giving information to British travellers on the introduction of euro coins and notes from 1 January 2002. [15440]

Peter Hain: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has distributed the leaflet on euro notes and coins widely, including to: airports, Eurostar, Stena P&O, the travel agency Trailfinders, Citizens Advice Bureaux, Members of Parliament in the UK and British MEPs, European Resource Centres, European Public Information Centres, Euro Regional Fora, British embassies in the European Union and EU embassies in London.

In addition, a number of leaflets have been sent directly to members of the public at their request. The leaflet is also available to download from the FCO and BAA websites.

World Cup

20. David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Governments of Japan and Korea about the organisation and security of the FIFA world cup in 2002. [15443]

Mr. MacShane: Our representatives in Korea and Japan have been in close contact with the organising committees, stadia authorities, police and security authorities to provide advice and assistance. The Foreign Office has invited representatives to the UK to experience matches in the UK and look at how we handle security here. We have also held seminars in host countries on stadium security, crowd control and dealing with trouble-makers.

The Foreign Office has facilitated contacts between the Home Office, police and other relevant agencies and their Japanese and Korean counterparts.

Zimbabwe

23. Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy towards Zimbabwe. [15446]

Mr. Bradshaw: We urge the Government of Zimbabwe to honour the commitments they made in Abuja on 6 September; to end violence and intimidation; to permit freedom of expression; to restore the rule of law to land reform. With the Commonwealth, Southern African Development Community and EU partners, we share the same ultimate objective: a stable, prosperous and democratic Zimbabwe.

24. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the Secretary General of the Commonwealth to discuss the situation in Zimbabwe. [15447]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met the Commonwealth Secretary General in Abuja on 6 September. My noble Friend, Baroness Amos, accompanied the Commonwealth Secretary General to Zimbabwe during the Commonwealth Committee visit on 25–27 October.

EU Enlargement

25. Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards the enlargement of the EU. [15448]

38. Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards the enlargement of the EU. [15461]

Peter Hain: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave earlier in the House today to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Tom Brake), at column 828.

Iraq

28. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Iraq about (a) bombing and (b) sanctions. [15451]

Mr. Bradshaw: None.

EU Subsidiarity

29. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in returning sovereignty to member states of the EU since the introduction of the subsidiarity provisions. [15452]

Peter Hain: Subsidiarity is not about returning powers to the member states. It is the principle which ensures that where the EC Treaty allows for action at both community and member state level, the most appropriate level is chosen each time action is required. Article 5 TEC and the Subsidiarity Protocol to the Amsterdam Treaty spell out how the principle is to be applied in practice.

Terrorism

30. Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about international diplomatic efforts against terrorism. [15454]

Mr. Bradshaw: The response of the international community to the appalling events of 11 September has been united and determined. The UN response has been swift.

Immediately following the attacks, the UN Security Council in Resolution 1368 said that it would hold accountable those indirectly and directly responsible; UNSCR 1373 followed this and obliged all countries to target terrorist finances and deny terrorist organisations a safe haven.

Following 11 September, the EU have prepared an action plan enhancing police and judicial co-operation, cutting funding of terrorists and improving air security. The G8 are working on a G8 Counter Terrorism Action Plan which will provide a solid basis for future counter-terrorism efforts.

Rough Diamonds

31. Mr. Lammy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of the Kimberley process and the implementation of an effective global certification scheme for rough diamonds. [15455]

Peter Hain: The Kimberley process is meeting in Botswana. On the final day of the meeting (29 November) Ministers and senior officials will, I hope, agree that the detailed proposals for a global certification scheme for rough diamonds, which have been developed over the last nine months by the process, are ready to be presented for endorsement by the UN General Assembly early next year.

Russia

32. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to foster good relations with Russia. [15456]

Peter Hain: Encouraging Russia's transformation into a reliable and predictable economic and political partner is a key UK foreign policy priority. Recent efforts to develop our relations have included visits to Moscow by my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister, Deputy Prime Minister, Foreign Secretary and Defence Secretary. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is in regular contact with President Putin.

We strongly welcome Russia's support for the fight against international terrorism. We believe we have an opportunity to reassess relations with Russia and to find new ways of working together. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has written to Lord Robertson and NATO leaders with ideas for a new partnership between Russia and NATO. We are also considering how to develop EU-Russia links.

Gibraltar

33. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent discussions with the Spanish Government over Gibraltar. [15457]

Peter Hain: The Government resumed talks with Spain under the Brussels Process in July. In accordance with the terms of the Brussels Communiqué issued in November 1984, the talks are aimed at overcoming all the differences between the UK and Spain over Gibraltar and at promoting co-operation on a mutually beneficial basis on economic, cultural, touristic, aviation, military and environmental matters. The Communiqué also establishes that issues of sovereignty will be discussed under the process.

A further round of talks was held in Barcelona on 20 November. A joint statement was issued copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his Spanish counterpart concerning the sovereignty of Gibraltar. [15450]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given earlier in the House today by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Tim Loughton).

Nigeria

35. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Nigeria. [15459]

Mr. Bradshaw: The bilateral relationship with Nigeria is excellent. We are supporting the reform programme of President Obasanjo. We have encouraged high-level exchanges under UK/bilateral forum and we offered practical support through development assistance. We welcome Nigeria's active role in regional and international matters, including its helpful role on Zimbabwe.

China

36. Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of China's commitment to the global campaign against terrorism. [15460]

Mr. Bradshaw: We welcome China's support for the international fight against terrorism. China is an important partner in this. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister discussed this with Vice President Hu Jintao on 29 October during his visit to the UK.

Balkans

37. Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's recent actions in the regeneration of the Balkans. [15462]

Mr. MacShane: The United Kingdom has played a leading role in promoting political stability in the Balkans, which is key to regeneration. In support of this, we have made major military and civilian commitments to Macedonia, Kosovo and Bosnia, and have provided significant development assistance to these and other Balkan countries.

Israeli Exports

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has been made of Israel's responses to post-verification requests by the EU in respect of imports suspected to originate outside the internationally recognized borders of Israel. [15892]

Peter Hain [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The EU has concluded, from the responses to member state's post-verification requests and from continuing discussions with Israel, that there remains a requirement to address the issues underlying the rules of origin dispute. The EU returned to this issues at the 20 November association council, noting that it wanted to continue efforts to resolve the question with Israel.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Israeli authorities have responded fully to EU post-verification requests for certificates of origins for goods alleged to be from illegal settlements; and if he will detail those responses. [15891]

Peter Hain [holding answer 19 November 2001]: Such requests are made by members states' Customs authorities in respect of individual cases of imports from a third country. Since April 2001 the UK has received 13 responses from Israel to requests for verification that the goods in question qualified for preferential treatment under the terms of the EU-Israel Association Agreement. In all but one of the cases Israel responded that the goods were originating products under the terms of the Agreement and thus qualified in Israel's view for preferential treatment. In the other case, the Israeli authorities were unable to validate the exporter's claim that the goods in question qualified for preferential treatment. The EU has made it clear, most recently at the 20 November association council, that it wants to pursue discussions with Israel to resolve this issue.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms are available to the EU to review the operation of the EU-Israel Association Agreement. [15889]

Peter Hain [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The EU-Israel Association Agreement provides for regular review by the Ministerial-level Association Council, to which either party may refer disputes over its application or interpretation. Below the level of the Council the Association Committee operates at official level and has power, under the terms of the Agreement, to take decisions relating to its management.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what deadlines the EU has placed for full responses by the Israeli authorities to EU post-verification requests for certificates of origin for goods alleged to be from illegal settlements; what the deadlines are; and what actions are available to the EU in the event of full responses not being received. [18655]

Peter Hain: Requests for verification of goods are made by member states' Customs authorities in respect of individual cases of imports from a third country. According to the terms of the EU-Israel Association Agreement, the country requesting the verification should be informed of the results within a maximum period of 10 months. In the event of full responses not being received, further information may be requested, and if this does not satisfactorily resolve the issues, it may be referred to the Association Council under the terms of the Agreement.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps were considered by EU foreign Ministers at the 19 November General Affairs Council to stop the import into the EU under preference of goods labelled as made in Israel but which originate in Israeli settlements in the occupied territories; what decisions were taken; and what the reasons for these decisions were. [18654]

Peter Hain: The 19 November General Affairs Council agreed that the EU should make it clear to Israel at the 20 November EU-Israel Association Council that it attached great importance to correct application of the Association Agreement and that it would do its best to find a sustainable solution to the rules of origin issue. It noted that, if the Association Council process was not able to find a solution, the EU would have to review its position, in accordance with the provisions of the Agreement. The two sides have agreed to pursue discussions on this issue.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the results of the EU-Israeli Association Council held on 20 November in respect of the implementation of the EU Association Agreement. [18523]

Peter Hain: The EU side noted that work in many areas of the Association Agreement is proceeding satisfactorily. It underlined its commitment to resolve the rules of origin issue, noting that efforts so far had not succeeded. The EU further noted that, if the Council was unable to find a solution, the EU would have to review its position, in accordance with the provisions of the Association Agreement. Discussions with Israel will continue on this issue.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he had made an assessment by the time of the EU-Israel Association Council of 20 November of Israel's responses to post verification requests by the EU in respect of imports suspected to originate outside the internationally recognised borders of Israel; and if he will give details of that assessment. [18657]

Peter Hain: The UK concluded that there remains a requirement to address the issues underlying the rules of origin question. This took into account the responses to the post-verification requests and continuing EU expert-level discussions with Israel. The EU has agreed to continue efforts to resolve the issue, as discussed with Israel at the 20 November Association Council.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Israeli authorities responded fully to EU post-verification requests for certificates of origin for goods alleged to be from Israeli settlements by the time of the EU-Israel Association Council on 20 November; if he will give details of the responses received; and on what date they were received. [18656]

Peter Hain: Such requests are made by member states' Customs authorities in respect of individual cases of imports from a third country. Since April 2001 the UK has received thirteen responses from Israel to requests for verification that the goods in question qualified for preferential treatment under the terms of the EU-Israel Association Agreement. In all but one of the cases Israel provided a standard response that the goods were originating products under the terms of the Agreement and thus qualified in Israel's view for preferential treatment. In the other case the Israeli authorities were unable to validate the exporter's claim that the goods in question qualified for preferential treatment. Of the twelve responses which verified the origin of the goods, one was received on 4 April; three on 22 April; one on 24 April; three on 24 May; one on 5 June; one on 12 June; one on 15 August and one on 14 September. The other response was received on 5 June.

Chemical Weapons Convention

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to formulate a co-ordinated strategy to ensure compliance with the Chemical Weapons Convention; and if he will make a statement. [16689]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Chemical Weapons Convention contains comprehensive compliance measures. These include the requirement to declare activities with scheduled chemicals, and of past chemical weapons production facilities and stockpiles; consultations; routine inspections of industrial and military facilities; and challenge inspections for alleged breaches of the Convention. The UK supports the implementation of these measures in the Executive Council of the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) and on a bilateral basis. The UK reviews declarations by other State Parties and, where appropriate, has bilateral consultations to clarify possible ambiguities and omissions with the country concerned in order to ensure full transparency. The UK also undertakes practice challenge inspections, and provides training and technical assistance to the OPCW. We continue to press for the universal adoption of the Convention.

Drugs Trade

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the international effort to reduce the drugs trade in Colombia and Bolivia. [16892]

Mr. Bradshaw: Colombia remains the world's principal source of cocaine. The international community and the Government of Colombia are committed to tackling the drugs trade and reducing the violence and instability with which it is linked. We support the Colombian Government's aim of reducing the cultivation, processing and distribution of drugs by 50 per cent. over the next six years. The UK has also been at the forefront of international efforts to support the peace process in Colombia.

We welcome the considerable progress being made in tackling the drugs trade in Bolivia. The United Nations International Drug Control Programme estimates that illicit coca cultivation in Bolivia has been reduced from 48,600 hectares in 1995 to 14,800 hectares in 2000. This reduction is due to the Bolivian Government's own efforts and international support.

Mongolia

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to encourage exchange of young professionals and students between the United Kingdom and Mongolia. [17460]

Mr. MacShane: The British Government have been running a successful programme of scholarships in Mongolia for a number of years. Since 1993, the Embassy administered-scheme has sent 44 Mongolians to the UK. Four places were awarded for the academic year 2001–02 at a cost of £105,000. We also co-fund six scholarships per annum with the Soros Foundation for Open Society and the Universities of Manchester and Essex.

We have provided funding for Raleigh International's three year programme of expeditions to Mongolia, which gave over 300 UK students the opportunity to work together with young Mongolians on a variety of projects. This ended in summer 2001.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance his Department is providing for English language teaching in Mongolia. [17459]

Mr. MacShane: My Department has focused its English language teaching efforts on the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, since we judge that greater competence there has a valuable multiplier effect in enabling Mongolia to interact with the international community more effectively in a wide range of areas. We are supporting programmes in English for special purposes: communication and presentation skills; and interpreting skills.

We also provide support through our embassy for 10 Department for International Development-funded VSO volunteers working on English language teaching for secondary school teachers.

International Criminal Court

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the United States following the passage of the International Criminal Court Act 2001; what UN state parties have now ratified the International Criminal Court Convention; and which members of the Council of Europe have not ratified it. [17769]

Peter Hain: Since the passage of the International Criminal Court Act on 11 May 2001, the United Kingdom has continued regularly to use our wide bilateral contacts with the United States to explain that we believe US reservations about the ICC are unfounded, and to encourage the US to ratify the Rome Statute. In addition we have participated in European Union action to the same end. The presidency of the European Union wrote to the Secretary of State Powell on 30 October 2001, drawing his attention to the EU Common Position of full support for the early entry into the force of the ICC Statute. The letter expresses the hope that the US will change its mind on the ICC and will not, in the meantime, obstruct those states which support the court and wish to seek to accede to it.

The following 46 UN member states have, as at 22 November 2001, ratified or acceded to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (ICC): Senegal, Trinidad and Tobago, San Marino, Italy, Fiji, Ghana, Norway, Belize, Tajikistan, Iceland, Venezuela, France, Belgium, Canada, Mali, Lesotho, New Zealand, Botswana, Luxembourg, Sierra Leone, Gabon, Spain, South Africa, Marshall Islands, Germany, Austria, Finland, Argentina, Dominica, Andorra, Paraguay, Croatia, Costa Rica, Antigua and Barbuda, Denmark, Sweden, Netherlands, Yugoslavia, Nigeria, Liechtenstein, Central African Republic, United Kingdom (on 4 October 2001), Switzerland, Peru, Nauru and Poland.

The following 23 member states of the Council of Europe have not ratified the Rome Statute of the ICC: Albania, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bulgaria, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Estonia, Georgia, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Latvia, Lithuania, Macedonia, Malta, Moldova, Portugal, Romania, Russian Federation, Slovakia, Slovenia, Turkey, Ukraine. The following three applicant member states have not ratified: Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina and Monaco.

Scottish Executive

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 23 October 2001, Official Report, column 117W, on the Scottish Executive, at which Council of Ministers' meetings since May 1999 Scottish Executive Ministers have (a) been present and (b) spoken to the Ministers in formal session. [18182]

Peter Hain: [holding answer 26 November 2001]: The answer to (a) is given in the table.

Scottish Ministers speak at Council meetings whenever appropriate.

Kosovo

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the level is of the UK's civilian policing commitment to the United Nations Mission in Kosovo. [19090]

Peter Hain: The UK currently contributes 140 civilian police officers, mainly on secondment from the Police Service for Northern Ireland and the Ministry of Defence Police, to the United Nations Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) international civilian police force. These officers are engaged in both operational duties to maintain civil law and order in Kosovo, and in duties related to the work of UNMIK's Criminal Investigation Unit in Pristina. UNMIK police officers, including those seconded from the UK, played a key role in ensuring that the Kosovo elections on 17 November were conducted peacefully.

On 6 December the UK will deploy 18 recently retired British police officers to Kosovo. The secondment of recently retired British police officers is a new initiative and will increase our commitment in Kosovo to 158 officers. This figure excludes Mr. Chris Albiston, the Police Commissioner in Kosovo, who is a serving Assistant Chief Constable on secondment from the Police Service for Northern Ireland. If this initial deployment of retired police officers proves successful there might be scope for the deployment of increased numbers of retired policemen to peacekeeping duties with the UN in Kosovo and elsewhere.

MI6

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what circumstances MI6 may decide that major decisions it takes need not be communicated to him; and what mechanism exists to ensure such decisions are in the public interest. [18536]

Mr. Straw: The Intelligence Services Act 1994 requires the explicit authority of the Secretary of State in respect of a wide range of major operations of the Secret Intelligence Service. There are therefore no circumstances in which major decisions by the Secret Intelligence Service would not be submitted to me or one of my Cabinet colleagues for approval, or of which I or they are not otherwise informed.

Lorry Drivers (France)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) assessment he has made of and (b) representations he has received in relation to incidences of physical attacks on British lorry drivers at French ports. [17648]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have had no recent reports of physical attacks on British lorry drivers at French ports.

If incidents do occur we will take them up with the French authorities.

Czech Republic

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his counterparts in the Czech Republic concerning the reasons behind the number of applications in the UK for asylum by Czech nationals; and if he will make a statement. [17417]

Peter Hain: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I have had numerous contacts with our Czech counterparts in recent months. I issued a joint statement on 7 August with the Czech Foreign Minister expressing the commitment of both Governments to the highest standard of human rights for all our citizens and our shared concern that substantial numbers of Czech citizens continue to make unfounded asylum applications in the UK. The text of the statement is available on the FCO website at www.fco.gov.uk/news/newstext.asp?5215.

While there can be no justification for citizens of a NATO ally and strong EU applicant to seek protection in the UK, the two Governments recognise that the position of the Roma minority is a problem in the Czech Republic. The UK fully supports the efforts of the Czech Government to address this problem.

Bulgaria

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made with Bulgaria's EU accession negotiations. [17838]

Peter Hain: Bulgaria has opened 23, and closed 12, of the 31 chapters of the EU acquis under negotiation. The European Commission judged, in its progress report published on November 13, that Bulgaria had made some good progress on alignment with the acquis in key areas. But work was still needed on administrative and judicial reform, and in combating corruption. The UK will continue to provide advice and support to Bulgaria in meeting the accession criteria in these and other areas.

PRIME MINISTER

Energy Policy

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what plans he has (a) to publish and (b) otherwise to distribute the PIU report on energy policy when he receives it; [17937]

(2) when she expects the Performance and Innovation Unit report on energy policy to be completed; and if Ministers will see the report before it is published. [17935]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth) on 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 546W.

Campaign Against Terrorism

Mr. Pope: To ask the Prime Minister what arrangements he has made for ministerial oversight of the campaign against terrorism. [18975]

The Prime Minister: I have established a Sub-Committee of the Defence and Overseas Policy Committee to oversee the Government's role in the international coalition against international terrorism.

Its membership and terms of reference are as follows:

Sub-Committee on International Terrorism

Composition:

Prime Minister

Deputy Prime Minister

Chancellor of the Exchequer

President of the Council

Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs

Secretary of State for the Home Department

Secretary of State for International Development

Secretary of State for Defence

The Chief of the Defence Staff, the Attorney-General and the heads of the Intelligence Agencies also attend when required.

Terms of Reference

"To keep under review the Government's policy on international terrorism, in particular the political, military and humanitarian response to the attacks in the United States on 11 September and preventive security measures in the United Kingdom and overseas".

In addition, as part of this Sub-Committee, I have established a ministerial group, chaired by the Secretary of State for the Home Department, to keep under review policy on protective security.

Its membership and terms of reference are as follows:

Ministerial Group on Protective and Preventive Security

Composition:

Secretary of State for the Home Department (in the Chair)

Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs

Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs

Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions

Secretary of State for Health

Secretary of State for Northern Ireland

Secretary of State for Defence

Chief Secretary to the Treasury

Secretary of State for Trade and Industry

Minister of State, Home Office

The President of the Association of Chief Police Officers and the heads of the Intelligence Agencies will attend as required.

Terms of Reference:

"To keep under review the Government's policy on preventive and precautionary security measures to counter the threat of terrorism in the United Kingdom and to British interests overseas; and to report to the Sub-Committee on International Terrorism as appropriate".

Honours System

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Prime Minister what action has been taken to reform the UK honours system since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [18254]

The Prime Minister: Since 1997, the honours lists have recognised in particular the achievements of people in the key public sectors including education, health, law and order, and in voluntary service, nationally and in the community.

Workforce Development

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Prime Minister when the performance and innovation unit's report on Workforce Development will be published. [18382]

The Prime Minister: The performance and innovation unit's report "In Demand Adult Skills in the 21st Century" is published today as a report to the Government.

Copies have been placed in the House Library. Additional copies and further information can also be found on the Cabinet Office website at www.cabinet-office.gov.uk/innovation.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Poverty

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what recent assessment he has made of the extent of poverty amongst the clergy. [16896]

Mr. Bell: Responsibilities for clergy stipends have been transferred to the Ministry Division of the Archbishops' Council, which set up a review group to look at clergy stipends in 1999. As part of its work, the group conducted a survey of all clergy on the central payroll in 2000 in order to find out how clergy were managing financially. A copy of the survey results will be placed in the Library. The survey showed that one third of those households where the clergy stipend was the sole source of income either struggled to pay their bills or to provide extra things such as holidays.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Early-day Motions

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what his latest estimate is of the cost of (a) printing and (b) administering early-day motions. [17642]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 23 November 2001]: For the latest estimate of the cost of printing early-day motions I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Teignbridge (Richard Younger-Ross) on 3 July 2001, Official Report, column 91W. The cost of administering early-day motions, including such tasks as editorial preparation and control and electronic publication, is not separately identifiable.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards meeting the public service agreement target for the long run rate of growth of crime. [17310]

Mr. Denham: There is no Public Service Agreement (PSA) target on the long run rate of growth in crime as such. The PSA targets for crime set by Spending Review 2000 and progress on them are:

To reduce vehicle crime by 30 per cent. by 2004. Recorded vehicle crime fell by nine per cent. in the 12 months to March 2001.

To reduce burglary by 25 per cent., no local authority having a domestic burglary rate more than three times the national average by 2005. Recorded Domestic Burglary fell by nine per cent. in the 12 months to March 2001.

To reduce robbery in our principal cities by 14 per cent. by 2005—while recorded robbery rose by 13 per cent. in the 12 months to March 2001, these rates of increase were much slower than those recorded in the previous 12 months. The British Crime Survey, a more accurate measure of crime, shows that violent crime is actually falling overall (down 19 per cent. between 1999–2000).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for drug action teams to name comprehensive programmes involving lifeskills in schools, the youth service, further education and the community. [17151]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Home Department does not have a public service agreement (PSA) target for drug action teams to name comprehensive programmes involving lifeskills in schools, the youth service, further education and the community. The PSA relating to young people is to reduce the proportion of people under the age of 25 reporting the use of Class A drugs by 25 per cent. by 2005 and 50 per cent. by 2008.

However, the Government do believe that drug, alcohol and tobacco education is best delivered within a framework of personal, social and health education (PSHE). Good personal social and health education and citizenship education, when well delivered in schools, provides a vital foundation for the personal development of young people and prepares them for adult life. It can help to give pupils the knowledge, skills and understanding they need to lead confident, healthy, independent lives and to become informed, active and responsible citizens. Currently 93 per cent. of secondary schools and 75 per cent. of primaries now have a drug education policy compared with 86 per cent. of secondary schools and 61 per cent. of primaries in 1997. The target for 2002 is for all secondary schools and 80 per cent. of primaries to have effective programmes in place.

The role of Drug Action Teams (DATs) in this process is measured via the Young Peoples Substance Misuse Plans. These plans will help to integrate drug service provision with other existing children's services. The first of these plans will be submitted in March 2002. By 2004, in every DAT area there will be substance misuse education and information for all young people and their families; advice and support targeted at vulnerable groups; early identification of need; and tailored support to all who need it.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the public service agreement target of a reduction of 3 per cent. in the proportion of arrestees testing positive for (a) heroin, (b) cocaine and (c) crack. [17050]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: We are in the process of reviewing progress against all drugs strategy targets.

The 2002 drugs strategy target, as set out in the United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator's Second National Plan, to achieve a reduction in the proportion of arrestees testing positive for Class A drugs, was taken forward in the Spending Review 2000 Service Delivery Agreement commitment to > "achieve a reduction of three percentage points in the proportion of arrestees testing positive for heroin and/or cocaine and/or crack from the 1999–2000 half baseline".

The target is not to achieve separate reductions for individual drugs. It is one of several measures contributing towards delivery of the public service agreement target to reduce levels of repeat offending among drug misusing offenders by 25 per cent. by 2005 and by 50 per cent. by 2008.

The New English and Welsh Arrestee Drug Abuse Monitoring (NEW-ADAM) research programme provides estimates of the proportion of arrestees testing positive for each of a number of illicit drugs, including opiates/heroin and cocaine/crack. On the basis of data collected in eight sites in 1999–2000, we estimate that, 29 per cent. of arrestees testing positive for these drugs should be reduced to 26 per cent. by 2001–02, when the same eight sites are revisited. Data for 2001–02, are currently being collected. The findings will be available in the autumn of 2002.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for the seizure of class A drugs. [17060]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The targets set to achieve the public service agreement to increase the proportion of class A drugs targeted on the United Kingdom which is seized are 4.5 metric tonnes of heroin and 7.0 metric tonnes of cocaine by March 2002. From April 2000 to the end of September 2001, one tonne of heroin and 2.3 tonnes of cocaine had been seized.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the Public Service Agreement target for increasing the amount of assets (a) identified from drug traffickers and (b) secured. [17074]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The public service agreement target was to increase the amount of assets identified from drug traffickers and secured by one third over a three year period. The target is measured in terms of receipts from the enforcement of confiscation orders in drug trafficking cases. The baseline was receipts of £9.5 million during the 1997–98 financial year. The milestone objectives that were set were receipts of £10.4 million in year one (1998–99), £11.5 million in year two (1999–2000) and £12.6 million in year three (2000–01).

The outcomes for years one and two were £10.5 million in 1998–99 and £9.3 million for 1999–2000. The outcome for 2000–01 is not yet available.

The Government have set a target of doubling amounts recovered from drug traffickers and other serious criminals by 2004. The baseline for this is receipts from confiscation and cash forfeiture orders of £29.4 million that were secured in 1999–2000. The Government's objective is to increase this to receipts of £60 million in the financial year 2004–05. This is to be achieved through the Asset Recovery Strategy, which I shall be publishing shortly, and the Proceeds of Crime Bill.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for the rate of positive results from mandatory random drug tests. [17066]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The percentage of prisoners testing positive for random mandatory drug testing has reduced year by year from 18.3 per cent. in 1998–99, to reach 12.4 per cent. in 2000–01. The figure for the financial year 2001–02 to date is 11.6 per cent.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on progress towards the 2002 target for the number of (a) face-to-face arrest referral schemes and (b) arrestees referred to and entering treatment programmes; [17054]

(2) if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target on the operation by police services of face-to-face referral schemes covering all custody suites. [17051]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The 2002 drugs strategy target, as set out in the United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator's First and Second National Plans, that all police services operate face-to-face arrest referral schemes covering all custody suites, was taken forward in the Spending Review 2000 Service Delivery Agreement commitment to make proactive arrest referral schemes available for all custody suites by 31 March 2002. This is one of several measures contributing towards delivery of the public service agreement (PSA) target to reduce levels of repeat offending among drug misusing offenders by 25 per cent. by 2005 and by 50 per cent. by 2008. As at the end of March 2001, 41 police forces were operating arrest referral schemes, with 330 arrest referral workers covering 86 per cent. of custody suites across England and Wales. The recently published Home Office Arrest Referral Statistical Update for the period October 2000 to March 2001 shows that arrest referral workers held 21,329 interviews in that period involving 19,190 individuals, 56 per cent. of whom were referred to a specialist treatment service. Of those referred to drug treatment, preliminary analyses based upon a sample of regions, suggest 15–25 per cent. make a treatment demand. This figure is provisional and subject to further validation.

We are currently reviewing progress against all the drugs strategy targets as part of the work for the 2002 Spending Review.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the public service agreement target for the number of offenders dealt with for supply offences in respect of Class A drugs. [17049]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The number of persons dealt with in Great Britain for supply offences (possession with intent to supply unlawfully, unlawful supply, and import/export) involving Class A drugs rose from 8,101 in 1998 to 9,517 in 1999. This represents an increase of 17.5 per cent., against a target set of 10 per cent. Data are not yet available for 2000.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for increasing ethnic minority representation in the Home Office and its services. [16927]

Angela Eagle: In July 1999 the Home Secretary set recruitment targets for the Home Office and its agencies (Police, Prison, Probation and Fire services[1]). Most of the targets have to be met by 2009. All service areas showed progress from April 2000 to March 2001. The percentage of minority ethnic staff in the core Home Office and Immigration and Nationality Directorate in London and Croydon has risen from 24 per cent. in 2000 to 28.2 per cent. this year, against a target of 25 per cent. set for 2009. The Police, Prison and Fire services are all working towards a target of 7 per cent. minority ethnic staff by 2009. So far they have progressed as follows: (2000 figures in brackets): Police 3.1 per cent. (3 per cent.), Prison 3.7 per cent. (3.2 per cent.), Fire 1.6 per cent. (1.6 per cent.). The Probation Service has increased the percentage of minority ethnic staff in the organisation from 9.3 per cent. to 9.8 per cent. since 2000. Its target for 2009 is 8.3 per cent.

The Home Office and its services are working to achieve equal retention rates for white and minority ethnic staff. There is still work to be done, however and some key initiatives are being developed, for example exit interviews, support networks for minority ethnic staff and comprehensive diversity awareness training for management and staff.

The Home Secretary's progression targets are expressed in different ways for the different services. Essentially they require that, by 2009, the percentage of minority ethnic staff in each grade is the same as for white staff. For example, the percentage of Senior Probation Officers who are from minority ethnic groups rose from 5.6 per cent. to 8.0 per cent. last year. The first minority ethnic Chief Officer in the Probation Service was appointed.

The second annual report on targets was published on 14 November and is available in the Library.

[1] The Fire Service is no longer under the remit of the Home Office following the post General Election machinery of Government changes. Responsibility now rests with the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for the reduction of sexual offences. [16913]

Mr. Keith Bradley: There is no specific public service agreement to reduce sexual offences, but police figures show that the number of recorded sexual offences fell by 1.3 per cent. to 37,000 in 2000–01.

The Government have made it clear that they are committed to the reduction of all violent crime, including sexual offences, as a high priority. We have taken action to strengthen legislation for the protection of the vulnerable, in particular children, against sex offenders and to provide better management of sex offenders in the community and better information to the public on this. We have also conducted major reviews of sex offences and the registration requirements in the Sex Offenders Act 1997 with a view to further strengthening of the legislation.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for reducing the conviction rate of children and young people; [17070]

(2) if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for reducing offending by juveniles. [17048]

Mr. Denham: The relevant public service agreement target is to reduce the rate of reconviction of all young offenders by 5 per cent. against the predicted rate by 2004. The first rates are expected in spring 2002. They will cover juveniles reprimanded, warned or convicted in July 2000, shortly after most of the new youth justice interventions had been brought into operation across England and Wales.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress towards the public service agreement target for the support of police trials for drug recognition training and field impairment testing in respect of drug driving. [17052]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Successful trials of drug recognition techniques and field impairment testing were undertaken in 1999, following which a police training programme was launched last year. We understand from the Association of Chief Police Officers that 32 forces have now trained officers in these techniques.

While there is no specific target in respect of drug recognition techniques and field impairment testing, the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions supports developments in this area through continuing research to monitor the use of these techniques.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for reducing the level of disorder. [17053]

Mr. Denham: The Government have introduced a range of measures to help tackle the problems of disorder and anti-social behaviour, such as the Anti-Social Behaviour Order, and we are encouraged by the increasing use of these by the police and local authorities. A public service agreement target for the reduction of disorder and anti-social behaviour will be set in April.

Police Officers (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of police officers in each authority are (a) black and (b) Asian, broken down by grade. [17207]

Mr. Denham: From information obtained from Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary, the tables show the number and percentage of black and Asian police officers by rank and force as at 31 March 2001.

Regulation of Investigatory Powers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the cost to public funds of implementing the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 in (a) 2000–01 and 2001–02. [16910]

Mr. Denham: There is no central record of the cost to public funds of implementing the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. The bulk of costs, for example training those involved in convert investigative activity to ensure that their activities are compliant with part 2 falls on a variety of budgets in a number of authorities. There is nothing to suggest that the overall costs of implementing parts 1 and parts 3 will exceed the estimates provided in the regulatory impact assessments.

Drugs Services

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the performance of the agencies involved in getting money allocated for drugs services to front-line services, with particular reference to drug action teams. [16833]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Drug Action Teams (DATs) are key to the local delivery of the National Drugs Strategy. Agencies involved allocating money to front-line drugs services are all represented on the DAT at senior level: education, health, social services, police, prisons and probation.

As part of their performance assessment, DATs provide annual returns on their work over the previous year and their plans for the forthcoming 12 months. The most significant areas of expenditure fall on young people and treatment services, for which DATs provide strategic direction and take necessary spending decisions.

Our assessment of young people's drugs services indicate that between two thirds and three quarters of young people identified as needing support currently receive that support, but there is concern that many young people are not identified early enough. We have approved a regional programme of work which will highlight and disseminate good practice in the planning and commissioning of young people's drug services.

In respect of treatment, our assessment of treatment plans and information on future treatment capacity needs and waiting lists, all indicate that there is wide regional variation between access to services and the quality of treatment.

DATs are now being asked to deliver detailed plans for treatment services by January 2002. The National Treatment Agency (NTA), with Drugs Prevention Advisory Service and national health service partners, will assess allocations of money; the extent to which decisions are based on sound needs assessments; and the quality of services provided. Details of this process are being developed by the NTA.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the budgeted amount is for the pooled drug treatment plan allocation for England in the current financial year. [16832]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The budgeted amount for the pooled drug treatment plan allocation for England in the current financial year is £140 million.

Blasphemy Law

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is his intention to abolish the law against blasphemy. [17030]

Angela Eagle: There are no immediate plans to abolish the law against blasphemy.

Religious Hatred and Blasphemy

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent consultations his Department has had with religious leaders in respect of (a) proposals to outlaw the generation of religious hatred and (b) plans to abolish the law on blasphemy. [17031]

Angela Eagle: I have not formally consulted leaders of different faiths in regard to proposals to expand the law on incitement to racial hatred to cover religious hatred.

Internet Access (Children)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he issues on the means by which a child's age may be proven when using the internet. [16861]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government have not issued such guidance. Proof of age, like proof of identity, can be achieved by using authentication services, such as certified digital signatures. However, the market in these products is not developing quickly and the Government are committed to identifying and removing barriers to the widespread take-up of authentication services by individuals and businesses users.

In the meantime the Government encourage parental supervision of children's use of the Internet combined with the use of filtering software to prevent children from being exposed to inappropriate internet content. To emphasise this the Government will launch a public awareness campaign on internet safety next month.

Sodexho

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the decision to award a contract to Sodexho to run two private female prisons. [16800]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 22 November 2001]: No contracts for private prisons have been awarded to Sodexho. On 5 November, the Prison Service announced that UKDS, which is wholly owned by Sodexho Alliance, had been selected as the preferred bidder for a new prison for 450 females to be built as a Public Private Partnership (PPP) at Ashford, Middlesex and due to open in July 2003. UKDS was also announced as joint preferred bidder, with Premier Custodial Group, for a new prison for 480 males and 360 females to be built as a PPP at Peterborough and due to open in April 2004. A decision on the single preferred bidder for Peterborough is anticipated in early December. The award of preferred bidder is taken on the basis of best value for money.

Sentencing Advisory Panel

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the cost to public funds in 2001–02 of the Sentencing Advisory Panel. [17321]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The cost to public funds of the Sentencing Advisory Panel from 1 April to 31 October 2001 was £103,624. The budget for the remainder of the financial year is £239,736, making a possible total of £343,000 in 2001–02. We cannot, however, predict at this stage what the actual cost will be.

Referral Order Panels

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the cost to public funds of the pilots for referral order panels. [17322]

Mr. Denham: £1.2 million was spent on the referral order pilots in 2000–01. We expect that a similar amount will be spent in 2001–02.

Communities Against Drugs

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the allocation of funding for Communities Against Drugs is for each of the three years from 2000–01. [17904]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 26 November 2001]: The Communities Against Drugs programme is a three-year programme which commenced in 2001–02. The funding allocated to the programme up until 2003–04 is given in the table.

	£ million
2001–02	50
2002–03	70
2003–04	100
Total	220

Aggravated Possession (Drugs)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is towards the creation of a new offence of aggravated possession of prohibited drugs. [18365]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Government have no plans to create such a new offence. Aggravating factors inform the decision by the police on how to proceed with an offence, and will also properly be considered by the courts when sentencing. Aggravated possession is already recognised to some extent by the separate offence of possession with intent to supply a controlled drug.

Community Development Foundation

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the outcome is of Stage 1 of the quinquennial review of the Community Development Foundation. [19089]

Mr. Blunkett: The first part of the latest review has now finished and I have carefully considered the recommendations in line with the terms of guidance for reviewing non-departmental public bodies (NDPB), included in the Government's Modernising Government White Paper.

Compass Partnership, a firm of independent consultants, conducted the review and after focusing on the context within which the Community Development Foundation (CDF) works, reviewed its management arrangements, surveyed a sample of its external stakeholders and considered the alternative options for CDF. They also considered whether there was a need for the particular functions carried out by CDF as an NDPB to continue. The consultants have recommended that CDF should remain an NDPB, although with a broader remit which reflects the Government's agenda of community involvement, civil renewal and community development, including a number of reforms as to its way of working.

I am pleased to announce that I have broadly accepted the conclusions of stage 1 of the review, and I have given approval for the second stage of the review to commence. This stage will offer an opportunity to consider in more detail what changes to CDF's relationship with Government and the voluntary and community sector are necessary to achieve the expected outcomes.

A copy of the full report of stage 1 of the review will be placed in the Library.

The senior official responsible for the review is the Director of the Government's Active Community Unit based in the Home Office.

Asylum Seekers

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how NASS (a) monitors and (b) inspects the accommodation into which they place (i) asylum seekers and (ii) refugees; and if he will place the latest inspection report in the Library. [17716]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) provides accommodation for asylum seekers. It is not responsible for providing accommodation to those who have been accepted as refugees. The NASS Housing Management Team conducts random inspections of properties throughout the country on a weekly basis. These inspections assess the quality of accommodation provided and highlight any maintenance issues requiring remedial action. The Contractor is required to take action within specified timescales and follow up inspections are undertaken to ensure that repairs have been completed satisfactorily.

The NASS Housing Management Team has close liaison with contract managers who undertake similar tasks, as well as ensuring that contractual obligations are met.

Apart from inspections conducted by its own staff NASS also commissions inspections of accommodation by third party consultants.

I am unable to provide details of inspection reports as these are commercially confidential.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) asylum seekers and (b) refugees placed by NASS in accommodation outside the Greater London area have returned to the Greater London area within the past 12 months. [17715]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The information requested is not available.

The National Asylum Support Service only supports asylum seekers. Refugees who require support can apply for support from social services.

Currently information linking the movements of NASS supported asylum seekers within the United Kingdom is not available.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) asylum seekers and (b) refugees have been placed by the NASS in (a) private sector, (b) local authority and (c) housing association accommodation since April 2000, broken down by region. [17724]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Information is not available in the form requested.

The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) only supports asylum seekers. Refugees who require support can apply for support from the Benefits Agency.

As at the end of July 2001, 28,810[1] asylum seekers including dependants were being supported in NASS accommodation. The regional breakdown is in the table.

Region	Asylum seekers supported in NASS accommodation as at end July 2001[1]
East of England	1,630
East Midlands	200
Greater London	680
North East	4,240
North West	6,190
Northern Ireland	50
Scotland	3,890
South Central	390
South West	540
Wales	370
West Midlands	4,410
Yorkshire and Humberside	6,230

Information on the type of accommodation in which asylum seekers are housed is currently not available.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits Agency

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what training is given to Benefits Agency staff to deal with aggressive claimants. [11114]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: This is a matter for Alexis Cleveland, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Hywel Williams, dated 26 November 2001:

The Secretary of State for the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what training is given to Benefits Agency (BA) staff to deal with aggressive claimants.

The BA has many procedures in place to support staff in their efforts to provide the required levels of service whilst safeguarding their own safety and preserving the security of the benefits systems. Each BA Specific training event within the Customer Service Portfolio delivered by DWP Training Services has been designed to underpin these important principles.

To deal with aggressive claimants, DWP Training Services deliver an event called, "Interviewing the Public (Including Potentially Violent People)". This event is mandatory for all new and job change staff who have fact to face contact with the public and is designed to provide staff with awareness and skills to handle potentially violent situations in a professional and safe manner.

I hope this is helpful.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will explain the delay by the Child Support Agency in dealing with the case of Ms Elaine Lanchbury, a constituent. [12832]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Huw Edwards, dated 26 November 2001:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions about your constituent Mrs. Elaine Lanchbury and the way the Child Support Agency has handled her case.

As individual cases are a confidential matter, I have written to you separately.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement about the time taken to award contracts by the Child Support Agency for undertaking bailiff action. [12833]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Huw Edwards, dated 26 November 2001:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions asking if he will make a statement about the delay in awarding contracts by the Child Support Agency for undertaking bailiff action.

Our previous contract came to an end on the 1 April 2001.

I was determined that the new contract would facilitate better support for my staff in seeking to enforce payment of monies legally due. I was therefore anxious that the team responsible visited all the bailiffs that were successful at the tender stage. This led to a slight delay in the award of contracts.

New contracts were awarded to three Bailiff Companies on the 1 May 2001.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefits Agency (Scottish Parliamentary Liaison Unit)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many cases have been referred by Members of the Scottish Parliament to the Scottish Parliamentary Liaison Unit of the Benefits Agency (a) directly and (b) indirectly; [18228]

(2) how many people are employed by the Scottish Parliamentary Liaison Unit of the UK Benefits Agency; and at what cost; [18229]

(3) how many Benefits Agency issues received by the Scottish Parliamentary Liaison Unit have been resolved by the Scottish Parliamentary Liaison Unit. [18230]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: This is a matter for Alexis Cleveland, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Alexis Cleveland to Angus Robertson, dated 26 November 2001:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has asked me to respond to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many cases have been referred by Members of the Scottish Parliament to the Scottish Parliamentary Liaison Unit of the Benefits Agency (a) directly and (b) indirectly, how many people are employed by the Scottish parliamentary Liaison Unit of the UK Benefits Agency; and at what cost so far. Also, how many Benefits Agency issues received by the Scottish Parliamentary Liaison Unit have been resolved by the Scottish Parliamentary Liaison Unit.

The Benefits Agency Scottish Parliamentary Relations Unit (SPRU) deals with all parliamentary correspondence of an operational nature from MPs, MSPs and MEPs relating to constituents in Scotland.

There are seven members of staff currently employed in SPRU. The unit was set up in August 1999 and has an average annual salary cost of £217,000.

Information on the number of draft replies to letters from MPs, which were originally referred to the MP by a Member of the Scottish Parliament, is not available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. SPRU has drafted 29 replies to letters directly from Members of the Scottish Parliament since 1 October 2000.

SPRU received 447 items of correspondence between 1 April 2001 and 31 October 2001. There were 50 items outstanding prior to this. Of the total 497 outstanding, 458 draft replies were completed in this period, and 39 items remained outstanding on 1 November 2001.

I hope this is helpful.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will give updated quarterly figures on new claims for incapacity benefit and the total case load. [18539]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Incapacity benefit caseload figures are contained in the Incapacity Benefit Quarterly Summary Statistics (May 2001), a copy of which is in the Library. The Incapacity Benefit Quarterly Summary Statistics (August 2001) will be published on 13 December 2001.

Note: New claims to Incapacity Benefit may not always result in an award of benefit.

New Deal (Copeland)

Dr. Jack Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the impact of the New Deal for Young People in the Borough of Copeland in the year to September, giving the (a) number participating, (b) investment involved and (c) number who moved on to full-time employment. [17984]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The available information is in the table.

Copeland constituency

Month	Number of new deal for young people participants in the borough of Copeland
August 2000	313
September 2000	295
October 2000	288
November 2000	275
December 2000	261
January 2001	257
February 2001	263
March 2001	268
April 2001	266
May 2001	266
June 2001	264
July 2001	259
August 2001	233

Notes:

Figures are for the end of each month and are the latest available. The figures are not cumulative.

Estimates of the cost of the programme are not available at constituency level.

The New Deal for Young People helped 261 people in Copeland move into work in the year up to the end of August 2001.

Sickness-Related Benefits

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of men of working age were claiming sickness-related benefits by constituency in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1990, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [17395]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: A copy of the available information has been placed in the Library.

Departmental Advertising

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the final cost of each of his Department's advertising campaigns was in 2000–01, broken down into (a) advertising media and production and (b) other costs. [7899]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [pursuant to the reply, 29 October 2001, c. 525W]: The information is in the table:

	Advertising and media	Other costs
Targeting benefit fraud	5,747,000	402,252
National Benefit Fraud Hotline advertising	425,178	—
Minimum Income Guarantee	3,365,000	[1]176,000
Inherited SERPS	340,000	345,000
Winter Fuel Payments	616,000	294,000
Pensions Education[2]	[3]5,232,000	1,297,000
Bereavement Benefits	155,000	90,000

New Deal Partners	99,445	67,310
Action Teams for Jobs	58,504	440
New Deal for Disabled People	31,372	240,387
New Deal for Lone Parents	2,292,000	295,000

[1] This includes £30,985 customer research into a new MIG claim form which straddled two financial years.

[2] In addition to the total of £6,529,062 (which was rounded to £6,530,000) £103,370 was spent on completing our previous pensions education activity (with a Monopoly theme) that preceded the new "Working Dogs" campaign, as well as some developmental work that was undertaken before the new working Dogs Campaign was launched.

[3] The overall Pensions Education marketing budget figure remains unchanged at £6,529,062 (which was rounded to £6,530,000). Within this total, the advertising media and production cost given previously has changed from £5,212,000 to £5,232,000. This takes account of some photography costs that were previously included as part of "other costs", but can be directly attributed to advertising.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answers of 29 October 2001, Official Report, column 525W, on departmental advertising and 31 October 2001, Official Report, column 749W, on the Disability Discrimination Act, for what reason the 'What Have You Got to Offer?' advertising campaign was not included in the table of departmental advertising campaigns for 2000–01. [15176]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I refer to the pursuant answer given to the hon. Member today.

I regret that due to an oversight the information was omitted from the previous answer.

HEALTH

Written Consultations

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason the consultation period for the discussion document "Involving Patients and the Public in Healthcare", was six weeks; what consideration was given to the Cabinet Office code of conduct on written consultations relating to minimum standard periods; and if he will make a statement. [13666]

Ms Blears [holding answer 8 November 2001]: Much of the content of "Involving Patients and the Public in Healthcare" had been the subject of full public debate both in the House and more widely for a number of months, not least during the passage of the Health and Social Care Act 2001. The purpose of the listening exercise was to seek the views of a wide range of stakeholders about how structures for patient and public involvement should operate in practice.

Although the period given for discussion was shortened, the listening exercise for the discussion document met the spirit and principles of the Cabinet Office guidance in every other respect.

We have received around 1,000 written responses to the listening exercise from members of the public, community health councils, National Health Service bodies, the voluntary sector and local government. In addition we have also commissioned a research company to conduct some research with people from socially excluded groups about their views on the proposed new structures.

We made our response available on 16 November—a copy will be placed in the Library.

Poultry Feed

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of poultry feed (a) deliveries and (b) movement in the United Kingdom was traceable in (i) 1998, (ii) 1999, (iii) 2000 and (iv) 2001; and if he will make a statement. [17101]

Ms Blears [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Figures on the traceability of deliveries and movement of animal feed in the form requested are not recorded. However, various European Commission measures on the labelling and composition of animal feed, implemented in the United Kingdom over the last few years, assist with traceability by requiring extensive labelling and for documentary records to be kept. Additionally, the vast majority of animal feed manufacturers in the United Kingdom operate under assurance schemes which cover manufacture, packaging, storage and supply and require records to be kept to permit traceability.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will provide a substantive answer to PQ No. 11888 on scanners in acute hospitals in the north west region. [18369]

Jacqui Smith: A reply was sent to the right hon. Member on 26 November.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Oldest Legislation

Norman Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will list the 10 oldest pieces of legislation that are in force. [18367]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The 10 oldest pieces of legislation which were either wholly or partly in force as at 31 December 2000 are as listed.

Gravesend County Court

Mr. Pond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) liquidated and (b) unliquidated default summonses were issued by Gravesend county court in (i) 1999, (ii) 2000 and (iii) 2001. [18428]

Mr. Wills: Details concerning the identity of the issuer of a default claim are not collected centrally. Such information is held within the individual court records and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Pond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many default summonses were issued by Gravesend county court (a) between 1 October 1998 and 31 March 1999, (b) between 1 April and 30 September 1999, (c) between 1 October 1999 and 31 March 2000, (d) between 1 April and 30 September 2000, (e) between 1 October 2000 and 31 March 2001, (f) between 1 April and 30 September 2001 and (g) since 1 October 2001. [18427]

Mr. Wills: Figures showing the number of default claims issued at Gravesend county court during the periods specified above are set out in the table.

Default claims issued in Gravesend county court

	Default claims issued
1 October 1998 to 31 March 1999	623
1 April 1999 to 30 September 1999	452
1 October 1999 to 31 March 2000	414
1 April 2000 to 30 September 2000	450
1 October 2000 to 31 March 2001	409
1 April 2001 to 30 September 2001	437
1—31 October 2001	98

Mr. Pond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many cases were dealt with by Gravesend county court in each six month period beginning from January 1999. [18429]

Mr. Wills: Figures indicating how many small claims hearings were held at Gravesend county court during the specified periods are provided in the table.

Small claims hearings held at Gravesend county court

	Small claims hearings
January to June 1999	45
July to December 1999	34
January to June 2000	33
July to December 2000	35
January to June 2001	17
July to October 2001	21

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the gross costs were of the Regulatory Impact Assessment for the (a) Civil Procedure (Amendment) Rules 2001, (b) Land Registration Bill and (c) Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Bill. [17689]

Mr. Wills: These costs are shown in the published regulatory impact assessments which are in the House Libraries.

Civil Claims

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what recent representations she has received on the inability of people to pursue civil claims because of the lack of public funding for the service; and if he will make a statement. [14671]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Neither the Department nor the Legal Services Commission is aware of any case, within the scope of the scheme, where an applicant has passed the statutory tests of means and merits but has been unable to get help because funds are not available.

Government Information

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions the conclusions of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration on a question of disclosure of information under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information have not been accepted by the Government in the last 10 years. [16866]

Mr. Wills: One.

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the value of fairly traded (a) tea and (b) coffee used in his Department in each of the last five years. [17558]

Mr. Wills: We do not specify to our catering contractors in contractual terms what supplies must be purchased and contractors are required to provide a service which represents good value for money. We have been able to establish, however, that in the Court Service at least half of the catering contractors supply fairly traded tea and coffee although this is not always branded as such. We are unable to quantify the value.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what fairly traded products, other than tea and coffee, have been purchased by his Department in each of the last five years; and what was their value. [17559]

Mr. Wills: It has not been possible to identify the purchase of any fairly traded products, other than tea or coffee, either directly or indirectly through our third party suppliers, in the last five years. However, in accordance with the policy across Government, we will take every opportunity to encourage the use of Fair Trade products through our procurement activities and in particular during the course of the review of the arrangements for contracted catering services in the Court Service that is planned to take place during the next 12 months.

Jury Service

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people were (a) called for jury service and (b) served on juries in the most recent year for which figures are available. [17145]

Mr. Wills: For the period January to December this year, 579,033 summonses for jury service were issued, to supply around 187,000 potential jurors to the courts. There are no figures available on how many people actually served on juries. However, a recent Home Office research project confirmed that, in a sample of 50,000 people summoned for jury service in June and July 1999, only one-third was available to attend. About one-third of these had their service deferred until a later date. Of the remaining two-thirds, 13 per cent. were ineligible, disqualified or excused as of right, 38 per cent. were excused and 15 per cent. either failed to attend on the day or their summonses were returned as "undelivered".

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what proportion of those named day parliamentary written questions to her Department that received a holding answer between 15 October and 5 November received the substantive answer (a) within three parliamentary days, (b) within seven parliamentary days, (c) within 10 parliamentary days, (d) within 15 parliamentary days and (e) over 15 parliamentary days after the holding answer was issued; [13320]

(2) how many named day parliamentary written questions were tabled to her Department between 15 October and 5 November; and what proportion of these have received holding answers. [13301]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 16 November 2001]: According to departmental records, 24 named day written questions were tabled to the Lord Chancellor's Department during the relevant period. Of these, 12 received holding answers. Of the 12 which received holding answers, six received a substantive answer within three parliamentary days, five received a substantive answer within seven parliamentary days and one received a substantive answer within 10 parliamentary days. None received a substantive answer beyond 10 parliamentary days from the holding answer.

Lay Magistracy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will state the (a) cost in 2001–02, (b) objectives and (c) components of the national strategy to raise the profile of the lay magistracy and encourage recruitment from all parts of the community. [15031]

Mr. Wills: The proposals for the national strategy are being developed. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor hopes to be able to announce the details of the strategy early next year and it is not anticipated that there will be any costs incurred during 2001–02.

The objectives of the strategy will include: to raise the profile of the magistracy; to encourage more people to apply to be magistrates, from as wide a cross-section of the community as possible; and also to make employers understand the benefits to them, in terms of transferable skills, of releasing workers to be magistrates.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the public service agreement target for increasing public confidence in the fairness of the criminal justice system. [17063]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government have a comprehensive programme to improve the criminal justice system and thereby promote confidence. It will measure the confidence of the public generally in the following areas: the treatment of victims and witnesses; efficiency; speed and the treatment of defendants. We will also be measuring the confidence of ethnic minorities alone in these areas. Public confidence in the system also depends on the public's understanding of the system. Initiatives are under way to improve understanding and to demystify the system.

Magistrates (Huntingdon)

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people applied to become magistrates in Huntingdon in each year from 1996; and how many were women. [17478]

Mr. Wills: The information sought is provided in the table.

Breakdown of applications to the Hungtingdonshire bench

Number

Year	Men	Women	Total
1996	1	3	4
1997	15	18	33

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his responsibilities in respect of the Parliamentary Ombudsman. [17731]

Mr. Leslie: The Parliamentary Commission for Administration is an Officer of the House of Commons, appointed by Her Majesty the Queen, and independent of Government. He reports to Parliament.

As Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, I have responsibility for taking forward the Government's commitment to reform the Parliamentary Ombudsman and the other existing public sector ombudsmen moving towards a new unified and flexible ombudsman body; and for other general issues relating to the Parliamentary Ombudsman.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

GM Foodstuffs

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of (a) pigmeat, (b) sheepmeat and (c) beef products consumed in the UK was from animals reared on foodstuffs containing genetically modified ingredients in the last 12 months. [8290]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 October 2001]: The Government do not keep statistics on meat and meat products consumed in the UK from animals reared on feed containing GM ingredients.

Foot and Mouth

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list by county (a) the total amount, (b) the number of individual payments and (c) the highest and lowest payments made to farmers in respect of foot and mouth disease. [7653]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 October 2001]: The figures requested are shown in the table. The information on the counties relates to the address to which compensation has been paid; it may not be the address of the premises where the stock was culled.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in how many infected premises in Powys in the foot and mouth outbreak samples from animals diagnosed as having foot and mouth disease were taken and tested in a laboratory for foot and mouth disease virus or antibodies; how many of those samples proved positive; and, where samples were not taken, what were the reasons for samples not being collected. [12759]

Mr. Morley: There have been 70 foot and mouth (FMD) infected premises recorded in Powys. Of the 63 premises where samples were taken for laboratory testing, 44 were considered positive for FMD. In the early stages of the outbreak laboratory resources were limited. In cases where clear clinical signs of FMD were observed and where disease had already been confirmed in the locality, it is possible that samples were not requested.

Note: A negative laboratory result does not mean that infection was absent. Each case is confirmed on the basis of a clinical diagnosis of FMD by the vet on farm, supported by convincing clinical evidence.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many compensation payments in the foot and mouth epidemic were (a) over £1 million, (b) between £500,000 and £1 million, (c) between £250,000 and £500,000 and (d) between £100,000 and £250,000. [15583]

Mr. Morley: As of 20 November, the following payments have been made:

(a) 41 payments over £1 million;

(b) 278 payments between £500,000 and £1 million;

(c) 832 payments between £250,000 and £500,000; and

(d) 1,633 payments between £100,000 and £250,000.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cases of fraudulent claims have been proven against farmers during the outbreak of foot and mouth disease. [15366]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 November 2001]: So far as claims made to the Department are concerned, a number are under investigation but none has so far been proven.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list by county the number of cases of resistance by farmers to culling during the foot and mouth outbreak which led directly to a spread of the virus among livestock. [15036]

Mr. Morley: This information is not available. What is clear is that in some cases the disputes led to delays which in turn may have led to further spread of the disease. I refer to the comments made by my right hon.

Friend the Secretary of State during the Second Reading debate on the Animal Health Bill on 12 November 2001, Official Report, columns 577–78.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish the findings on the source of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in the United Kingdom. [16717]

Mr. Morley: A report by the Chief Veterinary Officer will be published. This will be submitted to the independent inquiry, headed by Dr. Anderson, which is looking into the 'lessons to be learned' aspect of the outbreak. It will then be considered as part of the inquiry's overall work. The recommendations of the inquiry are expected to be published during summer 2002.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent progress her Department has made with the disposal of carcases infected with foot and mouth disease. [18021]

Mr. Morley: There have been no outbreaks of foot and mouth disease since 30 September so there have been no infected carcases since then for disposal.

Freedom of Information Act

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what date her Department established a working group of officials to prepare her Department for the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and on what dates this committee has met since it was set up. [14771]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (Mr. Wills) on 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 366W.

The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs has established a working group to prepare for the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. So far the group has met three times, on 21 August 2001, 2 October 2001 and 13 November 2001.

Low Emission Fuels

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she last met representatives of the distribution industry to discuss the use of low emission fuels. [15524]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: My colleagues the Secretaries of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions and for Trade and Industry, as well as their respective Ministers, are in regular contact with representatives of the oil and motor industries to discuss the production, distribution and promotion of low emission fuels. My Department also has a keen interest in this area, because of the environmental benefits that cleaner fuels can offer. My ministerial colleagues and I are always prepared, in principle, to meet with representatives from relevant industries to discuss ways of reducing harmful emissions.

Landfill Directive

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her plans for meeting the requirements of the Landfill Directive; and if she will make a statement. [15497]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: Consultation on a set of draft regulations to implement the technical and regulatory requirements of the Landfill Directive in England and Wales closed on 26 October 2001. The Government will be laying regulations before Parliament shortly.

We have also consulted on a tradeable landfill permit scheme to implement the targets in Article 5 of the directive for the diversion of biodegradable municipal waste from landfill and will bring forward primary legislation to introduce such a scheme as soon as parliamentary time allows.

Belfast City Council

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will meet representatives of Belfast city council to discuss sustainable development and procurement policies. [15527]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: Government procurement has considerable potential to support sustainable development goals. A high level cross-Government group is being set up to consider how to generate greater action across Government and make recommendations to Ministers. Progress by Belfast city council, and others in the private and public sector in utilising procurement to support sustainable development goals will no doubt be of interest to this group.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of Belfast city council's procurement and recycling policy. [16748]

Mr. Meacher: None. This is a devolved matter for the Northern Ireland Assembly.

Green Ministers

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she has met Green Ministers from other Government Departments since May. [15517]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment, in his role as chairman of ENV(G)—the ministerial sub-committee of Green Ministers—has met Green Ministers from other Departments once since May. The first meeting of ENV(G) took place on 25 October 2001. I have not met Ministers from other Departments specifically in their capacity as Green Ministers.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) plans and (b) targets she has agreed with Green Ministers for each of the next three years. [15518]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The Green Ministers' work programme was set out in "Greening Government: the second annual report of the Green Ministers Committee" published in November 2000. This report included a target for all Departments to contribute towards the Government estate target of a 1 per cent. per annum on-going reduction in greenhouse gas emissions from buildings.

Since publication of the report, Green Ministers have agreed cross-government targets for water usage and renewable energy as follows:

For offices in metered buildings where the Department is sole occupier or is billed the water services charges; all Departments should achieve a maximum level of water consumption equivalent to 11 cubic metres per person (fulltime equivalent staff) by 31 March 2002, and a further 30 per cent. reduction over the next two years, achieving a level of 7.7 cubic metres by 31 March 2004.

All Departments will ensure that, by 31 March 2003, at least 5 per cent. of their electricity comes from renewable sources that are exempt from the climate change levy, or from self-generation, provided this does not entail excessive cost. This will rise to at least 10 per cent. supply from such sources by 31 March 2008, but will be reviewed after 31 March 2003 to take account of market conditions following the introduction of the renewables obligation. The review of 2003 will include consideration of increasing or bringing forward the target.

Further plans for Green Ministers are set out in the third annual report on greening government published today.

Swine Fever

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what standard operating procedures and contingency plans have been established by her Department based upon the experiences of the outbreak of swine fever in 2000. [15369]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The amendment of operational instructions and contingency plans following the outbreak of swine fever in 2000 was interrupted by the outbreak of FMD in 2001. The action following both outbreaks will now be carried forward in parallel.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish her Department's contingency plan for combating future outbreaks of (a) foot and mouth disease and (b) swine fever. [16037]

Mr. Morley: The EU agreed foot and mouth contingency plan (updated in July 2000) was placed in the Library of the House in May 2001. It has also been published on the DEFRA website at: http://defraweb/animalh/diseases/control/contingency/index.htm.

A copy of the classical swine fever contingency plan (most recently updated in September 2001) has also been placed in the Library of the House. The swine fever contingency plan has not been published on the website but it is very similar to the foot and mouth disease plan. We will publish it on the newly developed "Disease surveillance and Control" area of the DEFRA website soon.

British Beef

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her French counterpart on the imposition of a ban on the import of British beef into France during November; if she intends to raise the matter at the forthcoming Council of European Ministers meeting; and if she will make a statement. [16033]

Mr. Morley: The UK is not directly affected by action taken by the French trade in respect of beef imports from other member states, since France still refuses to accept imports of British beef under the Date Based Export Scheme. The matter is now before the European Court of Justice, which is expected to rule on it shortly. At the meeting of the Agriculture Council on 20 November the European Commission reported that it was examining the compatibility with EU law of the action by the French trade.

BSE

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what targets she has set to remove the backlog of cattle due for slaughter under the over-30-month-scheme. [16393]

Mr. Morley: Waiting times for over-30-month scheme abattoirs vary across the country. Some are shorter than at this time in previous years. Now that the OTMS abattoirs are fully operational again farmers should not have to wait more than two to four weeks. At present no special measures are required. The Rural Payments Agency will continue to monitor waiting times and optimise slaughter capacity.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many incidences of BSE there have been in the last 12 months in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France and (c) Germany. [16718]

Mr. Morley: In the last 12 months there have been 1,138 cases of BSE in the United Kingdom, 145 in France and 129 in Germany. The figures for France and Germany are based on reports by the Commission. All the figures cover the period between 31 October 2000 and 31 October 2001.

Flood Defences

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has for flood protection in the Newark area. [16259]

Mr. Morley: Operational responsibility for flood alleviation measures rests with the local operating authorities, namely the Environment Agency, Internal Drainage Boards and local councils. DEFRA provides grant for flood defence capital works, and associated studies, which meet essential technical, economic and environmental criteria and achieve an appropriate priority score.

I understand that the Environment Agency is considering the feasibility of capital works in the Brewers Wharf area of Newark, but has yet to make plans for the timing of any such works. The Agency will be developing a strategy for the River Trent within the next 12 to 18 months. The completed strategy will inform the agency's plans for flood management between Stoke on Trent and Newark. A similar strategy will be prepared for the tidal reach of the river in due course.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government have made of flood defence preparations for those properties most at risk in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [17278]

Mr. Morley: Flood defence is a fully devolved function and my Department has policy responsibility only for England.

Defences that were damaged in last year's floods have been repaired and reinstated so that communities are now at least as well defended as, and often better than, they were before the flooding. Work on long-term improvement to flood defences is under way using the increased funding that DEFRA has made available to the flood and coastal defence operating authorities, including provision for accelerating river flood defence works. Tried and tested arrangements remain in place for responding to flooding emergencies. The effectiveness of these arrangements were demonstrated by the response to last year's flooding which were underpinned by emergency exercises carried out in previous months, the requirement for which was contained in this Department's high level targets for flood and coastal defence.

My Department has commissioned independent research on those assets at risk from flooding and coastal erosion. The outcome was included in a report on "National assessment of assets at risk from Flooding and Coastal Erosion" in September. One output was a set of maps showing current flood defence standards. This report will inform the assessment by operating authorities of local flood risk.

Another of our high level targets requires operating authorities to carry out inspections of flood and coastal defences; the Environment Agency is required to collect these assessments into a national report which assesses flood risk. I will publish this report when complete.

My Department, in partnership with the Environment Agency, is establishing a national flood and coastal defence database which will contain information on defences and assets at risk of flooding and coastal erosion. The database will start to become operational in spring 2002 but full operability depends on completion of information gathering, validation and electronic recording for the vast number of flood and coastal defences.

Energy Efficiency (Government Departments)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans there are to improve the energy efficiency of Government Departments. [16745]

Mr. Meacher: I am replying as the Department has overall responsibility for reporting on the energy efficiency of the Government estate.

At the end of our 10-year campaign to improve energy consumption by 20 per cent., last year we set a target of reducing our CO_2 emissions by 1 per cent. against 1999–2000 levels. We will report on our first year's performance against this next year. We are also developing new realistic but challenging targets for reducing our energy consumption. These will be based on an assessment of the estate's performance against national standards, which will be available next year.

I expect to make an announcement about the estate's energy efficiency performance over the past decade shortly.

HFCs (Government Buildings)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much money has been spent on HFC driven machinery in Government buildings in each of the last three years. [16739]

Mr. Morley: No central record is kept of plant and equipment installed in the Department. The Department is, though, well aware that in October 2000 regulations came into force which confirmed the total ban on the use of CFCs (Chloro Fluoro Carbons) and introduced a ban on HCFCs (Hydro Chloro Fluoro Carbons) in new equipment from 1 January 2001. New mediums have been introduced including HFCs (Hydro Fluoro Carbons). We modify our plant to accept this new medium when major maintenance work is undertaken or at other appropriate points in their life cycles. Our facility manager and design consultants are well aware of the regulations and specify new equipment accordingly.

Combined Heat and Power Strategy

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the consultation on the combined heat and power strategy will be completed; and when the final combined heat and power strategy will be (a) published and (b) implemented; and if she will make a statement. [16790]

Mr. Meacher: We will be issuing a draft Government strategy for consultation around the turn of the year. The statutory consultation will run for the full 12-week period with the final CHP strategy document to be published soon after that. A timetable for implementation of the key measures will be set out in the strategy subject to consultation.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on Government plans to encourage the use of combined heat and power. [16738]

Mr. Meacher: The Department is developing, in close collaboration with DTI and other Departments, a draft CHP strategy, which will set out the measures needed to achieve the CHP target of at least 10,000 mega watts of Good Quality CHP by 2010. We aim to issue the strategy for consultation around the turn of the year.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many letters she has received in 2001 on animal welfare from residents of the Buckingham constituency. [16907]

Mr. Morley: There are no statistics available on the amount of letters received by the Secretary of State from members of the public on a constituency basis. However, this Department has received 26 letters about animal welfare from residents of Buckinghamshire.

Farm Visits

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to visit the Buckingham constituency to meet farmers. [16901]

Margaret Beckett: I have no immediate plans to visit the hon. Member's constituency.

Meat Imports

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the amount of illegal meat imports which entered the UK in each of the last three years. [16948]

Mr. Morley: We have no reliable estimate of the amount of meat illegally imported into the UK.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the tonnage of meat that was imported into the UK (a) legally and (b) illegally in each of the last three years. [16889]

Mr. Morley: The table sets out the tonnage of all meat legally imported into the UK in the last three years for which figures are available. We have no reliable estimate of the amount of meat illegally imported.

UK imports of meat and meat products (1999–2000[1])

Agricultural Wages Board

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to reform the agricultural wages board. [16836]

Mr. Morley: Following a quinquennial review of the board's operation, the Government announced on 20 September 2000 their intention to keep the Agricultural Wages Board for a further five years. The announcement also confirmed that the Government would be considering detailed changes to modernise aspects of the board's operation.

Consideration is now being given to the use of a Regulatory Reform Order to streamline and modernise the regulatory framework under which the board operates. An essential part of this process is extensive consultation with interested parties. As a first step my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Lord Whitty, will be meeting the chairman of the board and the leaders of the two sides.

Hunting

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which areas of England and Wales can resume hunting and at what date; what precautions they must take; and what the timetable is for resumption of hunting in all other areas. [R] [16758]

Alun Michael [holding answer 21 November 2001]: Hunting (except the hunting of deer) will be able to resume in foot and mouth disease free counties of England and Wales from 17 December under a temporary system of permits issued by DEFRA local animal health offices. I published details of the system and the Veterinary Risk Assessment on 15 November and placed copies in the House of Commons Library . The list of foot and mouth disease free counties is updated weekly and can be viewed on the Department's website http://www.defra.gov.uk/. The Veterinary Risk Assessment is that hunting should be permissible in other areas once those areas also achieve foot and mouth disease free status.

Restrictions on hunting arise from the need to prevent further outbreaks of foot and mouth disease, which remains a central concern of the Government. We also want to enable the countryside to return to normal as quickly as possible. To keep the balance right we are allowing hunting to resume to the extent that is consistent with the Veterinary Risk Assessment and with conditions that reflect the assessment.

The precautions to be taken when different forms of hunting resume are outlined in proposed permit conditions, which have been placed in the Library of the House and are also available on the DEFRA website. I have invited interested parties to let us have any comments on the proposed permit conditions by 7 December. I have already met representative groups to explain the background and to discuss the arrangements.

Household Waste (Needles)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice her Department issues to (a) local authorities and (b) other parties on the disposal of household waste including needles used by diabetics in landfill sites; and if she will make a statement. [17461]

Mr. Meacher: Where people regularly self-inject at home, used syringes should not be disposed of in the domestic waste. Disposal arrangements should be made with local hospitals, health centres, clinics, local authorities or pharmacists. Syringes disposed of via these routes will be incinerated rather than sent to landfill. Guidance on the safe disposal of clinical waste has been issued by the Health and Safety Commission. The Environment Agency has issued supplementary guidance on managing waste from healthcare activities.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the potential hazards to refuse collectors posed by the inclusion of needles used by diabetics in household refuse; and if she will make a statement. [17457]

Mr. Meacher: My Department has made no such assessment. Where people regularly self-inject at home, used syringes should not be disposed of in the domestic waste. Disposal arrangements for used syringes can be made with local hospitals, health centres, clinics, local authorities or pharmacists. Syringes disposed of via these routes will be incinerated rather than sent to landfill. Under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Human Health Regulations 1999, employers are required to assess and adequately control the risks to employees from clinical waste. Guidance on good practice is contained in the HSE publication "Safe Disposal of Clinical Waste".

Regulatory Impact Assessment Costs

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the gross costs were (1) of the regulatory impact assessment for (a) the Prohibition of Fishing with Multiple Trawls Order 2001, (b) the Specified Risk Material (Amendment) (England) Regulations 2000, (c) the Pesticides (Maximum Residue Levels in Crops, Food and Feeding Stuffs) (England and Wales) (Amendment) Regulations 2000, (d) the Rendering (Fluid Treatment) (England) Order 2001, (e) the BSE Monitoring (England) Regulations 2001, (f) the Medicines (Products for Animal Use-Fees) (Amendment) Regulations 2001 and (g) the Animal By-Products (Amendment) (England) Order 2001; [17694]

(2) of the regulatory impact assessment for (a) the Air Quality Limits Values Regulations 2001, (b) the Fishing Vessels (Code of Practice for the Safety of Small Fishing Vessels) Regulations 2001, (c) the Climate Change Agreements (Eligible Facilities) Regulations 2001 and (d) the Biocidal Products Regulations 2001; [17692]

(3) of the regulatory impact assessment for (a) the Pet Travel Scheme (Pilot Arrangements) (England) (Amendment) Order 2001, (b) the Pig Industry Development Scheme 2000 (confirmation) Order 2001, (c) the Sea Fish (Specified Sea Area) (Regulation of Nets and Other Fishing Gear) Order 2001 and (d) the Home-Grown Cereals Authority Levy (Variation) Scheme (Approval) Order 2001. [17693]

Mr. Morley: These costs are shown in the published regulatory impact assessments which are in the House Libraries.

Livestock Markets

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when livestock markets will reopen for the sale of (a) sheep and (b) cattle; and if she will make a statement. [17711]

Mr. Morley: Livestock markets in Scotland have reopened subject to strict conditions. The decision to reopen livestock markets for either sheep or cattle in England or Wales will be taken in the light of veterinary and scientific advice on progress towards eradicating the foot and mouth disease. It is hoped that it may be possible to open some markets in the early part of next year.

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many weeks after the last confirmed case of foot and mouth disease will livestock markets be reopened for the sale of (a) sheep and (b) cattle. [17572]

Mr. Morley: The decision to reopen livestock markets for sheep or cattle will be made in the light of scientific and veterinary advice on progress with eradication of foot and mouth disease. It is not possible to state a precise period which will need to elapse after the last case.

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what contingency plans she has made for permanently closing livestock markets and compensating their owners. [17571]

Mr. Morley: There are no plans to close livestock markets permanently.

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what notice period will be given for the re-opening of livestock markets for the sale of (a) sheep and (b) cattle. [17573]

Mr. Morley: In reaching a decision on the re-opening of livestock markets, account will be taken of the need to give farmers, auctioneers and other interested parties as much notice as possible.

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the restrictions and regulations that will be in force on livestock markets when they re-open which were not in force prior to the outbreak of foot and mouth disease. [17574]

Mr. Morley: When livestock markets reopen strict biosecurity provisions will be laid down which individual markets will have to meet before they will be permitted to operate. These matters are under active discussion between the Department and representatives of the interested parties.

Animal Movements

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what restrictions her Department has kept in force in the movement under licence into Northumberland from Scotland of cattle not intended for slaughter; and what the reason is for these restrictions. [17228]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 22 November 2001]: With effect from 20 November 2001, Northumberland has been reclassified for the purposes of foot and mouth disease controls from 'High Risk' to 'At Risk'. This means that under the Animal Movements Licensing Scheme cattle may move into Northumberland from 'FMD Free' counties under a licence issued by a local authority subject to prior veterinary inspection. All counties in Scotland are designated as 'FMD Free'. The licence system is in place to minimise the risk of spreading FMD.

Farming Sub-tenants

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will take steps for protect security of tenure of farming sub-tenants following the case of Barratt v. Morgan; [16864]

(2) if she will introduce regulations to protect from eviction farming sub-tenants affected by the action of collective landlords and tenants following the case of Barrett v. Morgan. [16865]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Following the House of Lords judgment in the Barrett v. Morgan case the then Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food consulted on whether the Lord Chancellor should be invited to use the powers available under the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 to make regulations to protect the position of sub-tenants. The general consensus among the organisations consulted was that the Barrett v. Morgan judgment does not significantly further weaken the position of sub-tenants.

In the light of the responses received we decided not to ask the Lord Chancellor to make regulations.

If, following the Barrett v. Morgan ruling, it becomes apparent that collusion between landlords and tenants poses a serious threat to a significant number of sub-tenants we will review the decision not to regulate further.

Public Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list those public bodies (1) which are the responsibility of her Department and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000; [17586]

(2) to which her Department appoints members and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000. [17585]

Mr. Morley: Public Bodies 2000 sets out information on non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs), certain public corporations (including nationalised industries) and NHS bodies. There are four types of NDPB: executive NDPBs; advisory NDPBs; tribunal NDPBs; and boards of visitors to penal establishments. The next edition will be published around the end of the year. Information about task forces, annual reports and ad hoc advisory groups is set out in an annual report, published by the Cabinet Office and this publication may be accessed via the Cabinet Office's website http://www.official-documents.co.uk/document/caboff/pb00/pb00.htm.

Copies of the annual report on task forces and similar bodies have also been placed in the Library of the House and the annual report is being made available on the Cabinet Office's website.

Public bodies now the responsibility of my Department, which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000 are as follows:

Public Corporations

British Waterways Board

Executive NDPBs

Countryside Agency

English Nature

Environment Agency

Joint Nature Conservation Committee

National Forest Company

Advisory NDPBs

Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment

Advisory Committee on Consumer Products and the Environment

Advisory Committee on Hazardous Substances

Advisory Committee on Packaging

Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment

Airborne Particles Expert Group

Committee on Products and Processes for Use in Public Water Supply

Darwin Advisory Committee

Expert Group on Cryptosporidium in Water Supplies

Expert Panel on Air Quality Standards

Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB

Inland Waterways Amenity Advisory Council

National Expert Group on Transboundary Air Pollution

Pesticide Residues Committee

Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee

Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution

Sustainable Development Commission

Sustainable Development Education Panel

Veterinary Residues Committee

Water Regulations Advisory Committee

Zoos Forum

Tribunal NDPBs

Commons Commissioners.

Local Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list those local bodies which were set up under legislation which is the responsibility of her Department and its predecessors since May 1997. [17587]

Mr. Morley: No such local bodies have been set up since May 1997 under legislation which is the responsibility of my Department or its predecessors.

Veterinary Medicines

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Veterinary Medicines Directorate intends to publish the minutes of the Advisory Group on Veterinary Residues (1995 to 2000). [16695]

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to ensure that the minutes of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate's Advisory Group on Veterinary Medicines will be available under the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [17099]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The Veterinary Medicines Directorate has received representations about publishing the minutes of the Advisory Group on Veterinary Residues. Some of the deliberations of the Advisory Group involved consideration of confidential matters. The Veterinary Medicines Directorate is considering how the minutes might be released while maintaining confidentiality.

Devonport Royal Dockyard Ltd.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to make a decision on the application from Devonport Royal Dockyard Ltd. to increase the level of radioactive waste the company is permitted to discharge. [17336]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993, in England and Wales, the Environment Agency has the responsibility for considering applications to dispose of radioactive waste. The Secretaries of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and for Health have certain powers under the Act to decide applications themselves or to give directions to the agency. The Secretaries of State have received requests to use their statutory powers in relation to the application by Devonport Royal Dockyard Ltd. These requests are currently under consideration and a decision will be reached as soon as possible.

The Environment Agency has published its proposed decision on the application. This will not, however, be implemented before the Secretaries of State have decided whether to intervene.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to WPQ numbers (a) 12430 and (b) 12431. [17828]

Mr. Meacher: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to him on 19 November 2001, Official Report, columns 66–67W.

Bovine TB

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the action the Government are taking on bovine TB with special reference to the dairy herds in Herefordshire. [18080]

Mr. Morley: TB testing has resumed in those counties in England that have foot and mouth disease free status and where resource can be released from foot and mouth disease work. It has restarted in Herefordshire and is being prioritised based on veterinary risk assessment. Extra staff have been allocated to the work but it will take time to clear the backlog and get back to normal patterns of TB testing.

So far testing has not revealed any unusual incidence in the number of TB breakdowns in dairy herds in Herefordshire. However it must be borne in mind that during the last nine months reactors have only been revealed where tests have been carried out as a result of slaughterhouse cases or where LVI practices have managed to do some of the backlog of high priority testing.

Pesticide Residues

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many 250 g samples of withdrawal diet were obtained from the feeding system for poultry by category in the United Kingdom in (i) 1998, (ii) 1999, (iii) 2000 and (v) 2001; and what proportion was contaminated. [17100]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Poultry feed is sampled as part of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate's (VMD's) Statutory National Surveillance Scheme, in accordance with the requirements of EU Directive 96/23. Samples of feed are tested for banned hormones β agonists and Annexe IV substances, which includes dimetridazole. Sampling is not restricted to withdrawal diet.

The results show that in 1998, 11.3 per cent.; in 1999, 0.4 per cent. and 2000, 2.6 per cent. of poultry feed samples contained residues of dimetridazole. Sampling so far in 2001 has found no residues of dimetridazole.

The results for 1998–2000 were fully reported in the relevant Annual Report on Surveillance for Veterinary Medicine Residues. Results for 2001 are reported in the VMD's MAVIS publication, which is regularly updated on the VMD website.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth) of 29 October 2001, Official Report, columns 543–44W, if she will list the level and type of pesticides that tested above levels deemed safe for human consumption in (a) 1998, (b) 1999, (c) 2000 and (d) 2001 to date. [17301]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Full details of all the samples containing residues above the Maximum Residue Level (MRL) and those where a consumer risk assessment indicated that intakes for certain consumer groups could exceed acceptable intakes are contained in the following reports:

1998: Working Party on Pesticide Residues (WPPR) Annual Report: PB 4546A and B.

1999: Working Party on Pesticide Residues (WPPR) Annual Report: PB 5181 A and B.

2000: Pesticide Residues Committee (PRC) Annual Report.

2001: the results for the first quarter were published in August this year. They are available on the PRC website, at www.pesticides.gov.uk/committees/PRC/prc.htm. The WPPR and PRC reports are also available on this website and copies are being placed in the Library of the House.

An MRL is not a consumer safety level as such. It is based on residue levels which result from the approved use of a pesticide (i.e. Good Agricultural Practice; GAP) and are set at a level which is as low as possible while accommodating the GAP. However, MRLs are always set on the basis of consumer risk assessments. MRLs are never higher and are generally much lower than the maximum residue concentration considered to be acceptable.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth) of 29 October 2001, Official Report, columns 543–44W, what proportion of (a) vegetables, (b) fruit, (c) cereal products and (d) meat products available for consumption in the United Kingdom was sampled for pesticide residues in (i) 1998, (ii) 1999, (iii) 2000 and (iv) 2001 to date. [17300]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Details of the samples analysed under the Pesticide Residues Committee surveillance programme are contained in the following reports:

1998: Working Party on Pesticide Residues (WPPR) Annual Report: PB 4546A and B.

1999: Working Party on Pesticide Residues (WPPR) Annual Report: PB 5181 A and B.

2000 Pesticide Residues Committee (PRC) Annual Report.

2001: the results for the first quarter were published in August this year.

They are available on the PRC website, at www.pesticides.gov.uk/committees/PRC/prc.htm. The WPPR and PRC reports are also available on this website and copies are being placed in the Library of the House. It is not possible to relate the samples collected to the proportion of UK foodstuffs consumed since the size of the consignment to which the test result relates is not recorded.

The safety of any pesticide residue in a foodstuff depends not only on its concentration in that foodstuff but also on the consumption of that food by different groups of consumers. Potential intakes of the same residues from other foodstuffs also have to be taken into account. Consumer risk assessments are conducted in relation to all samples tested where a residue is found exceeding the relevant MRL.

Full details of all samples containing residues above the MRL and those where a consumer risk assessment indicated that intakes for certain consumer groups could exceed acceptable levels are contained in the annual report of the Pesticide Residues Committee (PRC) for 2000, copies of which are available in the Library of the House, and in the first PRC quarterly report for the year 2001. Copies of these reports are available on the PRC website at www.pesticides.gov.uk/committees/PRC/prc.htm.

It is not possible to express these findings as a proportion of UK foodstuffs consumed since the size of the consignment to which the test samples relate is not recorded.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth), on 29 October 2001, Official Report, columns 543–44W, what proportion of (a) vegetables, (b) fruit, (c) cereal product and (d) meat products available for consumption in the United Kingdom were found to contain pesticide residues above a level deemed safe for human consumption in the last 12 months. [17229]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Controls on pesticide residues in food are based on a system of statutory maximum residue levels (MRLs). MRLs are set for particular pesticide active ingredients on particular foodstuffs. MRLs are not safety levels but are established on the basis of the approved use of the active substance. They are generally set at levels lower than is necessary for safety purposes to ensure that only the minimum necessary pesticide dose is applied.

The safety of any pesticide residue in a foodstuff depends not only on its concentration in that foodstuff but also on the consumption of that food by different groups of consumers. Potential intakes of the same residues from other foodstuffs also have to be taken into account. Consumer risk assessments are conducted in relation to all samples tested where a residue is found exceeding the relevant MRL.

Full details of all samples containing residues above the MRL and those where a consumer risk assessment indicated that intakes for certain consumer groups could exceed acceptable levels are contained in the annual report of the Pesticide Residues Committee (PRC) for 2000, copies of which are available in the Library of the House, and in the first PRC quarterly report for the year 2001. Copies of these reports are available on the PRC website at www.pesticides.gov.uk/committees/PRC/prc.htm.

It is not possible to express these findings as a proportion of UK foodstuffs consumed since the size of the consignment to which the test samples relate is not recorded.

Poultry (Medicinal Residues)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of poultry in the United Kingdom were slaughtered before the end of the medication withdrawal period for (a) nicarbazin, (b) lasalocid and (c) dimetridazole in (i) 1998, (ii) 1999, (iii) 2000, (iv) 2001 and (v) November and December of (i), (ii) and (iii). [16972]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: DEFRA do not collect these statistics.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the permitted concentrations of (a) nicarbazin, (b) lasalocid and (c) dimetridazole residues in poultry are which were deemed safe for human consumption in the United Kingdom (i) 1998, (ii) 1999, (iii) 2000 and (iv) 2001; [16973]

(2) how many poultry samples by category were and what proportion of slaughtered poultry was found to contain residues of (a) nicarbazin, (b) lasalocid and (c) dimetridazole above the level deemed suitable for human consumption in the United Kingdom in (i) 1998, (ii) 1999, (iii) 2000 and (iv) 2001. [16974]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The Joint FAO/WHO Expert Committee on Food Additives (JECFA) has set an Acceptable Daily Intake (ADI) for nicarbazin of 0–400 µg/kg of body weight—24,000 µg for a person weighing 60 kg. This represents the amount of nicarbazin that could be consumed every day over a lifetime without harm to human health. A single exposure over this amount would be unlikely to be harmful.

Lasalocid has an ADI of 10 µg/kg of body weight, 600 µg for a person weighing 60 kg. Again, a single exposure over this amount would be unlikely to be harmful.

Dimetridazole is not permitted for use in food producing animals. The advice of toxicologists is that it is not possible to identify a "safe" residue concentration.

Poultry are sampled as part of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate's (VMD's) Statutory National Surveillance Scheme, in accordance with the requirements of EC Directive 96/23. The sample numbers tested for nicarbazin, lasalocid and dimetridazole over the period are given in the table.

No samples of poultry have been found to contain residues of dimetridazole in the period. Residues of nicarbazin and lasalocid have been found in samples of UK poultry, but toxicologists' advice has confirmed that none posed a risk to consumer safety. The presence of nicarbazin in poultry products is a food contaminant issue, rather than a food safety issue.

The results for 1998–2000 were fully reported in the relevant Annual Report on Surveillance for Veterinary Medicine Residues.

Number of samples of different types of poultry tested for residues of veterinary medicines

Residue/poultry sampled	1998	1999	2000	2001[1]

[1] The 2001 figures are the number of samples that are planned to have been collected by the end of the year's programme

Poultry (Finisher Feed)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of poultry was slaughtered in the United Kingdom before the withdrawal period for finisher feed was completed in November and December of (a) 1998, (b) 1999 and (c) 2000. [17103]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: DEFRA do not collect these statistics.

Ovine TSE

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how much funding was set aside to test for transmissible spongiform encephalopathies in sheep in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02; [16970]

(2) what proportion of funding for testing for transmissible spongiform encephalopathy in sheep for (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02 related to scrapie. [16971]

Mr. Morley [holding answers 23 November 2001]: The cost of surveillance of TSEs, including scrapie, in sheep is as follows: (i) 1999–2000 £442,000; (ii) 2000–01 £205,000; and (iii) 2001–02 £212,000. Costs for 2001–02 are estimates only.

In the new year the Department will be launching an abattoir survey to test for TSEs, including scrapie, some 23,000 sheep aged over 18 months. This part of an EU-wide programme designed to give information on the incidence of scrapie and other TSEs in the European Union. The total cost will be around £5 million.

Ovine BSE

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 972W, what was (a) the number of scrapie-resistant sheep that were infected with BSE over the last 12 months, (b) the proportion of sheep deemed necessary for infectivity of BSE in sheep to be confirmed and (c) the proportion of sheep that have tested positive for TSEs in the last 12 months. [17303]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The information is as follows:

(a) Because of the long incubation period of TSEs, experiments in progress pan more than one year. There are four experiments in progress in which sheep of genotypes fully resistant to scrapie (ARR/ARR) have been challenged with BSE. 60 sheep of this genotype are being used in these experiments, along with sheep of different genotypes which are partially or fully susceptible to scrapie.

(b) As the true prevalence of scrapie in sheep in the UK is unknown, various assumptions have been made to calculate how many sheep would need to be tested to determine whether BSE was present. On the assumption that the true number of scrapie cases per year is 5,000 and that 0.1 per cent. of the scrapie suspects might be BSE, the SEAC subgroup which examined surveillance requirements, and whose report was published in April 1999, estimated that 2,253 scrapie suspects would need to be tested to be certain of detecting at least one case of BSE.

(c) Between November 2000 and end of September 2001, 465 sheep scrapie suspects have bene tested at VLA. 284 were found to be positive for scrapie.

Correspondence Unit

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many members of staff work in the correspondence unit of her Department; and if she will make a statement. [17723]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The Department's correspondence section is currently comprised of nine permanent staff and 10 temporary staff. The size of the section has increased substantially in recent months to deal with the sheer volume of letters received during the foot and mouth disease outbreak and since the creation of DEFRA.

Scrapie

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 972W, how many representations she has received (a) from stakeholders on the Animal Health Bill between its publication and 20 November and (b) on the Government's National Scrapie Plan between July 2000 and 20 November 2001. [17302]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The Department had received approximately 10 written representations relating to the Animal Health Bill from stakeholders as at 20 November. This figure includes correspondence from both private individuals and organisations, and correspondence from MPs.

In addition I have held a number of meetings with stakeholders to discuss the Bill.

One hundred submissions were received from stakeholders in response to the original proposals on the National Scrapie Plan (NSP) published for consultation between 28 July and 31 October 2000. Thirty-one submissions were received in response to proposals to extend the NSP (and on issues relating to scrapie reporting) published for consultation between 9 October and 1 November 2001.

Agricultural Regulatory Licensing System

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to bring forward legislation (a) introducing a regulatory system of licensing for farmers wishing to grow crops or raise animals and (b) making it compulsory for farmers to purchase insurance against agricultural disaster such as disease; and if she will make a statement. [18206]

Mr. Morley: I have no such plans at this point but both these ideas are among the many options which the Government and the Policy Commission will need to consider to help build a sustainable, modern farming industry. No decisions will be taken before we have received the recommendations of the Policy Commission or without full consultation with all interested parties.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent measures she has taken to clean up contaminated land sites in England and Wales; if she will take steps to recover costs from companies responsible for contaminating land; and if she will make a statement. [16975]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 26 November 2001]: In April 2000 the new contaminated land regime (under Part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990) came into force in England. It places a duty on local authorities to inspect their areas for contaminated land. The enforcing authority will then establish the appropriate person(s) to bear the costs of remediation, decide on the remediation required, and ensure that it takes place, whether through agreement, or by serving a remediation notice on the appropriate person(s), or by doing the work and then recovering the costs.

In most cases the appropriate persons will be those who caused or knowingly permitted the contamination, but if they cannot be found liability passes to the current owner or occupier unless the problem is solely one of water pollution. There is provision for waiving or reducing liability in certain circumstances, including cases of hardship. In this way, the regime reflects the "polluter pays" principle. It is described in detail in DETR Circular 02/2000, "Contaminated Land".

The Department's Contaminated Land Supplementary Credit Approval programme provides assistance to local authorities for capital works such as site investigations, and remediation where they are themselves the appropriate person or are unable to recover costs from others.

In addition, there are various other powers to deal with contamination arising from a breach of a current licence or permit. These also follow the polluter pays principle.

Farmers (Scotland)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list by region the amounts paid to farmers in Scotland for each of the (a) CAP and (b) UK schemes for which she is responsible, for the last five years. [18031]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 26 November 2001]: The Rural Payments Agency implements one scheme on behalf of Scottish Ministers with direct payments to farmers. This is the Slaughter Premium Scheme in respect of over-30-month animals only. The amounts paid, which are not available by region, were as follows:

Scheme	£
2000 Scheme Year Payments	1,371,756
2001 Scheme Year Payments[1]	283,426

[1] To date

Other schemes involving payment direct to Scottish farmers are the responsibility of, and are implemented by Scottish Ministers.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's policy is on the reform of the Common Agricultural Policy; how these reforms will be beneficial to agriculture in (a) Northern Ireland, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales; whether the policy was agreed with the devolved Administrations; and how the United Kingdom's policy on reform of the CAP has changed since devolution. [17240]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 26 November 2001]: Successive United Kingdom Governments have long been committed to radical reform of the CAP in order to bring benefits to UK consumers, taxpayers and farmers. Next summer we expect the EU Commission to initiate the mid-term review of the CAP following the Agenda 2000 reforms.

The United Kingdom Government have not yet finalised their position on the mid-term review but have signalled their view that the Community should seize the opportunity for a radical reform covering: a switch from market distorting subsidies (pillar 1) to support for rural development and environmental schemes (pillar 2); abolition of milk quotas and compulsory set aside; and decoupling of livestock payments. We believe that these changes are necessary to deliver the type of modern, market-driven, environmentally sensitive agriculture which will benefit society as a whole and is in the long-term best interests of the agricultural industry itself. They will also help achieve the EU's wider objectives as regards the WTO negotiations and enlargement.

The Government are discussing their position on the mid-term review and their objectives for longer-term CAP reform with the devolved Administrations in Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales. They will also take account of developments both in the industry and more widely. The United Kingdom's policy on the reform of the CAP has not, however, materially altered since devolution.

Animal Health Act

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the Government's use of the Animal Health Act 1981 to act against the importation of animal diseases. [18361]

Mr. Morley: Imports of live animals and the majority of animal products such as meat, fish, dairy products etc. are subject to EU rules implemented by national regulations made under the European Communities Act 1972. Some live animals and products requiring special authorisation before import, for example animal pathogens for research purposes, trade samples, and some live animals and products not subject to EU rules may only be imported in accordance with licences issued under the Animal Health Act 1981. The import conditions in these licences are designed to prevent the hazard of importing and spreading animal diseases.

Rural White Paper

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made in implementing the Rural White Paper. [19267]

Alun Michael: Since publishing the Rural White Paper on 28 November 2000, we have taken decisive steps in delivering the plans we set out to develop and maintain a living, working, protected and vibrant countryside:

> We have provided substantial extra funding to boost basic local services, such as rural schools, policing, local post offices, child care and rural transport;
> To help local services we have extended mandatory 50 per cent. rate relief to include sole village public houses, petrol stations and village food shops;
> We are helping to rejuvenate over 100 market towns by funding projects to stimulate thriving rural economies;
> Earlier this month we published plans to improve the quality and effectiveness of town and parish councils as part of our commitment to give rural communities a stronger voice; and
> We have just published the first draft maps for the new rights of access for walkers.

Although alleviating the devastating effects of foot and mouth disease dominated our work for many months, a great deal has been accomplished. But there is still a lot more to be done. The creation of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs is bringing a new focus and drive to the Government's policies for rural England. Together with partners, we are working to deliver a better future for all those who live, work in and visit the countryside. We will be publishing a full progress report in December. Our key achievements include:

> increased funding for rural schools, including the £80 million per year (2001–02 to 2003–04) Small Schools Fund to help resource sharing, administrative support and adoption of new technology; > an additional £15 million in 2000–01 and £30 million in 2001–02 and 2002–03 to tackle the extra cost of policing in rural areas; also the launch on the on-line Rural Crime Toolkit, drawing on examples of good practice in rural policing;
> a new £2 million fund, now open to applications, to support community-driven projects to refurbish and improve rural sub-post offices—one part of the Government's commitment to maintain a national post office network;
> help to establish 8,728 new child care places in the rural counties of Cornwall, Devon, Durham and Lincolnshire in 2000–01;
> increased investment in wider health and social services which is expected to be of particular benefit to people in rural areas—for example, the programme to establish 100 new primary care one-stop or mobile units, as well as 5,000 intermediate care beds, many in local facilities such as cottage hospitals by 2004. The NHS Direct service, now running throughout England, also offers a major benefit to people living in more remote and rural areas;
> £62 million to improve rural bus services in 2001–02, with a total of £239 million allocated over the next three years for new and improved rural travel services;
>
> the Housing Corporation exceeded their target of approving 800 affordable homes in rural settlements last year by more than 200 (1,003 approvals), and have increased their target for this year to 1,100 rising to 1,600 by 2003–04;
> new Countryside Agency grant schemes in operation: £15 million Community Service Grants fund to help safeguard or re-establish basic village facilities; £15 million Parish Transport Fund for small-scale, locally generated transport solutions; and £5 million Parish Plans Fund to help around 1,000 communities prepare their own village or town plans;
> new legislation, in force from August, extending 50 per cent. mandatory rate relief to village food shops and new small-scale, non-agricultural enterprises on farms. This is additional to extending 50 per cent. relief to sole village pubs and petrol stations in April; > selection of over 100 towns to benefit from a £100 million market towns regeneration programme to which the Government have allocated £37 million. Changes have also been made to planning policy guidance on transport (PPG13) to emphasis the role of market towns as hubs for jobs and services; > changes made to planning policy guidance on the countryside (PPG7) giving stronger support to farm diversification and clarifying guidance on best and most versatile (BMV) land;
> publication of a consultation paper on Quality Parish and Town Councils, seeking views on plans to give councils an enhanced role for their communities; and > publication of the Countryside Agency's 'Policy Maker's Checklist' in April, to assist Government and their agencies "rural-proof" policies, now part of the Cabinet Office's rapid policy makers' checklist.

Livestock (Compensation)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to increase the compensation payable to farmers for livestock they have been unable to move in the over-30-months scheme due to movement restrictions; and if she will make a statement. [12353]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 November 2001]: The Government have considered very carefully whether it would be appropriate to pay compensation for losses incurred on cattle which went beyond the 30-month age limit because of movement restrictions imposed during the earlier part of the foot and mouth disease (FMD) outbreak. We have conclude that it would not. Statutory compensation for losses incurred as a result of the FMD outbreak is only paid on animals which have been slaughtered as a result of FMD, or on property, including animals which have been seized and destroyed in order to prevent the spread of FMD. The Government do not compensate farmers, or businesses, for other, indirect losses.

Cleansing Services Group

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will make a decision on the holding of a public inquiry into the explosion at Cleansing Services Group Ltd. at Sandhurst, Gloucestershire; and if she will make a statement. [8209]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 18 November 2001]: The Government fully understand the deep concerns of local residents about the incidents at the site and the calls for a public inquiry. We are considering this issue in the light of the latest progress report into the Environment Agency's and the Health and Safety Executive's joint investigation of the incidents and an announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Rural Housing

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of the population in local authorities defined as rural were assessed as being in priority need for housing in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [16539]

Ms Keeble: Summary information on activity under the statutory homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1996 is reported to the Department by local authorities in England. This includes the number of households accepted as being eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need.

Local authorities also report the total number of households on their housing register/waiting lists (excluding existing tenants awaiting a transfer) as at 1 April on their annual Housing Investment Programme returns, and separately distinguish those deemed to be "in need".

These households, expressed as a percentage of all households in authorities categorised as either "mixed rural" or "deep rural", are as follows:

Households accepted as unintentionally homeless and in priority need as a percentage of the total number of households: rural authorities in England. Financial year totals

Year	Percentage
1996–97	0.35
1997–98	0.33
1998–99	0.32
1999–2000	0.32
2000–01	0.37

All households on local authority housing registers and classified as "in need" as a percentage of the total number of households: rural authorities in England as at 1 April

1996	3.1
1997	2.9
1998	2.9
1999	3.0
2000	3.0
2001	3.8

Note:

Mid-year household population estimates for 2000 and 2001 are not yet available; the estimate of 1999 has been applied in these years.

Local authorities have different practices for compiling and managing their housing register/waiting lists which mean that comparisons between authorities can be misleading. Authorities' policies and practices may change, which can also affect comparisons over time.

TREASURY

Folkestone and Hythe

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged 18 to 24 years were unemployed for more than six months in each year since May 1992 in the constituency of Folkestone and Hythe. [17734]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Michael Howard, dated 27 November 2001:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the number of people aged 18 to 24 years who were unemployed for more than six months for each year since May 1992 in the constituency of Folkestone and Hythe. (17734)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics for unemployment from surveys following the internationally standard International Labour Organisation definition. However, for the Folkestone and Hythe parliamentary constituency the survey sample size is too small to provide estimates. ONS also compiles statistics of claimants of unemployment-related benefits. the claimant count consists of all people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or National Insurance credits at Employment Service local offices. They must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for and actively seeking work during the week in which the claim is made.

Prior to January 1996 comparable figures for earlier years are not available on the same geographical basis. Information on computerised claims by age and duration for parliamentary constituencies from January 1996 were based on the ward boundaries of the 1991 census while figures before are based on the ward boundaries of the 1981 census and are available from June 1985 to January 1996.

The information requested is given in the attached table.

Claimants aged 18 to 24 claiming for six months or more in the Folkestone and Hythe parliamentary constituency for each May 1992 to May 2001[1]

Tax Credits and Benefits

Mr. Howard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people received (a) tax credits and (b) means-tested benefits in the constituency of Folkestone and Hythe for each year since April 1997. [17738]

Dawn Primarolo: The available information for Folkestone and Hythe is in the following table.

Recipients of (a) tax credits and (b) certain income related benefits in the Folkestone and Hythe constituency

	1997	1998	May 1999	2000	2001
Working Families Tax Credit (WFTC)/ Family Credit (FC)	1,100	1,300	1,000	1,800	2,200
Disabled Person's Tax Credit (DPTC)/Disability Working Allowance (DWA)	12	18	35	37	45
Income Support (IS)	6,900	6,800	6,900	7,100	7,200
Jobseeker's Allowance (income based) (JSA)	2,600	2,000	1,800	1,500	1,100
Total	10,600	10,100	9,800	10,400	10,600

Notes:

1. Apart from DPTC and DWA, the figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample. They are subject to sampling error and therefore shown to the nearest 100.
2. Recipients of WFTC/FC or DPTC/DWA who also receive IS or JSA are included only in the first two columns. This eliminates double counting in the total.
3. WFTC and DPTC replaced FC and DWA from October 1999.
4. DPTC and DWA figures are for April.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Inland Revenue National Insurance Contributions Office will respond to the request made by Mr. Welch of Burton, Christchurch to be able to make self-employed national insurance contributions. [18653]

Dawn Primarolo: The National Insurance Contributions Office wrote to Mr. Welch on 21 November, and I am writing to the hon. Member about his constituent's concerns.

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has completed his review of national insurance contributions for 2002–03. [18972]

Dawn Primarolo: I have completed the annual review under section 141 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992. I propose the following changes to take effect from 6 April 2002. These rates and limits will also apply to Northern Ireland National Insurance Contributions.

Employers and Employees

In line with the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992, the Lower Earnings Limit for primary Class 1 contributions is to be raised to £75 a week. It is set at the level of the basic Retirement Pension for a single person from April 2002 and rounded down to the nearest pound.

The Primary and Secondary Thresholds for Class 1 contributions will continue to be aligned with the weekly amounts of the income tax personal allowance at £89 a week. This means that no tax or Class 1 contributions will actually be paid on earnings below this level. The Upper Earnings Limit for primary Class 1 contributions will be raised to £585.

The rate of secondary Class 1 contributions payable by all employers is to be reduced by 0.1 per cent. from 11.9 per cent. to 11.8 per cent. This is to ensure that the overall effect on industry from the introduction of the Aggregates Levy will be revenue neutral.

The self-employed

The rate of Class 2 contributions will remain at £2 a week.

Self-employed people with earnings below the annual Small Earnings Exception can apply to be exempted from paying Class 2 contributions. This limit will be raised by £70 to £4,025.

The annual lower and upper profits limits for liability to Class 4 contributions will be raised respectively by £80 to £4,615 (in line with the income tax personal allowance) and by £520 to £30,420, to maintain the link with employees' earnings liable to Class 1 contributions.

Class 3

The rate of Class 3 voluntary contributions will be increased by 10 pence to £6.85 a week.

The special rate of Class 2 contributions for share fishermen, which allows them to build entitlement to contributory Jobseeker's Allowance in addition to the other contributory benefits available to the self-employed, will continue to be £2.65 a week.

Volunteer Development Workers

The special rate of Class 2 contributions for volunteer development workers, which entitles them to the full range of contributory benefits, will be increased by 15 pence to £3.75 in line with the statutory formula of 5 per cent. of the primary Class 1 Lower Earnings Limit.

Treasury Grant

I need to ensure that the Fund can maintain a prudent working balance throughout the coming year. In accordance with section 2(2) of the Social Security Act 1993, I propose to do so by prescribing that the maximum Treasury Grant which may be made available to the fund in 2002–03 shall not exceed 2 per cent. of the estimated benefit expenditure for that year. Similar provision will be made in respect of the Northern Ireland National Insurance Fund.

I shall be laying a draft re-rating order before Parliament in due course. This will accompany a report by the Government Actuary to myself and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which we shall jointly present to Parliament.

The table sets out the rates, earnings limits and thresholds for National Insurance Contributions proposed for 2002–03.

National insurance contributions, proposed re-rating, April 2002

Item	2002–03
Lower Earnings Limit, primary Class 1	£75
Upper Earnings Limit, primary Class 1	£585
Primary Threshold	£89
Secondary Threshold	£89
Employees' primary Class 1 rate	10 per cent. from £89.01 to £585
Employees' contracted-out rebate	1.6 per cent.
Married women's reduced rate	3.85 per cent.
Employers' secondary Class 1 rate	11.8 per cent. on earnings above £89
Employers' contracted-out rebate, salary-related schemes	3.5 per cent.
Employers' contracted-out rebate, money-purchase schemes	1.0 per cent.
Class 2 rate	£2
Class 2 Small Earnings Exception	£4,025
Special Class 2 rate for share fishermen	£2.65
Special Class 2 rate for volunteer development workers	£3.75
Class 3 rate	£6.85
Class 4 rate	7 per cent.
Class 4 Lower Profits Limit	£4,615
Class 4 Upper Profits Limit	£30,420

Aggregates

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has further to encourage the recycling of aggregates (a) by means of the aggregates levy and (b) by other means. [18425]

Ruth Kelly: The aggregates levy will provide an incentive to use recycled aggregate and alternative materials, as these will be exempted. Levy revenues will also fund a £35 million sustainability fund one of whose objectives will be to encourage recycling objectives of the levy.

Landfill tax on inactive waste also offers an incentive for the recycling of aggregate rather than its disposal in waste sites.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the environmental (i) costs and (ii) benefits of the supply of aggregates from coastal super quarries compared to that from other types of quarry. [18426]

Ruth Kelly: The independent research which underpins the aggregates levy considered all aspects of the environmental impacts of aggregate extraction. The levy will be introduced at a single rate in order to keep it simple and send a clear signal to encourage purchasers of primary aggregate to use alternative materials where possible.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the direct environmental (a) costs and (b) benefits arising from the introduction of the aggregates levy; [17924]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of the aggregates levy on the environmental aspects of quarrying which are not dealt with by existing regulatory controls. [17923]

Ruth Kelly: Independent research shows there are significant environmental costs associated with aggregates extraction that are not already covered by regulation including noise, dust, visual intrusion, loss of amenity and damage to biodiversity.

The aggregates levy will encourage the efficient use of natural aggregates and the greater use of alternative materials, such as recycled aggregate and certain waste materials, thereby reducing the environmental costs of aggregates extraction.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with representatives of the aggregates industry regarding the proposal for a green discount on the introduction of the aggregates tax. [18354]

Ruth Kelly: The Government have been exploring with interested parties, including the aggregates industry, the options for a differential rate of the aggregates levy for quarries with better environmental performance.

Development Assistance

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with his US counterparts regarding an increase in their development assistance budget in relation to their gross national product. [18188]

Ruth Kelly: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has had a number of discussions with Paul O'Neill the US Treasury Secretary on their shared interest of increasing overseas development assistance. The Chancellor of the Exchequer looks forward to more constructive meetings with the US Treasury on this topic in the coming months.

VAT (Church Repairs)

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on churches' liability to pay VAT on repair work when situated within a designated conservation area. [18035]

Dawn Primarolo: Repair work to churches is liable to VAT at the standard rate. There are no special VAT rules for churches in designated conservation areas. However, the Government have introduced a UK-wide grant scheme, the effect of which will be to reduce the VAT cost to 5 per cent., for works of repair, maintenance and improvements to listed places of worship undertaken from 1 April 2001.

Child Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy that recipients of the proposed integrated child credit will be required to have their payments paid into a bank account. [18086]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 26 November 2001]: Payment direct to bank accounts is the most efficient, secure and flexible way of delivering direct payments. The consultation document 'New Tax Credits—Supporting families, making work pay and tackling poverty' made clear that it is proposed to make all direct payments of tax credits to claimants' bank accounts.

The Government are currently spearheading a drive to tackle financial exclusion. Work to ensure that those without bank accounts will be able to open a suitable account into which tax credits can be paid is being taken forward together with the Post Office and major banks.

Smuggling

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimates are of the levels of smuggling and fraud affecting tobacco duty and other indirect taxes. [19268]

Mr. Boateng: These estimates and the supporting methodologies are set out in documents published today by HM Customs and Excise entitled 'Tackling Indirect Tax Fraud and Measuring Indirect Tax Fraud'. Copies of both papers have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Tax Documents

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to publish the next Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs document; and if he will make a statement. [18973]

Dawn Primarolo: The Treasury will today be publishing a document containing the estimates of the effects of various illustrative tax changes on tax receipts in 2002–03 and 2003–04 (plus 2004–05 for indirect taxes) and estimates of the costs of the main tax reliefs in 2000–01 and 2001–02. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Customs and Excise (Consultation)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations with businesses were carried out by his Department with regard to the (a) Excise Duty Points Regulations 2001 and (b) HM Customs' revised financial security policy. [17455]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs consulted extensively on these issues with businesses involved in the production, warehousing and distribution of excise goods from as early as 1998. This included discussions with key trade associations at Customs' long-standing Joint Alcohol and Tobacco Consultation Group.

Child Poverty

Ms Buck: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate how many children have been lifted out of poverty in each region of England since 1997; and what this represents as a percentage of children in each region. [17770]

Dawn Primarolo: Personal tax and benefit measures introduced since 1997 have lifted 1.2 million children in the UK as a whole out of poverty, defined as 60 per cent. of median income after allowing for housing costs. Because of the margins of error, it is not possible to model the precise effects in individual counties or regions.

It is possible to provide figures for the numbers of families in different regions benefiting from the key measures introduced during the last Parliament to tackle child poverty. The table shows, by region, the number of families benefiting from the Working Families Tax Credit, the number of lone parents on Income Support benefiting from the real terms increases in child credits, and the number of families with children benefiting from the real terms increases in child benefit.

European Union

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what Community money was (a) available and (b) distributed to both sides in the Irish referendum on Nice. [17620]

Ruth Kelly: This is a matter for the Irish Government and the European Commission.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Declaration of the Heads of State and Government Review of the Economic Situation (SN 4298/2/01, 19 October 2001), with reference to spending projects by the EIB to be encouraged by the European Council. [17621]

Ruth Kelly: The Government support the European Council's encouragement of the European Investment Bank (EIB) for its lending to infrastructure projects, to support the knowledge-based economy and to help foster long-term investment. The Government are working to ensure that the EIB builds on its historic strengths in these areas and provides the maximum value added to the market, levering in private finance where there would otherwise be gaps and furthering the Lisbon economic reform agenda.

Compliance Costs

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has received a final copy of the study by Professor Anne Hansford into the compliance costs to business of the UK tax system; and when he will publish the study. [17213]

Dawn Primarolo: Studies into compliance costs for Corporation Tax and VAT were commissioned as the first stage of a four year research programme into the compliance costs to businesses of the UK tax system.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards

David Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, for what reason the new contract for the post of Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards will involve fewer working days than the present contract. [14931]

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, for what reason (a) the hours required from and (b) the salary paid to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards are being reduced. [15535]

Mr. Kirkwood [pursuant to his reply, 23 November 2001, c. 484w]: The time commitment established for the first Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards was four days a week not three. However, the first Commissioner expressed the view towards the end of his appointment that the Commissioner's contribution could be reduced to two to three days a week, provided that some work could be delegated to the Registrar of Members' Interests. Three days a week was then established as the time commitment for the present Commissioner, and it was on this basis that she was offered the appointment.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Uzbekistan

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made to the Government of Uzbekistan regarding their policy on British and French humanitarian aid entering Afghanistan. [18195]

Clare Short: I have not made any personal representations to the Government of Uzbekistan on UK or French aid entering Afghanistan. However, the UK is fully supportive of the representations made by the humanitarian agencies of the United Nations to the Government of Uzbekistan with regard to the delivery of humanitarian assistance to Afghanistan.

Afghanistan

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the outcome was of the international meeting held in Washington on 20 November on the humanitarian situation in Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [18194]

Clare Short: The USA and Japan co-chaired a conference on Afghanistan's reconstruction in Washington DC on 20 November. It was attended by senior officials from over 20 countries, including the UK, as well as the United Nations, international financial institutions and the Organisation of the Islamic Conference.

The conference agreed the need for long-term international support for the reconstruction of Afghanistan, the need to involve Afghans—in particular Afghan women—in all phases of the recovery and reconstruction effort; the importance of recovery intervention that demonstrates a quick impact; and the central role of the United Nations. A steering group has been established to guide reconstruction, co-chaired by the US, Japan, the EU and Saudi Arabia. The first meeting of the steering group will take place in Brussels in December.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has in place to assist Afghan refugees when they return to their home towns inside Afghanistan; and what plans she has to take account of the needs of women and children in planning and implementing refugee assistance activities. [18196]

Clare Short: We fully support the UN's efforts under Ambassador Brahimi to help with the long-term reconstruction of Afghanistan, including that which will support returning refugees. This will involve such measures as expanding basic health services, carrying out emergency repairs to infrastructure, de-mining and the reopening of education facilities.

We also strongly support Ambassador Brahimi's commitment to addressing human rights issues and his commitment to the involvement of women in discussions. As recovery activities begin, the programmes that we support will be designed and monitored to ensure that women and children benefit.

The principles and priorities guiding our approach are outlined in our paper entitled 'Afghanistan—Recovery: An emergency plan for the first 100 days'. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Democratic Republic of Congo

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her work with (a) serving and (b) former child soldiers in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [16074]

Clare Short: We continue to work for the disarmament, demobilisation and rehabilitation of the negative forces in the DRC in line with the Lusaka peace accord and are closely monitoring the situation.

During the period June 2000—April 2001 we provided a grant of £150,000 to Save the Children for their demobilisation project in the provinces of North and South Kivu. This aimed to provide child soldiers with the social and economic support they required in reintegration into their families and respective communities. We have also provided £400,000 to Rwanda to assist with the DDR programmes for fighters recently from the DRC. This DDR programme includes a special component to provide immediate care for 500 former child soldiers captured in poor physical condition and re-integrate them with their families and communities.

Global Patent Rules (Africa)

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she is taking with respect to Africa to prevent global patent rules having a negative effect on health. [16070]

Clare Short: The Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) agreement includes flexibilities which should enable developing countries in Africa and elsewhere to protect their public health in situations of crisis or national emergency. Until now, a lack of clarity around these flexibilities had been a source of concern.

The Government, with the European Commission, worked hard to ensure that the Doha Ministerial produced a meaningful declaration on TRIPS and public health. We welcome and fully support the proposals in the Declaration on TRIPS and Public Health and the World Trade Organisation's (WTO's) efforts to ensure the TRIPS Agreement can and should be interpreted and implemented in a manner supportive of WTO members' rights to protect public health.

The Commission on Intellectual Property Rights, which I established earlier this year, is looking at how international intellectual property rules might need to develop in future best to take account of the interests of developing countries. It is due to report in June 2002.

There is of course more to improving access to medicines in developing countries than global patent rules. The World Health Organisation recognises four key factors. These include sustainable financing, affordable pricing, reliable health and supply systems, and the rational selection and use of existing drugs. My Department remains committed to working with our developing country partners and other international organisations to address all these issues, which are particularly pertinent in Africa. To this end we have pledged US$200 million to the Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and malaria; set up a Working Group on Access to Medicines to look at options on differential pricing and increasing research and development; and committed over £1 billion since 1997 to help developing countries put in place effective health care systems.

Turkey

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial assistance has been given to Turkey by her Department in each of the last three years; what was the amount of funding; what the projects were for which the funding was allocated; and what supervision her Department has undertaken of the development of these projects. [17881]

Clare Short: Given Turkey's relative wealth and development we do not have a bilateral development assistance programme. We did provide Turkey with over £1.4 million in response to the 1999 earthquake disasters, in the form of tents, medical supplies, blankets and a variety of other humanitarian assistance. Turkey also receives substantial assistance from the EU MEDA programme and through the international financial institutions to which DFID is a major contributor. Our share of EC commitments to Turkey during the last three years has been over £50 million.

Zimbabwe

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what actions her Department is taking to alleviate the humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe; and what assessment she has made of the impact of President Mugabe's decision not to allow aid agencies to distribute emergency food supplies. [18633]

Clare Short: We are closely involved in the development of a humanitarian assistance plan by the United Nations Development Programme in Zimbabwe in which UN agencies and NGOs are expected to play a key role. This plan is presently being discussed by UNDP with the Government of Zimbabwe on behalf of all potential providers of funds. We have also begun an initial supplementary feeding programme for 280,000 people (predominantly children) in the worst hit areas. We have not been informed of any decision not to allow agencies to distribute emergency food supplies.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to change the (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limit for 2001–02. [19700]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the Department for Work and Pensions Departmental Expenditure Limit will be increased by £3,338,291,000 from £3,964,124,000 to £7,302,415,000 and the administration cost limit by £1,336,666,000 from £3,566,177,000 to £4,902,843,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are set out in the following table:

	Resources	Capital
Change	3,230,537	107,754
New DEL	7,091,614	210,801
Of which: voted	5,843,935	121,461
Non voted	1,247,679	89,340

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

(i) the transfer of the Employment Service from the Department for Education and Skills (£2,191,389 of which £1,239,729 are administration costs), the transfer of certain functions previously undertaken by Department for Education and Employment (£225,468,000 of which £18,322,000 are administration costs) and the transfer of the War Pensions Agency to Ministry of Defence (£35,799,000 of which £36,466,000 are administration costs) as announced by the Prime Minister on 8 June.

(ii) take up of end year flexibility entitlements (£178,291,000 of which £136,213,000 are administration costs) announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury in Table 6 of the 2000–01 Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper (Cm 5243).

(iii) an increase of £4,612,000 (administration costs) in provision from the Employment Opportunities Fund in DEL for expenditure on the new deals for the unemployed and sick and disabled.

(iv) an increase of £78,000 (administration costs) from the repayment arrangement with Department of Trade and Industry for the cost incurred by Department for Work and Pensions on the Post Office General Practitioners pilot.

(v) a net reduction of £1,302,000 (administration costs) due to a transfer to the Scottish Executive of the Resettlement programme in Scotland (£1,318,000) and from the Scottish Executive (£16,000) towards the cost of the Family Resources Survey.

(vi) an increase in provision of £509,000 (administration costs) following a transfer from Department of Health towards the project costs of preserved rights cases and care direct.

(vii) a net reduction of £4,679,000 (administration costs) due to a transfer to Inland Revenue of Programme Protection Funding (£750,000), for the cost of work being performed by Inland Revenue to assist the Benefits Agency clearing a backlog of CA 5400 work (£500,000), the cost of work being performed by Inland Revenue on NIRS development work (£5,000,000) and a transfer of £1,571,000 from Inland Revenue for accommodation office services at Newcastle.

(viii) an increase of £1,229,000 (administration costs) from the reserve under the Debt Recovery Incentive Scheme.

(ix) an increase of £362,000 (administration costs) from an allocation to the department from the evidence based policy fund.

(x) a net reduction of £165,000 due at transfer of £190,000 to Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for Rough Sleepers and a transfer from Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions of £25,000 (administration costs) for Local PSAs.

(xi) a transfer of £200,000 (administration costs) from Lord Chancellor's Department to meet the cost of work being provided to them by the departmental central index.

(xii) an increase of £20,000,000 (administration costs) from the Employment Opportunities Fund to enable Employment Services to maintain the present office network during the review of the Jobcentre Plus future network.

(xiii) an increase in provision of £117,400,000 (administration costs) from the Employment Opportunities Fund to set up the Jobcentre Plus Pathfinder offices.

(xiv) a reduction in provision of £1,200,000 as result of a transfer to Department for Education and Skills to cover the cost of work performed by the Adult Learning Inspectorate for Employment Services.

(xv) an increase of £78,000 in appropriations in aid.

(xvi) a net reduction in Employment Opportunities Fund requirements of £8,439,000 following a reapportionment of expenditure within and between RfRs.

(xvii) as a result of the machinery of government changes there is an increase in the Department for Work and Pensions Departmental Expenditure Limit of £542,661,000 which is non-Voted.

(xviii) administration cost limit changes arise from a reduction of £138,928,000 due to a reclassification of Employment Opportunities Fund expenditure and an increase of £20,638,000 in administration costs related appropriations in aid.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from:

(i) the transfer of the employment service from the Department for Education and Skills (£12,550,000) and the transfer of the War Pensions Agency to Ministry of Defence (£300,000)) as announced by the Prime Minister on 8 June.

(ii) take up of end year flexibility entitlements of £81,200,000 announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury in Table 6 of the 2000–01 Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper (Cm 5243).

(iii) an increase in provision of £4,800,000 from the Employment Opportunities Fund to set up the Jobcentre Plus Pathfinder offices.

(iv) an increase of £2,000,000 from the Capital Modernisation Fund for Supported Employment.

(v) as a result of the machinery of government changes there is an increase in the Department for Work and Pensions Departmental Expenditure Limit of £7,504,000 which is non-Voted.

All of these changes will either be offset by transfers or charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

New Deal for Communities (Leicester Braunstone)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the operation of the Braunstone Community Association in respect of the new deal; what the cost is of the scheme; what plans he has to inquire into the administration of the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [15779]

Ms Keeble: I have been asked to reply.

Leicester Braunstone is one of the New Deal for Community Round 1 Pathfinders and has an overall grant of £49.5 million to spend over up to 10 years.

The scheduled mid year review of the Braunstone New Deal for Communities Programme took place in Braunstone on 22 November 2001. The review considered among other things the strategic direction and delivery of the programme, including progress in delivering the Braunstone Community Association 2001–02 Action Plan, developments in partnership working and community involvement.

Proceedings, which were chaired by an official from the Government Office for the East Midlands, were conducted in a positive atmosphere. Nothing substantive arose during the review to change the status of the programme.

The next few weeks will be very important for the Braunstone New Deal for Communities Programme as the BCA awaits the findings of an independent investigation it set up to look into various allegations related to its internal relationships. That investigation is expected to report by mid-December.

In the meantime, in order to protect the public purse the Government office for the East Midlands has suspended delegated authorities to the BCA to commit expenditure. The Government office is also discussing with auditors the terms of reference for a mid-year audit of the NDC Programme (to end September), which, with evidence arising from the findings of the independent investigation, will allow the Government office what further steps it needs to take in order to secure the future of the Braunstone NDC Programme.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Terrorism

9. Mr. John Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what action he is taking to co-ordinate departmental policies on mass terrorist threats. [15979]

Mr. Leslie: Under the leadership of the Civil Contingencies Committee, the Government are conducting a comprehensive review of our tried and tested contingency plans in the light of the events of 11 September. We are taking all sensible steps to make sure the country is well prepared for any emergency or threat.

Social Exclusion

10. Vernon Coaker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with the Government office for the east midlands to ensure that projects designed to tackle social exclusion take into account the needs of areas that have small pockets of deprivation. [15980]

Mrs. Roche: I discussed implementation of the Government's programmes to tackle social exclusion with the Government office for the east-midlands on 25 July.

The targets we have set for mainstream programmes, which will receive substantial increases in resources, will lead to substantial improvements in deprived neighbourhoods across the country.

The local authority districts receiving additional support from the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund include over 80 per cent. of the most deprived wards in England and 90 per cent. of the people living in the most deprived wards.

11. Mr. Shaw: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what policy projects the social exclusion unit is working on. [15981]

Mrs. Roche: The unit is currently working on four projects, looking at:

re-offending by ex-prisoners;

young runaways;

educational attainment of children in care; and transport and social exclusion.

Rural Policy

12. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on the co-ordination of rural policy. [15982]

Mr. Leslie: Rural policy is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, with whom my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has on-going discussions.

E-Government Initiative

13. David Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the progress of the e-Government initiative. [15983]

Mr. Leslie: Delivery is at the heart of our agenda for transforming public services and e-Government is one of the most powerful catalysts we have for achieving that transformation. The Office of the e-Envoy produces both an annual report and regular monthly reports giving details of the progress that is being made. The next annual report will be published on 30 November. The latest figures on progress towards the target of making Government services available electronically by 2005 show that over 50 per cent. of Government services are "enabled" now. And Departments predict that 74 per cent. of services will be e-enabled by the end of 2002.

Civil Service Pay

14. Mr. Heath: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his policy on civil service pay. [15984]

Mr. Leslie: The Government policy on pay in the civil service is that effective reward and performance management systems are instrumental to the delivery of better public services. Together they should create a climate in which civil servants want to give of their best and strive for continuous improvement.

Civil Service

15. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his oral statement of 31 October 2001, Official Report, column 866, what action he has taken to introduce legislation to give constitutional protection to the civil service; and if he will make a statement. [15985]

18. Tony Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to introduce legislation on the civil service. [15989]

Mr. Leslie: The Government are committed to legislation on the Civil Service and are putting in hand arrangements for wide consultation in advance of its introduction.

Agriculture

16. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on the regional co-ordination of assistance for the rehabilitation of the agriculture industry. [15986]

Mrs. Roche: The Government are committed to assisting the development of a sustainable, competitive and diverse farming and food sector within a thriving rural economy that advances environmental, health and animal welfare goals.

The rural recovery co-ordinator, Lord Haskins, and the Rural Task Force each published their reports on 18 October with recommendations for the short term survival of rural business, and mid term strategies for rural recovery after the foot and mouth disease outbreak. The Government will respond shortly to both reports.

My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has ongoing discussions with the Secretary of State for Environment Food and Rural Affairs on these and other matters.

Government Departments (Co-ordination)

17. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent steps he has taken to improve co-ordination between Government departments in connection with the Better Regulation Task Force and the delivery unit. [15987]

Mr. Leslie: The Deputy Prime Minister is responsible for ensuring better co-ordination across Government in the delivery of a broad range of Government policies, not least through the work of Regional Co-ordination Unit, which reports to the Deputy Prime Minister.

The Better Regulation Task Force is an independent advisory body that makes recommendations to Government on the effectiveness and credibility of government regulation.

The Prime Minister's Delivery Unit has a key role in strengthening capacity across Whitehall to deliver the Government's priorities in the priority areas of health, education, crime and asylum, and transport. My right hon. and noble Friend, Lord Macdonald of Tradeston has day-to-day responsibility for the work of the Delivery Unit.

Ministerial Visits

19. Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what visits to Government regional offices Cabinet Office Ministers have made since 7 June. [15990]

Mrs. Roche: Since 7 June, I have visited the Government Offices for the East of England, East Midlands, South West, North East and North West. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has visited the Government Offices for the North East, South West and North West. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary visited the Government Office for Yorkshire and Humber.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on how many occasions the Cabinet Secretary has visited (a) Northern Ireland, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland since his appointment. [17235]

Mr. Leslie: Since his appointment in January 1998, the Cabinet Secretary has visited Northern Ireland once, Wales six times and Scotland five times.

Social Exclusion Unit

20. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the work of the social exclusion unit. [15992]

Mrs. Roche: The Social Exclusion Unit was set up by the Prime Minister to provide joined-up solutions to specific social exclusion problems. It delivers long-term strategies for change but has already demonstrated the effectiveness of its approach.

The unit has produced reports on five main areas:

16 to 18-year-olds not in education, employment or training;
teenage pregnancy;
rough sleeping;
truancy and school exclusions; and a national strategy for neighbourhood renewal.

The unit is currently working on four projects, looking at:

re-offending by ex-prisoners;
young runaways;
educational attainment of children in care; and transport and social exclusion.

Public Appointments

21. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of public appointments made since 1997 have been women; and if he will make a statement. [15997]

Mr. Leslie: The information requested by my hon. Friend is not available in the form required. However, as at 31 March 2000, 33 per cent. of public appointments were held by women, compared to 32 per cent. as at September 1997 and 23 per cent. in 1992.

The Government are committed to the goal of achieving equal representation of men and women in public appointments. All Departments have individual plans containing details of the measures being taken to increase the representation of women and other currently under-represented groups on the boards of their public bodies. New departmental action plans for the period 2002 to 2005 will be published next year.

Access to Official Information

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will respond to the report from the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration of 13 November on Access to Official Information. [15498]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: I have been asked to reply.

The Government's position remains as set out in the Fourth Report of the Parliamentary Ombudsman on Access to Official Information. The Government have nothing further to add.

New Deal (Civil Service)

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people have been employed in the civil service under the new deal for the young and unemployed. [19566]

Mr. Leslie: As at 1 October 2001 the information on civil service Departments (including their agencies) participating as employers in the new deal is as follows:

New deal starts since programme began, as at 1 October 2001

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Miller: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to change the Cabinet Office departmental expenditure limit and the administration cost limit for 2001–02. [19565]

Mr. Leslie: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the Winter Supplementary Estimate the Cabinet Office Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) (Resources and Capital) will be increased by £145,606,000 from £202,658,000 to £348,264,000 and the administration costs limit will be increased by £104,803,000 from £141,950,000 to £246,753,000.

Within the DEL change the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the table.

Resources
Change	121,427
New DEL	264,449
of which:
Voted	255,844
Non-voted	8,605
Capital
Change	24,179
New DEL	83,815
of which:
Voted	83,815
Non-voted	—

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from transfers of £115,271,000 from other Departments for Machinery of Government changes and other arrangements and the draw-down of end-year flexibility of £6,156,000.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from the draw-down of end-year flexibility of £22,718,000 and transfers of £1,461,000 from other Departments for Machinery of Government changes.

The increases will be offset by inter-departmental transfers and changed to the DEL reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

These changes when combined with the totals for the Central Office of Information and Civil Superannuation increase DEL by £145,606,000 from £260,469,000 to £406,075,000.

Departmental Policies (Women)

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how his Department monitors the impact of its policies on women. [15974]

Mrs. Roche: It is important that departments mainstream women's issues into policy making and delivery. The Women and Equality Unit has developed a framework to encourage policy-makers to challenge each stage of policy making. It asks a series of questions to help ensure that policies meet the different needs of women and men. It has been piloted in the Departments of Health and Lord Chancellor's Department and will be reviewed in the New Year.

Through its research and other work, the Women and Equality Unit monitors the impact on women of policies in areas of key importance to women.

EU Regulation

Jim Knight: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress has been made by the Mandelkern Group on better regulation since the last report to this House in March. [19697]

Mr. Leslie: The Mandelkern Group has met five times since March 2001 and at its last meeting on 12–13 November adopted its Final Report. This report was presented by the group's chairman, M. Dieudonné Mandelkern, to the Internal Market, Consumer and Tourism Council on 26 November and has been sent to the Presidents of the European Commission, European Parliament and Council of Ministers. I have placed a copy of the report in the Library of the House.

The report represents a significant achievement. For the first time, representatives of all fifteen member states have signed up to a document setting out in detail the actions that need to be undertaken in order to improve Europe's regulatory environment. It contains a number of concrete, practical recommendations and an Action Plan with realistic timings. In particular, the Action Plan asks the Commission to:

Establish a new, comprehensive impact assessment system, covering all Commission regulatory proposals, by June 2002;

Establish a central web-based consultation register for all EU consultations by June 2002;

Adopt a standard minimum 16-week consultation period from March 2002;

Spearhead a 40 per cent. reduction in the volume of Community acts by June 2004, arising from concerted codification of European legislation by the institutions;

Launch a new targeted simplification programme by June 2002 of existing European legislation in all areas; and Create throughout the Commission a centrally supported, effective network for better regulation by June 2002.

The Government fully support the Mandelkern Group's report and will be working closely with other member states and the institutions of the EU to seek acceptance and timely implementation of its main recommendations.

Civil Partnership Registration Scheme

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans the Government have to introduce a civil partnership registration scheme. [19567]

Mrs. Roche: Civil partnership registration and associated rights and responsibilities raise a number of complex issues, which have prompted a growing debate within society. The Government are watching this debate with interest; however, it does not have a settled view.

These issues potentially have significant financial and administrative implications and the Government cannot commit themselves to making any changes in these areas before undertaking a comprehensive analysis of all the implications. The Government will now be examining the issues in detail.

PRIME MINISTER

Security and Intelligence Agencies (Departmental Spending Limits)

Mark Tami: To ask the Prime Minister what plans there are to change the (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limits for 2001–02 for the security and intelligence agencies. [19751]

The Prime Minister: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the departmental expenditure limit (DEL) for the security and intelligence agencies will be increased by £12,764,000 from £879,069,000 to £891,833,000 and the administration cost limit will be increased by £2,424,000 from £439,530,000 to £441,954,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are set out in the following table:

			Of which:
	Change	New DEL	Voted	Non-voted
Resources	10,214,000	779,284,000	779,284,000	—
Capital	2,550,000	112,549,000	112,549,000	—

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

1. the take up of serious crime funding allocated to the Home Office at SR2000 of £9,310,000;
2. a PES transfer of £650,000 from the Home Office Overseas Drugs-Related Assistance Programme;
3. a transfer from DFID's DUP reserve of £100,000;
4. a PES transfer of £146,000 to the Cabinet Office for fast stream recruitment;
5. the take up of end-year flexibility (EYF) carried forward from 2001–02 of £300,000.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from £2,250,000 for serious crime funding allocated to the Home Office at SR2000 and the take up of £300,000 of DEL EYF.

The increases will be offset by inter-departmental transfers and the take up of DEL EYF and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Delivery Unit

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the work of the Delivery Unit. [15976]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) on 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 83W.

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what guidance he has provided to inform the work of the Delivery Unit. [15996]

The Prime Minister: I established the Delivery Unit to work closely with Departments to ensure that the Government achieve their delivery priorities during this Parliament across the key areas of public service, health, education, crime, asylum and transport.

Travel Costs (Concorde)

Mr. Laws: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell), of 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 783W, on travel costs, for what reasons the estimated cost of his travel on Concorde on 7 November will not be made available till the end of the current financial year; and if he will make a statement. [18237]

The Prime Minister: A detailed list of Cabinet Ministers' visits overseas, and information on spend by all Ministers on travel overseas for the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the current financial year.

PIU Energy Review

Mr. Jack: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the number of organisations, bodies and individuals who have made a submission to the PIU Energy Review. [15993]

The Prime Minister: 467 submissions have been made to the PIU Energy Review.

DEFENCE

Plastic Baton Rounds (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many plastic baton rounds have been fired by military personnel in Northern Ireland; and what percentage of the total number of plastic baton round firings this represents. [17751]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by the then Minister for the Armed Forces on 13 March 2001, Official Report, column 507W, which lists the number of baton rounds fired by the military since 1991. Up until 22 November, 16 baton rounds have been fired in 2001. Since 1991 the Army have fired 2,110 baton rounds compared with 12,158 by the Royal Ulster Constabulary/Police Service of Northern Ireland representing 15 per cent. of the total number of baton rounds fired.

Armed Forces (Drugs)

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of each of the armed forces tested positive for the use of controlled substances in each of the years since testing began, expressed as (a) a proportion of those tested and (b) by substance. [18411]

Mr. Ingram: The percentage of armed forces personnel testing positive for the use of controlled substances in each year since testing began, and the types of substances detected is given in the table.

Recruitment

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what new measures he has introduced to recruit into the armed forces since 11 September. [18061]

Mr. Ingram: The Army recruiting initiative 'Operation London Soldier' took place from 16 to 24 September 2001. This operation had been planned for some months before. All other initiatives, for all three services, have been introduced prior to 11 September.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the opening of Army careers offices and armed forces careers offices on Saturday mornings. [18062]

Mr. Ingram: The core opening hours for the tri-service armed forces careers offices (AFCOs) and their satellite recruiting offices are from 09.00 to 17.00 Monday to Friday. Trials of Saturday opening were carried out in 1988, 1993, 1996 and 2000. During the 2000 trial the level of recruiting activity was monitored but the result from many areas was found to be disappointing. From autumn 2000 the AFCO staffs were authorised to open or close offices on Saturdays based on local conditions, resources and priorities.

Challenger

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average life expectancy of air filters used in those Challenger 2 tanks which participated in Operation Saif Sareea 2 was. [18462]

Mr. Ingram: During the first phase of Exercise Saif Sareea 2, the life of the Challenger 2 Main Battle Tank air filter reported from theatre was in the region of four hours. Information is currently being collected for the second phase of the exercise, which was held in a different part of Oman.

Spain (Officers Exchange)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officers on exchange between the UK and Spain are serving in (a) UK armed forces and (b) Spanish armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [17976]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 November 2001]: One Royal Navy exchange officer is attached to the Spanish navy and is reciprocated by a Spanish navy officer serving with the Royal Navy. In addition, we have a RAF liaison officer based in Spain and a Spanish liaison officer attached to the British Army.

Active Service

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) armoured regiments, (b) infantry battalions, (c) artillery regiments, (d) signals regiments and (e) RAF squadrons have seen active service in conflicts over the last 15 years; and if he will make a statement. [18753]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Civil Affairs Group

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the composition and capabilities of the Civil Affairs Group. [18869]

Mr. Ingram: Currently, the Civil Affairs Group comprises seven Regular Army Officers, a small administrative team and some 80 Territorial Army personnel. The group can deliver staff planning teams, tactical support teams and functional specialists as required.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to change the departmental expenditure limits for 2001–02. [19571]

Mr. Hoon: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Ministry of Defence departmental expenditure limit will be increased by £107,080,000 from £23,769,498,000 to £23,876,578,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on the resources and capital components is set out in the following table.

	£000
Resources
Change	106,780
New DEL	18,371,338
Of which:
Voted	18,144,740
Non-voted	226,598
Capital
Change	300
New DEL	5,505,240
Of which:
Voted	5,407,470
Non-voted	97,770

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises principally from:

The take-up of the end-of-year flexibility carried forward from 2000–01 of £72,917,000.

A net resource DEL transfer of £35,299,000 from the Department for Work and Pensions for the transfer of the running costs of the War Pensions Agency.

A transfer of £1,328,000 to the Cabinet Office for BBC World Monitoring expenses.

A transfer of £432,000 to the Cabinet Office for fast stream recruitment expenses.

A transfer of £176,000 to the Lord Chancellor's Department for legal aid expenses on human rights.

The change in the capital element of the DEL of £0.3 million arises from a transfer from the Department for Work and Pensions for the War Pensions Agency.

The increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Afghanistan

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are for personnel involved in Exercise Saif Sareea 2 to be deployed to Afghanistan to aid in the operations in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [15314]

Mr. Hoon: Exercise Saif Sareea 2 finished on 29 October. My right hon. Friend the Minister of State announced on 26 October 2001, Official Report, columns 549–64, that a force drawn from the exercise would be retained in the region to provide the operational flexibility to deal with a wide range of contingencies.

This force comprises an Amphibious Task Group based around HMS Illustrious and HMS Fearless, including 200 men of 40 Commando Royal Marines (with the rest of 40 Commando held at high readiness in the UK), and Nimrod maritime patrol and Hercules transport aircraft. A Tomahawk-armed submarine presence and a number of reconnaissance and air-to-air refuelling aircraft are also in the region.

Following the fall of Mazar-i-Sharif and Kabul, a number of units from 3 Commando Brigade Royal Marines that had taken part in Exercise Saif Sareea 2 were placed on reduced notice to move in case they were required to support humanitarian or other missions in Afghanistan.

Royal Marines from 40 Commando have subsequently been deployed to Bagram airfield. The deployment to Afghanistan of other units or personnel which took part in Exercise Saif Sareea 2 remains under review: no decisions have been taken.

September 11

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of 11 September on (a) NATO, (b) the EU and (c) the UK's regional interests; and if he will make a statement. [17363]

Mr. Hoon: NATO's response to the 11 September attacks included the invocation of Article 5 of the Washington treaty, which states that an attack on one Ally is an attack on all, for the first time in the Alliance's history. This has been supported by a series of specific actions, including deployment of NATO's Airborne Early Warning Force and the Standing Naval Force Mediterranean. The longer-term implications of the events of 11 September, including for the Alliance's force structures and for relations with Russia, are currently under discussion within the Alliance.

The EU Special Council on 21 September agreed to co-operate with the US in bringing to justice and punishing the perpetrators of the 11 September attacks, and approved a set of measures to combat terrorism, including enhancing police and judicial co-operation, developing legal instruments, putting an end to the funding of terrorism and strengthening air security. The General Affairs Council on 8 October, and again on 20 November, confirmed that all partners strongly support the US and UK military action.

The attacks have reinforced the need to build and maintain defence relationships with partners throughout the world. The unprecedented level of international support in the fight against terrorism demonstrates clearly the value of having strong defence relationships. As part of our work on a further chapter to the Strategic Defence Review, we are looking very closely at the impact of 11 September on international organisations, including NATO and the EU, and on our regional interests, not least given the need to sustain long-term coalitions against international terrorism. I expect to publish conclusions in the early summer of next year.

Tax-free Pensions

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) pensioners, (b) widows of pensioners and (c) their estates were identified as entitled to tax free pensions under the pre-1973 Attributable Tax Exercise of 1999; and how many fell into the same categories in cases arising from aggravated invaliding. [18006]

Dr. Moonie: We do not have available figures for the numbers of pre-1973 Royal Navy and Royal Air Force pensioners, widows of pensioners or estates entitled to tax free attributable pensions. This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, tax exemption was applied as appropriate in these cases.

The number of pre-1973 Army pensions, widows of pensioners or their estates identified as entitled to tax free pensions is as follows:

(a) 182 pre-1973 pensioners.

(b) 73 pre-1973 widows.

(c) Nil estates.

In these cases, as well as 787 post-1973 cases, tax exemption was not applied correctly. However this has been remedied in all but 26 cases, which are still under investigation.

Defence Logistics Organisation

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the sums provided for (a) capital expenditure and (b) current expenditure for the Defence Logistics Organisation in the current financial year. [18459]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 31 October 2001, Official Report, columns 659–60W.

Tornado GR1

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to (a) replace and (b) upgrade the Tornado GR1 aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [18759]

Mr. Ingram: We are continuing to upgrade the RAF's fleet of Tornado GR1 aircraft to GR4 standard. The GR4 has been in operational service with the RAF since June and to date 104 GR4s have been delivered.

The GR4 upgrade includes: Hand on Throttle and Stick (HOTAS); Forward Looking Infra Red (FLIR); improved navigation and warning systems (LINS/GPS/GPWS). In addition, the GR4 is now able to deploy the all-weather interim precision guided bomb, as well as laser guided and unguided bombs. The upgrade also paves the way for the eventual integration of Storm Shadow, Brimstone and the Raptor reconnaissance pod on to GR4.

The UK has a requirement to replace, towards the end of the next decade, the strike capability currently provided by the Tornado GR4 strike aircraft. This programme is known as the Future Offensive Air System (FOAS). While no decisions have yet been taken we are currently looking at a potential mix of platforms to deliver precision strike capability—including Long Range Cruise Missiles, Uninhabited Combat Air Vehicles and manned aircraft.

Regimental Running Costs

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the running costs of (a) an armoured regiment and (b) an artillery regiment, for the latest year for which figures are available. [18752]

Mr. Ingram: It is currently not possible accurately to provide the information requested. The introduction of improved accountancy procedures across the Ministry of Defence will enable us to do so in the future.

EU Rapid Reaction Force

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the use of the EU rapid reaction force for (a) crisis management and (b) war-fighting. [18258]

Mr. Hoon: There is no standing EU rapid reaction force. An EU-led crisis management operation would take place only where NATO as a whole is not engaged. The decision to proceed on a particular operation would be taken on a case by case basis, but the types of operation the EU might undertake could include humanitarian and rescue tasks, peacekeeping tasks and tasks of combat forces in crisis management, including peacemaking. These are commonly known as the Petersberg Tasks. The European Security and Defence Policy does not cover war-fighting operations.

Ex-service Men (Rough Sleepers)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the number of ex-service men who are rough sleepers; and if he will make a statement. [16143]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence does not monitor the number of rough sleepers. However, MOD has been working in partnership with the Rough Sleeper's Unit (RSU) to put in place preventive measures to reduce the ex-service component of rough sleeping, against the target of making an overall reduction in rough sleeping of at least two-thirds by 2002.

The Social Exclusion Unit Report published in December 1999 highlighted that between a quarter and one fifth of rough sleepers had been in the armed forces at some stage, predominantly as national service men. Since then the RSU in partnership with the MOD has set up schemes to help those vulnerable to rough sleeping, before, at the point of and after discharge.

Figures published in August by the RSU showed that as of June 2001 there had been a 62 per cent. reduction.

But we are not complacent. As part of the Government's Veterans' Initiative we are looking at improvements to resettlement arrangements for the vulnerable groups from which rough sleepers are most likely to come.

Armoured Vehicles

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what types of armoured vehicles are in service; and what are the (a) mid-life extension programmes dates and (b) anticipated withdrawal from service dates, where applicable. [18199]

Mr. Ingram: The following types of armoured vehicle are currently in service with the UK armed forces (the dates of any planned life extension programmes and withdrawal from services dates, based on current plans, are also given):

Type	Fleet size	Life extension dates, where applicable	Planned withdrawal/phase out from service dates

MOD Police Vehicles

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the merits of the MoD police purchasing vehicles through a central purchasing agency. [18398]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Procurement Agency is the central purchasing agency for the Ministry of Defence. The MOD Police is a Defence Agency and the DPA purchase all vehicles used by the Force in line with standard procurement procedures.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what policy the MOD police adopts towards supporting British manufacturing when purchasing vehicles. [18399]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Procurement Agency purchase all vehicles for the Ministry of Defence Police on a best value for money basis.

NATO Defence Capabilities Initiative

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the NATO Defence Capabilities Initiative will report; and if he will make a statement. [18640]

Mr. Hoon: NATO's Defence Capabilities Initiative was launched at the Washington Summit in April 1999 with a view to addressing shortfalls in military capabilities across the Alliance. The Initiative is overseen by the High Level Steering Group (HLSG), the Chairman of which periodically reports to NATO Defence Ministers. The next report is due to be presented at the December Ministerials, with the HLSG's final report at the Prague Summit next year.

Since 1999 NATO nations have been working hard to implement the DCI. Progress has been made in many capability areas, including interoperability; logistics co-operation; air to air refuelling; air and sealift; and acquisition of precision-guided munitions. The UK's own performance within the Defence Capabilities Initiative compares very well with the Alliance average.

Far East Prisoners of War

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the pick-up rate broken down by condition of the medical screening programme for Far East prisoners of war; and if he will make a statement. [18407]

Dr. Moonie: There is no medical screening programme for former Far East prisoners of war. The War Pensions Agency does however offer a Tropical Disease Investigation. Arrangements for this are not conditional upon a person being in receipt of a war pension. Since May 2000, Tropical Disease Investigations have been offered to 45 former Far East prisoners of war of whom 15 have accepted and 30 declined.

Military Courses

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total revenue his Department has received in each of the last 10 years as a result of providing places on UK military courses to overseas service men. [16142]

Mr. Ingram: The table shows the revenue received by the Ministry of Defence for the period 1991–92 to 2000–01 in support of International Training.

Year	£ million
1991–92	63.186

Divorce (Service Men)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men occupying married quarters were divorced in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [16144]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to renegotiate the public service agreements signed with the Treasury for 2001 to 2004. [18461]

Mr. Hoon: The Ministry of Defence's Public Service Agreement (PSA) records the key defence outcomes the Government aim to achieve over the Spending Review period. The PSA agreed as part of Spending Review 2000 relates to the period 2001–02 to 2003–04. As part of Spending Review 2002, all Departments' PSAs will be reviewed and revised as necessary for the period 2003–04 to 2005–06.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when her Department first received warnings from training providers that the individual learning account scheme was open to fraud. [14580]

John Healey [holding answer 13 November 2001]: My Department actively engaged learning providers in the development of the individual learning accounts programme. For example, a number of seminars were held with learning providers in 2000, prior to the introduction of the national framework for individual learning accounts, and these continued into 2001. At these events providers expressed a wide range of opinions. In September 2000 James O'Brien, Managing Director, Pitman Training, wrote to Ministers to express concern that the programme was open to abuse but that the cap on public support for each individual's ILA account introduced to help control such abuse had been set at too low a level. We have not yet been able to trace any earlier correspondence on the specific topic of potential abuse of the ILA scheme.

Gender Stereotyping

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance has been issued to careers teachers to challenge preconceptions about girls' and boys' subjects and employments. [16264]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information and good practice to challenge preconceptions about career choices is contained in a number of documents made available by my Department to schools and careers advisers, including "Developing the careers education curriculum in schools", 1999, and "School improvement: how careers work can help", 2000. The issue is also covered by research published by the Equal Opportunities Commission, and in forthcoming guidance by Ofsted on evaluating careers education in schools, which will be issued to schools early in the new year.

The Connexions service works with young people aged between 13 and 19, including those in schools, and subsumes the role of careers services in guiding young people on suitable employment and learning choices. Connexions and careers services work closely with careers teachers to provide comprehensive and impartial information, advice and guidance. They offer training to teachers and other staff so that schools can challenge stereotyping, promote equality of opportunity and engender a wide awareness of opportunities among pupils.

Specialist Schools

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many specialist schools have closed since 1997 in (a) England and (b) east Devon. [17269]

Mr. Timms: One specialist school has closed in England since 1997; this was due to local authority reorganisation. No specialist schools have closed in east Devon. 25 former specialist schools in England no longer have Specialist School status. All of these lost their status since 1997. There were none in east Devon.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many specialist schools have closed since 1997 in Arundel and South Downs. [18310]

Mr. Timms: No specialist schools have closed in Arundel and South Downs since the inception of specialist schools. There are 25 former specialist schools in England which no longer have Specialist School status. All of these have lost their status since 1997. None of them are located in the constituency of Arundel and South Downs.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills for each specialist school and college in (a) Nottingham and (b) Nottinghamshire, what were its (i) targets associated with specialist status and (ii) success in meeting those targets in the most recent year for which information is available. [18619]

Mr. Timms: This information cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Jean Monnet Chairs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the Jean Monnet (a) chairs and (b) chair occupants funded in the UK by European Community money. [17622]

Margaret Hodge: Jean Monnet chairs are co-financed by their universities and by the European Commission. The present occupants of the Jean Monnet chairs in United Kingdom and their universities are listed by subject area.

Youth Services

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in relation to youth services in each local education authority how many hours of provision are made (a) directly by the LEA (b) on behalf of the LEA and (c) independently of the LEA. [18623]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Under the Learning and Skills Act 2000 the provision of the youth service is the responsibility of local education authorities (LEAs). The Department for Education and Skills does not collect information on youth service hours of provision that are made directly by the LEA, on behalf of the LEA or independently of the LEA.

Rural Education Action Zones

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how she proposes that the work of rural education action zones be carried forward following the transfer of responsibility for EAZ schools to the Excellence in Cities programme. [18624]

Mr. Timms: Wherever possible, we aim to find ways of continuing to support ex-zone schools following the end of each zone's statutory term. My officials are starting discussions with each zone on the future of the zone, with a view to having firm proposals well before the end of its statutory term.

Specialist Schools

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the specialist schools in education authorities which retain the 11-plus, indicating which are (a) grammar and (b) secondary modern or non-selective schools. [18647]

Mr. Timms: For the 10 LEAs in which 25 per cent. or more secondary pupils attend grammar schools, the table shows the specialist schools which are (a) grammar schools and (b) secondary modern or non-selective.

GCSE Results (Arundel and South Downs)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on difference in performance at GCSE between state secondary schools (a) with and (b) without a sixth form in Arundel and South Downs. [18325]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The proportion of 15-year-olds achieving five or more GCSEs at A* to C in Arundel and South Downs in 2001 was as follows (the results of the individual schools included in the averages are also given):

Percentage

	Arundel and South Down	Individual schools
(a) Schools with sixth forms	56.7	—
The Angmering School	—	54
Steyning Grammar School	—	58
The St. Philip Howard Catholic High School	—	58
(b) Schools without sixth forms	63.4	—

Higher Education (East Sussex)

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans there are to establish a new (a) university and (b) higher education college in East Sussex. [9859]

Margaret Hodge: There are no plans at present to establish another higher education institution in East Sussex. However, as part of a five point programme to regenerate Hastings and Rother, there are discussions underway about developing higher education in East Sussex.

GCSE Results

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will provide a nationwide breakdown of GCSE results in 2001 by gender. [18614]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The GCSE results for 15-year-old pupils in schools in England in 2001 by gender are:

	Boys	Girls	Total
Percentage achieving five or more grades A*-C	44.8	55.4	50.0
Percentage achieving five or more grades A*-G	86.9	91.0	88.9

Education Maintenance Allowances

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how (a) participation rates and (b) attainment levels (i) of pupils and (ii) of areas benefiting from education maintenance allowances compare with those not so benefiting; [18620]

(2) if she proposes to publish evidence on the educational benefits of education maintenance allowances before taking a decision about roll-out; and when that will be. [18621]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) pilots are being evaluated over a three-year period, and we will be basing our decisions about any national roll-out on the evaluation evidence. From the beginning, we have made clear our commitment to publishing reports which set out the independent evaluators' main conclusions. The first reports were published in March this year and the next report is due for publication early in 2002. The quantitative analysis which is being carried out compares performance in the areas where we are piloting EMAs against "control areas" where EMA is not available.

Early findings from the evaluation show that EMA appears to have raised participation in education. The statistical analysis estimates an average gain in participation in pilot areas compared to control areas, among EMA eligible young people, of around five percentage points.

Although we do not yet have figures on attainment, the qualitative aspect of the evaluation has found some evidence of a positive effect on young people's performance and commitment to study.

Connexions Service

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what are her quantitive targets for the Connexions service. [18622]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Connexions service has published the following targets in its Planning Guidance for 2002–03:

Cross cutting targets

Connexions partnerships will contribute to the following local targets set by Government Departments and agencies:

to increase the proportion of 16-year-olds obtaining five or more GCSEs at grades A*-C (or equivalent) by four percentage points between 2002 and 2004 (DfES & LEA target);

92 per cent. of 16-year-olds to obtain five or more GCSEs at grades A*-G (or equivalent), including English and Maths, by 2004 (DfES & LEA target);

the number of 19-year-olds achieving a qualification equivalent to NVQ level 2 to increase by three percentage points between 2002 and 2004 (LSC target);

80 per cent. of 16–18-year-olds to be in structured learning by 2004 (LSC target); to reduce school truancies by a further 10 per cent. between 2002 and 2004 (DfES target); to reduce by 50 per cent. the under-18 conception rate by 2010, and to establish a firm downward trend in the conception rates for the under 16s (cross Government target).

Partnership targets

Connexions partnerships will lead in setting and achieving the following local targets in their area:

A reduction in the percentage of young people leaving education and training to become NEET (not in employment, education or training);

The percentage of those young people who were looked after at the age of 16, who are engaged in employment, education and training at the age of 19. Levels for this group should be at least 75 per cent. of those for all young people of the same age in the area by 2004;

The percentage of 16–19-year-old teenage mothers in employment, education and training;

The proportion of 13–18-year-olds, supervised by Youth Offending Teams who are in employment, education and training by March 2004;

The proportion of 13–18-year-olds with a drug related problem who are identified and referred to an appropriate specialist service by Connexions;

A local target, to improve levels of participation among a local priority group. This might be a particular minority ethnic group, travellers, or young people whose whereabouts are not currently known.

A further target, for young people with disabilities, is being considered in conjunction with the Department of Health.

Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many formal notices her Department has received in the last year from the Parliamentary Ombudsman expressing an intention to carry out an investigation; and in respect of each notice how long it took to respond. [18771]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Information on the outcome of statutory investigations which were concluded during 2000–01 are set out in the Parliamentary Ombudsman's Annual Report for 2000–01, copies of which are available in the Library of the House, or on the Parliamentary Ombudsman's website at www.ombudsman.org.uk/pca/document/par01/index.htm.

Between 1 April 2001 and 31 October 2001 my Department received five new statutory statements of complaint from the Parliamentary Ombudsman. So far, my Department has responded to all of these cases, and the average time taken to respond overall is 21 days.

Departmental Spending Limits

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to change the departmental expenditure limit and administration cost limits for 2001–02. [19511]

Estelle Morris: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department for Education and Skills' DEL will be decreased by £1,358,837,000 from £21,582,664,000 to £20,223,827,000 and the administration costs limits will be changed as follows.

The reduction in the voted resource element of the DEL for RfR1, (£242,549,000) arises from the take up of £320,860,000 of End Year Flexibility provision; the increase in receipts of £40,000,000 resulting from the winding up of the Training and Enterprise Councils; the transfer of £25,478,000 to the Cabinet Office to support Government offices, recruitment of Fast Streamers and Millennium Volunteers; the transfer of £9,414,000 from the Home Office for the education of adult and juvenile offenders, Adult Basic Skills projects and Community Champions; the transfer of £4,097,000 from the Department of Health for Health Education Partnerships and the Education Projects Implementation Programme; the transfer of £1,072,000 to the Welsh Executive for the National Training Organisation and for Hardship and Opportunity Bursaries; the transfer of £1,000,000 to the Department for Work and Pensions to support Lone Parents; an increase to the Standards Fund of £710,000; the transfer of £473,000 to the Scottish Executive for Hardship Bursaries and Fee Remission for Open University Students; the take up of £123,000 from the Evidence Based Policy Fund for research projects; the transfer of £100,000 from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for the Property Service Agency costs transferred to DfES; the transfer of £70,000 to the Department of Trade and Industry for Work Life Balance secondees; and the transfer of £496,349,000 to the Department for Work and Pensions, £8,207,000 to the Department of Trade and Industry, £4,590,000 to the Home Office and £614,000 to the Cabinet Office as part of the machinery of Government changes announced by the Prime Minister on 8 June 2001. The reduction in the voted resource element of the DEL for RfR2, (£1,410,305,000) arises from the transfer of the Employment Service to the Department for Work and Pensions as part of the machinery of Government changes.

The reduction in the voted resource element of DEL for RfR4 arises from the transfer of £384,000 to the Cabinet Office to support Children's Fund partnerships work in Government offices.

The increase in the voted capital element of the DEL for RfR1, (£270,290,000) arises from the take up of £235,000,000 of End Year Flexibility provision; the transfer of £30,000,000 from the Department for Work and Pensions being the refund of CMF provision from the Employment Service and; the take up of £6,000,000 from the Capital Modernisation Fund (CMF) for the Cybrarian, Advanced and Enterprise Specialist Schools and SEN Communication Aids; and an increase of £710,000 in former grant maintained school loan repayments.

The reduction in the voted capital element of the DEL for RfR2, (£17,652,000) arises from the transfer of the Employment Service to the Department for Work and Pensions.

The increase in the non-voted resource element of the DEL, (£69,877,000) arises from the take up of £68,467,000 of End Year Flexibility provision; an increase of £40,000,000 to the grant in aid to the Learning and Skills Council; the transfer of £13,735,000 to the Scottish Executive for Open University Students; the transfer of £3,250,000 from the Home Office for Higher Education Active Community Fund projects; the transfer of £1,200,000 from the Department for Work and Pensions for provision the Adult Learning Inspectorate; the transfer of £1,100,000 to the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions to support the Maritime Training Scheme; and the transfer of £19,600,000 to the Department for Work and Pensions and £8,605,000 to the Cabinet Office as part of the machinery of Government changes.

The decrease in the non-voted capital element of the DEL arises from the transfer of £1,402,000 to the Department for Work and Pensions as part of the machinery of Government changes.

The non-voted DEL has also been reduced by £25,712,000 (resource) and by £1,000,000 (capital) as a result of the transfer of the European Regional Development Fund provision to the Department for Work and Pensions as part of the machinery of Government changes. Whilst this provision is in our DEL it is not in our estimate.

Lecturers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the ability of part-time lecturers to provide quality support to their students. [18674]

Margaret Hodge: The Department is not aware of any issues regarding the ability of part-time lecturers to offer quality support to their students. NATFHE recently published a report 'in From the cold' about part-time lecturers in higher education, which did not uncover any problems in this area. Membership of the ILT helps lecturers to ensure that they are equipped with the skills necessary to be able to give a high standard of teaching to their students. The ILT encourages membership of part-time staff.

School Records

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance she has issued to (a) local education authorities and (b) schools in respect of (i) their responsibilities for the preservation of school records and (ii) their co-operation with local public records offices in order to maintain the integrity of school records for the purposes of historical research; and if she will make a statement. [15831]

Mr. Timms: We have issued no guidance to local education authorities and schools on these matters. As schools' own records are not public records, it is for them to make their own decisions, consulting local public records offices as they think fit.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Wychavon District Council

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent assessment he has made of the improvement in the performance of the planning department of Wychavon district council; and if he will make a statement. [14283]

Ms Keeble: We monitor all authorities' performance in handling planning applications on a quarterly basis. The most recent figures show that Wychavon determined 69 per cent. of applications within eight weeks in the period April to June 2001, compared with 35 per cent. in the equivalent period in 2000. The authority is subject to a Best Value performance standard that requires it to determine at least 65 per cent. of applications within eight weeks in 2001–02.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what are the (a) original and (b) latest estimates of the (i) cost and (ii) longevity of the West Coast Main Line works in Hertfordshire. [15804]

Mr. Jamieson: It is not possible to give a breakdown of costs of the works in Hertfordshire alone. We know from our discussions with the Strategic Rail Authority, Railtrack and Virgin Trains that the project is facing problems in terms of cost increases and uncertainty about the timescale for delivery. Works in Hertfordshire will include major track, signalling and power supply replacement. There are major packages planned for the summer of 2002 and spring 2003 in the Hemel-Tring area, and major resignalling works planned for the Watford area in 2004.

Street Lighting

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if local transport plan funding in 2002–03 will include funding for street lighting. [16079]

Ms Keeble: The Government are committed in the 10-year Plan for Transport to tackling the maintenance backlog for local authority roads, bridges and street lighting. Over £30 billion is being provided for local road maintenance over the next 10 years, an extra £9 billion (27 per cent. in real terms) above the funding levels in the previous 10 years. Capital expenditure on maintenance, which is used to tackle deterioration, will increase by nearly £7 billion over the 10 years.

Funding for the maintenance and renewal of street lighting is currently made through the Highways Maintenance Standard Spending Assessment element of Revenue Support Grant. No specific provision has been made in the 2002–03 capital maintenance settlement for renewal of street lighting. The first priority in the 10-Year Plan is to halt the deterioration in carriageways and footways and to continue the bridge strengthening programme. Additional provision for street lighting renewal may be made through the LTP system in later years. For the present, authorities have discretion over the funding provided for maintenance and smaller integrated transport schemes and may use this to fund capital works on street lighting where this is a local priority.

DTLR is aware that street lighting columns in a number of authorities are failing structurally, but does not have sufficient information to determine the number of columns that are unsafe. Local authorities have agreed with DTLR that a national condition survey for street lighting should be introduced, and that information from this should be used to compile a national inventory. In future years the inventory could be used to target funding for tackling the street lighting backlog.

Motorway Speed Limits

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list those sections of motorway that have (a) a 50 mph limit, (b) variable speed limits and (c) other speed limits less than the national limit. [16598]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 20 November 2001]:

50 mph speed limit

M1 Junction 1 (A406)—northbound link roads/small length of main northbound carriageway

M4—Junction 4 to Elevated Section—50 mph

M4 Heathrow Spur

M11 Southbound approach to Junction 4 (A406)

M606 link to the westbound carriageway of M62 at Junction 26

M6 between Junctions 3 and 4

M1/M62 Links at Junction 42/Junction 29 Lofthouse

M65 approach to Junction 1A

M621 Junction 1 to Junction 6, including all slip roads

M61 Kearsley Spur

Variable speed limit

M25 Junctions 10–15

Other speed limits less than the national limit

M1—lengths of two northbound link roads closest to Junction 1—30 mph

M4 Elevated section (west of Junction 2-Junction 1)—40 mph

M1 Junction 2 (A1) slip roads—30 mph

M1 Junction 6 Southbound part of entry and exit slip roads—30 mph

M32 between J2 and 3—60 mph

M621 J1–6 30 and 40 mph speed limits on entry and exit slip roads.

Planning Appeals (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many appeals against refused planning applications he has received in 2001 in respect of sites in the Buckingham constituency. [16900]

Ms Keeble: The provision of information on planning appeals is the responsibility of the Planning Inspectorate. I have asked the Inspectorate's Chief Executive, Mr. Chris Shepley, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Shepley to Mr. John Bercow, dated 28 November 2001:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of planning appeals received from within your constituency this year.

I regret I cannot be specific as our records are based on Local Authority areas. Within the Aylesbury Vale District Council area, 68 appeals against refused planning applications have been received since 1 January 2001. Of these, 2 have a Buckingham postal address.

Railway Workers

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many railway workers have made representations to him since 5 October; and on what subjects. [17114]

Mr. Jamieson: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Minister for Transport have had a number of meetings with trade union representatives to discuss the concerns of railway workers. In addition, we have received letters from individual railway workers.

Rent Restructuring

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish representations he has received from (a) the local authority associations, (b) organisations representing tenants' interests and (c) registered social landlords regarding the implementation of the rent restructuring proposals in April 2002. [19039]

Ms Keeble: We are placing copies of the responses to the consultation on "HRA subsidy and rent restructuring" in my Department's library. The responses to the consultation following the April 2000 Housing Green Paper, which first outlined our proposals for rent restructuring, have already been placed in the Departmental library.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the estimated savings to the Treasury are in the next financial year following implementation of the Government's proposals on rent restructuring. [17169]

Ms Keeble: None. There is no intention that the technical changes designed to bring the assumptions in the Housing Revenue Account subsidy system back into line with actual costs and resources should be used either to reduce or increase the aggregate level of resources available to councils nationally.

Parking Charges (Central London)

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what was the estimated gross income from parking charges received by (a) Camden, (b) Kensington and Chelsea, (c) Wandsworth, (d) Westminster, (e) Islington, (f) Southwark and (g) Lambeth in 1999–2000. [17412]

Ms Keeble: The gross income from off-street and on-street parking in 1999–2000 is given in the tables:

Camden	24,535
Islington	5,812
Kensington and Chelsea	30,434
Lambeth	10,663
Southwark	6,209
Wandsworth	8,731
Westminster	88,020

Road Accidents (Somerset)

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many (a) fatal and (b) serious road traffic accidents have taken place in (i) Somerset and (ii) the constituency of Somerton and Frome in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [17930]

Mr. Jamieson: Road accident statistics are compiled by local authority area and are not available centrally for parliamentary constituencies. The table shows the numbers of fatal and serious road traffic accidents in each of the local authority areas in Somerset.

Fatal road accidents in Somerset by local authority district

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Mendip	9	6	12	9	18
Sedgemoor	7	12	6	7	4
Taunton Deane	5	8	11	6	3
West Somerset	3	3	3	0	3
South Somerset	21	9	12	12	13
Total	45	38	44	34	41

Serious road accidents in Somerset by local authority district

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000
Mendip	57	61	47	50	61
Sedgemoor	61	54	45	39	34
Taunton Deane	66	58	52	40	35
West Somerset	14	13	10	17	11
South Somerset	74	81	84	82	87
Total	272	267	238	228	228

Road Accidents (Bassetlaw)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many road users in the Bassetlaw constituency had accidents in the last year for which figures are available; and what is the average in constituencies in England. [17439]

Mr. Jamieson: Road accident statistics are compiled by local authority area and are not available centrally for parliamentary constituencies. The information available relates only to accidents which result in personal injury.

There were 742 road user casualties in accidents which took place within the Bassetlaw local authority area in 2000. An additional 420 uninjured drivers and riders were involved in these accidents. It is not known how many uninjured passengers or pedestrians were involved.

Regional Airports (Flight Surcharges)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will abolish flight surcharges from regional airports. [18004]

Mr. Jamieson: It is for airlines and air travel organisers to justify their prices. If passengers feel they are not getting a fair deal they should make their views known to them, and perhaps shop around for a better deal.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Quinquennial Review of the Ordnance Survey. [17985]

Ms Keeble: I have received the Stage 1 Report of the Quinquennial Review of Ordnance Survey and will make an announcement shortly.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he has concluded his consideration of the formal review of the Ordnance Survey Framework Document 1999 undertaken by the Ordnance Survey Management Board. [18170]

Ms Keeble: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that the then Under-Secretary of State my hon. Friend the Member for Stretford and Urmston (Beverley Hughes) gave on 15 February 2001, Official Report, columns 220–21W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Ruth Kelly) announcing the Quinquennial Review to the House.

For the current Quinquennial Review, CMG Admiral was appointed to carry out the task following a competitive tendering process. The review has provided extensive opportunities for consultation with internal and external stakeholders.

Following the completion of Stage 1, I have since received the Report of the Quinquennial Review of Ordnance Survey and will make an announcement shortly.

Public Transport (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to increase the allocation of funding for public transport in the Greater London area. [17884]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government's spending plans for public transport in London and elsewhere were set out in "Transport 2010: The 10 Year Plan", issued in July 2000. The 10 Year Plan provides over £25 billion of public and private investment between 2001–02 and 2010–11. In addition, London will also benefit from some national rail schemes.

Precise levels of funding for Transport for London will be decided following consultation with the Mayor on the determination of his transport grant for 2002–03, and in respect of the underground, once the negotiations with preferred bidders for the tube modernisation contracts have been successfully concluded.

Buses (Safety)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what powers the Transport Commissioners have to investigate bus services that are deemed to be unsafe. [17875]

Ms Keeble: In order to obtain and retain a Public Service Vehicle (PSV) Operator's Licence, the bus operator must satisfy the relevant Traffic Commissioner that he is of good repute, professionally competent, of appropriate financial standing, and is able to maintain his vehicles properly.

In cases where it appears to the Commissioner that appropriate vehicle safety standards are not being maintained, he can call upon my Department's Vehicle Inspectorate to investigate. If safety standards are found to be inadequate, the Commissioner can take disciplinary action against the operator's PSV licence.

Passenger safety on local bus services is primarily a matter for the bus operator itself.

Stagecoach

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the outcome of the investigation by the Traffic Commissioner into the operation of bus services by Stagecoach in Gloucester and Cheltenham in November. [17878]

Ms Keeble: I understand that the Traffic Commissioner for the Western Traffic Area called two Stagecoach-owned bus companies to public inquiry on 10 October 2001 following a reliability monitoring exercise by the Vehicle Inspectorate on their local bus services.

At the Inquiry, the Traffic Commissioner fined Cheltenham District Traction Company Ltd., 10 per cent. of the Fuel Duty Rebate paid to them during the three months prior to the determination being made. The Commissioner issued a formal warning to the other operator, Cheltenham and Gloucester Omnibus Company Ltd., as to its future conduct in ensuring that the services which it provides are reliable.

The Commissioner can take further disciplinary action against either operator if reliability does not improve.

Transport Spending

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the total UK public expenditure, broken down into (a) capital and (b) revenue, including EU grants, was in each year since 1980 for which figures are available on (i) road infrastructure, (ii) local public transport, (iii) rail transport, (iv) water transport and (v) air transport. [18082]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is not readily available. I have asked my officials to collate this information and will write to my hon. Friend. A copy of my letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Newly Qualified Drivers

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will introduce a probationary period for newly qualified drivers in the United Kingdom. [17833]

Mr. Jamieson: The Road Traffic (New Drivers) Act 1995 and the Road Traffic (New Drivers) Northern Ireland Order 1998 introduced probationary periods for newly qualified drivers. Under these provisions, the licence of any driver who accumulates six or more penalty points in the first two years after passing their first driving test will be revoked automatically. To regain a full licence, a provisional licence must be obtained and the theory and practical tests taken and passed again. In accordance with the Government's Road Safety Strategy, we intend to consult shortly on a wide range of issues regarding newly qualified drivers.

Fishing Communities Regeneration Initiative

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list, by region, the communities that have received funds under the Fishing Communities Regeneration Initiative and the purposes for which each community used its funds. [18269]

Ms Keeble: I have written to the relevant Regional Development Agencies that operate the Fishing Communities Regeneration Initiative asking for this information. When the information has been assembled in the Department I shall write to my hon. Friend. A copy of my letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Braer

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he has received the new evidence gained from re-examination of the Braer's surviving logbooks by two independent marine engineers; and if he will make a statement; [18727]

(2) if he will order the Marine Accidents Investigation Board to re-open the inquiry to establish the facts concerning the loss of the Braer; [18722]

(3) if he will make a statement on the recent decision of the Marine Accidents Investigation Board not to re-open the inquiry into the loss of the Braer; [18725]

(4) if he will order a public inquiry to establish responsibility for the loss of the Braer. [18723]

Mr. Jamieson: The Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 1999 (SI 1999 No. 2567) state that

> "The Chief Inspector (of Marine Accidents) may cause any investigation to be reopened either generally or as to any part thereof, and he shall do so
> (a) if after the completion of the investigation in his opinion new and important evidence has been discovered, or
> (b) if for any other reason there is in his opinion ground for suspecting that a miscarriage of justice has occurred."

The Chief Inspector of Marine Accidents has received, and very carefully considered, the log-books and certain other information concerning the Braer. In his opinion it is not new and important evidence, nor does it make him believe a miscarriage of justice has occurred.

The decision not to reopen the MAIB investigation into the loss of the Braer is entirely for the Chief Inspector and I am satisfied he has considered the matter fully.

I consider there are no grounds for ordering a public inquiry.

Dangerous Items (Airport Sales)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he has taken to ban the sale of dangerous items in airside shops at airports; and how these restrictions are monitored. [18637]

Mr. Jamieson: DTLR issued Heightened Security Measures by legal direction on 26 September 2001. This lists articles which, as potential weapons, must not be taken into the restricted zone of an aerodrome or into the cabin of an aircraft either by passengers or as goods for retail or supply to passengers. DTLR aviation security inspectors monitor compliance.

London Underground

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what effect the credit rating of Transport for London will have on the future cost of the public-private partnership for the London Underground; and if he will make a statement. [18389]

Mr. Jamieson: Transport for London's credit rating is one of the many factors that financiers will take into account when bidders raise private sector finance for the tube modernisation plans.

Transport (Arundel and South Downs)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made as to the adequacy of (a) rail services and (b) bus services between Arundel and South Downs and London. [18326]

Mr. Jamieson: No formal assessment of rail or coach services has been made.

On rail travel, the Strategic Rail Authority is negotiating a new South Central franchise with GoVia, who have recently assumed ownership of the existing franchise. The Strategic Rail Authority's Strategic Plan, which will be published in the near future, will set out its priorities for enhancement of the network.

While we recognise the value of long-distance coach services, decisions on what services to provide are a matter for commercial operators responding to passenger demand.

Traffic Schemes

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the number of traffic schemes in London approved by him in each of the last three years relating to the provision of (a) road humps and (b) pinch-points; what the cost of the schemes was; and what effect these developments have had on (i) traffic flows and (ii) road safety. [18397]

Mr. Jamieson: Over the last three years, London local authorities have been free to install traffic calming features complying with regulations, and no information is held centrally on such features. The Secretary of State's authorisation was required for "non-complying" features up to April 1999, when this requirement was replaced in London only by a requirement to notify the Secretary of State of such features. No applications for authorisation were received from London local authorities in the two years to April 1999, and no notifications have been received since.

National Air Traffic Services

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what representations he has received from the Airline Group for financial assistance to support its operation of the National Air Traffic Services; [18742]

(2) what recent communications have taken place between his Department's officials and representatives of the Airline Group with regard to the funding of the National Air Traffic Services; [18743]

(3) if he will make a statement on the future viability of the public private partnership arrangements for the management of the National Air Traffic Services following the recent downturn in demand for air passenger traffic. [18741]

Mr. Jamieson: NATS is reviewing its financial position, following the downturn in demand for air travel, and is finalising its business plan, for submission to the Government shortly. The Government have had discussions with NATS and the Airline Group about the implications of revised traffic forecasts on the company's long term viability, but have received no request for financial assistance as a result.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many jobs within the National Air Traffic Control Services he expects to be shed over the next three years. [18745]

Mr. Jamieson: Information on staffing levels within National Air Traffic Services should be sought from the Chief Executive's Office, NATS, One Kemble Street, London WC2B 4AP.

Housing (West Wiltshire)

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of changes in the supply of low-cost homes on the housing situation in West Wiltshire. [18420]

Ms Keeble: The Department requires local authorities to carry out robust assessments of local housing need in their areas and to develop housing strategies that address the identified need for affordable housing and also to make effective use of their powers under the planning system to secure an element of affordable housing within new housing developments.

West Wiltshire district council granted planning permission for 51 units of affordable housing in the 2000–01 financial year. These homes will be available for renting through Registered Social Landlords.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of (a) the number of new households in West Wiltshire for each of the years from 1995 to 2001 and (b) the number of new households in these years unable to (i) rent and (ii) buy in West Wiltshire. [18421]

Ms Keeble: The estimated net increase in the number of households in West Wiltshire in the five years to 1999, the latest date for which data are available, is 1,400 giving an average increase of around 300 households per year. Mid year household estimates for England at local authority level are published annually. Data for 2000 will be published on 29 November and a copy placed in the Library of the House. Uncertainties in these estimates increase with geographical detail and mid year estimates are only published to the nearest thousand.

No information is available on the number of new households in these years unable to buy or rent in West Wiltshire.

Empty Homes

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what measures he is taking to ensure that authorities in England publish empty homes strategies. [18419]

Ms Keeble: We have no plans to require local authorities to publish empty homes strategies. The guidance provided to local authorities on housing strategies makes clear that we expect them to consider the role that effective action to tackle empty homes can play in addressing housing problems in their area. All authorities are required to report their performance in doing so through the Best Value in Housing programme.

Voting (Postal Strikes)

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans the Government have to change the rules on (a) postal and (b) absentee voting to take into account postal strikes. [18445]

Dr. Whitehead: The Electoral Commission announced on 20 November that it was initiating a review of postal and absent voting, to report by September 2002. The Government will consider any recommendations which the Commission may make for changes in legislation.

M6

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans his Department has to improve the M6 between Birmingham and Manchester. [18438]

Mr. Jamieson: The section of the M6 between junction 11 and 20 is currently being investigated as part of the West Midlands to North West Multi-Modal Study. The consultants are due to release the final report for the study towards the end of January 2002. It will be for the Regional Assembly in the North West and the West Midlands Local Government Association to consider the report and make their recommendations to the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions. The Secretary of State will decide which measures to take forward through other Government agencies. If approved any new works could start within the 10 Year Transport Plan period.

M6/M56

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects work to begin on the motorway link between junction 19 of the M6 and the M56. [18447]

Mr. Jamieson: The M6 and A556 are currently being investigated as part of the West Midlands to North West Multi-Modal Study. The Consultants are due to release the final report for the Study towards the end of January 2002. It will be for the Regional Assembly in the North West and the West Midlands Local Government Association to consider the report and make their recommendations to the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions. The Secretary of State will decide which measures to take forward through other Government Agencies. If approved any new works could start within the 10 Year Transport Plan period.

Cheshire Fire Service

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many persons were employed in the Cheshire Fire Service in (a) 1997 and (b) 2001. [18450]

Dr. Whitehead: Based on annual returns submitted to HM Fire Services Inspectorate, the number of persons employed by Cheshire Fire Brigade as at 31 March 1997 and 31 March 2001 was as follows:

	1997	2001
Wholetime firefighters	620	612
Retained firefighters	192	190
Control room staff	29	24
Other staff	88	103

Speed Limits (Residential Areas)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the average cost to local authorities of introducing 20 mph zones in residential areas. [18481]

Mr. Jamieson: The design and implementation of 20 mph zones is a matter for each local traffic authority and therefore estimates have not been prepared centrally. Costs will vary according to the size of the zone, the type and number of the speed controlling measures used and the quality of the materials. From past experience costs of typical schemes are likely to be in the order of £100,000 to £200,000.

Traffic-Calming Measures

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much local authorities have spent on traffic-calming measures from 1992 up to the last year for which figures are available. [18480]

Mr. Jamieson: The introduction of traffic calming measures is a matter for local highway authorities. We have no details of the amounts spent by authorities since 1992.

East Devon-London Transport Links

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the adequacy of (a) rail services and (b) bus services between east Devon and London; and if he will make a statement. [18282]

Mr. Jamieson: No formal assessment of rail or coach services has been made.

On rail services, we would expect South West Trains and Wessex Trains in consultation with local stakeholders to come forward with proposals to meet demands for new or improved services. The Strategic Rail Authority's Strategic Plan, which will be published in the near future, will set out its priorities for enhancement to the network.

While we recognise the value of long-distance coach services, decisions on the services to provide are a matter for commercial operators responding to passenger demand.

Housing PFI

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the status of the housing PFI pathfinder projects. [18291]

Ms Keeble: There are eight pathfinder authorities currently going through the procurement process for housing private finance initiative. The authorities are at varying stages in the process. Manchester, Sandwell, Islington and North East Derbyshire are evaluating bids from potential contractors. Leeds, Newham, Camden and Reading are due to issue a document inviting bids during the next three months. Contract signatures are expected during 2002.

Housing (West Midlands)

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the number of new homes constructed in the west Midlands by local authority area using Housing Corporation funding in the past five years. [18290]

Ms Keeble: The number of new homes constructed in the west Midlands by local authority area using Housing Corporation funding in the past five years is shown in the table. (The table does not include Housing Corporation funded rehabilitation of rented stock and low cost home ownership schemes).

Housing Transfers

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) which local authorities have transferred their housing stock to new registered social landlords and if he will give the number of homes involved in each case; [18289]

(2) if he will list the local authorities which have indicated that they would like to proceed to transfer their housing stock. [18292]

Ms Keeble: A table indicating the local authorities that have transferred some or all of their stock to registered social landlords has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Applications for a place on next year's Large Scale Voluntary Transfer Programme are due to be received by 11 January 2002. Once these applications have been assessed my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will announce the local authorities that have been granted a place on the programme.

Planning Inquiries

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many public inquiries into planning applications have lasted more than (a) one month and (b) three months in each of the last five years. [17356]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Public inquiries are presided over by Inspectors provided by the Planning Inspectorate. I have asked the Inspectorate's Chief Executive, Mr. Chris Shepley, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from C. J. Shepley to Paddy Tipping dated 28 November 2001:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of long planning inquiries over the last five years.

Whilst the Inspectorate provides Inspectors for Public Inquiries into called-in planning applications as well as for planning appeals, until recently we have been reliant on information supplied by others with regard to Secretary of State decisions issued and inquiry duration. Unfortunately this information has not always been forthcoming. For example, of 73 such decisions that we know of in only 10 cases do we know the number of sitting days of the inquiry.

From the information that we do have, the number of called-in applications or planning appeals decided following an inquiry of 1 month or more were

Year decision issued	Cases where inquiry sat for between 20 days (1 month) and 59 days	Cases where inquiry sat for 60 days (3 months) or more
1996	8	6
1997	13	6
1998	4	0
1999	13	0
2001 (to date)	8	2

Quarry Industry

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent assessment he has made of the environmental performance of the UK quarry industry in comparison with (a) other EU and (b) non-EU countries. [17922]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 27 November 2001]: My Department has made no recent assessment of the environmental performance of the UK quarry industry in comparison with other EU or non-EU countries.

Rural Roads

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the development of a rural road hierarchy, as required by the Transport Act 2000. [18971]

Mr. Jamieson: The concept of a hierarchy was considered as part of the Speed Review and the Government's Road Safety Strategy, both published last year.

The Transport Act 2000 committed the Government to consider the development of a rural road hierarchy for speed management purposes. Following Royal Assent the DTLR set up a Working Group of professionals and the main interest groups. The Group has prepared a thorough report that raises some interesting points and recommendations. As required by the Act, the Secretary of State has today laid copies of this report before each of the Houses of Parliament.

I commend the Working Group for the excellent job they have done in identifying the benefits of a hierarchy. I am also grateful for their frank assessment that currently, if it were developed as a system of different speed limits, a hierarchy would be costly both financially and in terms of environmental intrusion. Also, given the necessary infrastructure and behavioural changes required, the road safety and quality of life benefits could take too long to realise.

I am grateful to the Group for identifying the clear links between the development of a hierarchy and several other Road Safety Strategy initiatives. Above all, I agree that the DTLR's assessment framework would be the best place to carry out the work to determine criteria for assigning roads within the hierarchy. As such, I fully accept their recommendation to incorporate the speed limit setting element of the hierarchy within the development of the assessment framework.

They rightly identify the signing issues as a big obstacle to progressing the hierarchy as they have proposed it. The DTLR will shortly be commencing work on the Road Safety Strategy commitment to review speed limit signing regimes. I have instructed officials to consider the signing elements of the hierarchy report as part of this work.

The Group recognised the need for traffic calming measures to support speed limits in order to achieve changes in vehicle speeds. The forthcoming DTLR project to develop practical speed management measures on rural roads will be the best vehicle for testing such traffic calming treatments.

Of course, there are innovative measures that have already been tried by my Department, like vehicle activated signs, that will in future be more widely applied where suitable. Detailed guidance on the use of vehicle activated signs will be produced next year.

Both the Working Group and the Speed Review identified the need for more information before we can properly assess the case for lower rural speed limits. I am therefore committing the DTLR to undertake a survey of vehicle speeds on a representative sample of rural roads to ensure that decisions are evidence based.

With the package of measures I have outlined here, and those in the Road Safety Strategy, I am convinced that we will be able to build on this report and deliver real benefits to those who live, work and travel in rural areas.

Rural Bus Services

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 327W, on rural bus services, how much of the money outlined in the Rural White Paper for the Rural Bus Challenge and Rural Transport Partnership programme was spent in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02; and how much each initiative has received. [18781]

Ms Keeble: A total of £21 million was allocated to new Rural Bus Challenge projects in 2000–01, spending over a number of financial years. Expenditure in that year on all Challenge projects, including those begun in previous years, was £11 million. There is £20 million available for awards in this year's Rural Bus Challenge competition, decisions on which will be announced shortly. Forecast expenditure in the current year on all projects is £23 million.

The Countryside Agency's Rural Transport Partnership Programme spent £4.8 million in 2000–01. For this financial year, formal grant offers total £7.1 million to date, of which £2.9 million has been spent.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 327W, on rural bus services, if he will specify (a) the size of the samples for rural areas and (b) the areas the samples were carried out in (i) 1992 to 1994, (ii) 1995 to 1997 and (iii) 1998 to 2000. [18680]

Ms Keeble: The sample size of households in rural areas within Great Britain in the National Travel Survey were

(i) 1992/94: 1,419

(ii) 1995/97: 1,091

(iii) 1998/2000: 754.

The areas used to select household samples consist of one or more postcode sectors, which cannot be specified because of confidentiality. The sampling procedure is set out in the annual National Travel Survey Technical Reports available in the Library of the House.

Council Tenants (Poole)

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 738W, on cash incentive scheme payments, if he will raise the maximum cash incentive grant to council tenants to buy their own homes in Poole to a level comparable, in relation to average house prices, to the level offered in London and the South-East. [17729]

Ms Keeble: We have no immediate plans to make any changes to the limits set for cash incentive scheme payments. We are, however, reviewing the control framework under which the scheme operates.

Local Strategic Partnerships

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the powers the local strategic partnerships will have to carry out their tasks. [18665]

Ms Keeble: Local strategic partnerships (LSPs) are not executive bodies. Their purpose is to co-ordinate the activities of their members in order to tackle local problems. Those members will include representatives from the public, private, voluntary and community sector. Recent legislation has extended the ability of public sector bodies such as health authorities and local authorities to work in partnership with organisations in other sectors. Executive responsibility for implementing the partnerships' strategies rests with the partner organisations.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions by what methods the local strategic partnerships assess needs of the local people and find those who are often excluded. [18666]

Ms Keeble: Local Strategic Partnerships (LSPs) will involve the public, private, community and voluntary sectors to ensure that initiatives and services work together locally. LSPs will devise and implement community strategies and local neighbourhood renewal strategies, which will improve the delivery of local services generally, with a specific focus on deprived areas. These strategies should build on information from local people on what they need and want, rather than working from the top down. The statutory guidance, Preparing Community Strategies, refers to an analysis of needs which should be carried out by the various partners on the LSP. Considerable background information will already exist.

LSPs must include local people, especially those from deprived neighbourhoods and from excluded groups, such as black and minority ethnic groups and older people. LSPs will need to provide them with training and support so they can be fully involved from the start. The Government have established the Community Empowerment Fund, which will provide £36 million over the next 3 years to create 'Community Networks' in the 88 most deprived English areas. In each area, CEF moneys will be given direct to a local voluntary organisation chosen by the regional Government Office. This 'lead organisation' will form a Community Network to ensure a high level of community representation on the LSP.

Transport (Disabled Access)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what measures he has taken to increase the number of buses which have disabled access ramps: and if he will make a statement on disabled access on all forms of public transport. [18679]

Ms Keeble: Accessibility regulations for new trains, buses and coaches have been introduced under Part V of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. Part III of the Act requires public transport infrastructure to be accessible to disabled people. From 2004 this will include the removal of physical barriers to access.

Since 31 December 2000, regulations have required all new single deck buses over 7.5 tonnes and double deck buses on scheduled services to be accessible, including fitting boarding devices (ramps and lifts).

We are requiring all single deck buses over 7.5 tonnes to be fully accessible from 1 January 2016, and all double deck buses from 1 January 2017.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what guidelines govern the eligibility of local authorities for neighbourhood renewal funding. [18667]

Ms Keeble: The list of authorities eligible for the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund has been determined by taking those authorities that are among the 50 most deprived on any of the six measures in the Indices of Deprivation 2000. On this basis 81 authorities would be eligible. In addition, there are transitional arrangements for those authorities that were within the 50 most deprived areas on any of the four measures under the old Index of Local Deprivation, but are not in the list of 81 authorities that qualify using the Indices of Deprivation 2000. Therefore, a further seven local authority areas are eligible for the Fund.

The funding each authority receives is intended to be related to the severity of the deprivation within its area. The sum they receive is based on a standard amount per head of population that live in wards in the most deprived 10 per cent. on the Indices of Deprivation 2000. This is underpinned by a minimum allocation of £200,000 in 2001–02 for authorities with no wards in the most deprived 10 per cent.

Affordable Housing

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he intends to review guidance to local planning authorities on securing affordable housing through the planning system. [19271]

Ms Keeble: Our Green Paper on planning which we hope to publish shortly will be supported by a number of consultation documents. These will include our proposals on planning obligations and how we might increase the provision of affordable housing through the planning system.

New Deal for Communities

Mr. Lammy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on his assessment of the performance of New Deal for Communities programmes. [15994]

Ms Keeble: There are 39 New Deal for Communities (NDC) partnerships. The performance of each partnership is currently assessed through an annual review in February each year. The 17 Round 1 Pathfinder partnerships were assessed in February 2001. The Round 2 partnerships were not assessed, as their delivery phase did not begin until April 2001.

The NDC Programme has begun to have some positive impacts. For example, in the Sandwell NDC area in the West Midlands there has been an overall reduction in robberies of 48 per cent. since April 2001. East Manchester NDC has recorded a 30 per cent. reduction in crime following implementation of a crime reduction strategy. In the Haringey NDC area between April and August 2001 soliciting and loitering were down 57 per cent. on the same period last year.

Planning Applications (Processing Times)

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what the average turn-around time is for processing by a local authority of a correctly submitted planning application; [19079]

(2) how many local authorities achieved a six week turn around time from receipt of a correct planning application to a decision in the last 12 months. [19080]

Ms Keeble: The information requested is not available. However, in 2000–01, 63 per cent. of applications were decided within eight weeks and 83 per cent. of applications were decided within 13 weeks.

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what progress the Social Exclusion Unit has made in reducing the number of rough sleepers. [15995]

Ms Keeble: The Social Exclusion Unit published a report on rough sleeping in July 1998 in which the Prime Minister set the tough target of reducing the number of people sleeping rough in England to as near to zero as possible and by at least two thirds by 2002.

The Rough Sleepers Unit (RSU) was subsequently set up to deliver the Prime Minister's target and published it's strategy "Coming in from the Cold", in December 1999, which outlined a raft of new policies and services:

helping people sleeping rough on the streets with drug, alcohol and mental health problems; helping former rough sleepers rebuild their lives through education, training and employment; and preventing a new generation of rough sleepers particularly those leaving care, the armed forces and prison.

The RSU published it's second Progress Report in summer 2001 which shows the significant impact the 'Coming in from the Cold' strategy has made.

In 1998, there were approximately 1,850 people rough sleeping in England. In June 2001, published figures indicated that approximately 703 people were sleeping rough, (357 in London, and 346 outside of London). This represents a 62 per cent. reduction.

The Rough Sleepers Unit is currently carrying out research and consulting with organisations and individuals that impact on the strategy, with a view to developing a future strategy that will keep the number of rough sleepers as near to zero as possible.

Chemical Sites (Access to Information)

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to restrict public access to information on major chemical sites held on public registers on security grounds. [19512]

Mr. Byers: I have today made a direction that all safety reports provided under the Control of Major Accident Hazards Regulations 1999 should be excluded from the public registers maintained by the Competent Authority, that is the Health and Safety Executive and the Environment Agencies.

This is a sensible precautionary step taken on security grounds in the light of the current situation following the tragic events of 11 September. It is a temporary measure which will give time for sensitive information to be removed from existing safety reports, and the amended reports restored to the public register.

Hazardous facilities, with the potential for causing major off-site accidents are registered with the HSE, the Environment Agency and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency, under the COMAH Regulations. These include major chemical works, petrochemical and gas installations and high quantity users of flammable/explosive/toxic substances (e.g. chlorine at water treatment works).

The 430 most hazardous ("top-tier") sites have to prepare a detailed safety report describing the hazards presented and safety precautions taken. The regulations require safety reports for top-tier sites to be placed on public registers. The registers are maintained by Environment Agency and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency

At present only a small number of the safety cases are on the public register. The remainder would have been put on over the next few months. The Direction will enable security sensitive information to be identified and a second, more targeted Direction to be considered. This would allow the amended reports to be placed in the public arena.

It is important to note that the action on removing safety reports would not affect the arrangements in place to give the public vital safety instructions on such sites. People who are liable to be affected by an accident at a COMAH site are given specified information about the establishment, the major accident hazards and the safety measures that are in place. It is the site operator who has to provide this information independent of the safety report. This will ensure that the emergency services and the public know how to react in the event of an accident.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether there are plans to change the departmental expenditure limit and administration costs limits for 2001–02. [19513]

Mr. Byers: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions' Departmental Expenditure Limits for 2001–02 will change as follows.

(a) The DTLR Main Programmes DEL will be decreased by £263,092,000 from £12,384,874,000 to £12,121,782,000 and the DTLR administration costs limit will be decreased by £61,190,000 from £776,525,000 to £715,335,000 and the DTLR HSE administration costs limit has increased by £2,500,000 from £193,732,000 to £196,232,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the table:

£000

	Resources	Capital
Change	–380,102	117,010
New DEL	4,744,850	7,376,932

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

(i) The changes for Request for Resources 1 are as follows:

Take up of End Year Flexibility of £39,609,000 comprising £3,000,000 for Pneumoconiosis grants, £2,359,000 for Housing Action Trusts, £2,842,000 for building regulations, £4,582,000 for the Coalfields Regeneration Trust, £6,782,000 for the Coalfield Enterprise Fund, £2,300,000 for the Ordnance Survey, £5,500,000 for planning, £1,583,000 for the Single Regeneration Budget, £300,000 for Fire Services, £5,000,000 for social exclusion, £707,000 for Rent Assessment Panels administration costs, £1,786,000 for The Rent Service administration costs and £2,868,000 for the Planning Inspectorate Executive Agency administration costs. An increase of £344,000 from Request for Resources 4 in respect of civil service reform funding for The Rent Service Executive Agency (£97,000) and The Planning Inspectorate Executive Agency (£247,000). An increase of £438,917,000 from non-voted provision for Regional Chambers (£5,000,000), the Regional Development Agencies (£336,124,000), the London Development Agency (£23,337,000) and a technical adjustment (£74,456,000) to remove contributions from other departments to Regional Development Agencies. A net decrease of £253,606,000 arising from the following inter-departmental transfers: Machinery of Government changes of £245,646,000 (£231,556,000 to Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (to whom end year flexibility entitlement of £21,365,000 is also being transferred), £22,158,000 to Department of Trade and Industry; £174,000 to British Trade International; and £8,242,000 from the Home Office); £250,000 from the Home Office for Rough Sleepers, £190,000 from Department for Work and Pensions for Rough Sleepers, £3,800,000 to Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs to contribute to costs associated with foot and mouth disease, £3,000,000 from the Home Office for neighbourhood wardens, £5,000,000 to the Department of Health for social exclusion, £5,000,000 to the Home Office for community facilities, £100,000 to Lord Chancellor's Department for Local Authority efficiency and £2,500,000 from the Policy Innovation Fund for (New Ventures) street wardens. There is also a reduction of £450,000 to reflect additional receipts for the Planning Inspectorate Executive Agency.

(ii) The changes for Request for Resources 2 are as follows:

Take up of End Year Flexibility of £76,268,000 comprising £1,293,000 to meet the costs of shipping inquiries and shipping programmes; £2,959,000 for the Maritime and Coastguard Agency for administration costs (£1,761,000) and project slippage (£1,198,000); £6,088,000 for Civil Aviation programmes and the Air Transport White paper; £197,000 for international subscriptions; £6,767,000 for the Highways Agency to repay a loan to Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions (£6,630,000) and administration costs (£137,000); £10,584,000 for multi-modal studies, consultancy projects, advertising, minicab licensing, transport research, Traveline, the Ultra project, road haulage modernisation projects and to settle the Park Lane UK Single Vehicle Approval claim; £11,000,000 for London Underground PPP advisers and rail consultants; £800,000 for the Commission for Integrated Transport; £1,993,000 for Channel Tunnel Rail Link costs; £5,000,000 for the extension of bus fuel duty rebates to coaches; £7,469,000 for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency including £6,140,000 for administration costs; £2,900,000 for vehicle and traffic enforcement; £11,170,000 for the Powershift and cleaner vehicles programme; and £8,048,000 for the Strategic Rail Authority to reflect the Rail Regulator's Review of Access Charges. A net decrease of £1,556,000 arising from the following inter-departmental transfers: £1,100,000 from Department for Education and Skills for maritime training; £150,000 from Department of Health for Mobility Centres; £452,000 from Home Office to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency; £3,200,000 to Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs towards foot and mouth costs and the Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme; and £58,000 to Department of Trade and Industry for Framework 5 Helpline. A net transfer of £416,000 from Request for Resources 4 for Civil Service Reform (£1,305,000) and net internal adjustments (£889,000). A transfer of £7,150,000 to the capital element of the DTLR DEL.

(iii) The changes for Request for Resources 4 are as follows:

Take up of End Year Flexibility of £20,323,000 for Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions administration costs (£19,936,000) and other expenditure (£387,000). A net decrease of £106,908,000 arising from the following inter-departmental transfers: machinery of government changes of £111,004,000 (£11,064,000 from Home Office, £72,690,000 to Cabinet Office, £6,684,000 to Department of Trade and Industry and £42,694,000 to the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs); £290,000 for Local Government PSA costs to Department for Education and Skills (£100,000), Department of Health (£100,000), Home Office (£25,000), Department for Work and Pensions (£25,000), Department for Culture, Media and Sport (£20,000) and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (£20,000); and £4,389,000 from the Cabinet Office Civil Service Modernisation Fund. An increase of £8,500,000 to meet administration costs from non-voted provision. A transfer of £1,436,000 to Requests for Resource 1 and 2 for Civil Service Reform funding, and a net transfer of £889,000 from Request for Resources 2 for a technical adjustment. A reclassification of £2,500,000 from the capital element of the DEL for the provision of IT services to the Health and Safety Commission.

(iv) Provision within the non-Voted resource element of the DTLR Main Programmes Departmental Expenditure Limit will be decreased by £596,765,000. This reflects take up of End Year Flexibility of £86,957,000 comprising £82,429,000 for Large Scale Voluntary Transfers, £4,246,000 for the Housing Corporation and £282,000 for the Commission for New Towns. A decrease of £236,305,000 arising from machinery of government transfer to Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. £438,917,000 will be transferred to voted provision on Request for Resources 1 and £8,500,000 will be transferred to voted provision on Request for Resources 4.

(v) As a result of the changes to Requests for Resources 1, 2 and 4 the DTLR administration provision has been decreased by £58,690,000 from £1,015,839,000 to £957,147,000.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from:

(vi) The changes for Request for Resources 1 are as follows:

Take up of End Year Flexibility of £5,115,000 comprising £2,477,000 for The Rent Service Executive Agency, £2,306,000 for coalfields, and £332,000 for the Single Regeneration Budget. A net decrease of £183,000 arising from the following Machinery Of Government changes: £363,000 to Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (to whom end year flexibility entitlement of £71,719,000 will also be transferred) and £180,000 from the Home Office. A transfer of £602,764,000 from non-voted resources as a technical adjustment to remove contributions from other departments to Regional Development Agencies.

(vii) The changes for Request for Resources 2 are as follows:

Take up of End Year Flexibility of £237,066,000 comprising £1,758,000 for the International Maritime Organisation building; £1,816,000 for Maritime and Coastguard Agency project slippage; £12,864,000 for the Highways Agency to repay a loan to Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (£5,370,000) and to meet the additional costs of the Strategy for Financial Management project (£7,494,000); £1,336,000 for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency; £5,600,000 for Transport for London; £8,000,000 for the Rural Bus Capital Challenge scheme; £1,940,000 for the Midland Metro scheme; £8,800,000 for water freight grants; £194,952,000 for the Strategic Rail Authority for Railtrack Feasibility Studies (£28,000,000) and to reflect the Rail Regulator's Review of Access Charges (£166,952,000). A net increase of £662,000 arising from transfer from the Home Office to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency to support vehicle crime reduction initiatives and implement an electronic interface with magistrates courts. Take up from the Capital Modernisation Fund of £2,700,000 for the Active Traffic Management project (£2,000,000); and the Strategic Rail Authority (£700,000). A transfer of £4,231,000 to non-voted credit approvals for de-trunking roads. A transfer of £7,150,000 from the resource element of the DTLR DEL for Cross Rail.

(viii) The changes for Request for Resources four are as follows:

A decrease of £2,485,000 arising from machinery of government changes (£1,461,000 to the Cabinet Office, £19,000 to Department of Trade and Industry, and £1,005,000 to Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. A reclassification of £2,500,000 to the resource element of the DEL for the Health and Safety Commission.

(ix) Provision within the non-Voted capital element of the DTLR Main Programmes Departmental Expenditure Limit will be decreased by £726,410,000. This reflects take up of End Year Flexibility of £51,054,000 for the Urban Regeneration Agency (£30,157,000) and £20,897,000 to be transferred to the non-voted capital element of the DTLR Local Government DEL. A net decrease of £160,672,000 arising from the following Machinery of Government changes: £59,682,000 from the Home Office and £220,354,000 to Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. Transfers of £602,764,000 to Request for Resources 1 and £4,231,000 to non-voted credit approvals for de-trunking roads from Request for Resource 2.

(b) the DTLR Local Government DEL will be increased by £65,021,000 from £36,975,168,000 to £37,040,189,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

	Resources	Capital
Change	+32,321,000	+32,700,000
New DEL	36,950,270,000	89,919,000

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

(i) The changes for Request for Resources 3 are as follows:

Take up of End Year Flexibility of £29,210,000 for: the Valuation Office Agency's modernisation programme (£100,000), research (£910,000), PFI Special grant (£3,500,000), and support for local authorities (Bellwin) (£20,200,000), Best Value Intervention (£4,500,000). An increase of £811,000 arising from machinery of government changes transfer from the Home Office. A reclassification of £2,300,000 from the capital element of the DEL for research. A transfer of £1,000,000 from non-voted provision.

(ii) Provision within the resources non-voted element of the DTLR Local Government DEL will be reduced by £1,000,000 to reflect a transfer of resources to Request for Resources 3 for the Valuation Office Agency.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from:

(iii) The changes for Request for Resources 3 are as follows: A reclassification of £2,300,000 to the resource element of the DEL.

(iv) Provision within the capital non-voted element of the DTLR Local Government DEL will be increased by £35,000,000 to reflect the take up of End Year Flexibility (£14,103,00) and a switch from DTLR Main DEL (£20,897,000) to provide support for local authorities in exercise of the Secretary of State's powers under the Local Government Act 1999.

The increases will be offset by inter-departmental transfers or charged to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Railtrack

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on how many days following privatisation Railtrack shares were worth (a) more and (b) less than their opening price; and what the highest and lowest values were of a single Railtrack share between privatisation and 1 October. [18232]

Mr. Jamieson [pursuant to his reply, 26 November 2001, c. 606W]: The closing share price for Railtrack Group plc was above the flotation price of 380p on every day between its flotation on 20 May 1996 and 4 June 2001 and also on 8 June 2001. The share price reached a peak of 1768p on 23 November 1998.

The closing share price for Railtrack Group plc was below the flotation price of 380p on 5, 6, 7 June 2001 and on every day between 9 June 2001 and 1 October 2001. The lowest closing share price was 252p on 20 September 2001.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he prepared the emergency legislation to prevent an application for interim review from Railtrack. [R] [16031]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 27 November 2001, Official Report, column 746W.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the specialist areas in which his Department has sought external advice in handling Railtrack over the last year. [16375]

Mr. Spellar: We have sought accounting, legal, financial and other technical advice in relation to Railtrack and its links with the wider rail industry.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many new stations were opened by Railtrack. [17046]

Mr. Jamieson: I understand that between 1 March 1997 and 31 October this year, 24 new stations were opened. Railtrack advise that data relating to the period from the company's establishment on 1 April 1994 to the end of February 1997 are not available.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many railway infrastructure projects stand (a) cancelled and (b) postponed, following Railtrack being placed in administration. [17671]

Mr. Jamieson: I am not aware that any projects have been cancelled or postponed as a consequence of Railtrack plc going into administration.

Corsham Station

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what impact Railtrack's entry to receivership will have on the opening of the new station at Corsham. [17044]

Mr. Jamieson: None. I understand that planning for the new station is continuing.

Rail Services (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent assessment he has made as to the adequacy of rail services between stations in the Buckingham constituency and London. [17845]

Mr. Jamieson: No formal assessment has been made. We would expect Chiltern Railways in consultation with local stakeholders to come forward with proposals to meet demands for new or improved services. The Strategic Rail Authority's Strategic Plan, which will be published in the near future, will set out their priorities for enhancement to the network.

Rail Maintenance

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what research the Government are funding into rail track laying and maintenance technologies. [17954]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department is currently funding a research project studying the feasibility of an on-board in-service track monitoring and fault prediction system. The Department's commitment is £375,000 over two years.

Heathrow Airport

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which planning authority will be charged with (a) monitoring and (b) enforcing compliance with the flights ceiling imposed as a condition for Heathrow Terminal 5. [18664]

Ms Keeble: Both matters will be the responsibility of the London borough of Hillingdon.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact on levels of aircraft movements at regional airports of the completion of Terminal 5 at Heathrow. [18482]

Mr. Jamieson: The possible impact of Terminal 5 on regional airports was considered at the Terminal 5 planning inquiry and in the inspector's report. The Secretary of State's reasons for his decision on T5 are set out in his decision letter of 20 November.

Our regional air services studies into demand and capacity at regional airports will take into account the Heathrow Terminal 5 decision. We will be consulting on options early in the new year, and the outcome will inform the air transport White Paper to be published next autumn.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact on levels of aircraft (a) movements and (b) noise in Beckenham of the completion of Terminal 5 at Heathrow. [18162]

Ms Keeble: The Secretary of State's planning decision on Terminal 5 followed consideration of the report by the Inspector who conducted the public inquiry into the matter. The Inspector's report does not expressly refer to the effect of Terminal 5 on Beckenham, but the conditions attached to the Secretary of State's decision which restrict the number of air transport movements at Heathrow to 480,000 per annum and which restrict the size of the 57 decibel noise contour will limit the noise effects of the new terminal beyond the immediate vicinity of Heathrow.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will (a) start and (b) conclude the review of westerly preference for incoming aircraft at Heathrow in daylight hours. [18293]

Mr. Jamieson: It will be necessary to carry out a preliminary technical review of operational procedures and meteorological trends at the airport before assessing the environmental and safety implications of different preference options. These options will only become clear during the technical review stage. When the preparatory work is complete we will consult widely before reaching any final decisions. I hope to issue a consultation paper in the second half of next year, but it is not possible at this early stage to give a firm timetable for completing the review and consultation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for correspondence responded to within agreed targets. [16916]

Mr. Blunkett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Perth (Annabelle Ewing) on 31 October 2001, Official Report, columns 721–22W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for a reduction in the level of re-offending by drug misusing offenders. [16933]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: We are in the process of reviewing progress against all the drugs strategy targets. Progress on the public service agreement target to reduce levels of repeat offending among drug misusing offenders by 25 per cent. by 2005 and by 50 per cent. by 2008 is currently measured by the New English and Welsh Arrestee Drug Abuse Monitoring (NEW-ADAM) research programme which provides estimates of repeat offending drug misusing offenders (defined as the proportion of arrestees using heroin and/or cocaine/ crack at least once a week and who have offended at least twice a month in the last twelve months). The proportion of arrestees falling within this category for the financial year 1999–2000 was 15 per cent. This will provide an interim baseline against which progress can be tracked. A summary of full baseline data will be available in the spring of 2002.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for increasing completions of nationality applications. [16924]

Angela Eagle: Increasing the number of nationality decisions was a public service agreement (PSA) target in the years 1999–2000 and 2000–01 but is not a PSA target in 2001–02. Outturn in 2000–01 was 94,090 against a target of 91,000.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for shortening the time taken in dealing with persistent offending. [17055]

Mr. Keith Bradley: This public service agreement target reflects the Government's youth justice pledge to halve the average time taken to deal with a persistent young offender from arrest to sentence, from 142 days in 1996 to 71 days. The target has now been met for three consecutive months; i.e. the latest figure, for August is 66 days. This has been achieved through effective partnership working in the criminal justice system.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for evaluation of probation and court referral schemes; [16960]

(2) if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for the expansion of the probation and court referral scheme; [16931]

(3) if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for drug treatment and testing orders. [16932]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The public service agreement targets for the evaluation and significant expansion of probation and court referral schemes were achieved through the evaluation of the Drug Treatment and Testing Orders (DTTO) pilots and the roll-out of the DTTO to courts in England and Wales on 1 October 2000 respectively. 2,288 DTTOs were made in the first six months of 2001–02, against the full year target of approximately 6,000 orders. Under the comprehensive spending review settlement, the Government provided £20 million for the implementation of DTTOs in 2000–01 (the first six months after roll-out) and £40 million for 2001–02, ring-fenced for the purpose.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for efficiency of procurement in his Department. [16915]

Mr. Blunkett: There are four key targets for procurement within the public service agreement for the Home Department:

1. The introduction of the procurement card:

This is now in use within the Prison Service, Forensic Science Service, United Kingdom, Passport Service and The Youth Justice Board. It has been piloted within the core Home Office and full roll out is due to commence in January 2002.

2. The comprehensive roll out of consolidated invoicing:

This activity has been completed.

3. The determination of the extent of introduction of the procurement excellence model:

This has been fully scoped and the model has been used within three separate business areas as part of an ongoing roll out programme.

4. Central Home Office procurement staff to have access to the Government secure intranet and internet:

This has been completed.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters he has received in 2001 from residents of the Buckingham constituency on asylum policy. [16911]

Angela Eagle: No record is kept of the postal address of correspondents.

Data Protection

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which public sector organisations have applied to him to be allowed to demand Communications Data under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Acts; and if he will make a statement. [17193]

Mr. Blunkett: We have been approached by a number of public authorities including local authorities, the Serious Fraud Office and the Financial Services Authority. I will be considering shortly whether to seek the approval of Parliament to add them to the current list of public authorities who can access communications data under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many certificates he has signed with respect to Section 28 of the Data Protection Act 1998 since coming to office; if he has renewed certificates signed by his predecessors in office; what plans he has to review the form of the certificate; and if he will make a statement. [17191]

Mr. Blunkett: I have neither signed nor renewed any such certificates. I expect soon to have decided on a course of action in response to the determination of the National Security Panel of the Information Tribunal on the appeal by the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) against a Data Protection Act 1998 national security exemption certificate covering the Security Service.

Graduates (Work Permits)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the immigration status is of persons who are graduates of UK universities and holders of non-EU passports who have been invited to take up employment in the UK within the field of their educational background. [16793]

Angela Eagle: A student graduating from a United Kingdom University who is subject to immigration control would require a prospective employer to obtain a work permit for them prior to them taking up that employment.

Such individuals are able to remain in the United Kingdom while the work permit application is being considered. The Immigration Rules will be changed formally next year to allow graduates, student nurses and postgraduate doctors and dentists to obtain work permits without first having to leave the country. In the meantime this announced policy is being applied as a concession outside the rules.

Drugs Strategy

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the budgeted amount and (b) the actual spend for the drugs misuse allocation for England for each of the last three years. [16831]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The information is not available in the form requested. Government ring-fenced funding for the 10-year National Drugs Strategy is set to rise from £700 million in 2000–01 to over £1 billion for proactive work alone by 2003–04.

Funding for 2000–01—estimates of baseline spend in Department Expenditure limits—comprises:

£234 million for drug treatment (mainstream spending by Department of Health, local authorities and the pooled National Treatment Agency (NTA) budget);

£63 million for protecting young people;

£45 million for safeguarding communities;

£353 million for reducing availability.

In addition, funding awarded from the Budget 2001:

£50 million for strengthening communities;

£5 million for providing more help to find jobs;

£5 million strengthening Drug Action Teams;

£2 million expanding Positive Futures.

I refer my hon. Friend to the publication "United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordinators Annual Report 2000–01" which is available in the Library.

Visa Applications

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the handling of the visa application of Mrs. Grace Allen, Ref A1127781. [16908]

Angela Eagle: I understand that Mrs. Allen's appeal against the refusal of entry clearance is listed for hearing by the Immigration Appellate Authority on 17 December.

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions are made for teaching English as a second language to asylum seekers in the UK. [16773]

Angela Eagle: Currently there is no provision to teach English to asylum seekers who are not of compulsory school age. In his statement on 29 October my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary set out his proposals for a radical reform of the asylum process, including the creation of accommodation centres. Accommodation centres will provide a range of services, including purposeful activity for adult asylum seekers, which could include English language lessons. Details of the services that will be available in accommodation centres will appear in the White Paper, which my right hon. Friend also announced on 29 October.

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons are in detention under immigration legislation. [17304]

Angela Eagle: The latest available information on the number of persons detained under Immigration Act powers relates to 30 June 2001; 1,760 persons (to the nearest five) were detained as at this date, including 245 persons detained in prison establishments under dual Immigration Act and other powers.

The next set of statistics are currently planned for release on 30 November on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html, and will relate to persons detained as at 30 September.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been detained under the Immigration Act 1971 in each of the past five years; and in each year, how many detained persons have (a) been charged with a criminal offence, (b) been the subject of a deportation order, (c) appealed against such an order and (d) been deported to which countries. [17765]

Angela Eagle: Available information relates only to persons detained under Immigration Act powers as at 30 June 2001; 1,760 persons (to the nearest five) were detained as at this date. This includes 245 persons detained in prison establishments under dual Immigration Act and other powers who have been charged with a criminal offence.

I regret that the information requested on detainees who have been the subject of a deportation order, appealed against such an order and been deported to which countries is not held centrally and could be obtained only by examining individual case files at disproportionate cost.

Heroin Imports (Afghanistan)

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 November 2001, Official Report, column 237W, on imports of heroin to Britain, what is his estimate of the percentage of heroin imported into Britain since July 2000 that originated in (a) Taliban-controlled and (b) Northern Alliance-controlled Afghanistan. [17732]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Pre-existing stockpiles of opium and morphine base in the supply chain make it probable that the vast majority of heroin which has been imported to the United Kingdom since July 2000 originated from opium produced in Taliban controlled areas of Afghanistan. The opium crop planted in late 2000 will not have been ready until May 2001.

Estimates of production of opium in Afghanistan in recent years are as shown in the table.

MI5

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances MI5 may decide that major decisions it takes need not be communicated to him; and what mechanism exists to ensure such decisions are in the public interests. [18537]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 27 November 2001]: The duties and powers of the Security Service are established by law, and the Service is under the authority of the Secretary of State. The operations of the Service are under the control of its Director-General. I am satisfied with the arrangements in place to ensure that I am properly consulted by the Service on significant issues.

Cross-channel Illegal Immigration

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next intends to meet with French authorities to discuss the operation of checks conducted at French ports to prevent illegal immigrants entering the United Kingdom. [17653]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 27 November 2001]: The Home Secretary will next be meeting Interior Minister Vaillant at the United Kingdom-France summit on 29 November to discuss a range of bilateral issues, including cross-channel illegal immigration and the effectiveness of checks conducted on persons and vehicles.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in relation to the operation of checks conducted at French ports to prevent illegal immigrants entering the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [17647]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 27 November 2001]: A wide range of interested parties have been in contact with both the Home Secretary and officials on the issue of checks at French ports. These include transport operators, Members of Parliament, and the general public.

Ministers and officials have also discussed this matter with their French counterparts in the course of regular discussions about cross-channel issues.

Indefinite Leave to Remain

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the length of time taken to respond to a request for an upgrade of exceptional level to remain to indefinite leave. [17912]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 27 November 2001]: The requested information is neither centrally recorded nor readily available so could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Entry Clearance (Children)

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances (a) British nationals and [illegible] those with indefinite leave to remain would find their children under the age of 18 years refused entry clearance when they can demonstrate that they can support these children and offer adequate accommodation. [18036]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Entry clearance is not required where, by virtue of his or her British citizenship, the child has the right of abode in the United Kingdom.

In other cases, paragraph 297 of the Immigration Rules sets out the requirements that need to be met in order for a child under 18 years of age to be granted an entry clearance to join a parent or parents in this country. In addition to the maintenance and accommodation requirement, in general terms, it is necessary for the parents to be present and settled in the United Kingdom and for the child to be unmarried and still dependent on his parents. It is not possible to give an exhaustive list of every possible circumstance where a child might be refused an entry clearance to join a parent or parents.

Access to Official Information

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Fourth report of the Parliamentary Ombudsman, Session 2001–02 on Access to Official Information: Declarations made under the Ministerial Code of Conduct, HC 353. [15988]

Mr. Blunkett: The Government position remains as set out in the fourth report of the parliamentary ombudsman on access to official information. The Government have nothing further to add.

Asset Recovery Strategy

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the Government's Asset Recovery Strategy. [19515]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I am publishing the strategy today. Copies have been placed in the Vote Office and the Library and sent to the members of the Standing Committee currently considering the Proceeds of Crime Bill.

The Asset Recovery Strategy is the first United Kingdom-wide initiative of its kind, in which the law enforcement, prosecution and relevant Government bodies have joined together to commit themselves to making financial investigation and asset recovery a higher priority.

The strategy's aims are:

To make greater use of the investigation of criminal assets in the fight against crime;

To recover money that has been made from crime or which is intended for use in crime;

To prevent criminals and their associates from laundering the proceeds of criminal conduct, and to detect and penalise such laundering where it occurs; and

To use the proceeds recovered for the benefit of the community.

The strategy sets out our objectives for meeting the challenging financial investigation target of recovering £60 million in confiscation and forfeiture receipts during the 2004–05 financial year. Hitting this target would achieve the Government's commitment of doubling amounts recovered from drug traffickers and other major criminals by 2004.

It is not acceptable that people should enjoy the proceeds of criminal activity and live a life of luxury when it is built on the misery of victims or activities which damage or exploit society.

The strategy I am publishing today sets out how we propose to push forward recovering criminal assets with partners both inside and outside Government. Alongside the Proceeds of Crime Bill the strategy will help take the profit out of crime and dismantle and disrupt criminal enterprises.

The strategy will be updated with further targets when the Bill is implemented and the new Assets Recovery Agency is established.

Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Bill

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to issue a modified code of practice for authorised officers in relation to his proposal to widen the scope of the cash seizure powers in the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Bill. [19516]

Mr. Blunkett: Clause 1 of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Bill enables me to make whatever modifications I think are necessary or expedient to any code of practice in operation under schedule 14 to the Terrorism Act 2000. Such modifications can be made in an order under clause 123 of the Bill bringing the cash seizure provisions in schedule 1 to the Bill into force.

I have today made available in the Library a draft code of practice for authorised officers showing where I believe modifications are required. These modifications are still subject to final consultation with the police and others.

WALES

Social Exclusion (South Wales Valleys)

Mr. Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the levels and effects of social exclusion in the south Wales valleys. [15998]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Government are committed to building a fairer and more inclusive society in which everyone can benefit from rising prosperity. We are working in partnership with the National Assembly to combat social exclusion throughout Wales.

Notable among Assembly initiatives is the Communities First Programme which makes a significant contribution to promoting social inclusion and regeneration in deprived areas.

In his pre-Budget report yesterday my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced several measures aimed at increasing fairness for people and their communities. These included tackling child poverty, providing security in old age, rewarding saving and creating a fair and efficient tax system.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to amend the Welsh departmental expenditure limit for 2001–02. [19621]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales departmental expenditure limit will be increased by £44,845,000 from £8,490,071,000 to £8,534,916,000. The increase is a result of:

(i) the take up of end-year flexibility entitlement of £30,560,000

(ii) net transfers from other Government Departments of £7,563,000

(iii) additional provision of:

  £5,300,000 for the transfer of the Forestry Commission in Wales to the Assembly;

  £1,058,000 for areas affected by foot and mouth;

  £450,000 for the Addington fund; and

  £474,000 for drug prevention and education

(iv) a reduction of £560,000 in respect of a Council Tax Benefit penalty.

The increase includes the following transfers

(i) £609,000 to the Food Standards Agency for the Maclean report

(ii) £5,425,000 from the Forestry Commission

(iii) £40,000 from the Department for Education and Skills for NTO Cymru

(iv) £1,032,000 from the Department for Education and Skills for Student Access/Hardship Bursaries

(v) £1,225,000 from the Home Office for the Partnership Development Fund

(vi) £450,000 from the Department for Transport, Local Authorities and the Regions for the Planning Inspectorate.

The increase in DEL will be offset by transfers from other Departments, from the Reserve or take up of end-year flexibility and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Public Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will list those public bodies to which her Department appoints members and which are not listed in "Public Bodies 2000"; [17576]

(2) if she will list those public bodies which are the responsibility of her Department and which are not listed in "Public Bodies 2000". [17577]

Mr. Caborn: "Public Bodies 2000" sets out information on non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs), certain public corporations (including nationalised industries) and NHS bodies. There are four types of NDPB: executive NDPBs; advisory NDPBs; tribunal NDPBs; and boards of visitors to penal establishments. The next edition will be published around the end of the year. Information about task forces, annual reports and ad hoc advisory groups is set out in an annual report, published by the Cabinet Office. Copies of "Public Bodies 2000" are in the Library of the House and this publication may be accessed via the Cabinet Office's website http://www.official-documents.co.uk/document/caboff/pp00/pb00.htm. Copies of the annual report on taskforces and similar bodies have also been placed in the Library of the House and the annual report is being made available on the Cabinet Office's website.

The public bodies to which I make appointments and for which I have responsibility, but which are not listed in "Public Bodies 2000" or the annual report on taskforces and similar bodies, are:

Alcohol, Education Research Council[1]

Gaming Board for Great Britain[1]

Horserace Betting Levy Board[1]

Horserace Betting Levy Appeals Tribunal for England and Wales[1]

Horserace Totalisator Board[1]

Film Council[2]

Quality Efficiency and Standards Team[2]

Spoliation Advisory Panel[2]

Royal Parks Advisory Committee.

In addition, there are bodies which are independent of my Department but for which I have a role in appointing, or approving the appointment of, board members. These are:

Architectural Heritage Fund

Royal Opera House

South Bank Board Ltd.

[1] Public bodies transferred from the Home Office to DCMS following the machinery of Government changes on 7 June. These bodies appeared under the Home Office section of "Public Bodies 2000" and will do so again in the 2001 edition.

[2] Public bodies which will appear for the first time in the 2001 edition of "Public Bodies"."

Tourism

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what financial support was provided by the Government for tourism in England in each month of the financial year (a) 1991–92, (b) 1992–93 and (c) 1993–94; [18165]

(2) what financial support has been provided by the Government for the support of tourism in England in each month (a) during the financial year 2000–01 and (b) until the latest date for which figures are available in the financial year 2001–02; [18163]

(3) what financial support is available for supporting the tourism industry in (a) each month of the financial year 2001–02 and (b) future years for which budgets have been set. [18164]

Mr. Caborn: Direct Government funding for tourism in England is now based on a three-year funding agreement with the English Tourism Council (ETC). Grant in aid is budgeted in terms of annual allocations. These are provided to the ETC in response to monthly draw down requests which reflect its cash flow needs. In addition to this direct Government funding:

(a) Local authorities spend over £90 million per year in England promoting and developing tourism in their areas;

(b) the regional development agencies' business recovery fund has made £74 million available this year to target help for rural businesses, including tourism businesses, affected by the implications of foot and mouth disease; and

(c) DCMS's £1 billion expenditure on arts, museums, galleries, sport etc also directly benefits tourism.

The following table sets out the DCMS baseline grant in aid allocations for English tourism for the years 1991–92 to 1993–94 and 2000–01 to 2003–04. Baseline funding will rise from £10 million in 2001–02 to £12.5 million in 2003–04.

[1] These were annual grants to the English Tourism Board, the predecessor of the English Tourism Council.

[2] This includes £1 million grant in aid for transitional costs following the launch of the ETC in 1999 (£1.8 million was also made available for this purpose in 1999–2000).

[3] This figure comprises £9.6 million ETC baseline and £0.4 million for London granted direct to the Greater London Authority. In addition, £0.6 million was awarded to the ETC from the Capital Modernisation Fund and £3.8 million to tackle foot and mouth disease.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the impact of the foot and mouth crisis on tourism in the south-west. [18417]

Dr. Howells: For the English tourism industry as a whole, our best estimate to date is that the loss of revenue in 2001–02 due to the foot and mouth disease outbreak is likely to be about £3.3 billion in value added terms over the eight-month period (March to October). We have no comparable figure for the south-west at this time.

The west country enjoyed an Indian summer, which has extended the tourist season. This is helping to alleviate the loss of business due to the foot and mouth outbreak. In particular, it appears that senior citizens who would usually be heading for holidays in North America are cancelling and instead taking holidays at home.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effect on tourism in east Devon of transport links with London. [18281]

Mr. Caborn: The London to South Wales and the south-west multi-modal study (SWARMMS) which is currently in progress is looking at solutions to problems on the main transportation corridors in the study area. Completion is expected by April 2002. Two of the main road and rail corridors pass through east Devon. Comments have recently been sought from stakeholders and the public on a provisional strategy which addresses both existing and future problems. The next stage, which is developing individual plans in more detail, is under way for the multi-modal corridors in the study area and four study-wide theme plans.

One of the study's theme plans addresses tourism and is considering the numbers of tourists, their movements and characteristics and identifying schemes and measures that cater for their needs in a sustainable manner. This will provide the more detailed information needed and develop the overall strategy.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made as to the effect on tourism in east Devon of (a) the foot and mouth disease outbreak and (b) the terrorist attacks on 11 September; and if she will make a statement. [18284]

Mr. Caborn: Our best estimate is that the revenue loss to the English tourism industry as a whole for March to October due to foot and mouth disease is likely to be around £3.3 billion in value added terms. We have not attempted to assess individual regions, such as the east Devon constituency, since the available data do not enable this to be done with a sufficient degree of reliability.

Reports suggest that the main impact of the drop in overseas tourists since the terrorist attack of 11 September has been felt in London rather than in the regions and some south-west businesses have reported a good autumn, possibly the best in the last 20 years. However, it is too early to predict with any accuracy what the effects of the war against terrorism are likely to be on tourism in the south-west.

Disadvantaged People

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how her Department defines those members of society considered to be the most disadvantaged. [18071]

Mr. Caborn: In line with Government policy, my Department considers those who suffer from a combination of linked problems such as unemployment, poor skills, low incomes, poor housing, high crime environments, bad health and family breakdown to be the most disadvantaged.

Lottery Funds

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received concerning the accountability of (a) the lottery distributing bodies and (b) their application processes to (i) applicants, (ii) the public and (iii) her Department; what assessment she has made of them; and if she will make a statement. [17948]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has from time to time received representations about the accountability of the lottery distributors and their application processes. The accounting officer of a lottery distributor is accountable to both the Department's Permanent Secretary and to Parliament for the proper and prudent expenditure of funds, and distributors' activities are subject to external audit by the National Audit Office. As lottery proceeds allocated to distributors are public money, the general principles of Government Accounting must be applied in the design and implementation of systems for the distribution of that money.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent assessment she has made of the variation in expenditure, relative to revenue received, of the lottery income distributing bodies; and if she will make a statement. [17947]

Mr. Caborn: Lottery distributing bodies do not hold the same level of cash balances due to the differing nature of schemes or programmes operated. Funds are committed to a broad range of projects and money is drawn down when it is needed and not before, in compliance with Government Accounting procedures. The Department for Culture, Media and Sport continues to work closely with the lottery distributors to ensure that people see the benefits of Lottery awards as quickly as possible.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how outdoor adventure facilities will be affected in the west midlands by the new opportunities for school and community sports lottery funds. [18339]

Mr. Caborn: The new opportunities fund has informed local education authorities that it expects between 5 per cent. and 10 per cent. of allocations to be used to develop outdoor adventure facilities. On that basis, between £3,064,000 and £6,127,000 of funding will be used to modernise or build outdoor adventure facilities either in the west midlands or for use by young people from the west midlands.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidance she has offered to education authorities regarding (a) who should be consulted in the west midlands regarding the spending of funding allocations and (b) such spending, under new opportunities for schools and county sport lottery initiative. [18336]

Mr. Caborn: The new opportunities fund has sent guidance materials to all local education authorities (LEAs) including advice on the range of organisations that should be consulted before applications are submitted. The fund would expect LEAs to consult, for example: other local authority departments; sports governing bodies; the NHS; primary care groups; and the voluntary sector. Where local strategic partnerships have been established, the fund expects that they will play a central role in strategic planning for grant schemes.

Workshops have been arranged in January 2002 to help LEAs develop applications in more detail. Sport England will offer advice and support to LEAs, where they request it, on sports development issues.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what arrangements she has made to monitor (1) the impact of the new opportunities for school and community sport lottery moneys on social exclusion; [18343]

(2) the positive impact of the new opportunities for school and community sport lottery funds on providing young people with a healthy lifestyle. [18344]

Mr. Caborn: The new opportunities fund is currently developing proposals for the evaluation of the new opportunities for PE and sport programme. The impact of the programme in promoting social inclusion will form part of the evaluative work.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how she will monitor the provision of new opportunities for school and community sport in disadvantaged areas. [18340]

Mr. Caborn: All applicants will be required to demonstrate how their proposed projects promote social inclusion. When local partnerships complete initial applications the fund will be able to assess how many projects are based in disadvantaged areas or meet the needs of disadvantaged children and communities.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the provision of sports facilities for children with disabilities under the new opportunities for school and community sport lottery funds. [18335]

Mr. Caborn: Facilities will be developed through the programme that encourage access by all groups in society, including young people with disabilities.

Applications will be assessed against the key aims of the programme, including the promotion of social inclusion through access to and use of sports facilities by all groups in society and innovation and best practice in the design and management of facilities.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how she will ensure that money from the new opportunities for school and community sport will provide more opportunities for young people from disadvantaged areas. [18341]

Mr. Caborn: Provisional allocations of funding in each local area have been determined using the size of the school age population and the levels of deprivation. Fifty per cent. of the funds available in England has been allocated on the basis of levels of deprivation.

Pornographic Satellite Television

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent recommendations she has received from the ITC regarding the proscription of pornographic satellite television channels. [18152]

Mr. Caborn: The commission has made no such recommendations to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State since notification of Satisfaction TV.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take action to proscribe the Satisfaction Channel. [18151]

Mr. Caborn: Following a recommendation from the ITC regarding the Satisfaction Channel, the necessary consultations under article 2a(2) of the EC broadcasting directive have taken place and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering whether to issue a proscription order or not.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action she plans to control pornographic satellite television channels; and if she will make a statement. [18150]

Mr. Caborn: Broadcasters with generally based programme remits may occasionally show adult-oriented films involving nudity and sex. Several dedicated "adult" subscription channels are licensed in the UK. Access to these is restricted through encryption, scheduling times and programme information warning viewers of the nature of their content.

Under section 177 of the Broadcasting Act 1990, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State may make an order proscribing a foreign satellite television service that repeatedly transmits programmes containing matter that offends against good taste or decency or is likely to offend public feeling, and might seriously impair the moral, mental or physical health of minors, as allowed in article 22.1 of the "Television without Frontiers Directive", 89/552/EC, amended by 97/36/EC.

Playing Fields

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) community and (b) school playing fields have been sold for development in Arundel and South Downs in each of the last five years. [18328]

Mr. Caborn: Information on the number of local authority-owned playing fields available to the local community and disposed of in the last five years is not collected. Sport England does however, monitor the number of planning applications concerning playing fields in its role as statutory consultee. The Government intend to publish, with Sport England, detailed national statistics on planning applications concerning playing fields when the data are finalised, in the new year.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills has not approved any applications made by schools under section 77 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 to sell school sportspitch-sized areas or larger in the constituency of Arundel and South Downs.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) school, (b) community and (c) company playing fields have been sold for development in (i) the Loughborough constituency, (ii) Leicestershire and (iii) the east midlands in each of the last 10 years. [18493]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills has not approved any applications made by schools under section 77 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 to sell school sportspitch-sized areas or larger in the Loughborough constituency or in Leicestershire. In the east midlands Government office region, my right hon. Friend has approved two applications to sell school sportspitch-sized areas or larger in 1999; two in 2000 and one in 2001.

Information on the number of company-owned playing fields and local authority-owned playing fields available to the local community and disposed of in the last five years is not collected. Sport England does, however, monitor the number of planning applications concerning playing fields in its role as statutory consultee. The Government intend to publish, with Sport England, detailed national statistics on planning applications concerning playing fields when the data are finalised in the new year.

Football Foundation

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding her Department will give the Football Foundation in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [18483]

Mr. Caborn: My Department does not fund the Football Foundation direct. However, under the current partnership arrangements, the Football Foundation should receive the following public funds in the three-year period 2001–02 to 2003–04: £18 million from the Sport England lottery fund, up to £30 million from the new opportunities fund PE and school sport programme, and donations from the pools companies of several million pounds in accordance with their agreement with the Government. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his pre-Budget report that the current agreement with Littlewoods and Vernons, which was due to end in March 2002, would be renewed for a further two years until 31 March 2004. The donations from the pools companies will be equivalent in those two years to 2 per cent. of their gross profits.

Sport and Crime

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what arrangements she has made to monitor the impact of the new opportunities for school and community sport has on the fight against crime and drugs. [18342]

Mr. Caborn: The new opportunities fund is currently developing proposals for the evaluation of the new opportunities for PE and sport programme. The impact of the programme on levels of crime and drugs misuse will form part of the evaluative work.

Motorsport

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what representations she is making in advance of the FIA Motorsports World Council meeting on 13 December to secure the retention of the British Grand Prix on the 2002 Formula 1 calendar; [18457]

(2) what estimate she has made of the value to the UK economy of the Formula 1 British Grand Prix; [18456]

(3) if she will make a statement on her policy towards motorsports. [18458]

Mr. Caborn: Neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State nor I have made representations in advance of the FIA Motorsports World Council meeting on 13 December. That is the remit of the UK governing bodies for motorsport in the UK, primarily the Motor Sport Association. We hope that the British Grand Prix will retain its place in the global sports calendar.

Motorsport continues to be hugely popular across the UK. The British Grand Prix is a major event on the world's sporting calendar and the last FIA study estimated that the Grand Prix contributes approximately £28 million to the UK economy.

I am in regular contact with representatives of all aspects of motorsport.

Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many formal notices her Department has received in the last year from the parliamentary ombudsman expressing an intention to carry out an investigation; and in respect of each notice how long it took to respond. [18772]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 27 November 2001]: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport received one such notification during 2000–01. A response was made after 28 working days.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proposals she has to amend her (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limits for 2001–02. [19795]

Tessa Jowell: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, the departmental expenditure limit (DEL) for 2001–02 will be increased by £27,785,000 from £1,142,096,000 to £1,169,881,000 and the Department's gross administration costs limit will be increased by £691,000 from £31,546,000 to £32,237,000.

The changes are to provide additional resources under the end-year flexibility (EYF) arrangements, as set out in the public expenditure outturn White Paper, 2000–01 (Cm. 5243), of £134,000 for the Public Library Volunteer Scheme (together with a transfer of £134,000 from the Home Office); £115,000 for other libraries support measures; £246,000 for other arts support measures; £72,000 for other sport support measures; £230,000 for the Department's historic buildings programme; £1,705,000 for work on developing Culture Online; £595,000 to the Council for Museums, Archives and Libraries, £21,000 to the National Museum of Science and Industry, £100,000 to the Victoria and Albert Museum, £210,000 to the Royal Armouries, £7,907,000 to the British Library, £13,000 to the Public Lending Right, £14,000 to the Historic Manuscripts Commission, £95,000 for other museums support, £1,456,000 to the Designated Museums Challenge Fund; £1,663,000 to the DCMS/Wolfson Public Libraries Scheme; £250,000 to the Arts Council of England for work on Creative Partnerships; £20,000 to the Football Licensing Authority; £70,000 to Historic Royal Palaces for pensions; £61,000 to the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment; £1,000,000 to the English Tourism Council; £70,000 to the Broadcasting Standards Commission; £1,562,000 for research, surveys and other services of the Department; and to provide for additional capital expenditure under EYF arrangements of £350,000 for the Department's information technology, furniture and related expenses.

Other changes are to provide for a transfer of resources of £1,000,000 from English Heritage toward the costs of running the Listed Places of Worship Scheme together with additional resources of £10,000,000 from the Capital Modernisation Fund for grants under this scheme, the details of which were announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his 2001 Budget Statement to Parliament on 7 March 2001.

The changes on administration costs are to provide additional resources under EYF arrangements of £817,000 for the administrative expenses of the Department; to provide for the transfer of resources to Cabinet Office of £146,000 for the costs of fast stream recruitment and of the Department's share of Government Offices' expenses; and for the transfer of resources of £20,000 from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for the running costs of local public service agreements.

The increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Spending Limits

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans she has to change the Scotland Office (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limit for 2001–02. [19698]

Mrs. Liddell: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Scotland Office Departmental Expenditure Limits (DEL) will be increased by £751,571,000 from £16,422,121,000 to £17,173,692,000, and the administration costs limits will be increased by £334,000 from £6,502,000 to £6,836,000.

The DEL increases take account of the following:

- the take up of End Year Flexibility (EYF) amounting to £718,365,000;
- increases of £1,749,000 for flood relief and coastal defences;
- an increase of £10,231,000 from the Capital Modernisation Fund (CMF);
- an increase of £334,000 for Electoral Registration Publicity;
- an increase of £4,500,000 for the Forestry Commission;
- an increase of £32,000 for the Employment Coalitions.

The DEL increase also includes the following transfers to and from other Government Departments amounting to a net increase of £16,360,000. These are:

- a transfer of £14,208,000 from the Department for Education and Skills (DfES);
- net transfers of £2,729,000 from the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA);
- net transfers of £902,000 from the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP);
- net transfers to Department of Health (DH) of £419,000;
- a transfer of £78,000 to Home Office (HO);
- a transfer of £199,000 to Cabinet Office (CO);
- a transfer of £783,000 to Food Standards Agency (FSA).

All of the increases add to the resource budget and the capital budget of £100,000 is unchanged.

The increases will be offset by interdepartmental transfers, as detailed, or charged to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Police Service of Northern Ireland

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the post of Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland will be advertised internationally. [16307]

Jane Kennedy: In accordance with section 35(1) of the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 2000, the Northern Ireland Policing Board shall, subject to my approval, appoint the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland. It will be a matter in the first instance for the Board to consider whether to advertise the post internationally.

Freedom of Information Act

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date his Department established a working group of officials to prepare his Department for the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and on what dates this committee has met since it was set up. [14774]

Dr. John Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor on 13 November.

Work to implement the Freedom of Information Act is being overseen by the Department's senior management group, which receives regular progress reports. A task force of officials has been set up to assist with the implementation and compliance. Since June, presentations to senior staff and freedom of information seminars have been given throughout the Department and an information management training programme is planned for next year.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Dr. Vis: To ask the Solicitor-General what plans she has to change the Attorney-General's Department's (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limits for 2001–02. [19796]

The Solicitor-General: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the Attorney-General's Department's DEL will be increased by £25,375,000 from £426,088,000 to £451,463,000 and the administration costs limits will be increased by £22,476,000 from £299,627,000 to £322,103,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is set out in the table:

Resources
Change	22,476,000
New DEL	429,814,000
of which:
Voted	419,258,000
Non-voted	10,556,000
Capital
Change	2,899,000
New DEL	21,649,000
of which:
Voted	21,649,000
Non-voted	—

The Crown Prosecution Service's DEL will be increased by £23,797,000 from £391,096,000 to £414,893,000 and the administration costs limit will be increased by £21,747,000 from £275,227,000 to £296,974,000. The increase in the resource element of the DEL arises from speeding up the reform of the CPS to allow it to contribute fully to criminal justice targets and implementation of section 37 of the Vehicles (Crime) Reduction Act 2001. The decrease results from a transfer of £83,000 for work taken over by the Insolvency Service under section 218 of the Insolvency Act 1986. The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from an increase of £1,750,000 to fund the introduction of joint CPS/police criminal justice and trial units and £300,000 to fund the provision of digital certificates for the secure transmission of case information.

HM Procurator General and Treasury Solicitor's Department DEL will be increased by £1,578,000 from £14,167,000 to £15,745,000 and the administration costs limits will be increased by £729,000 from £9,900,000 to £10,629,000. The increase in administration costs is to facilitate action being taken by the Treasury Solicitor's Department as part of their Modernising Government action plan. The increase in capital expenditure of £849,000 will be used to fund continued expansion of the Department's IT systems.

The increases will be partly offset by an allocation of £22,000,000 from the Criminal Justice System reserve, an allocation of £250,000 from the Civil Service Modernisation Fund, a transfer of £105,000 from the Home Office, an allocation of £300,000 from the Capital Modernisation Fund, the draw down of £1,750,000 of the Attorney-General's Department's capital Departmental Unallocated Provision and the surrender of £99,000 of the Attorney-General's Department's capital end-year flexibility of £4,406,000 as set out in Table 6 of the Public Expenditure 2000–01 Outturn White Paper Cm 5243 published July 2001.

The remainder of the expenditure will be charged to the Reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

HEALTH

Mental Health Services

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 July 2001, Official Report, column 70W, what proportion of total NHS spending was used to provide mental health services in 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [10662]

Jacqui Smith: In 1999–2000, 12.5 per cent. of total national health service spend was used to provide mental health services.

This figure is however not comparable with those of previous years or future years: 1999–2000 represents the first year that primary care group expenditure was included in the calculation and the formula used to apportion the expenditure was based on estimated data. In future years the data for primary care groups and trusts will be more detailed and the resultant figure for percentage spend will be more accurate.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Norwich, North (Dr. Gibson) of 23 October 2001, Official Report, columns 144–45W, on mental health, what definition of appropriate accommodation is used in relation to his target for high secure hospitals. [11581]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 31 October 2001]: Paragraph 14.35 of the NHS Plan states that, by 2004, up to 400 patients should have moved from the high secure hospitals to more appropriate accommodation. The type of accommodation required for each patient will be determined by a careful assessment of the individual's needs and the degree of danger that they represent. The alternative placement might, depending on the outcome of the assessment, be medium secure, low secure or exceptionally discharge directly into the community.

Annual Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the breakdown of the cost of other services referred to on page 51 of his Department's annual report 2001. [17319]

Mr. Hutton: The category 'central health and miscellaneous expenditure' refers to a wide range of activities funded from the Department's spending programmes whose only common feature is that they receive funding directly from the Department and not via health authorities. Some of the services are managed directly by departmental staff, others are run by non-departmental public bodies, or other separate executive organisations.

There are approximately 45 budgets included within the category of 'other services', totalling £42 million planned expenditure for 2001–02 and referred to on page 51 of the latest departmental report. These are listed in the table.

Central health and miscellaneous services—other services

Total	41,525

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what items fall within the category of net capital expenditure of £1.5 million in 2001–02, referred to on page 30 of the 2001 departmental report. [15250]

Mr. Hutton: The figure of £1.5 billion referred to on page 30 of the departmental report represents the planned level of exchequer funded capital investment in land, buildings and equipment for hospital and community health services in 2000–01.

New Opportunities Fund (Cancer Care)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) breast, (b) lung, (c) stomach and (d) prostate cancer sufferers have been helped by allocations from the new opportunities fund since 1999. [15258]

Jacqui Smith: Funding of £93 million from the new opportunities fund was announced in 1999 and has been used to purchase 57 linear accelerators, 36 MRI scanners and over 300 items of equipment for the breast screening programme. A further £23.25 million was made available in 2000 from the new opportunities fund to provide improved palliative care at home.

The equipment and funding for palliative care will provide additional diagnostic and treatment facilities for all cancer sufferers as well as improve cancer care for those at home, but it is not possible to provide detailed figures for patients with specific cancers.

NHS Walk-in Centres

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost is of the NHS walk-in centres in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [14911]

Jacqui Smith: The estimated revenue costs for 2001–02 of the 42 national health service walk-in centres which will be operating before the end of this year are £36 million. The revenue costs in 2000–01 of the 40 centres then open were £33 million. In addition, development of these centres has involved capital costs of £30 million in 2000–01 and an estimated £5 million in 2001–02.

Cleft Lip and Palate Services

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the recommendations of the Clinical Implementation Group in respect of cleft lip and palate services for the North West Region. [15016]

Jacqui Smith: Cleft lip and palate services are one element in a wider discussion around tertiary children's services in the North West and we want to ensure that the very best integrated paediatric care is provided.

The Department's North West Regional Office produced a commissioning framework for cleft lip and palate services. A cleft review panel, which comprised local clinicians, commissioners, regional office representatives and national experts in cleft care including the chief executive of the Cleft Lip and Palate Association (CLAPA), met in June 2001 to review presentations from both tertiary paediatric trusts—Royal Liverpool Children's Hospital Trust and Central Manchester and Manchester Children's University Hospitals Trust. Discussions are taking place between the two trusts to reach agreement on the best configuration of cleft services for the north west and it is anticipated that a proposal will go to public consultation in January 2002.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in (a) rank and (b) alphabetical order of health authority the (i) proportion and (ii) number of patients waiting (A) over 12 months and (B) over 18 months for in-patient treatment (1) at the last available date, (2) in March 1997 and (3) in June 1997. [15285]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 November 2001]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

In line with the NHS Plan, inpatient waiting times will fall on a staged basis from 18 months now through to 15,12, nine and down to six months by 2005. As a result, we expect the average time patients wait for inpatient treatment to fall from three months to seven weeks.

As a first step towards this, the maximum waiting time for an inpatient appointment will be 15 months by the end of March 2002

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are waiting for admission for orthopaedic treatment at Bedford Hospital NHS Trust; how many were waiting in November (a) 2000, (b) 1999, (c) 1998 and (d) 1997; and how many have waited (i) six months, (ii) six to 12 months and (iii) 12 to 15 months. [15622]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 November 2001]: Figures for inpatient orthopaedic treatment are not available monthly but are collected on a quarterly basis.

Figures for patients waiting for orthopaedic admission at Bedford Hospitals National Health Service Trust are shown in the table.

	Total waiting	Up to 6 months	6–12 months	12–15 months
March 1997	754	513	232	9
December 1998	1,143	565	422	115
December 1999	1,187	578	480	104
December 2000	1,189	505	458	139

Performance Fund

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations have received allocations from the Performance Fund; and how much in each case. [15766]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

"Sold on Health" Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress with implementing the recommendation in the "Sold on Health" report; and what savings to public funds (a) are planned and (b) have been achieved. [15760]

Jacqui Smith: "Sold on Health" is a joint report published by the Department and Her Majesty's Treasury in May 2000. The report focused on the whole life cycle issues relating to the estate in the National Health Service, from procurement through its operational management and subsequent disposal.

Substantial progress has been made, and details will soon be available on the Sold on Health website "www.soldonhealth.gov.uk".

Invest to Save Budget

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expected saving is to public funds from the projects of his Department in Round 2 of the Invest to Save Budget. [15763]

Mr. Hutton: The estimated savings of Invest to Save Round 2 projects over the period of project's funding is: 2000–01 £1.2 million and 2001–02 £760,000 through a combination of cash releasing and efficiency savings. However, the key aim of the Invest to Save programme is to encourage innovation, streamlining and improvements in the delivery of public services.

Modernisation Agency

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Modernisation Agency was established; and what its cost to public funds is in 2001–02. [15765]

Mr. Hutton: The National Health Service Modernisation Agency was set up on 1 April 2001. Its budget for the year 2001–02 stands at £54 million.

GP Appointments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expected cost to public funds is of enabling all patients to have GP appointments within 48 hours. [16250]

Mr. Hutton: Better access for patients is part of the vision for modernising primary care. Expenditure in primary care is around £5 billion. As well as this funding an access fund is available for primary care. Rising from £54.5 million in 2000–01, recurrent funding of £84.5 million is available this year, increasing to £114.5 million in 2002–03 and is intended to support primary care trusts in securing delivery of the 48-hour target. This can be further enhanced by PCTs unified budgets.

Transsexual People

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department issues on the provision of care for transsexual people. [16384]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has issued no specific guidance on the provision of care to transsexuals. Like all other services, decisions about whether gender reassignment surgery should be funded under the national health service, are made by individual health authorities, who must take account of the wider picture in terms of local priorities and circumstances when determining how resources are spent. Each case must be decided on its own merits.

NHS Dental Care

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to ensure that all those who want to are able to register for NHS dental care. [16208]

Ms Blears [holding answer 19 November 2001]: We are committed to ensuring that national health service dentistry is available to all who want it through registration with an NHS dentist. In supporting this commitment the Government have invested over £100 million in the last two years. This includes a scheme that spends about £20 million per annum on rewarding dentists with a significant NHS commitment.

Registration can play an important role in promoting oral health through strengthening the relationship between patient and dentist. However many people do not visit a dentist regularly. Systems are now in place for NHS

Direct to advise patients in all parts of the country on where they can find a NHS dentist, within locally defined time and distance standards.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the performance of NHS trusts in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 in meeting their responsibility to break even on an income and expenditure basis. [16955]

Mr. Hutton: The annual accounts for national health service trusts in 2000–01 show no trust reporting a failure in its statutory duty to break even on an income and expenditure basis taking one year with another.

The 2001–02 annual accounts will not be received until the autumn of 2002. However, expectation is that all NHS trusts will meet the duty.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on NHS trusts' planned costs for (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04. [16957]

Mr. Hutton: The planned expenditure of national health service trusts for financial year 2001–02 is circa £30.3 billion.

Information on the planned costs of NHS trusts in financial years 2002–03 and 2003–04 will be collected as part of the normal planning cycle for the NHS. Information such as this will normally be available in May/June of the financial year concerned.

Best Value

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the savings (a) in 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 arising from the application by his Department of Best Value. [16942]

Mr. Hutton: The Department, with other central Government Departments, is committed to fundamental reviews of all its services in a five year programme under the better quality services initiative. A departmental review was conducted earlier this year, and the implementation of its recommendations is under way. The Department contributes to the application of Best Value in local authorities through the work of the social services inspectorate, and work on the performance management framework.

NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the funding of the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; [17167]

(2) if he will make a statement on the cost in 2001–02 of the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency. [16940]

Mr. Hutton: The National Health Service Purchasing and Supply Agency is an executive agency of the Department and is funded centrally. In 2001–2002 the Agency was allocated £19.5 million. The agency's funding for 2002–03 is still being discussed.

The agency's aim is to modernise and improve the performance of the NHS purchasing and supply system and become the centre of expertise, knowledge and excellence on matters of purchasing and supply for the NHS for the benefit of patients and the public.

The agency is responsible for ensuring that the NHS makes the most effective use of its resources by getting the best value for money when purchasing goods and services. In 2000–01 the agency negotiated contracts that resulted in savings of £171.1 million and from April to the end of October 2001 has achieved savings of £108.1 million.

NHS Pensions Agency

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the savings arising from the procurement of a private sector partner for contractorisation of the non-core services of the NHS Pensions Agency. [16939]

Mr. Hutton: The contractorisation of the National Health Service Pensions Agency's non-core services will deliver overall savings of 20 per cent. of the agency's baseline running costs.

NHS Management Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on NHS management costs in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04. [16958]

Mr. Hutton: We are on course to achieve £1 billion savings in management costs between 1997–98 and the end of 2001–02.

We are currently considering the future basis of management costs in the light of the shifting the balance of power initiative and our broader commitment to invest savings in frontline services and child care facilities for national health service staff.

Out-of-area Treatment System

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics his Department collates on the operation of the out-of-area treatment system. [16763]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 21 November 2001]: Regional offices annually collect information on the cost, and the home health authority of those out-of-area patients who are treated at each national health service trust within their area. The information is compiled centrally by the Department and used to calculate the annual out-of-area funding adjustment.

Mental Health Act

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has received the report on the second phase of work on guardianship under the Mental Health Act 1983; and if he will publish it. [17092]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The Department is not intending to publish the second (and final) report of the research but I have asked officials to write to the hon. Member giving contact details for the researchers who were commissioned to undertake this work.

Pneumococcal Vaccine

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 131W, on the pneumococcal vaccine, if he will set out (a) the remit and aims of the studies, (b) which persons or organisations are undertaking the studies and (c) when the studies were commissioned and when the work is scheduled to be completed. [180141]

Jacqui Smith: Studies looking at the suitability of the pneumococcal vaccine for introduction into the United Kingdom routine childhood immunisation programme are currently being undertaken by the Public Health Laboratory Service. These studies were commissioned in 1996 by the Department as part of a three-year research programme. Because of the unavailability of the pneumococcal vaccines it was not possible to begin these studies until 2000.

The key question being addressed in these studies is how the pneumococcal conjugate vaccine performs under the two, three, four-month UK programme, in particular assessing whether a booster dose, or all three primary immunisations, are necessary. Information on potential catch-up immunisation schedules in older age groups is also being sought. The final results for these trials are expected to be available in early 2003. The effect of the pneumococcal conjugate vaccine on the presence of bacteria naturally occurring in the population (carriage) will also be studied.

Residential Care

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nursing and (b) residential care (i) homes and (ii) beds have closed in the Buckingham constituency in each year since 1997. [17859]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Wycombe (Mr. Goodman) on 19 July 2001, Official Report, columns 444–45W.

Information for 2001 will be published in "Community Care Statistics 2001: Residential Personal Social Services for Adults, England" on 29 November.

Diabetes

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what priority he places on the treatment of diabetes; [18148]

(2) what plans he has to review the national treatment standards for diabetes sufferers; and if he will make a statement. [18149]

Jacqui Smith: We are committed to improving the quality of care for people with diabetes. That is why we are developing a National Service Framework for Diabetes. We shall shortly be publishing, as the first stage of the Framework, a document setting out the first ever set of national standards for the treatment of diabetes.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of new drugs to treat type 1 diabetes; and if he will make a statement. [18147]

Jacqui Smith: The Medicines Control Agency has not received any licence application for any new drug to treat type 1 diabetes. Should an application be made for a new drug or for a new formulation, the agency will carefully evaluate the safety, quality and efficacy of the product prior to licensing.

We announced on 31 July that we were referring long-acting insulin analogues to the National Institute for Clinical Excellence for appraisal. The Institute appraises the clinical and cost effectiveness of treatments and issues authoritative, evidence based guidance to the national health service, in order to ensure that people have equal access to effective treatments wherever they live.

Children at Risk

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, columns 364–65W, on children at risk, if he will set out separately the number of unborn children. [18235]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 26 November 2001]: The number of unborn children who were added to, and deleted from, child protection registers during the years ending 31 March 2000 and 2001 are given in the table.

Registrations to, and de-registrations from, child protection registers, of unborn children, during the years ending 31 March 2000 and 2001, and number of unborn children on registers at 31 March of each year—England

	Number of unborn children[1]
On the register at 31 March
2000	200
2001	200
Registrations
2000	900
2001	1,000
De-registrations
2000	30
2001	70

[1] Figures are rounded to the nearest 100; figures less than 100 are rounded to the nearest 10.

Wheelchair Service

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the growth pressures on the wheelchair service; in which geographical areas these are unusually intense; and if he will make a statement on future funding. [18349]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 27 November 2001]: The information requested is not available centrally. Funding for wheelchairs is included in allocations to health authorities. Funding decisions and allocations for 2002–03 will be made in time to allow health authorities, in conjunction with primary care groups and primary care trusts, to make plans for delivering services for that financial year.

Care Home Closures

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he is offering local authorities on the impact of the closure of care homes. [18359]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Government advice on the impact of the closure of care homes was published on 9 October in "Building Capacity and Partnership in Care". Commissioners and providers should share information about services that may no longer be needed, or may be about to be withdrawn. In all cases, the aim must be to minimise the impact on the patient or service user. Care homes closing at short notice can be particularly distressing for the residents of those homes. If services have to be withdrawn, commissioners and providers should seek to achieve this in a planned way.

Private Care Homes

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will launch an initiative to provide help and advice for private care home users through (a) a telephone hotline service and (b) local health/social services teams. [18360]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 27 November 2001]: From April 2002 the independent National Care Standards Commission will regulate, inspect and register social and health care services previously regulated by local councils and health authorities. In doing so the commission will apply comprehensive new national minimum standards for all care homes. The standards for older people's care homes were published in March and provide for homes to have a specified complaints procedure and to provide information to service users on how to refer a complaint to the commission.

The Department is also piloting care direct in six councils in the south west. This new service is designed to provide help and advice for all older people, their relatives and carers about social care, health, housing and social security benefits. We plan to extend care direct to cover the whole of England by 2005.

Health Action Zones

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of health action zones; and when he will announce the funding for future years. [17915]

Ms Blears [holding answer 27 November 2001]: The long-term future of health action zones (HAZs) will be determined as part of the Cabinet Office Regional Co-ordination Unit-led review of area based initiatives (ABIs) which is expected to be complete early in the New Year. The HAZ element of this review will examine the ways in which HAZs work and assess their effectiveness and co-ordination with other ABIs.

Decisions on health authority allocations and central revenue budgets (including HAZs) will be announced shortly for 2002–03. Decisions on funding for 2003–04 and beyond will be made as part of the Department's work on the 2002 spending review.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 31 October 2001, Official Report, column 828W, on asylum seekers, if he will list the local authorities participating in the children in need census. [17821]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 27 November 2001]: All authorities are expected to participate in the Children in Need census.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 875W, on asylum seekers, what representations he has received to extend the Children (Leaving Care) Act 2000 so that local authorities have (a) duties and (b) powers to assist 18 to 21-year-old unaccompanied asylum seeking children cared for under section 17 of the Children Act 1989. [17812]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 27 November 2001]: None. The Children (Leaving Care) Act 2000 applies only to children who have been looked after under section 20 or section 31 of the Children Act 1989, or who have been remanded into care by a court. It applies to unaccompanied asylum seeking children who meet these criteria. Such children, who come to the attention of local authorities, should have their needs assessed in accordance with Government guidance, the "Framework for the Assessment of Children in need and Their Families", in the same way as would a local child, and their needs should be responded to on the basis of the outcome of that assessment.

Food Standards Agency

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to amend the Food Standards Agency (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limit for 2001–02. [19695]

Ms Blears: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate for the Food Standards Agency (FSA) the overall resource Departmental Expenditure Limit for 2001–02 will be increased by £10,911,000 (of which £4,274,000 is administrations costs) from £111,243,000 to £122,154,000.

The increase is the net effect of the addition of the FSA's End Year Flexibility (EYF) entitlement. Delays in appointing external Board Members meant that the overall FSA strategy, and hence certain projects, were also delayed. This amounts to £6,637,000 programme and £2,867,000 administration costs. Additionally, transfers from Scotland (£783,000) and Wales (£609,000) are needed to cover the estimated fall in Meat Hygiene Service income in these countries resulting from the revised charging methodology recommended in the Maclean report. A transfer of £15,000 administration costs from the Department of Health is needed as contribution towards the cost of the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition. Finally, the FSA's EYF capital entitlement needs to be incorporated. The move of the FSA to a new office in central London was later than anticipated, caused by building delays. This has resulted in the need to incorporate £433,000 EYF capital expenditure.

As a result of these changes the gross administration cost limit for the FSA has increased by £4,274,000 from £48,908,000 to £53,182,000.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to amend his Department's (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limit for 2001–02. [19696]

Mr. Milburn: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department of Health Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) will be increased by £768,348,000 from £49,805,054,000 to £50,573,402,000 and the Administration Cost Limit will be increased by £9,701,000 from £312,234,000 to £321,935,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is set out in the table:

£000

	Resources	Capital
Change	617,391	150,957
New DEL	48,334,111	2,239,291
Of which:
Voted	48,923,590	254,195
Non-voted	–589,479	1,985,096

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from the take up of end year flexibility £359,377,000 (£9,000,000 administration costs) as set out in Table 6 of the Public Expenditure 2000–01 Provisional Outturn White Paper Cm 5243 published in July 2001.

Transfers of provision from the Home Office of £21,173,000 (£400,000 administration costs) mainly for the National Treatment Agency and drug treatment services and research. A net transfer from the Scottish Executive comprising an increase of £1,188,000 (£128,000 administration costs) for contributions to the cost of Non-departmental Public Bodies, committees, the high security infectious disease unit, HIV surveillance funding and postgraduate medical education, offset by £819,000 for out of area treatment costs. A net transfer from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions of £4,950,000 (£5,100,000 of which £100,000 administration costs) mainly for the teenage pregnancy unit, offset by £150,000 for mobility centres. From the Office of Government Commerce £50,000 for Avonbridge House. From the Office of Science and Technology £45,000 (administration costs) for a contribution to the Human genetics Commission. To the Department for Education and Skills £4,097,000 for education health partnerships and educational advisers. A net transfer from the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs £1,000,000 for research offset by a transfer of £100,000 for a contribution to rural stress action teams. To the Department for Work and Pensions £509,000 for the costs of Care Direct and preserved rights cases. A transfer to the Food Standards Agency £15,000 (administration costs) for the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition. A change in the level of non DEL provision for NHS Trust depreciation of £240,000,000 now reclassified as part of DEL and a reallocation from resources to capital of £4,852,000 for costs associated with the National Care Standards Commission and Social Care Institute for Excellence.

The administration cost limit has been increased by £9,701,000 from £312,234,000 to £321,935,000. In addition to the changes detailed above there is a further net increase of £43,000 comprising an increase in the Medical Device Agency's costs of £223,000 for assessment and evaluation of devices, offset by a reduction of £180,000 in respect of the NHS Appointments Commission.

The change to the capital element of the DEL arises from the take up of end year flexibility £95,632,000 as set out in Table 6 of the Public Expenditure 2000–01 Provisional Outturn White Paper Cm 5243 published in July 2001. From the Capital Modernisation Fund £50,000,000 to support the NHS capital programme and a reallocation from resource DEL of £4,852,000 and a transfer from the Scottish Executive of £50,000 for a contribution to non-departmental public bodies.

The take-up of non-voted supplementary credit approvals for personal social services in England has increased by £423,000 from £18,700,000 to £19,123,000 in respect of the take up of end year flexibility entitlement mentioned above.

The increases will be offset by inter-departmental transfers and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Doctors and Nurses

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the latest figures are for the shortfall in (b) doctors and (b) nurses in the NHS. [18677]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Plan acknowledges that a shortage of human resources is the biggest constraint faced by the National Health Service today. Targets for increasing the number of doctors and nurses were set in the NHS Plan and rolled forward in the manifesto before the last election.

The NHS Plan targets are for 7,500 more consultants, 2,000 more general practitioners and 20,000 more nurses by 2004. In September 2000 there were 1,100 more consultants, 126 more GPs and 6,300 more nurses than in September 1999, the NHS Plan baseline. The manifesto targets are for 10,000 more doctors and 20,000 more nurses by 2005 over the 2000 baseline.

The September 2001 census, giving the latest position against these targets, will be available in January 2002.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average annual rate of pay is for (a) nurses and (b) doctors (i) in the NHS and (ii) in the private sector. [18676]

Mr. Hutton: We estimate that as at August 2000, medical consultants were paid, on average, £65,000 basic salary, £72,000 total earnings, by National Health Service employers. The equivalent figures for nurses were £19,100 and £22,400.

Information is not available for staff working in the private sector.

Note:

Doctor's figures relate to medical consultants; nurses to qualified nurses in clinical grades D to G

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress towards the Public Service Agreement target of a reduction in the death rate from cancer amongst people aged under 75 years by at least 20 per cent. by 2010 [14890]

Jacqui Smith: Latest available data (for the three years 1998–2000) overlap the start of Our Healthier Nation health strategy, in which the mortality target was set, in July 1999. It is therefore too early yet to assess the effects of the strategy. However, movement to date is towards the target. Data for 1998–2000 (three-year average) show a rate of 130.9 deaths per 100,000 population, a reduction of 6.3 per cent. from the baseline (1995–97).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress towards meeting the public service agreement target of a reduction in the death rate among people aged under 75 years by at least 40 per cent. by 2010. [14889]

Jacqui Smith: This target is to reduce deaths from coronary heart disease and stroke and related diseases in people under age 75. The latest available data (for the three years 1998–2000) overlap the start of the Our Healthier Nation health strategy in July 1999 and the publication of the National Service Framework for Coronary Heart Disease in March 2000. It is too early yet to assess the effects of these strategies. However, movement to date is towards the target. Data for 1998–2000 (three-year average) show a rate of 120.5 deaths per 100,000 population—a reduction of 13.7 per cent. from the baseline (1995–97).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on success in meeting the public service agreement target for procurement savings by NHS trusts in 2000–01. [14901]

Mr. Hutton: All national health service trusts achieved procurement savings of 3 per cent. for the financial year 2000–01.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress towards meeting the public service agreement target that everyone with suspected cancer should be able to see a specialist within two weeks of his or her GP deciding that there is a need to do so. [14949]

Jacqui Smith: Good progress has been made towards meeting the public service agreement target that everyone with suspected cancer should be able to see a specialist within two weeks of urgent referral. In the period April to June this year 92.4 per cent. of all urgent general practitioner referrals for suspected cancer were seen within two weeks. Since April 1999 more than 186,000 women with suspected breast cancer have benefited by being seen within two weeks and over the period January to June 2001 over 114,000 people urgently referred with suspected cancer were seen by a specialist within two weeks.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress towards meeting the public service agreement target for the reduction of levels of staff absence due to sickness and injury caused by violence. [14912]

Mr. Hutton: The national baseline figure for sickness absence levels in the national health service, set in an exercise carried out in 1999, was 4.9 per cent. The Department is currently analysing data collected earlier this year to monitor progress in meeting the public service agreement target for the reduction in levels of staff absence.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the public service agreement target for reducing the number of children re-registered on a child protection register. [14009]

Jacqui Smith: There is a National Priorities Guidance target to reduce by 10 per cent., by 2002, the proportion of children who are re-registered on the child protection register, from a baseline of 18 per cent. for the year ending 31 March 1997. Achieving this target would involve a reduction to 16.2 per cent. by March 2002.

This target has already been achieved. The proportion of children who were re-registered on the child protection register fell to 15 per cent. in 1998–99, to 14 per cent. in 1999–2000 and has remained at 14 per cent. in 2000–01, the latest year for which data are available.

Health Providers (Shropshire)

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been made available to health providers in Shropshire other than the health authority in 2001–02 to date. [17817]

Mr. Hutton: All 2001–02 revenue funding to date for the four Shropshire national health service trusts has been routed directly through health authorities.

Capital allocations made directly to NHS trusts by the Department. Total capital allocations so far this year are detailed in the table. These include discretionary capital allocations and additional allocations for specific schemes.

Total capital programme allocations to NHS trusts in Shropshire: 2001–02

Princess Royal Hospital	4,093,000
Royal Shrewsbury Hospital	4,199,000
Robert Jones and Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital	1,436,000
Shropshire's Community and Mental Health Services	2,899,000

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Pakistan

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent discussions with President Musharraf about the situation in Pakistan. [16693]

Mr. Bradshaw: On 23 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met President Musharraf in Islamabad. They discussed Afghanistan and Pakistan, Pakistan's support in the fight against terrorism and UK/Pakistan relations.

Overseas Territories Bill

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the meetings (a) his predecessor and (b) he had with representatives of the Governments of (i) Anguilla, (ii) Bermuda, (iii) the British Virgin Islands, (iv) the Cayman Islands, (v) Montserrat, (vi) Pitcairn, (vii) St. Helena and the St. Helena dependencies and (viii) the Turks and Caicos Islands concerning the implications of the Overseas Territories Bill for human rights legislation in these countries. [16792]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Overseas Territories Bill has no direct implications for human rights legislation in the Overseas Territories. The Government do, however, regard the establishment and promotion of human rights as an important aspect of our partnership with the territories.

Terrorist/Freedom Fighter Definition

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's definition is of (a) an international terrorist and (b) a freedom fighter; and if he will make a statement. [17332]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane), on 27 November 2001, Official Report, columns 826–27.

Public Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list those public bodies which are the responsibility of his Department and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000; [17589]

(2) if he will list those public bodies to which his Department appoints members and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000. [17588]

Mr. Bradshaw: Public Bodies 2000 sets out information on non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs), certain public corporations (including nationalised industries) and NHS bodies. There are four types of NDPB: executive NDPBs; advisory NDPBs; tribunal NDPBs; and boards of visitors to penal establishments. The next edition will be published around the end of the year. Information about task forces, annual reports and ad hoc advisory groups is set out in an annual report, published by Cabinet Office. Copies of Public Bodies 2000 are in the Library of the House and this publication may be accessed via Cabinet Office's website http://www.officialdocuments.co.uk/document/caboff/pb00/pb00.htm. Copies of the annual report on task forces and similar bodies have also been placed in the Library of the House and the annual report is being made available on Cabinet Office's website.

All those public bodies to which the FCO appoints members are listed in Public Bodies 2000.

Local Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those local bodies which were set up under legislation which is the responsibility of his Department since May 1997. [17590]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is not responsible for any local bodies.

Bulgaria

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he anticipates Bulgaria will have completed negotiations to enter the EU. [17839]

Peter Hain: The Bulgarian Government have recently declared their intention to complete accession negotiations in 2003, with the aim of joining by the end of 2006. HMG will continue to provide advice and support to Bulgaria in order to help it accede to the EU.

UAE-Iraq (Trade)

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Arab Emirates-Iraq free trade agreement on 2 November; and what plans he has for the discussions on the issue to be held in Muscat in December. [18038]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UN "oil for food" programme, which enables Iraq to use the revenue from its oil sales through the UN to buy goods worth billions of dollars each year to meet the humanitarian needs of the Iraqi people and to rehabilitate Iraq's infrastructure, has led to significant growth in Iraq's trade with its neighbours. We have no objection to agreements to promote this trade to benefit the Iraqi people, provided that such agreements neither breach UN controls, for example by promoting the export from Iraq of goods other than crude oil, nor contribute to the Iraqi regime's aim to engineer the lifting of UN controls without having to meet its international obligations, particularly on disarmament.

We are not aware of any plans to discuss this issue in Muscat.

"Never Again" Leaflet

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost was of producing the "Never Again" leaflet; and to whom it has been distributed. [18077]

Mr. MacShane: The cost of producing the "Never Again" leaflet was £23,971. Copies have been distributed to Members of Parliament and members of the devolved legislatures, as well as to British Embassies and High Commissions for use with overseas audiences and to foreign journalists in London. The text is also available on the FCO website. Further copies in English, Arabic, Farsi, Turkish, Bengali, Hindi and Urdu are available from the Islamic Media Unit at the FCO.

Ceuta and Melilla

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what indications he has received from the Spanish Government of its intention (a) to transfer sovereignty of Ceuta and Melilla to Morocco and (b) to arrange joint sovereignty of those territories with Morocco. [17832]

Peter Hain: None.

India

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit India. [18733]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Foreign Secretary hopes to visit India next year. Dates have not yet been set.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to change his (a) Department's expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limits for 2001–02. [19752]

Mr. MacShane: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's departmental expenditure limit (DEL) will be decreased by £3,206,000 from £1,365,910,000 to £1,362,704,000 and the administration costs limit will be decreased by £960,000 from £635,558,000 to £634,598,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the table.

	£000
Resources
Change	−2,416
New DEL	1,236,138
Of which:
Voted	1,067,237
Non-voted	168,901
Capital
Change	−790
New DEL	126,566
Of which:
Voted	103,066
Non-voted	23,500

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

1. A reduction of £960,000 in the FCO's administration cost limit as a result of a PES (public expenditure survey) transfer to the DTI relating to funding arrangements for British Trade International.
2. A PES transfer of £886,000 to the Cabinet Office relating to funding arrangements for the BBC Monitoring Service.
3. A PES transfer of £570,000 to DFID to reflect funding arrangements for a refurbishment project.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from a PES transfer of £790,000 to the DTI relating to funding arrangements for British Trade International.

The decreases are offset by inter-departmental transfers and will not impact on the planned total of public expenditure.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on evidence he has received concerning attacks on opposition MDC (Movement for Democratic Change) supporters in Zimbabwe; and what implications this has for free and fair presidential elections in 2002. [18088]

Mr. Bradshaw: The most recent reports we have of such incidents concern attacks on opposition MDC supporters by war veterans and ZANU (PF) activists in Bulawayo during the weekend of 17–18 November. MDC supporters are also reported to have retaliated. We condemn such politically motivated violence from whatever quarter, and continue to urge the Government of Zimbabwe to take immediate action to prevent further incidents which threaten to undermine the conduct of free and fair presidential elections in 2002.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish evidence he has received indicating violations of human rights by Government Ministers in Zimbabwe. [18089]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have received a number of reports compiled by non-governmental organisations of alleged human rights abuses in Zimbabwe. The most recent is a report by the Human Rights Forum a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. We regularly raise our concern about human rights in Zimbabwe with the Government of Zimbabwe.

Tibet

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of the issues he raised with regard to Tibet during the meeting with the Chinese Vice-Foreign Minister on 30 October; and what the response of the Chinese Government was. [18879]

Mr. MacShane: At my meeting with the Chinese Foreign Minister Li Zhaoxing, I made clear our concerns about the human rights situation in Tibet and urged the Chinese Government to enter into dialogue with the Dalai Lama, about the future of Tibet. The Chinese Foreign Minister took note.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

UK Atomic Energy Authority

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will announce the outcome of the Quinquennial Review of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority. [19568]

Mr. Wilson: The Government have now considered the recommendations made by the Review Team in its second and final report.

The report focuses primarily on arrangements for managing public sector civil nuclear liabilities on a more open, transparent, efficient and sustainable basis and on UKAEA's place within any new arrangements which might be put in place.

The conclusions we have reached are set out in the statement which the Secretary of State made to the House earlier today in which she announced the Government's intention to put a sharper focus on nuclear clean-up by setting up a new Liabilities Management Authority responsible for providing the strong strategic control and direction which is essential; developing a supply base capable of sustaining the clean-up programme over the long term; and enhancing safety and environmental performance while securing management efficiencies and best value for money. Working with the LMA, UKAEA will have a key role to play in delivering these objectives in relation to the liabilities for which it is currently responsible, building and improving on what it has achieved to date.

In relation to UKAEA's other activities the report recommends that:

> UKAEA, in conjunction with the other public sector bodies on the site, should evaluate options for the future development of Harwell as a basis for decisions on a long term strategy for the development of the site as a whole; > the UKAEA Constabulary should be established as a stand-alone force employed by a statutory Police Authority;
> UKAEA should retain responsibility for managing the UK's fusion capability and for operating the JET (joint European torus) research facility at Culham under contract to the European Commission but that a Fusion Advisory Board should be established to give fusion a more distinctive identity within the UKAEA, bring a broader perspective to its thinking on fusion strategy and drive forward action on science and industry out-reach; > the Thurso pensions office should remain part of UKAEA for the foreseeable future but that options for outsourcing offering the prospect of additional work for the office should be kept under review.

The Government have accepted all these recommendations. Those relating to the development of Harwell and fusion will be implemented immediately. Legislation to create an independent Constabulary and a statutory Police Authority will be brought forward at the first available opportunity. Views will be invited in due course on the precise detail of the legislative provisions involved.

The Government believe that fusion power has the potential to make a real and valuable contribution to meeting energy needs in the medium term. We are therefore concerned to maintain and make best use of UK expertise in fusion research. To this end, responsibility for funding the UK fusion programme will be transferred to the Research Councils as a further means of encouraging integration with the wider science base and ensuring continuity in the UK's research capability in this area.

I have arranged for copies of the QQR Team's Stage 1 and Stage 2 reports to be placed in the Libraries of the House. The reports can also be accessed via the DTI website at www.dti.gov.uk.

Refrigerators (Recycling)

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice she is giving to (a) retail outlets who previously have collected old refrigerators when supplying new refrigerators to customers and (b) small retail businesses who have previously collected the old refrigerators from large retail outlets and then sold them as second hand items, consequent upon changes coming into effect in relation to EC regulation 2037/2000. [18557]

Mr. Wilson: EC Regulation 2037/2000 on substances which deplete the ozone layer is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. Officials in my Department have been working closely with officials in the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and relevant stakeholders to develop guidance that will enable both the retail outlets and small businesses mentioned to comply with the new requirements.

British Trade International

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes will be made to the Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit of British Trade International. [19569]

Ms Hewitt: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the voted element of the Resource Departmental Expenditure Limit for British Trade International will be increased by £2,184,000 from £86,634,000 to £88,818,000.

This increase relates to:

1. a transfer of £2,000,000 in resources from the Department of Trade and Industry to fund the UK Global programme;
2. a transfer of £10,000 in resources from the Department of Trade and Industry, in payment of their contribution to a feasibility study for the development of an international banking facility;
3. a transfer of £174,000 in resources from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, in respect of the Exports Construction Centre, required to reflect part of the machinery of Government changes announced by the Prime Minister on 8 June 2001.

The increase will be offset by transfers and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Cammell Laird

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date A&P made their submission to the Office of Fair Trading supporting their purchase of Cammell Laird shipbuilders. [18298]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The merger was notified to the Office of Fair Trading on 5 October 2001.

Export Control Bill

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason reference to sustainable development does not appear in the long title of the Export Control Bill. [17428]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Under the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria the Government are obliged to take into account whether or not a proposed arms export would seriously undermine the economy or seriously hamper the sustainable development of the recipient country. Under clause 8 of the Bill, these criteria are to be treated as published guidance that the Government must have regard to in making licensing decisions. As the Bill requires the Government to continue to take the criteria (which include criterion 8 on sustainable development) into account in licensing decisions, it is unnecessary to mention sustainable development on the face of the Bill.

Cowboy Builders

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in her schemes to combat cowboy builders; and if she will make a statement. [14361]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 13 November 2001]: I launched the Quality Mark pilot scheme to consumers in Birmingham and Somerset in July. The Quality Mark scheme provides the public with a means of checking technical and other standards of a builder. The public response has been very encouraging. The call-centre is receiving an average of 60 calls a day and the website has had around 12,000 hits since the launch. Quality Mark companies are already starting to see positive improvements to their business. 131 builders and tradesmen have now been approved. 175 companies are in the pipeline with further numbers expected to come forward in the weeks and months ahead. We are continuing to work with leading trade bodies and other organisations to promote access to Quality Mark for their members.

We will be commencing formal evaluation of the scheme with partners early in the new year and expect a report to be submitted to Ministers in February 2002, following which a formal decision will be made about extending Quality Mark to the rest of the country.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to change the departmental expenditure limit and administration cost limits for (a) her Department, (b) the Office of Fair Trading, (c) the Office of Telecommunications, (d) the Postal Services Commission and (e) the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets. [19570]

Ms Hewitt: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate the Department of Trade and Industry DEL will be increased by £217,381,000 from £4,549,049,000 to £4,766,430,000 and the Administration Costs limit will be increased by £23,407,000 from £411,938,000 to £435,345,000. This is the impact on the DTI DEL excluding the Machinery of Government transfers from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions. Further consideration is being given to the effect on the DEL for both Departments.

Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is as set out in the table:

Resources
Change	194,784
New DEL	3,971,606
of which:
Voted	1,393,728
Non-voted	2,577,878
Capital
Change	22,597
New DEL	794,824
of which:
Voted	482,703
Non-voted	312,121

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from

(x) take up of £8,121,000 from the unused balance of the Department's end-year flexibility entitlement for the Capital Modernisation Fund for Small and Medium Enterprise on-line projects;

(xi) a reclassification of the payment of £700,000 to SITPRO (Simpler Trade Procedures Board) as a Grant-in-Aid to a Non-Departmental Public Body, thereby increasing non-Voted DEL and decreasing voted DEL by the above amount;

(xii) a transfer of £58,000 from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for the provision of a helpline for the European Union's Framework Five Thematic Programme for comparative and sustainable growth;

(xiii) take up of £27,400,000 from the unused balance of the Department's end-year flexibility entitlement for payments to redundant steel workers under the European Coal & Steel Community (ECSC) Treaty and to certain steel production workers based on the Treaty;

(xiv) a reclassification from capital to resource of £3,722,000 for the Rover Task Force Modernisation and Diversification Projects;

(xv) a reclassification from capital to resource of £175,000 for the Regional Innovation Fund Corridor Study;

(xvi) take up of £3,000,000 from the unused balance of the Department's end-year flexibility entitlement in respect of £1,000,000 for UK Global Partnerships and the transfer of £2,000,000 to British Trade International for enterprise scholarships and pilot programmes for entrepreneurs;

(xvii) a transfer of £340,000 from the Home Office for the Design against Crime Reduction Project;

(xviii) a transfer of £70,000 from the Department for Education and Skills for Work-Life Balance Secondees;

(xix) a transfer of £1,535,000 from the Department for Education and Skills for publicity and evaluation in relation to the Work-Life Balance project to reflect Machinery of Government transfers;

(xx) a transfer of £4,450,000 in resources and £50,000 in Appropriations in Aid from the Department for Education and Skills for the Work Life Balance project to reflect Machinery of Government transfers;

(xxi) a transfer of £22,158,000 from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in respect of support for the construction industry to reflect Machinery of Government transfers;

(xxii) a transfer of £6,684,000 in administration costs to reflect Machinery of Government transfers from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in respect of support for the construction industry;

(xxiii) a reclassification of £17,440,000 from voted to non-Voted DEL to reflect the funding of Regional Development Agencies following Machinery of Government changes xxiv) a transfer of £350,000 to the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets to cover their costs of implementing the Climate Change Levy exemption for electricity from renewable sources xxv) take up of £3,100,000 from the unused balance of the Department's end-year flexibility entitlement for the Shipbuilding Intervention Fund;

(xxvi) take up of £2,320,000 from the unused balance of the Department's end year flexibility entitlement in respect of expenditure related to the National Minimum Wage;

(xxvii) a transfer of £10,000 to British Trade International in respect of a feasibility study for the development of an international banking facility;

(xxviii) take up of £2,000,000 from the unused balance of the Department's end-year flexibility entitlement to provide for increased non-Voted expenditure by the Coal Authority on minewater pollution and to offset a shortfall in receipts from property sales as a result of foot and mouth restrictions.

RfR2

(i) take up of £100,000 of the non-Voted Science Departmental Unallocated Provision to increase voted grant to the Royal Society for the Foot and Mouth Disease (FMD) inquiry;

(ii) take up of £3,000,000 of the non-voted Science Departmental Unallocated Provision for additional voted funding of the Beagle II Lander project, with creation of a token £1,000 Appropriations in Aid;

(iii) take up of £12,499,000 from the unused balance of the Department's end-year flexibility entitlement to fund University Challenge Fund projects delayed from previous years;

(iv) take up of £415,000 of the Science Departmental Unallocated Provision for voted funding of Foresight LINK Awards;

(v) take up of £5,000,000 from the unused balance of the Department's end-year flexibility entitlement to fund Science Enterprise Challenge projects;

(vi) a transfer of £205,000 in administration costs from the Home Office to the Office of Science and Technology for the administration of the Foresight Crime Prevention Panel;

(vii) a transfer of £45,000 in administration costs from the Office of Science and Technology to the Department of Health for Human Genetic Research;

(viii) an increase of £35,577,000 in the non-voted resource expenditure of certain Science Research Councils;

In addition to the above changes reflected in the RfRs, the resource DEL has also changed as a result of increased non-voted expenditure on provisions of £43,300,000 (funded from the unused balance of the Department's end-year flexibility entitlement).

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from:

RfR1

(i) take up of £10,792,000 of end-year flexibility from the Capital Modernisation Fund for the Small Business Service Gateway Projects;

(ii) a transfer of £790,000 from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for the administration of British Trade International;

(iii) a transfer of £5,300,000 from capital to administration costs under the Public Private Partnership project for the funding of the Electronic Business Strategy;

(v) a reclassification from capital to resource of £175,000 for the Regional Innovation Fund Corridor Study;

(vi) to take up £3,200,000 from the unused balance of the Department's capital end-year flexibility entitlement for the conversion of part of Victoria Street restaurant area into conference facilities;

(vii) a reclassification of £31,200,000 from voted to non-Voted DEL to reflect the funding of Regional Development Agencies via Grant in Aid following Machinery of Government changes;

(viii) take up of £9,300,000 from the unused balance of the Department's end year flexibility entitlement for the Trent Engine Development Project;

(ix) a transfer of £19,000 in capital to reflect Machinery of Government transfers from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in respect of Construction Initiatives, Regional Development Agencies and the London Development Agency.

RfR2

(i) increases in non-Voted expenditure of £1,000,000 by the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council and £3,000,000 by the Council for the Central Laboratory of the Research Councils, funded by a £4,000,000 reduction in voted provision for the Synchrotron Radiation Source project;

(ii) an increase of £7,693,000 in the non-voted resource expenditure of certain Science Research Councils.

In addition, subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Office of Fair Trading Departmental Expenditure Limit will be increased by £7,680,000 from £32,845,000 to £40.525,000 and the administration costs limits will be increased by £6,981,000 from £31,163,000 to £38,144,000. The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from the provision of £6,230,000 to enable the Office of Fair Trading to meet commitments set out by the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in the Enterprise Statement. In addition, there is an increase in the resource element of the DEL resulting from the take up of end year flexibility provision of £620,000.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from the provision of £830,000 to enable the Office of Fair Trading to meet commitments set out by the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in the Enterprise Statement.

Also, subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Office of Telecommunications DEL will be increased by £126,000 from £1,599,000 to £1,725,000 and the administration costs limits will be increased by £231,000 from £15,718,000 to £15,949,000. The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from the take up of the Commission's capital End Year Flexibility entitlement of £222,000 announced in Table 6 of the Public Expenditure 2000–01 Outturn White Paper (Cm5243).

The change in the administration costs limit reflects an increase in staff numbers.

Also, subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Departmental Expenditure Limit for the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets will be increased by £350,000 from £351,000 and the administration costs limit will be increased from £350,000 from £35,780,000 to £36,130,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is as set out in the following table:

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from a transfer of £350,000 from the Department of Trade and Industry to cover the costs of implementing the Climate Change Levy exemption for electricity from renewable sources.

All of the above increases will either be offset by inter-departmental transfers, take-up of End-Year Flexibility or use of Departmental Unallocated Provisions and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Railtrack

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what inquiries she has made into the competition practices of National Rail Supplies, Railtrack and Railtrack's contractors. [18540]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Under UK competition legislation it is for the Director General of Fair Trading to investigate allegations of anti-competitive behaviour. These powers are exercised concurrently with the Rail Regulator with respect to railway services.

Renewable Energy

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to develop renewable energy. [17392]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The Government have ambitious plans to develop renewable energy.

The new Renewables Obligation, to come into effect next year, together with exemption of renewables from the climate change levy, will create a long-term market incentive for renewables which will be worth over £1 billion per year by 2010.

The introduction of the Obligation will be underpinned by direct Government funding for renewables worth over £260 million between 2001 and 2004. This will include an extensive capital grants programme for the early development of offshore wind and energy crops, the initial stage of a major photovoltaics demonstration programme and a boost for research and development.

Other components of the Government's strategy to develop renewable energy include:

> honouring of contracts awarded under the earlier arrangements to support renewables, the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) Orders. In addition, we have consulted on a proposal to introduce a NFFO locational flexibility Order and we are now considering the responses made to this consultation.
> Initiation of studies of each UK region's capacity to generate electricity from renewable sources. Once all these assessments are completed, it is expected that specific regional targets for renewable energy will be adopted across the UK.

The Government are also exploring the scope for upgrading the existing electricity infrastructure to enable the UK's huge renewable energy resources to be exploited to the full. I recently announced that we will be funding an initial study of the feasibility of an underwater cable to connect parts of the western seaboard of Scotland, the north west of England, Northern Ireland, western Wales and possibly the south west of England directly to the National Grid.

Overseas Commercial Activities (Accountability Legislation)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to discuss with her European counterparts the introduction of legislation to hold companies accountable for their activities overseas. [17918]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 27 November 2001]: My ministerial colleagues and I regularly discuss a wide range of issues with our European counterparts.

Post Office Card Accounts

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of how many post office card accounts there will be on the basis of existing plans. [18043]

Mr. Alexander: This matter is being considered within the context of an overall migration and marketing strategy for the payment of benefits by automated credit transfer on which detailed work is in progress.

Postal Deliveries

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of first class letters from (a) Eastbourne and (b) Wealden postcode areas were delivered by (a) first and (b) second post the next day in each of the last 20 quarters for which figures are available. [17139]

Mr. Alexander: This is an operational issue for Consignia.

I have been informed by the company that this information is not held for individual postcode areas.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with Consignia about changes to the second daily Royal Mail delivery. [17142]

Mr. Alexander: The Department has regular discussions with Consignia about a range of strategic issues facing the company. However, changes to the second daily Royal Mail delivery are operational issues for the company, subject to the regulatory powers and duties of the Postal Services Commission in respect of service standards.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of (a) first and (b) second class mail was delivered as part of a second daily delivery in the last 12 months. [17140]

Mr. Alexander: This is an operational issue for Consignia.

I have been informed by the company that this information is not available for the precise split between first and second class mail delivered on second delivery but it is predominantly first class, while only 4 per cent. of mail nationally is delivered on a second delivery.

Public Service Orders

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which air routes in Britain benefit from a public service order. [18730]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

The following routes currently have a public service obligation imposed on them:

Glasgow-Campbelltown-Tiree

Glasgow-Barra

Orkney (Mainland)-Papa Westray

Orkney (Mainland)-North Ronaldsay

Shetland (Mainland)-Foula

Shetland (Mainland)-Papa Stour

Shetland (Mainland)-Out Skerries

Shetland (Mainland)-Fair Isle

Stornoway-Benbecula

Benbecula-Barra.

Climate Change Levy

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effect of climate change levy after rebates on the manufacturing sector in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Wiltshire; and if she will make a statement. [18422]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The climate change levy became operational only in April this year and the first payments are still being received by Customs and Excise. It is too early to assess its impact.

However, the impact on any specific sector, whether nationally or in any particular region, will depend on a number of factors including:

The future energy consumption of firms in the sector and the use they make of levy funded energy efficiency support.

Employment levels in those sectors and the benefits received from the levy funded national insurance contribution cuts.

The number of energy intensive firms in that sector that are eligible to receive a discount on the main rates of the levy by signing up to an energy efficiency agreement.

The use that firms in that sector make of electricity generated from levy exempt 'new' renewable sources of energy and combined heat and power.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Grand Committees

Mr. Beggs: To ask the President of the Council on how many occasions the Northern Ireland Grand Committee has met in Northern Ireland (a) in the five years prior to devolution and (b) since devolution. [17927]

Mr. Robin Cook: Until March 1997 the Committee had no power to meet away from Westminster and it has never done so.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the President of the Council on how many occasions the Scottish Grand Committee has met in Scotland (a) in the five years prior to devolution and (b) since devolution. [17926]

Mr. Robin Cook: Before the first meeting of the Scottish Parliament on 12 May 1999, the Scottish Grand Committee met away from Westminster as follows.

Year	Number of occasions
1994	2
1995	4
1996	13
1997	3
1998	2
1999	4

The Scottish Grand Committee has only met once since the first meeting of the Scottish Parliament (on 10 July 2000).

Mr. Beggs: To ask the President of the Council on how many occasions the Welsh Grand Committee has met in Wales (a) in the five years prior to devolution and (b) since devolution. [17902]

Mr. Robin Cook: Until March 1996 the Grand Committee had no power to meet away from Westminster; since then the Committee has met in Wales as follows:

Year	Number of occasions
1997	1
1998	2
1999[1]	1
2000	0
2001	1

[1] Before 12 May 1999

The National Assembly for Wales first met on 12 May 1999.

House of Lords Appointments Commission

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Council what the cost is to date of the House of Lords Appointments Commission. [17362]

Mr. Robin Cook: I understand that the latest available figures show that the House of Lords Appointments Commission spent £248,000 in 2000–01 and to the end of October, £73,000 has been spent in 2001–02.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the President of the Council whether there are any plans to change (a) the departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limits for 2001–02. [19405]

Mr. Robin Cook: The Privy Council Office DEL will be decreased by £444,000 from £3,405,000 to £2,961,000 and the administration costs limits will be decreased by £444,000 from £3,445,000 to £3,001,000. Within the DEL change there is no impact on capital; the impact on resources is set out in the table.

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

1. A transfer of £320,000 to the Cabinet Office, following the transfer of the Business Co-ordination Unit under machinery of government changes.

2. A transfer of £177,000 to DEFRA, who have assumed responsibility for an official residence in Admiralty House.

3. £53,000 allocated to the Office from the Invest to Modernise Fund.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration

Mr. Chope: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many formal notices his Department has received in the last year from the Parliamentary Ombudsman expressing an intention to carry out an investigation; and in respect of each notice how long it took to respond. [18762]

Mr. Wills: Information on the outcome of statutory investigations which were concluded during 2000–01 are set out in the Parliamentary Ombudsman's Annual Report for 2000–01, copies of which are available in the Library of the House, or on the Parliamentary Ombudsman's website at www.ombudsman.org.uk/pca/document/part01/index/htm.

Between 1 April 2001 and 31 October 2001, the Lord Chancellor's Department received 15 new statutory statements of complaint from the Parliamentary Ombudsman and the details for each department are set out in the table.

Complaints

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress is being made with the case of a complaint by Mr. Paul Bayliss of Lloyds & Cooper. [18005]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor as head of the judiciary has personally instructed a full investigation into all the circumstances relevant to this complaint and is not yet in a position to respond. It is the Lord Chancellor's intention to bring this investigation to as prompt a conclusion as possible.

TREASURY

National Enterprise Campaign

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the progress of the National Enterprise Campaign. [18309]

Nigel Griffiths: I have been asked to reply.

The National Enterprise Campaign, now known as Enterprise Insight, is a 10-year private sector-led national campaign for enterprise. The campaign has strong support within Government and works in partnership with enterprise programme providers including Young Enterprise, Shell LiveWIRE and the Prince's Trust to promote enterprise by fostering an entrepreneurial sprit across the UK through four key initiatives: Enterprising Education; Enterprising Communities; Enterprising Media; Enterprising Business.

The campaign has made steady progress over its first 18 months. Since the launch of the Enterprising Education Campaign in July 2001, 246 business have registered their interest in promoting enterprise within schools with a further 750 expected by 2002. The aim over the next two years is to get 40,000 more young people engaged in enterprise learning in schools and 5,000 new business people to support its delivery. This will be done through a number of activities including hosting road shows and the development of a website which will enable businesses to register their interest on-line. In addition, the Entrepreneurs in Residence scheme, which matches businesses to local enterprise projects, is also well under way—so far the first five matches have already been made. Enterprise Insight also aims to promote enterprise more positively across society and, in particular, plans to work with the media using case studies and role models to help spread more positive attitudes about entrepreneurship and business.

Tourism

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what analysis his Department has undertaken on the impact of the slow down in the world economy on tourism. [18047]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

In addition to world economic conditions, there are a number of factors currently affecting tourism, including the impact of foot and mouth disease and the 11 September terrorist attacks. It is as yet too early to conduct a detailed assessment of the impact of world economic conditions in isolation.

Mortgages

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average income multiple for mortgages agreed in the last financial year was for (a) individuals and (b) couples. [15927]

Ms Keeble: I have been asked to reply.

The average income-to-advance ratio for mortgaged house purchases during the last financial year is estimated to have been (a) 2.49 for individuals and (b) 2.17 for couples.

Mortgage repayments as a percentage of income for those buying homes during the last financial year are estimated to have been (a) 17.4 per cent. for individuals and (b) 15.4 per cent. for couples. During the third quarter of 2001 these figures were (a) 15.4 per cent. for individuals and (b) 13.3 per cent. for couples.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged 18 to 24 years were unemployed for more than six months in each year since May 1992 in the constituency of Arundel and South Downs. [18312]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Howard Flight, dated 28 November 2001:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question on the number of people aged 18 to 24 years who were unemployed for more than six months for each year since May 1992 in the constituency of Arundel and South Downs (18312).

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics for unemployment from surveys following the internationally standard International Labour Organisation definition. However, for the Arundel and South Downs parliamentary constituency the survey sample size is too small to provide estimates. ONS also compiles statistics of claimants of unemployment-related benefits. The claimant count consists of all people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or National Insurance credits at Employment Service local offices. They must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for and actively seeking work during the week in which the claim is made.

Prior to January 1996 comparable figures for earlier years are not available on the same geographical basis. Information on computerised claims by age and duration for parliamentary constituencies from January 1996 were based on the ward boundaries of the 1981 census and are available from June 1985 to January 1996.

The information requested is given in the table overleaf.

Claimants aged 18 to 24 claiming for six months or more in the Arundel and South Downs parliamentary constituency for each May 1992 to May 2001 (computerised claims only)

Tax Credits

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rates and thresholds of the (a) working families tax credit and (b) disabled person's tax credit will be from April 2002. [19625]

Dawn Primarolo: The main WFTC and DPTC rates and income thresholds will be increased in line with indexation from April 2002. There will be further increases aimed at helping families with children with disabilities.

Ms Buck: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place a copy of the responses to the tax credits consultation document in the Library. [18598]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are very grateful for the many responses we have received to the consultation document and will be responding in due course.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to change Customs and Excise (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limits for 2001–02. [19624]

Mr. Boateng: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the HM Customs and Excise DEL will be increased by £79,505,000 from £1,049,066,000 to £1,128,571,000 and the administration costs limits will be increased by £25,889,000 from £924,894,000 to £950,783,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is as set out in the table.

Resources
Change	47,520,000

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from: the take-up of end-year flexibility entitlement of £24,208,000 on administration costs and £5,131,000 on programme expenditure as set out in the Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper (CM 5243); a switch from capital EYF of £16,000,000 into programme expenditure; additional resources of £100,000 under round 3 of the Invest to Save Budget on administration costs; and additional SR2000 resources of £1,714,000 on administration costs and £500,000 on programme expenditure for tackling organised crime. These increases are partially offset by decreases in administration costs of: £69,000 to the Cabinet Office for fast stream recruitment operations; and £64,000 to DEFRA in respect of the Whisky Export Refund Scheme. The total administration costs change is £25,889,000.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from: the take-up of end-year flexibility of £30,000,000; and additional funding of £1,985,000 in respect of round 3 of the Capital Modernisation Fund.

The increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to amend the Inland Revenue (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limit for 2001–02. [19622]

Dawn Primarolo: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Inland Revenue departmental expenditure limit will be increased by £83,602,000 from £2,473,375,000 to £2,556,977,000 and the administration costs limit will be increased by £26,356,000 from £2,410,165,000 to £2,436,521,000. The net administration costs limit is increased by £1,919,000 from-£7,973,000 to-£6,054,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is set out in table:

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from the draw down of £23,338,000 administration costs EYF and the transfer of £4,679,000 from DWP.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from the draw down of capital EYF and non-discretionary EYF as set out in the Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper (CM 5243).

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to amend the Office for National Statistics (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limit for 2001–02. [19626]

Ruth Kelly: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Office for National Statistics DEL will be increased by £11,446,000 from £186,075,000 to £197,350,000 and the administration costs limits will be increased by £5,346,000 from £179,285,000 to £184,631,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is as set out in the following table.

	Resources	Capital
Change	5,346,000	6,100,000
New DEL	185,430,000	11,920,000

The increase in the resource element of the DEL arises from the take up of end-year flexibility entitlement as set out in the Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper (Cm 5243) and will be used to fund census-related and other expenditure commitments. In addition, £6,000,000 will be drawn from the Departmental Unallocated Provision to meet similar spending pressures.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from the take-up of funds from a Capital Modernisation Fund award of £6,100,000 for development of a statistics service to improve neighbourhood renewal.The increase will be offset by transfers or charged to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to change HM Treasury's (a) departmental expenditure limits and (b) administration costs limits for 2001–02. [19623]

Ruth Kelly: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, HM Treasury's DEL will be increased by £35,267,000 from £209,578,000 to £244,845,000 and the administration costs limits will be increased by £9,678,000 from £97,011,000 to £106,689,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is as set out in the following table.

	Resources	Capital
Change	25,940	9,327
New DEL	229,768	15,077
Of which:
Voted	200,397	14,777

The change in the resource element of the DEL for RfR1 arises from the take-up of administration costs EYF (£1,640,000) and programme costs EYF (£3,662,000), to meet the additional costs of the Treasury's planned programme of work involving additional expenditure in policy areas, including those dealing with better public services, Whole of Government Accounts and productivity, the Equitable Life Inquiry, and Debt Management Office's initiatives to improve their management of risk and further professionalise their operations; to draw down the administration costs sums allocated from the Civil Service Modernisation Fund (£570,000) for early retirement costs and an interchange project, and from the Capital Modernisation Fund (£55,000) in respect of the Evidence Based Policy Fund projects; and a transfer of administration costs to the Cabinet Office in respect of Fast Stream recruitment operations (£282,000). The change in the capital element of the DEL for RfR1 arises from the reclassification of programme expenditure EYF to capital provision (£9,404,000), for the new service relating to the indemnity and insurance cover HMT has offered to aviation companies in the wake of WTC of 11 September, by way of a loan note with Troika Insurance Company Ltd., and for additional IT and communications equipment. There are also additional non-operating appropriations in aid in respect of higher than expected capital receipts (£77,000).

The change in the resource element of the DEL for RfR2 arises from the take-up of programme costs EYF (£2,000,000), to meet the increased demand for UK coins.

The change in the resource element of the DEL for RfR3 arises from the take-up of administration costs EYF (£5,172,000) and programme costs EYF (£10,000,000), to meet the costs of e-commerce pilot schemes and to fund the disposal of surplus civil estate properties; the reclassification of programme costs EYF to administration costs for the costs associated with the OGC pay remit and VER scheme (£2,848,000); to draw down the administration costs sums allocated from the Civil Service Modernisation Fund (£325,000) for the promoting professional qualifications project; and a transfer of programme expenditure to the National Care Standards Commission in respect of the leasehold of Avonbridge House (£50,000).

The increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Tax Receipts

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to improve the short-term forecasting of tax receipts. [18549]

Dawn Primarolo: Short-term forecasts are routinely monitored against outturns, the reasons for discrepancies identified where possible, and allowances are made for these in future forecasts where necessary.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish for each month of the current financial year the error rate occurring between the projected tax and VAT receipts and those which actually resulted; [18550]

(2) if he will place in the Library details of the economic model used by the Inland Revenue to forecast monthly tax receipts. [16304]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 23 November 2001]: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to my reply of 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 775W, the answer the Financial Secretary gave him on 20 July under cover of a letter and the letter which the Economic Secretary sent him on 27 September (copies of both of which have been placed in the Library of the House).

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff are used by the Inland Revenue and HM Customs and Excise to produce the monthly short-term forecasts of tax receipts; and what the annual costs for this exercise are. [18551]

Dawn Primarolo: Around 18 staff spend a small proportion of their time producing the monthly forecasts of tax receipts. No estimates of the annual cost are available.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the (a) sections and (b) those of grade 3 and above in the Treasury which receive copies of the Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise short-term receipts forecasts and state for each recipient the use to which the information is put. [18552]

Dawn Primarolo: The sections that receive the short-term forecasts are: Public Sector Finances, Exchequer Funds and Accounts and the Debt Management Office. No officials of grade 3 and above routinely receive copies of these forecasts.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the methodology used to produce the levels of current receipts shown in table C4 of Budget 2001 and show how this related to the contents of paragraph C17, C18 and C19 of Budget 2001. [18553]

Dawn Primarolo: Table C4 is consistent with the Office for National Statistics methodology for Public Finance Statistics. The assumptions mentioned in paragraphs C17–19 of Budget 2001, together with those in Box C1, are used as the basis for the projections by the Inland Revenue, and Customs and Excise for taxes, on a tax by tax basis, and the Treasury for other receipts. Details of how these assumptions are converted into forecasts for revenues are given in Forecasting the Public Finances in the Treasury, by Tim Pike and David Savage, Fiscal Studies, 1998. This is available from the publications section of the Institute of Fiscal Studies website www.ifs.org.uk.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the way in which the Treasury uses the short-term forecasts of tax receipts provided by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and the Inland Revenue. [18554]

Dawn Primarolo: The short-term forecasts are mainly used in the short-term management of Government cash flows.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement listing the facts and information used by (a) the Inland Revenue and (b) Customs and Excise to produce the short-term forecasts of tax and receipts referred to in the letter of 27 September sent to the right hon. Member for Fylde. [18555]

Dawn Primarolo: I have nothing further to add to the information contained in that letter.

Inland Revenue

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to privatise the distraint work of the Inland Revenue; and if he will make a statement. [18236]

Dawn Primarolo: This proposal is still under consideration.

Local Authority Debt Repayment

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what rules govern annual debt repayments by local authorities in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [18515]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Like any other borrowers, local authorities have a contractual obligation to comply with the terms of repayment specified in their agreement with the lender. The local government capital finance system requires English and Welsh authorities each year to set aside amounts out of their revenue resources to meet debt and other credit liabilities. This helps to ensure that, whenever a debt falls due, the authority has enough money to make the repayment. The Government have no immediate plans to change these arrangements.

Financial Regulation (Overseas and Dependent Territories)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the British overseas and dependent territories with which exchange of information agreements have been agreed (a) for tax and (b) financial regulation purposes, indicating the date of such agreement; and if he will list separately those overseas and dependent territories with which no such agreement yet exists. [17728]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 26 November 2001]: For tax purposes, the UK has Double Taxation Arrangements with Guernsey (1952), Isle of Man (1955) and Jersey (1952) (all Crown Dependencies), and the Falkland Islands (1997) and Montserrat (1947) (both Overseas Territories) which include provisions for the exchange of information for tax purposes. The UK has no such agreements with the remaining Overseas Territories, ie Anguilla, Bermuda, British Antarctic Territory, British Indian Ocean Territory, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Gibraltar, Pitcairn Islands, St. Helena and its Dependencies (St. Helena, Ascension Island and Tristan de Cunha), South Georgia and the Sandwich Islands, and Turks and Caicos Islands.

For financial regulatory purposes, the Overseas Territories of the Caribbean and Bermuda and Gibraltar have in place gateways which allow for the exchange of information with overseas regulators including the UK. The territories of the Cayman Islands, Montserrat, Turks and Caicos Islands and British Virgin Islands have introduced "compulsory powers" legislation to enable investigative assistance to overseas regulators to be provided. Bermuda's existing regulatory powers are being strengthened. Anguilla has compulsory powers legislation in draft.

The Crown Dependencies have Memorandums of Understanding providing for exchange of information with a range of UK regulatory bodies.

Exchange Rate

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent steps he has taken to ensure a competitive sterling to euro exchange rate. [18517]

Ruth Kelly: The Government do not have a target for the sterling/euro exchange rate. The way to ensure long-term exchange rate stability and competitiveness is through the pursuit of sound macroeconomic policies aimed at achieving sustained growth and low inflation.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from manufacturers about the rate of sterling in the last six months; and if he will make a statement. [18488]

Ruth Kelly: The Chancellor and other Treasury Ministers often receive representations from manufacturers and all areas of business on a wide range of economic issues, and value their insights.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what additional revenue he raised in 2000–01 from property and land transactions in the Arundel and South Downs constituency as a result of the increases in stamp duty in the March 2000 Budget. [18331]

Ruth Kelly: The information is not available.

Manufacturing (East Midlands)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what analysis he has made of the impact of the slow down in the world economy on manufacturing in the east midlands. [18490]

Ruth Kelly: No country can insulate itself from the global economy, and these uncertain times test all regions of the UK. Because of the tough decisions this Government have taken we are today in a better position to withstand the ups and downs of the world economy.

The pre-Budget report further outlined the Government's regional strategy.

Higher Rate Taxpayers

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many higher rate taxpayers there were in the constituency of Arundel and South Downs in each year since April 1997. [18314]

Dawn Primarolo: There were 7,300 higher rate income taxpayers in the constituency of Arundel and South Downs in the 1999–2000 tax year. This estimate is based on the Survey of Personal Incomes. I regret that estimates are not available for earlier years.

Income Data

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) of those self-employed aged between (a) 18 and 35, (b) 36 and 45, (c) 46 and 50, (d) 51 and 55, (e) 56 and 60 and (h) 61 and 74 years, if he will estimate the numbers earning (i) up to £35,000 per year, (ii) between £35,000 and £45,000 per year, (iii) between £45,000 and £55,000 per year, (iv) between £55,000 and £65,000 per year, (v) between £65,000 and £75,000 per year, (vi) between £75,000 and £85,000 per year, (vii) between £85,000 and £95,000 per year and (viii) over £95,000 per year, for the tax year (A) 2000 and (B) 2001; [18600]

(2) if he will list the numbers of self-employed between the ages of (a) 18 and 35, (b) 36 and 45, (c) 46 and 50, (d) 51 and 55, (e) 56 and 60 and (f) 61 and 74 years and estimate the numbers in each category paying the (i) standard rate and (ii) higher rate of tax for the tax year 2000–01; [18609]

(3) if he will estimate, of those between the ages of (a) 18 and 35, (b) 36 and 45, (c) 46 and 50, (d) 51 and 55, (e) 56 and 60 and (f) 61 and 74 years, the numbers earning (i) up to £35,000 per year, (ii) between £35,000 and £45,000 per year, (iii) between £45,000 and £55,000 per year, (iv) between £55,000 and £65,000 per year, (v) between £65,000 and £75,000 per year, (vi) between £75,000 and £85,000 per year, (vii) between £85,000 and £95,000 per year and (viii) over £95,000 per year, for the tax year (1) 2000 and (2) 2001. [18603]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for the number of taxpayers with some self employed income, by range of age and total earned income (income from employment, income from self employment and pensions) are given in the tables, based on the Survey of Personal Incomes.

Income Tax (Young People)

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he plans to remove 16 and 17-year-olds from the income tax systems; and if he will make a statement. [18015]

Dawn Primarolo: We have no plans to remove 16 and 17-year-olds from the income tax system. However, if their income is below the personal allowance they will not pay tax.

Benefits (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people received (a) tax credits and (b) means-tested benefits in the Buckingham constituency in each year since April 1997. [17848]

Dawn Primarolo: For figures back to 1998 I refer the hon. Member to the earlier reply by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 153W. I understand from the Department for Work and Pensions that the equivalent figures for Buckingham for May 1997 were:

Recipients of (a) tax credits and (b) certain income related benefits in the Buckingham constituency

May 1997	Number
Income support	2,100
Jobseeker's allowance (income based)	[1]400
Family credit	[1]300
Disability working allowance	10
Total	2,800

[1] Sampling error is particularly high for these figures, and they should be treated as a rough guide only

Notes:

1. Apart from DWA, the figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample. They are subject to sampling error and therefore shown to the nearest hundred
2. Recipients of FC or DWA who also receive IS or JSA are included only in the income support and jobseeker's allowance figures. This eliminates double counting in the total
3. DWA figures are for April

There were 6,340 recipients of housing benefit and 7,470 recipients of council tax benefit in the Aylesbury Vale district council area at May 1997.

Brazilian Mahogany

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on the seizure by Customs and Excise of Brazilian mahogany and mahogany products shipped to UK ports. [17836]

Dawn Primarolo: Where Brazilian mahogany is subject to control under Council Regulation 338/97 on the protection of species of wild fauna and flora, and the necessary documentation is not presented to Customs at importation, then Customs would normally seize the consignment.

Impounded Vehicles

Mr. Heath: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 766W, on impounded vehicles, what are the security reasons which prevent the geographical locations of such sites from being published; which officials are responsible for making this decision; and if he will make a statement. [18211]

Dawn Primarolo: The geographical location of storage sites for seized goods, including vehicles, is not published in order to reduce the risk of criminal attempts of theft and damage. In the recent past a vehicle with satellite tracking was deliberately burned and attempts to remove vehicles or parts of vehicles by allegedly armed men have been reported.

The decision not to publish the details of storage sites has been taken by the contract managers in consultation with Customs security officers.

Mr. Heath: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 766W, on impounded vehicles, with which bodies Customs and Excise has made contract arrangements to supply storage facilities; when each contract arrangement was made; what the value is of each contract; and if he will make a statement. [18210]

Dawn Primarolo: The contract for the haulage and storage of excise goods and vehicles used to smuggle was signed with P&O Trans European Ltd. in 1996 for three years and renewed for a further two years in 1999. It is not possible to identify the value of this contract in relation to vehicle storage alone.

Departmental Bodies and Reviews

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) task forces and (b) policy reviews with external members have been established by his Department since January 2000; and what (i) sub-groups, (ii) working parties and (iii) other subsidiary committees were established by each body. [18159]

Ruth Kelly: Information about task forces, annual reports and ad hoc advisory groups is set out in an annual report, published by the Cabinet Office. Copies of the annual report on task forces and similar bodies have been placed in the Library of the House and the annual report is being made available on the Cabinet Office's website.

Information about sub-groups, working parties and other subsidiary committees established by each body is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the date of establishment was for all task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since January 2000; which of them have issued their final reports and what the dates of publication were; which of them have been terminated and what the dates of termination were; and for those bodies still in existence, what their expected (a) reporting and (b) termination dates are. [18156]

Ruth Kelly: Information about task forces, annual reports and ad hoc advisory groups is set out in an annual report, published by the Cabinet Office. Copies of the annual report on task forces and similar bodies have been placed in the Library of the House and the annual report is being made available on the Cabinet Office's website.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the outstanding balance is of (a) income tax and (b) national insurance that has been deferred as a result of foot and mouth disease in (i) Dumfries and Galloway, (ii) Scotland and (iii) the United Kingdom. [17390]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Between 21 March 2001 and 18 November 2001 the amount of tax and national insurance contributions deferred as a result of foot and mouth disease totalled £108.12 million.

We do not have specific figures for Dumfries and Galloway but out of the total amount of tax and NIC deferred, £11.56 million relates to Scotland and £96.56 million to the rest of the UK.

We do not yet have enough information to give a reliable figure of the net current balance outstanding.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Rural Affairs

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 320W, on rural parishes, if she will list those parishes deemed to be (a) vibrant, (b) active, (c) barely active and (d) sleeping. [18779]

Alun Michael: A list of parishes (just over 6,000) deemed to be (a) vibrant, (b) active, (c) barely active, (d) sleeping will be made available in the Library of the House. This is based on information collated from parish clerks through the Countryside Agency's Rural Services Survey.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 319W, on the rural White Paper, if she will list the measures she will be using to determine the indicator. [18780]

Alun Michael: I refer to my answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 319W. The research will review existing baseline and trend data to give an assessment of their suitability for use in compiling an indicator. Data sources to be considered include: Agricultural Census; National Inventory of Woodland and Trees; Countryside Survey 2000; Land Use Change Statistics; cultural heritage monuments, buildings and field patterns; perceptual and aesthetic characteristics such as tranquillity and noise mapping. At this stage in the research it is not possible to say which measures will eventually be used to determine the indicator.

Business Start-ups

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 321W, what work (a) has previously been done and (b) is being done to measure information on business start-ups. [18675]

Alun Michael: The Countryside Agency has adopted an indicator on business health. This necessitates the collection of a range of business data including business registrations and de-registrations (business registrations only include those businesses above the VAT threshold). The Countryside Agency use the number of business registrations as a proxy indicator of total business start-ups. However, in their 2001 State of the Countryside report they presented data from the Office for National Statistics on the total number of businesses, proportion of business by employee sizeband and VAT registrations and de-registrations.

The Countryside Agency are working with the Office for National Statistics to procure accurate and up-to-date information from the Inter-Departmental Business Register for 2001. In addition they are working with the Small Business Service in looking at the broader picture of "business health" in England, in particular those businesses beneath the VAT threshold. For the 2002 State of the Countryside Report they will again publish data for rural areas on business start-ups as measured by registration and de-registration to give an accurate picture of business activity in the Countryside. This may be supplemented by data collected from a local research project.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 327W, how much of the £92 million outlined in the Rural White Paper for the Rural Bus Challenge and Rural Transport Partnership programme was spent in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02; and how much each individual initiative has received. [18782]

Alun Michael: A total of £21 million was allocated to new Rural Bus Challenge projects in 2000–01, spending over a number of financial years. Expenditure in that year on all Challenge projects, including those begun in previous years, was £11 million. There is £20 million available for awards in this year's Rural Bus Challenge competition, decisions on which will be announced shortly. Forecast expenditure in the current year on all projects is £23 million.

The Countryside Agency's Rural Transport Partnership Programme spent £4.8 million in 2000–01. For this financial year, formal grant offers total £7.1 million to date, of which £2.9 million has been spent.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 321W, on rural employment, if she will list the jobs by (a) category and (b) proportion that people have done in rural areas in (i) 1996, (ii) 1997, (iii) 1998, (iv) 1999, (v) 2000 and (vi) 2001. [18783]

Alun Michael: The table lists rural employment by category and the percentage of people employed.

ONS Annual Employment Service

Information for 1999, 2000 and 2001 is not currently available but I undertake to write to the hon. Gentleman with this information as soon as it is to hand.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 322W, on civic amenities, how many (a) food shops, (b) post offices, (c) cash points, (d) primary schools and (e) GP surgeries within 4km of rural households (i) opened and (ii) closed in 2000. [18777]

Alun Michael: The Countryside Agency's Rural Services Survey in 2000 researched the geographical availability of a range of services. This was the first year that a survey of this type had been undertaken at the household level across rural England. Full postcoded lists of services were used in the survey to calculate their availability to rural households within specified distances. The survey provides information on services available at a point in time. Future surveys will therefore provide a comparison with the base figures rather than reflecting the number of the openings and closings of services.

Market Towns

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 322W, on market towns, what has been the progress of the Countryside Research Project to assess the health and viability of market towns; and if she will make a statement on the different economic and social indicators that are being considered. [18778]

Alun Michael: The Research Project was let in January 2001 and progress to date has been towards a methodological approach to developing a national headline indicator. The broad scope of the work has been to focus on the key influencing attributes of market towns including: size and spacing of market towns; urban/rural shift of economic activity; the economic base of market towns; and the clustering of economic activity. In addition, considerable work has gone into examining market towns in relation to the Index of Deprivation 2000.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take into account the financial situation of rural enterprises in setting target dates for payments under the countryside stewardship scheme at the end of this year. [16147]

Alun Michael: In recognition of the problems experienced by farmers hard hit by foot and mouth disease, we have specifically extended the deadline for the receipt of countryside stewardship scheme claims to 31 December, to allow more time for completion of claim forms. We are currently processing the claims so far received as quickly as available resources permit, to ensure payments are made as soon as practicable. Our published aim is to pay claims within two months of receipt.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will announce the target date for the payment of amounts under the countryside stewardship scheme at the end of this calendar year. [16146]

Alun Michael: Our published aim for the payment of claims under the countryside stewardship schemes is two months from the date of receipt.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has had regarding timely payment of amounts under the countryside stewardship scheme; and if she will make a statement. [16145]

Alun Michael: I have received no recent representations on this subject. Claims for this year's payments under the countryside stewardship scheme were invited from 1 October onwards. Our published aim is to make payments within two months of receipt and the Department is currently working hard to achieve this.

Foxes

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the size of the fox population in England (a) at the latest available date and (b) in November 2000. [15830]

Alun Michael: There is no information collected centrally which could provide the basis for an answer to this question.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the impact on fox populations of the existence of artificial earths; [17967]

(2) what assessment she has made of the consequences for the level of the fox population of the temporary suspension of hunting. [17968]

Alun Michael [holding answer 26 November 2001]: There is no information collected centrally which could provide the basis for an answer to these questions.

Agricultural Development Scheme

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will announce the outcome of bids for funding under round three of the Agricultural Development Scheme. [18873]

Margaret Beckett: Our aim is to announce the outcome in late January 2002.

Pitsea Tip

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what poisonous substances have been deposited at Pitsea tip; over what period; and from which source. [3891]

Mr. Meacher: Waste has been deposited at Pitsea landfill site at least since 1935 and since that time it is estimated some 30 million tonnes of waste have been deposited from a range of sources.

Between 1967 and 1994, there were requirements to submit records of the waste deposited at the site under various waste and planning controls. This information was collected by the relevant local authorities at the time. Some of these records were passed to the Environment Agency, though full records do not exist for the complete period that the landfill site operated.

The situation changed in 1994. Under paragraph 14 of Schedule 4 to the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994, operators are required to keep a record of the quantity, nature and origin of the waste disposed of at each site; and to make that information available, on request, to the Environment Agency. However, the agency must act reasonably in its use of this power. The agency would be open to legal challenge in the event of unreasonably seeking detailed information on all the substances, and the source of those substances, disposed of at the Pitsea landfill site since 1994. Nevertheless the detailed licence for the site which specifies the quantities and types of waste able to be deposited at Pitsea is available for inspection at the local Environment Agency office. The following is an extract from the licence which details the general limits on the amount of waste able to be deposited at the site.

Extract from licence

Condition 2

(i) A maximum amount of 200,000 tonnes of commercial and industrial waste in liquid form, of which not more than 175,000 tonnes shall be hazardous, shall be deposited annually

(ii) not more than 37,000 tonnes of hazardous industrial waste in solid form, other than solid land clearance waste shall be deposited annually

(iii) not more than 60,000 tonnes of solid, hazardous waste, land clearance waste shall be deposited annually

(iv) not more than 5,000 tonnes in liquid form and 1,000 in solid form shall be of high hazard category

Condition 77

Notwithstanding the quantities of liquid waste permitted for disposal by condition 2, no more than 119,500 tonnes of liquid waste shall be deposited directly to landfill during the year ending 1 April 1992 and this volume shall be reduced in each successive year by at least 12,500 tonnes so that by the end of the year ending 31 March 1997, no more than 60,000 tonnes are disposed of by direct landfill.

Genetically Modified Fish

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the Food and Agriculture Organisation's recent paper, "State of the World's Fisheries and Aquaculture", concerning genetic modification of aquatic species and their potential to increase the quantity and quality of aquaculture products. [6640]

Mr. Meacher: The paper published by the UN Food and Agriculture Organisation in 2000 recognises the potential for genetic modification to increase the quantity and quality of aquaculture products. It goes on to consider the areas of concern with genetically modified organisms (GMOs). These include possible adverse side effects on human health and the environment, trade impacts, intellectual property rights, labelling and ethics. It outlines possible solutions including the adoption of suitable legislation, codes of conduct or guidelines, and possible technical answers. The paper says that solutions will come only from addressing all sides of this complex issue. It also notes that technically there must be good scientific support with adequate testing and monitoring to reduce the uncertainties of environmental impact.

The Government note the potential of genetic modification but at this stage of development GM technology has yet to demonstrate any proven benefits in relation to aquaculture. It is feasible that the technology could be used to increase yields from fish farms or make farmed fish easier or cheaper to produce, but this is unlikely in the short term. There have been no environmental releases of GM fish in the UK and none is expected to be proposed in the foreseeable future.

However, the Government keep an open mind on this while making sure that suitable safety controls are in place to ensure protection for human health and the environment.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she takes to ensure genetically modified salmon cannot escape from confinement into the wild. [18366]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 27 November 2001]: There are currently no GM salmon in this country therefore the situation does not arise. The Government's policy on containment of GM fish was outlined in the answers given to the hon. Member on 19 November 2001, Official Report, columns 78–79W, and on 20 November 2001, Official Report, column 198W.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Scottish Minister regarding Scotland's contribution to United Kingdom targets on sustainable development. [13147]

Mr. Meacher: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not met Scottish Ministers specifically to discuss these matters, although the Department works closely with the Scottish Executive on sustainable development issues. Scotland's contribution is reflected as appropriate in the UK Government's annual reports on our Sustainable Development Strategy, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Rural Ministers

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to introduce the concept of Rural Ministers in different Government Departments. [14529]

Alun Michael: The Government consider it important that all Ministers in Home Departments are alert to the implications of their policies and programmes for people living in rural areas rather than introducing such a specific designation. The Department and I, assisted by the Countryside Agency, ensure that all major policies are assessed for their rural impact through the "rural-proofing" process described in "Our Countryside: the future" (Cmnd 4909). The Cabinet Sub-committee on Rural Renewal, chaired by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, and on which relevant Departments are represented, will oversee the effectiveness of the "rural-proofing" process.

Departmental Targets

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department's latest annual efficiency target is; and if it has been achieved. [15362]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 November 2001]: DEFRA's public service agreement target on efficiency is to achieve a reduction of 10 per cent. in the unit cost of administering CAP payments by March 2004, and 95 per cent. electronic service delivery capability for such payments by March 2004. We are currently on track to meet this commitment by December 2004 and the recent creation of the Rural Payments Agency will play a crucial part in delivering this.

DEFRA is committed to establishing a strong efficiency programme, based on robust measurement. As part of this programme, we are developing efficiency measures covering all aspects of the Department.

Beef

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has made to (a) her French counterpart and (b) the European Commission regarding proposals to ban beef imports into France during November. [15521]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The European Commission are looking into the agreement on supporting the beef market in France reached by the French industry to determine whether it contravenes Community rules. A number of other member states have expressed concern at the implications of the agreement for imports into France. The UK is not directly affected since France has not implemented the European Community Decision to allow exports of British beef under the Date Based Export Scheme. The judgment of the European Court of Justice on this is expected shortly.

Dry Stone Walls

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to extend additional protection to dry stone walls. [15516]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: We are considering representations that we have received on this subject. However, the primary legislation which provides the enabling powers for the Hedgerow Regulations does not provide powers to protect dry stone walls. The Department supports maintenance and restoration of dry stone walls through agri-environment schemes which are being significantly expanded under the England Rural Development Programme. The results of Countryside Survey 2000 suggested that net losses of walls had been halted by 1998.

Biodiesel Technology

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she is taking to support the development of biodiesel technology; and if she will make a statement. [15505]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: Following the Green Fuels Challenge a new duty rate for biodiesel, 20 pence per litre below the rate for Ultra Low Sulphur Diesel, is to be introduced in Budget 2002. Any additional measures to develop biodiesel must be based on sound evidence and this Department has recently commissioned a six-month study, on behalf of the Government-Industry Forum on non-food uses of crops, to evaluate the comparative energy, environmental and socio-economic costs and benefits of biodiesel production in the UK. The study will compare results with those for other relevant green fuels and relevant energy saving measures, and will inform the future development of policy.

Energy Crops

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of the money announced by the Government in October 2000 to promote the growth of energy crops has already been applied for; and if she will make a statement. [17277]

Mr. Morley: Our Energy Crops Scheme, part of the England Rural Development Programme, makes £29 million of assistance available to farmers. Applications which have been agreed or are being assessed total about 2 per cent. of this. This includes establishment grants for short rotation coppice and miscanthus and funding to set up a producer group for SRC growers. The low level of expenditure reflects slower than expected progress with biomass-fuelled projects. The Government have now allocated over £70 million of funding for market development and we are working closely with Government Departments and other bodies to develop opportunities in power generation, combined heat and power and heat applications. We expect this to lead to a significant increase in uptake.

River Thames (Adjacent Land)

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will outline the policy of the Environment Agency with regard to (a) the provision of car parking on (i) land immediately adjacent to the river Thames and (ii) its own land immediately adjacent to the river Thames and (b) the leasing of its own land immediately adjacent to the river Thames. [17214]

Mr. Meacher: Local authorities are responsible for development control and policy related to car parking in their areas. In cases of new development, the Environment Agency, as a statutory consultee, has an opportunity to encourage best practice in environmental design. This includes proposals on land adjacent to the river Thames.

When considering a planning application, the agency would normally request a number of planning conditions, such as the retention of a buffer zone to allow access to flood defences for maintenance and inspection; the provision of public access rights to the riverside; and prevention of encroachment of the development on to the tidal foreshore.

These standards apply equally to development by the agency on its own land, including that adjacent to the Thames.

In cases of land leased by the agency to a third party, subject to the terms of the contract, use of the site would be a matter between the third party and the local planning authority. The agency would, if a planning application were made, be a statutory consultee in the normal way.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many animals have been used in live experiments tests within the EU in the last year; and how many have been used in the United Kingdom; [17815]

(2) how many animals are held in Government laboratories for live testing purposes. [17816]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The latest years for which we have information for the European Union as a whole are 1996–97, when the number of animals used in experiments was 11,646,000.

The latest year for which figures are available for the United Kingdom is 2000, when the number of animals involved in scientific procedures started in Great Britain was 2,643,000, with a further 14,100 in Northern Ireland. 83 per cent. of the animals used were rats, mice and other rodent species. Dogs, cats, horses and non-human primates, which are accorded special protection by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, were collectively used in under one per cent. of the procedures.

Information regarding the number of animals used for toxicological purposes is provided in Table 10a of the Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals Great Britain 2000. This is broken down by species of animal, but not by type of establishment.

The Home Office does not collect information relating to the number of animals held in Government laboratories or other establishments designated under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the EU proposals for laboratory testing of household chemicals on animals. [17778]

Mr. Meacher: The European Commission published a White Paper on 27 February 2001 setting out the strategy for a future Community Policy for chemicals with the overall objective of ensuring a high level of protection for human health and the environment. A copy of the White Paper has been deposited in the Library of the House. Environment Ministers from all member states called on the European Commission to present, by the end of 2001, its main proposals for a simple, clear and transparent regulatory framework to implement the strategy while limiting the need for animal testing.

Sheep/Lamb Producers (Returns)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will calculate the average annual return for individual sheep and lamb producers in the UK in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [18205]

Mr. Morley: Estimates of the average annual return are given in the table. They are calculated as the total annual value of production of sheep and sheepmeat (including subsidies), divided by the number of farms with sheep and lambs at the June agricultural census.

Average annual return for UK sheep and lamb producers

Year	Value of production (£ million)	of which: subsidies (£ million)	Number of farms with sheep and lambs at June (Thousand[1])	Average annual return per producer (£[2])
1991	1,138	598	96.1	11,800
1992	1,159	522	96.2	12,000
1993	1,245	498	95.6	13,000
1994	1,235	448	94.4	13,100
1995	1,334	536	89.9	14,800
1996	1,295	384	88.2	14,700
1997	1,194	354	87.1	13,700
1998	1,130	479	86.8	13,000
1999	1,001	408	86.3	11,600
2000[3]	982	349	82.2	11,900

National Parks Task Force

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who the members of the task force on national parks are; on what occasions Ministers have met the task force; and how many times the task force has met. [18044]

Alun Michael: There is no task force on national parks of which I am aware. A review of National Park Authorities in England is currently being undertaken by Richard Pullen, an official in DEFRA's Countryside Division. Following a three month public consultation period, which closed on 2 November, DEFRA officials are now visiting each English national park to discuss issues with National Park Authority members and stakeholders. This will lead to further discussion with Ministers about the findings of the review in the new year.

Waste

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the comparative position of the United Kingdom in relation to each other EU country regarding progress towards meeting the requirements of the Landfill Directive. [17634]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The Landfill Directive was due to be transposed into domestic law by 16 July 2001. Consultation on a set of draft Regulations to implement the technical and regulatory requirements of the Landfill Directive in England and Wales closed on 26 October 2001. The Government will be laying regulations before Parliament shortly. In advance of the regulations coming into effect the Environment Agency is using its existing powers under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Pollution and Prevention and Control Regulations 2000 to apply the Directive's requirements to any permits issued in the interim.

We have also consulted on a tradeable landfill permit scheme to implement the targets in Article 5 of the Directive for the diversion of biodegradable municipal waste from landfill and will bring forward primary legislation to introduce such a scheme as soon as parliamentary time permits.

Enforcement of Directives is a matter for the European Commission and any infraction proceedings for not implementing the Directive fully or on time would be between the member state concerned and the Commission.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to develop central monitoring of the amount of waste collected for recycling which ends up in landfill sites. [17636]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 23 November 2001]: In theory all material collected for recycling should be recycled, but inevitably there will be losses. Some mixed material may be lost in the sorting process (for example at Material Reclamation Facilities). Material may also be rejected due to contamination, or sent for disposal due to the lack of a suitable market for the recycled material.

There are no current plans to centrally monitor the amount of waste collected for recycling which ends up in landfill. However, in the case of local authorities, we are looking at the way we measure household recycling rates in the Municipal Waste Management Survey to try to ensure that the rates reflect material that was both collected for recycling and actually sent for recycling. In the current 2000–01 survey we are asking for the percentage of materials collected for recycling and composting which were rejected at Material Reclamation Facilities. To ensure that such losses are minimised it is important to support markets for recycled materials through initiatives such as WRAP. It should also be noted that the best value statutory standards for household recycling rates are on the basis of material sent for recycling, not that which is collected.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she is taking to enable each local authority to provide doorstep collection of recyclable waste. [17639]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 23 November 2001]: It is a matter for local authorities to decide how best to meet their Statutory Performance Targets on recycling. To enable them to meet the challenging Statutory Performance Standards for recycling, we are however, providing major extra funding. By 2003–04 revenue support in the relevant Standard Spending Assessment area will have risen £1.1 billion over 2000–01 provision. Spending Review 2000 also provides £220 million for PFI waste schemes over the spending review period and a £140 million ring-fenced fund for waste and recycling. £50 million of New Opportunities Fund moneys will also be available over the next two years to support community sector work on recycling work in the UK.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to encourage a reduction in non-domestic waste. [17637]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Our record on managing industrial and commercial waste is already better than on domestic waste. Nevertheless in order to encourage businesses further to reduce waste and to put to better use any waste that is produced the Government in Waste Strategy 2000 have set the target to reduce by 2005 the amount of industrial and commercial waste sent to landfill to 85 per cent. of that landfilled in 1998.

There are initiatives already in place to help industry. The Envirowise Programme aims to demonstrate the benefits of managing resource use and reducing the environmental impact to companies across the whole of the UK.

The programme encourages the establishment of waste minimisation clubs. The clubs offer a means by which businesses can make environmental improvements.

The Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control regime will also have a role to play. Those regulated under the regime will be required to abide by the general principle that waste production should be avoided and that where waste is produced it should be recovered unless technically and economically impossible.

Departmental Strikes

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many working days have been lost through strikes by departmental staff since 1 June; and if she will make a statement. [17635]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Between 1 June and 21 November a total of 14,230 working days was lost due to strike action by departmental staff who are members of the Public and Commercial Services Union. Our aim is to resolve the dispute as quickly as possible.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures are being taken to ensure that (a) Eaga Partnership Ltd. and (b) Eastern HEES Ltd. monitor the independent installers employed in relation to the home energy efficiency scheme. [16122]

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to monitor the performance of the contractors and management of the Government's energy efficiency scheme. [18385]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The Home Energy Efficiency Scheme managers are responsible for appointing and managing contractors to carry out the installation of heating and insulation measures in homes. This includes checking that installers are able to meet the technical and quality requirements of the scheme, as well as the price tendered. Once appointed, both scheme managers continue to check the quality of work through physical inspections of all central heating, and a proportion of insulation installations.

The results of this monitoring are provided to my Department within the regular reports produced by the scheme managers. In addition an independent quality assurance contractor is employed by my Department to inspect and advise on the systems used by the scheme managers, including those relating to contractor management.

Radon Emissions

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many residential dwellings have been tested for radon emissions since 1988 in (a) Devon and (b) England and Wales; and what percentage of the dwellings tested were owned (i) privately and (ii) by the local authority or housing associations. [18357]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Recorded in the table is the number of residential dwellings that have been tested for radon emissions since 1988 in (a) Devon and (b) England and Wales; and the percentage of dwellings that were owned (i) privately and (ii) rented. The rented accommodation includes property that is owned by local authorities, housing associations, and the private rented sector. Records held centrally do not allow differentiation between the various types of public and private tenancy.

Parameter	Devon[1]	England and Wales[1]
Number of dwellings tested since 1988	80,000	400,000
Percentage of privately owned dwellings	85	81
Percentage of local authority and housing association owned dwellings and other tenanted dwellings[2]	10	15
Percentage of unknown tenure[3]	5	4

Fresh Water Supply

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the adequacy of the fresh water supply available to the UK. [16981]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 27 November 2001]: The Natural Environment Research Council's Centre for Ecology and Hydrology produces monthly summaries of hydrological conditions across the UK. The latest summary indicates that groundwater resources are very healthy, and that reservoir stocks have recently increased, now being above average for this time of year.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs where are the UK's main water sources; and what plans there are to create desalination plants. [16982]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 27 November 2001]: The principal sources from which water is abstracted in the UK are surface waters (rivers and reservoirs) and groundwater (eg chalk aquifers). The main source in any given area depends on its geology though water resources can be, and are, transferred from one region to another where it is necessary to do so. Desalination is not seen as a necessary option in terms of public water supply at the present time.

Incinerator Ash (Dioxins)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will make a statement on the quality of the Environment Agency's methods of testing incinerated material for dioxins; [18545]

(2) if she will publish the latest assessment of the level of dioxins in ash produced by each of the large scale municipal incineration plants; [18547]

(3) if she will make a statement on the toxicity of ash at large-scale municipal incineration plants. [18544]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Under the current IPC (integrated pollution control) authorisations, the Environment Agency requires all municipal waste incinerators to regularly analyse bottom ash and air pollution control residues for dioxins, carbon and a variety of metals.

These results are placed on the public register. I have asked the Environment Agency to provide the hon. Member with a summary of the recent results, and will place copies in the Library of the House. I understand latest results show the level of dioxins in bottom ash to be similar to those found in soils.

I am confident that the Environment Agency has the appropriate technical expertise to carry out accurate and repeatable dioxin analysis of incinerated material. The agency has its own accredited laboratory for dioxin analysis. Nevertheless, current analysis of the dioxin levels in incinerator residues involves the incinerator operators and the Environment Agency employing a standard sampling protocol but with analysis by a number of different laboratories approved by the United Kingdom Accreditation Service. One of the aims of this ongoing work is to confirm the accuracy and repeatability of the techniques employed.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to change the (a) departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limits for 2001–02. [19797]

Margaret Beckett: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs' DEL will be increased by £857,992,000 from £1,732,782,000 to £2,590,774,000 and the administration costs limit will be increased by £46,250,000 from £457,399,000 to £503,649,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is set out in the following table:

	Resources	Capital
Change	563,514	294,478
New DEL	2,084,642	506,132
of which:
Voted	1,365,254	429,069
Non-voted	719,388	77,063
Start figures[1]
Summer DEL	1,521,128	211,654
of which:
Voted	1,054,667	174,349
Non-voted	466,461	37,305

[1] From summer supp.

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from: (i) a take-up of £57,933,000 under the End-Year Flexibility rules, (ii) £9,000 from the Evidence Based Policy Fund within the Capital Modernisation Fund, (iii) a transfer of £510,555,000 from DTLR following the formation of DEFRA, (iv) a transfer of £610,000 from the Home Office following the formation of DEFRA, (v) a transfer of £177,000 from the Privy Council Office for the Secretary of State's accommodation costs, (vi) a transfer of £100,000 from the Department of Health for the Rural Stress Action Group, (vii) a transfer of £3,200,000 from DTLR for the Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme, (viii) a transfer of £20,000 from DTLR for local public service agreements, (ix) a transfer of £4,394,000 to the Cabinet Office for staff transferred to governmental organisations, (x) a transfer of £1,000,000 to Department of Health for research on transmissible spongiform encephalopathy, (xi) a transfer of £929,000 to the Scottish Executive for the Pig Industry Restructuring Scheme, (xii) a transfer of £967,000 to the Home Office for the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme and, (xiii) a transfer of £1,800,000 to the Scottish Executive for the Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from (i) a take-up of £72,519,000 under the End-Year Flexibility rules, (ii) a take-up of £237,000 under the Capital Modernisation Fund and, (iii) a take-up of £221,722,000 from DTLR following the formation of DEFRA. There will also be a transfer of £3,000,000 from non-voted supplementary credit approvals to voted capital.

Increases will be offset by inter-departmental transfers and charged to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Global Warming

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on Government responsibilities on (a) global warming and (b) Kyoto. [15991]

Mr. Meacher: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has lead responsibility for climate change (which includes both global warming and the Kyoto protocol). My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister also continues to play a role in international climate change discussions and negotiations on behalf of the Prime Minister.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the impact of the moratorium on new gas-fired power stations on carbon dioxide emissions (a) to date and (b) over the next five years. [15504]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The effect of the moratorium on present day emissions is likely to be small, given the time lags involved in constructing new plants. There could, in principle, be a small and temporary effect on emissions over the next few years. It is however difficult to make an estimate due to many other influences that could also affect new build decisions, for example, changes in energy prices, the New Electricity Trading Arrangements, and other Government policies on energy and the environment. We would expect any effect from the moratorium to have died away before the end of the decade.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the percentage of carbon dioxide emissions derived from (a) transport, (b) domestic sources and (c) industry in the last 12 months. [15506]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 16 November 2001]: The table shows carbon dioxide emissions recorded in the UK's greenhouse gas inventory from transport, the domestic sector and industry in 1999, which is the most recent year for which complete information is available. Industrial emissions are divided into manufacturing industry and energy industries. The latter include power stations and refineries, and produce the electricity, refined petroleum and other energy products used elsewhere in the economy. Emissions from energy industries amounted to 48.8 million tonnes of carbon equivalent (MtC) in 1999, of which 5.2 MtC and 16.6 MtC were attributable to demand in the transport and domestic sectors. Emissions from fuels loaded in the UK and used by international aviation and shipping are not included in the UK's inventory under agreed reporting guidelines used by the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change. These emissions amounted to a further 8.7 MtC in 1999.

UK CO_2 emissions from transport, the domestic sector and industry in 1999, expressed as percentage of total UK CO_2 and as million tonnes carbon (MtC)

	Percentage of total UK emissions	MtC
Transport	22	33.2
Domestic	16	23.3
Manufacturing industry	20.1	30.1
Energy industries	32.7	48.8

Greenhouse Gases

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on current station lifetime plans, what projections have been made of the production of greenhouse gases if electricity produced from nuclear power stations is replaced with electricity produced from gas-fired power stations. [17368]

Mr. Meacher: On central assumptions, electricity generation from UK nuclear power stations is projected to fall from 86 terawatt hours in 2005 to 27 terawatt hours in 2020, as existing power stations reach the end of their licensed lifetimes (see table). Were it physically possible to replace all nuclear capacity by gas-fired power stations similar to the type presently being installed by 2005, the related greenhouse gas emissions would be about 8.3 million tonnes of carbon per year in 2005, falling to 2.6 million tonnes of carbon by 2020. This includes the effect of carbon dioxide arising from combustion plus minor associated emissions of methane and nitrous oxide.

	2005	2010	2015	2020
Nuclear generation (TWh)	86	66	40	27
Greenhouse gas emissions from fuel switching[1]	8.3	6.4	3.9	2.6

[1] Million tonnes of carbon equivalent

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason her Department was not represented at the public inquiry into foot and mouth disease in Devon. [11737]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 1 November 2001]: DEFRA co-operated with the Devon county council inquiry.

To minimise additional burdens on staff actively engaged in fighting the disease, the Department responded to a number of questions in writing.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what changes there were to the criteria for the payment of slaughter premium during the foot and mouth outbreak. [14000]

Mr. Morley: There were no changes to the criteria for the payment of slaughter premium during the foot and mouth outbreak.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what basis slaughter premium is payable on cattle slaughtered as a result of foot and mouth disease. [13999]

Mr. Morley: Slaughter premium is not payable on cattle slaughtered during the foot and mouth outbreak but if the market value for such animals would have been influenced by expectation of slaughter premium then the valuation for compensation should reflect this. Standard valuations, which operated between 22 March and 29 July, took account of slaughter premium.

The Department will shortly be issuing clarification to interested parties.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to implement the recommendations of Professor Mercer's report into the foot and mouth crisis in Devon; and if she will make a statement. [11734]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 1 November 2001]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State, Lord Whitty on 31 October 2001, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 1416–17.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Steel Exports

10. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent consultation she has had with representatives from the steel industry about exports of steel. [16479]

Miss Melanie Johnson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has had meetings with steel industry representatives and trade unions which represent steel industry workers, about a wide range of issues.

Workers' Rights

11. Mr. Rammell: To ask Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will conduct a further review of the rights of people at work. [16480]

Alan Johnson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced plans at the TUC Conference to review the entire operation of the Employment Relations Act 1999 and to legislate in this Parliament if necessary. We are also consulting, or are about to, on other aspects of employment legislation, including TUPE and the introduction of new rights on discrimination at work.

Consignia

12. Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effects of Consignia reform plans on (a) postal jobs in Wales and (b) the postal service in Wales. [16481]

Mr. Alexander: Consignia's modernisation plans are an operational issue for the company.

The effect of the postal service is an issue for the independent regulatory body, the Postal Services Commission, which has set standards of service for Consignia and is monitoring them closely.

Child Care

14. Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the contribution of the regional development agencies, Government offices and the Small Business Service to the development of child care services as part of economic regeneration and enterprise development in the last 12 months. [16483]

Nigel Griffiths: This important matter was raised with all RDA chairmen on 4 April. DTI officials have since met with the east midlands RDA who are taking a lead on how the provision of child care might be boosted.

We expect the RDAs, the SBS and Government offices to promote the development of child care services as a vital component of the strategy for future economic growth and prosperity.

Tyre Industry

15. Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she has made an assessment of the performance of the UK tyre-building industry; and if she will make a statement. [16484]

30. Mr. Dennis Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the performance of the UK tyre-building industry; and if she will make a statement. [16502]

31. Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations she has received from the UK tyre-building industry about international competition; and if she will make a statement. [16504]

Nigel Griffiths: The Department has received representations from a number of hon. Members and the major tyre producers in the UK. My hon. Friend the Minister for Employment and the Regions will meet a delegation from the Parliamentary Motor Tyre Group in the near future to discuss the issue further.

Competitiveness

16. Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to improve the UK's position in the world competitiveness league table. [16485]

Ms Hewitt: Improving UK competitiveness involves business, employees and consumers as well as Government. The Government have created a stable economic environment in which business can prosper, a climate for enterprise and the right framework for investment. We delivered low inflation, the lowest long-term interest rates for 35 years and consistent policies on tax and regulation. Last week I announced a series of changes to give my own Department a clear emphasis on enterprise, innovation and competition so that it is better focused on the need to close the UK's productivity gap with its competitors.

Manufacturing (Smart Awards)

18. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what contribution Smart awards have made to improving the productivity of manufacturing businesses. [16487]

Ms Hewitt: The main aim of Smart is to stimulate technological innovation to increase the competitiveness of small and medium sized businesses, rather than to increase productivity. The independent evaluation of Smart this year found that as a result of their awards 77 per cent. of participants improved the quality of their products, services and processes, 26 per cent. reduced costs and 71 per cent. improved their market position.

Broadband Communications

19. Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in extending broadband telecommunications to rural communities. [16489]

Mr. Alexander: Broadband services by one or more of ADSL, cable or wireless technologies are available to 60–60 per cent. of households in the UK. Satellite services, which potentially can offer coverage of the entire country, are beginning to become available. We have established a £30 million fund to help extend affordable broadband services to areas where they are not currently available.

35. Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what plans she has to improve access to broadband telecommunications networks in 2002. [16508]

Mr. Alexander: The Government will shortly set out their strategy for making the broadband market more extensive and competitive. Regional Development Agencies and the devolved administrations are already preparing plans for innovative projects, under the £30 million fund to extend broadband networks announced on 9 October.

Manufacturing (North-west)

20. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what recent assessment she has made of prospects for manufacturing output in the north-west of England. [16490]

Alan Johnson: Officials at the Department of Trade and Industry work continuously with regional and national partners to assess the prospects for all sectors of industry. In addition, the North West Development Agency is preparing a report assessing the impact of the events of 11 September and its aftermath on the economy of the region and identifying possible remedial measures.

Compliance Costs (Small Businesses)

21. Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what assessment she has made of the change in the compliance cost of regulation for businesses with fewer than five employees since 1997. [16492]

Nigel Griffiths: The information required could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. However, the Government are working to ensure that the compliance cost of regulation is kept to a minimum for both small and large businesses.

Rural Post Office Services

22. Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on Post Office services in rural areas. [16493]

Mr. Alexander: The Government are committed to the maintenance of a nationwide network of post offices and have placed a formal requirement on the Post Office to maintain the rural network and to prevent any avoidable closures of rural post offices.

Venture Capital Funds (RDAs)

23. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the operation of the regional development agency venture capital funds. [16494]

Alan Johnson: A number of RDAs are operating, or overseeing the development of venture capital funds in their regions. These funds are designed to target particular sectors of the SME market or geographical areas within their region, for example in the West Midlands there is the Advantage Technology Fund, in the North East the North East Seed Capital Fund and in Yorkshire and the Humber the South Yorkshire Investment Fund.

In addition, RDAs continue to play an important role by acting as sponsors to the development of Regional Venture Capital Funds.

Aerospace Industry

24. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the impact on the aerospace industry of the reduction in the number of passengers since 11 September. [16495]

Mr. Wilson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given earlier to my hon. Friends the Members for Wythenshawe and Sale, East (Paul Goggins) and for Caerphilly (Mr. David) on 29 November 2001, Official Report, columns 1087–88.

Miners' Compensation

25. Mr. Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent progress has been made in the payment of compensation for former miners and their dependants. [16496]

Mr. Wilson: In relation to compensation for respiratory disease IRISC, the Department's claims handlers, have registered almost 170,000 claims to date. 54,230 individual payments have been made, amounting to £221 million. The main outstanding issues have now largely been resolved. This means that where previously only interim payments could be made, these claims can now be settled in full. Although it will take some time for the process to ramp up fully in all respects, the Department's aim is that IRISC will have made 50,000 offers by the end of next year.

The Department continues to adhere to the prioritisation agreement set out in the Handling Agreement, whereby the most elderly and ill claimants are dealt with first. Widows are also being prioritised, above those by other estates. The Department aims to process the most vulnerable claims by spring 2002.

In relation to compensation for vibration white finger (VWF), IRISC have registered over 130,000 claims. There have been 73,527 individual payments made, amounting to £408.9 million.

Nuclear Power

26. Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the Government's policy in respect of nuclear power generation capacity. [16497]

Mr. Wilson: Nuclear power contributes to our broad energy policy objectives of ensuring secure, diverse, sustainable supplies of energy at competitive prices by providing about one quarter of UK electricity generation and helping limit carbon emissions. In common with all other energy options, nuclear's role in UK energy policy is being considered by the current performance and innovation unit energy review which is due to report to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister by the end of the year.

Manufacturing (Rural Areas)

27. Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she is taking to help manufacturing in rural areas. [16498]

Alan Johnson: Manufacturing companies in rural areas benefit from the strengthened regional support we have introduced and the wide range of policies we are pursuing to foster productivity, encourage enterprise, and raise innovation and skills.

My hon. Friend the Minister responsible for small business announced on 7 November 2001 the establishment of the Development Fund for Rural Renewal. This £3 million support programme will provide funding for projects that offer support to enterprises, including manufacturing, in areas facing difficulties due to the effects of foot and mouth disease.

Gender Pay Gap

28. Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the Government's strategy to eliminate the gender pay gap. [16500]

Ms Hewitt: Earlier this year we asked Denise Kingsmill to examine and report on possible measures to improve women's employment prospects and so reduce the pay gap. We are currently considering her report, which will be published next week. It would be premature to make a statement today.

Climate Change Levy

29. Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received recently from manufacturing industry on the effects of the climate change levy. [16501]

Mr. Wilson: The Department has received a number of representations from individual businesses, trade associations and other organisations about the climate change levy.

Directors' Remuneration

32. Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to increase the power of shareholders to determine directors' remuneration. [16505]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Vernon Coaker) on 19 October 2001, Official Report, column 1376W.

Clean Coal Technology

33. Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the prospects for clean coal technology. [16506]

Mr. Wilson: Future coal-fired power generation will need to reduce its current levels of greenhouse gas and other emissions and to this effect the Government support a programme of research and development into cleaner coal technologies. We are also reviewing the case for a cleaner coal technology demonstration plant and are due to report our findings in the near future.

Regional Development Agencies

34. Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she will take to enhance the role of the regional development agencies. [16507]

Alan Johnson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry is continuing the process of enhancement of the RDAs started last year with the announcement of additional funding, more spending flexibility and a stronger economic focus. Implementation culminates on 1 April 2002 when the RDAs' existing programmes are brought together into a single, broader and more flexible programme managed through testing outcome and output targets. She also announced on 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 396W, a series of changes to the structure and operation of her Department. One change will be the transfer of responsibility for some Regional Selective Assistance grants from Regional Government Offices to the RDAs.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes in board membership there have been in each of the regional development agencies in the last 12 months. [18371]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 27 November 2001]: In the 12 months to 26 November, there have been four resignations: Mike Bird resigned from the board of Advantage West Midlands and Sal Brinton, Chris Mole and Peter Dawe resigned from the board of the East of England Development Agency.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 24 October 2001, Official Report, column 250W which announced re-appointments to the boards.

I am currently consulting on the new appointments to the eight English Regional Development Agencies outside London, as required by the Regional Development Agencies Act 1998. An announcement on the outcome of the appointments process will be made in due course.

Appointments to the London Development Agency are the responsibility of the Mayor of London.

High-tech Businesses

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to create a healthy environment for encouraging the growth of high-tech businesses. [16486]

Mr. Alexander: The DTI is committed to supporting high-tech companies and is engaged in a range of activities to assist these companies reach their full growth potential.

Hydrological Fracturing

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what recent representations her Department has received regarding the technology and engineering involved in hydrological fracturing; [7346]

(2) what recent research has been done by her Department into the effects of hydrological fracturing; [7347]

(3) what (a) quantitive and (b) qualitative research methods were used in studies by her Department on hydrological fracturing; who commissioned such studies; and what examples of field trial stages have been published; [7345]

(4) what recent research has been completed by the relevant authorities on the environmental, commercial and social effects of hydrological fracturing. [7349]

Mr. Wilson: My Department, as part of its Cleaner Coal Technology Programme, has funded a number of projects that included work on hydrological fracturing, although it has not commissioned specific R&D on this subject.

The Natural Environment Research Council (NERC) has funded research into hydrogeology, including the hydrological fracturing of rock and other media. NERC's British Geological Survey (BGS) has undertaken work reviewing the use of the technology of fracturing in Coal Bed Methane production. A list of the NERC research portfolio, including grants funded through NERC's Micro to Macro programme, is listed below on Annexe 1.

Annexe 1

Hydrological Fracturing: Grants funded by NERC 1997–98 to date

Non-thematic grants

ROPA Seismic imaging of subseismic natural fracture systems (1996–98, British Geological Survey)

Basement structural controls on fault architectures, accommodation zones and sedimentation in rift systems (1996–2000, Royal Holloway)

Fracture characterisation of deep repository sites (1998–99, Imperial College)

Self-organisation of fluid flow, chemical reactivity and rock strength in porous reservoir rocks (1999–2001, Edinburgh University)

The hydraulic properties of rock fractures under normal and shear loading (1996–97, Imperial College)

Submarine rifting laboratory studies of tensile and extensional fracture in mor rocks, leading to numerical models of tectonic and hydrothermal process (1995–97, University College, London)

Localised flow in fractured rock masses: mechanisms, modelling and characterisation (1999–2002, Imperial College)

Modelling porosity development and flow in heterogeneous media (1999–2001, British Geological Survey)

Scaling of fluid behaviour associated with flow through complex geological structures (1999–2001, Leeds University)

Fully determined fluid velocity fields for complex 2D media with multi-scaled heterogeneity (2000–03, University of Ulster)

Fracture induced anisotropic seismic attenuation (2001–03, Imperial College)

Characterisation of the unsaturated hydraulic properties of the Sherwood Sandstone using combined cross-borehole radar and resistivity tomography (1998–2000, Lancaster University)

The significance of saline fluids in high-temperature deep-crustal metamorphism (1999–2002, Edinburgh University)

Vadose zone flow mechanisms in hydraulically layered aquifers using time domain reflectometry (2000–02, Leeds University)

Molecular modelling of clay-fluid interactions under sedimentary basin conditions: the structure and mobility of water and light hydrocarbons (1999–2002, University College London)

Exceptional porosity in oil-bearing sandstones (2000–02, Scottish Universities Research and Reactor Centre)

Thematic grants—Micro to Macro programme

Analysis of reaction and flow in stochastically heterogeneous porous media (1999–2001, Cambridge University)

New micro-geochemical traces of fluid and solute transport in sedimentary basins (1999–1999, Edinburgh University)

Scaling properties of fluid flow in fractured rocks (1999–2002, University College London)

Controls of matrix and fracture flow from geochemical analysis of produced oil (2000–02, Reading University)

Localised flow in fractured rock masses mechanisms, modelling and characterisation (1999–2002, Southampton University/ Imperial College)

Determination of hydraulic properties of distributed fractures using seismic techniques (1999–2002, Cambridge University/ British Geological Survey)

Modelling porosity development and flow on heterogeneous media (1999–2001, British Geological Survey)

Scaling of fluid behaviour associated with flow through complex geological structures (1999–2001, Leeds University)

Quantifying the effects of biofilm growth on hydraulic properties and on sorption equilibria: micro to macro measurements (2000–02, Manchester University)

Multi-scale fluid-flow path analysis: calibration and modelling using mineralisation systems (2000–02, Imperial College)

Cementation of oilfield sandstones: micro-geochemical tracers, reveal macro-fluid hydrogeology (2000–02, Edinburgh University)

Fully determined fluid velocity fields for complex 2D media with multi-scaled heterogeneity (2000–02, Ulster University)

The scaling behaviour of fluid rock flow in rock fractures (2000–02, Aberdeen University)

Novel flow and transport models for systems exhibiting non-integer flow dimensions (2000–02, University College London)

Determination of hydraulic properties of distributed fractures using seismic techniques (1999–2002, British Geological Survey/Cambridge University)

Modelling porosity development and flow in heterogeneous media (1999–2001, University College London)

Multi-scale fluid-flow path analysis calibration and modelling using mineralisation systems (2000–02, Leeds University)

Quantifying the scaling of physical transport in structured heterogeneous porous media (2001–04, Birmingham University)

Thematic grants—Ocean Drilling Programme

High resolution fluid flow patterns at the Nankai convergent plate margin (2001–04, University of Wales, Aberystwyth)

Grants relating to coal measures and methane

Hydrogeology of flooded, abandoned mine workings—an integrated hydraulic/hydrogeochemical analysis (2000–2000, Newcastle-upon-Tyne University)

Urban regeneration of coalfields: generic studies of contaminated land and groundwater issues exemplified in Wolverhampton (1998–2002, Sheffield University/British Geological Survey).

Nuclear Security

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the annual budget for the Office for Civil Nuclear Security; and if she has plans to increase the budget following the events of 11 September. [15581]

Mr. Wilson: The budget for the Office for Civil Nuclear Security (OCNS) is approximately £1.5 million in the current year. The measures which need to be taken following the events of 11 September, including nuclear security, are currently under review.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact on the competitiveness of the nuclear power industry of additional security requirements since 11 September. [16893]

Mr. Wilson: No such assessment has been undertaken.

Workplace Bullying

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to introduce monitoring of the incidence of workplace bullying. [18486]

Alan Johnson: Bullying and harassment have no place in today's work environment and are unacceptable whenever they occur. The Government strongly condemn such behaviour and believe employees should be able to work without fear of encountering bullying from their employers or anyone else.

The adoption of best employment relations practice should help create a culture where bullying becomes unacceptable. We have established the Partnership Fund which provides support for organisations wishing to develop policies to tackle bullying in the workplace. The Department is also working closely with the Health and Safety Executive on the development of management standards. The first step is to undertake research to establish the real extent of the problem and how it manifests itself in the workplace.

There is a range of legislative measures in place designed to protect employees from the worst offences.

Economic Development Zone (Lancashire)

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) organisations, (b) interest groups, (c) individuals and (d) community forums have been consulted in relation to the bid put forward to the regional development agency by Lancaster city council for an economic development zone. [18252]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 26 November 2001]: Lancaster's bid is endorsed by the Lancaster and Morecambe Local Strategic Partnership. If accepted, the EDZ strategy will be implemented through an Action Plan Partnership based on the existing broadly-based Lancaster Single Regeneration Budget Board. Steps have been taken to ensure key partners are fully involved and informed.

Export Licences

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what initiatives the Export Control Office is taking to reduce the processing time of licence applications. [17427]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 27 November 2001]: The Government recognise that the system for processing export licence applications requires continuous improvement if we are to deliver a more efficient and effective system for export licensing which is accountable, transparent and customer focused. I have introduced "time-lines" to track cases. The Export Control Organisation (ECO) has taken a number of initiatives to reduce the time taken to process individual export licence applications. These include:

> building productive customer relationships, including setting up a joint CBI/ECO working group to work with exporters to address issues of concern, including delays in processing export licence applications; > enhancing IT systems to ensure they deliver further business process improvements. It is planned that this will lead to, amongst other things, standard individual export licence applications being accepted over the internet next year; > establishing more effective partnerships with other Government Departments. Departments involved in the licensing process have agreed in principle to a Service Level Agreement, which we hope to finalise shortly. This will ensure that Departments work better together and focus more sharply on outputs; and > establishing new structures which allow us to continually review and improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the decision making process. There are regular meetings between officials in all Departments involved in the export licensing process to identify ways of improving the export licensing system, as well as to discuss particular licence applications.

One North East

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons Mr. Hugh Morgan Williams has been removed from the board of One North East; and if a representative of the North East CBI is to be appointed in his place. [18370]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 27 November 2001]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 24 October 2001, Official Report, column 250W, which announced the decision to implement a rolling programme of board appointments. To achieve this it was necessary for some effective RDA board members to make way for new appointees. Hugh Morgan Williams will not be reappointed to the board of One North East when his appointment term ends in December 2001. The decision not to reappoint Hugh Morgan Williams was no reflection on his performance and I hope he will feel able to continue his involvement in the regeneration of the North East.

New appointments under the rolling programme will be announced shortly. These appointments are being made in accordance with the Code of Practice of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. Board members are appointed as individuals and not as representatives of organisations. They are appointed on merit and for the skills and expertise that they can offer.

Arms Purchasing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on sustainable development in relation to arms purchasing. [18671]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 28 November 2001]: Under the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria the Government are currently obliged to take into account whether or not a proposed arms export would seriously undermine the economy or seriously hamper the sustainable development of the recipient country. Under clause 8 of the Export Control Bill, these criteria would be treated as published guidance that the Government must have regard to in making licensing decisions.

British Arms Manufacturers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what controls there are to ensure that British arms manufacturers who manufacture arms abroad are regulated properly. [18670]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 28 November 2001]: Controls already apply to the export of goods or technology required for the development, production or use of military equipment and other equipment subject to export control. Such controls would apply to exports intended for use in overseas production. The Export Control Bill would add to the range of controls available to Government by providing the power to control the electronic transfer of military technology currently only applicable for dual-use items. The Government are consulting EU partners about including an explicit reference to overseas production in the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures contained in the Export Controls Bill will control the activities of British brokers in supplying arms if they make a deal outside of the United Kingdom. [18669]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 28 November 2001]: Clause 4 of the Export Control Bill would provide the Secretary of State with powers to make orders in connection with trade controls, commonly referred to as trafficking and brokering. This power would allow such controls to be imposed on acts carried out abroad by a United Kingdom person or by a person acting under the control of a United Kingdom person. As set out in the dummy orders relating to the Bill, which were made available to Parliament in October, the Government propose to introduce controls on trafficking and brokering by United Kingdom persons overseas of equipment whose export has been banned because of evidence of its use in torture and long-range missiles, and trafficking and brokering by such persons to any destination subject to a UN, EU, OSCE or UK arms embargo.

Government Office for the North West

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will review the (a) operations and (b) procedures in the Government Office for the North West. [18964]

Alan Johnson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has recently carried out a review of the business support functions of the whole Department, including those services provided via the Government Offices. On 22 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced key changes to be made to the role of the Government Offices. A review of the Government Office for the North West's performance during the first half of the 2001–02 financial year, against outcomes set in the Department of Trade and Industry's Business Plan, is under way.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) advice and (b) support the Government Office for the North West can provide to businesses on management buyouts. [18962]

Alan Johnson: The Government Office for the North West and partners, including the Small Business Service and the North West Development Agency, provide general advice to businesses on a wide range of issues. Where a company is situated in an Assisted Area, the Government Office may be able to offer direct financial support for the management buyout.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason no file was held at the Government Office for the North West on the closure of Thomas Witter in Chorley. [18961]

Alan Johnson: The Government Office for the North West holds files where companies seek financial assistance or some other substantive relationship. No such approach has been received from Thomas Witter Ltd.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the role of the Government Office for the North West is in helping businesses that have been taken into administration. [18960]

Alan Johnson: The role the Government Office for the North West is to provide advice and support to local companies, whatever their situation, or to direct them to the most appropriate sources of advice and support. Provision of financial assistance depends on a number of factors including the size of the company concerned, the nature of its business and its location.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she has made of the quality of the operation of the Government Office for the North West; and if she will make a statement on the future of the Government Office for the North West. [18925]

Alan Johnson: A review of the Government Office for the North West's performance during the first half of the 2001–02 financial year, against outcomes set in the Department of Trade and Industry's Business Plan, is under way. On 22 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced key changes that will be made to the DTI, including changes to the role of the Government Offices. There will continue to be a need for a strong DTI presence in the Government Office, but with a greater emphasis on influencing the whole range of government activity in the regions and on playing a stronger role in helping to shape policy and strategy centrally.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role the Government Office for the North West played in relation to Thomas Witter; and what procedures will be in place for staff at the Government Office for the North West to deal with the case of Thomas Witter. [18963]

Alan Johnson: Government Office officials brought the case of Thomas Witter Ltd. to the attention of the North West Development Agency, who agreed to consider whether support might be available from the intervention fund. Staff at the Government Office for the North West will continue to follow the correct procedures in dealing with this case.

Aluminium Industry

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the (a) financial and (b) employment situation in the British aluminium industry. [17654]

Mr. Wilson: With greater consolidation in the world aluminium industry over the last two years, rationalisation is inevitable. In response to the downturn in world aluminium markets major global players, notably Alcan and Alcoa (which both own plant in the UK), have brought forward plans for restructuring their respective global operations. Along with other countries, the UK will be affected.

Solar Power

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the total amounts of grant aid available in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 for the installation of domestic solar water heating systems, together with (i) the name of each local project responsible for administering this budget, (ii) the targets set in these financial years for each local project and (iii) their budget allocation. [16632]

Mr. Wilson: There are no grants available for the installation of solar water heating systems from central Government at present, though professionally installed systems have benefited from a reduced rate (5 per cent.) of VAT since April 2000. Government do not maintain a register of the number of systems installed and neither does the trade association, though it is probably somewhere between 3,000 and 5,000 systems a year.

There are various incentives and grants available from individual local authorities and organisations and from some utilities. Some useful examples can be found on the Energy Saving Trust website www.practicalhelp.org.uk or on the website of the trade association www.solartradeassociation.org.uk

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the total amount of grant aid available in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02, for the installation of photovoltaic panels and roofing together with (i) the name of each local project responsible for administering the budget, (ii) the targets set in both of these financial years and (iii) their budget allocation. [16634]

Mr. Wilson: The Department has funded two rounds of the Domestic PV Systems Field Trial in 2000 and 2001, together supporting some 32 projects (over 500 homes) for the budget of £5.4 million. In addition, a Call for Proposals for the Large-Scale Building—Integrated PV Field Trial for Public Buildings is currently open. This should see around 15 projects on schools, hospitals etc. being supported for the budget of £3 million, and the results should be known by the end of February 2002.

The names of the nine project teams from the first round of the Domestic Field Trial will be included in a newsletter being prepared by the Building Research Establishment, and a copy will be sent to my hon. Friend and copies placed in the Libraries of the House. Summaries of the 23 successful projects from the second round are attached to the press release of 22 October on the DTI website, www.dti.gov.uk. No targets were set for these financial years.

Looking to the future, the Department is currently working up the design for the first phase of the Major PV Demonstration Programme, announced in the Government's White Paper "Opportunity for All", on 13 February 2001. This has £20 million allocated over the next two financial years, and it is envisaged it will be open to applications from all types and sizes of building, with an average 50 per cent. capital grant on offer. There are no specific targets as yet, but it is expected that the first phase will result in up to 3,000 domestic roof-top systems and a couple of hundred larger non-domestic installations. Targets for subsequent phases will depend on the success of the first phase and the level of funding available.

Afghanistan

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if the Government have (a) transferred and (b) approved the transfer of controlled goods to (i) the Northern Alliance, (ii) its component factions and (iii) other non-state actors operating in Afghanistan since 11 September; [18215]

(2) what plans the Government have to facilitate the delivery of controlled goods to (a) the Northern Alliance, (b) its component factions and (c) other non-state actors operating in or around Afghanistan; [18220]

(3) what plans the Government have to transfer controlled goods to (a) the Northern Alliance, (b) its component factions and (c) other non-state actors operating in Afghanistan; [18216]

(4) if the Government have facilitated the delivery of controlled goods to (a) the Northern Alliance, (b) its component factions and (c) other non-state actors operating in Afghanistan since 11 September; [18217]

(5) what plans the Government have to fund weapons purchases by (a) the Northern Alliance, (b) its component factions and (c) other non-state actors operating in Afghanistan; [18226]

(6) if the Government have funded weapons purchases by (a) the Northern Alliance, (b) its component factions and (c) other non-state actors operating in Afghanistan since 11 September. [18221]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are involved in military operations in self-defence against international terrorists within Afghanistan. Information and plans about these operations are extremely sensitive, and it would not be in the public interest for them to be disclosed. In my opinion, exemptions 1a) and b) (Defence, Security and International Relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information apply here.

Public Service Orders

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funds are available from (a) the Treasury and (b) the EU for the subsidising of public service orders. [18728]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

Public Service Obligations (PSOs) are at present imposed in the UK only on lifeline routes within Scotland. These routes receive subsidies from the Scottish Executive and the Island Councils. There is no provision for the EU to subsidise air services which are subject to PSOs.

DEFENCE

War Pensions

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the new rates of war pensions and allowances proposed from April 2002. [19996]

RAF Halton

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the properties at RAF Halton which his Department (a) has disposed of in the last five years, (b) classifies as surplus to requirements and (c) plans to classify as surplus to requirements. [17644]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 26 November 2001]: Three minor disposals of garden or amenity land of minimal value have been made over the past five years. In addition, 12 properties were transferred permanently to Annington Homes Ltd. (AHL) as part of the sale of the Married Quarters Estate in November 1996 with a further 82 properties following on 1 June 2001.

Halton Hospital plus an area adjoining the south-west corner known as The Old Pumping Station at Warneford Avenue (0.4ha) has been classified as surplus to requirements. A further 57 properties are likely to be handed back to AHL in March 2002.

Halton House officers' mess may become surplus in due course. However, the ongoing Defence Training Review includes RAF Halton and it is too early to say what the outcome will be. There are no plans to declare any further family quarters at Halton surplus to requirements in the foreseeable future.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Defence Estates has set a target date for the disposal of the site of the Princess Mary Hospital, RAF Halton. [17646]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 26 November 2001]: We anticipate that the site will be sold in March 2003.

Civil Affairs Group

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when and where elements of the Civil Affairs Group have been deployed on operations; and what the number of personnel involved was. [18870]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 28 November 2001]: The Civil Affairs Group was formed initially in 1997. The numbers of Civil Affairs Group personnel deployed on operations, and the locations and dates of those deployments are shown in the table.

[1] Officers

[2] Other ranks (ORs)

[3] Denote that the numbers include personnel not on the Civil Affairs Group establishment but who were trained by the Group and deployed with them to undertake Civil Affairs and Civil/Military Co-operation tasks.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to deploy elements of the Civil Affairs Group to Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [18871]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 28 November 2001]: The situation in Afghanistan continues to be fluid and our forces remain well balanced to respond to events as they unfold. A core force package, including a detachment from the Civil Affairs Group, is maintained at very high readiness to deploy if required. Personnel from the Civil Affairs Group are already involved in planning and liaison tasks outside Afghanistan.

POWs (Far East)

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the advice as to their qualification on nationality grounds offered in the War Pensions Agency's leaflet 12 to potential claimants of the ex-gratia payment for British groups who were held prisoner by the Japanese during World War Two conforms to current guidance. [17149]

Dr. Moonie: Yes. The War Pensions Agency Leaflet No. 12 lists among the potential claimants for the ex-gratia payment "surviving British civilians who were interned by the Japanese in the Far East during the Second World War". A separate War Pensions Agency note explaining the requirement to confirm a bloodline to the United Kingdom and how this can be done, is sent out with each claim form.

EU Rapid Reaction Force

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes of role his Department has assessed to be required for the proposed EU rapid reaction force in consequence of the 11 September attacks. [18257]

Mr. Hoon: There are no plans for a standing EU rapid reaction force.

While the capabilities being developed under the European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP) can also play an important role in any military response to international terrorism, the scope of ESDP should remain firmly focused on crisis-management tasks.

Armed Forces (Drugs)

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the armed forces compulsory drug testing programme; and if he will make a statement. [18412]

Mr. Ingram: Our policy is that drug misuse is incompatible with service in the armed forces. The use of random compulsory drug testing of staff sends a clear message to service personnel about this policy. In addition, it provides a means of measuring the level of drug misuse in the services, and whether the misuse of a particular drug, or class of drugs, is on the increase or is in decline. It is also an important means with which to assess and audit the effectiveness of the education programmes run by each of the services.

Territorial Army

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 373W, on the Territorial Army, for what reason the decision was taken to re-tender for the national advertising contract. [18842]

Dr. Moonie: In accordance with normal practice the national advertising contract for the Territorial Army and Regular Army is subject to regular review. The Army Training and Recruiting Agency's recruiting authorities, in conjunction with the Central Office of Information, reviewed the current contract and concluded that there was a need to refresh the current advertising campaign and that this was best achieved by a process of re-tendering.

Gibraltar

Syd Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what talks have taken place with the Spanish Government on their refusal to permit British military aircraft to fly over their airspace to Gibraltar; and what reason has been given by the Spanish Government for refusing to permit British military aircraft to fly through Spanish air space en route to Gibraltar. [19139]

Mr. Ingram: There have been no recent discussions with Spain about restrictions on British military aircraft flying through Spanish air space.

Army Personnel

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people (a) joined and (b) left the Army in each month between 1 May and 1 September. [16468]

Mr. Ingram: The number of people joining and leaving the Army in each of the months between May and September is as follows:

May	1,152	1,186
June	782	1,257
July	1,004	1,136
August	1,157	1,084

[1] The table shows all personnel who joined or left UK regular forces with the exception of illegal absentees. The list includes transferees from other services, Royal Air Force, Royal Navy and personnel joining from other nation's services.

Exercise Saif Sareea 2

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what instructions he gave to joint chiefs of staff not to proceed with exercise Saif Sareea 2; and if he will make a statement. [19375]

Mr. Hoon: None. The Ministry of Defence regularly reviews its forward programme and re-evaluates all commitments in the defence plan to ensure that they represent good value for money. Given its scale and importance, Exercise Saif Sareea 2 was kept under particularly careful review to ensure that it met this criteria and the armed forces training requirements. In the early part of 2000 a number of options for the exercise were investigated as part of this process. The review confirmed the importance of carrying out an exercise on this scale and at this distance from the UK. Recent events have proved this to be the case.

Afghanistan

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the (a) number and (b) nature of the casualties sustained among British armed forces in Afghanistan. [19082]

Mr. Hoon: I can confirm that four service personnel were wounded on operations in Afghanistan, one seriously. They are all now back in the UK receiving treatment.

PRIME MINISTER

E-democracy

Mr. Anthony D. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to further e-democracy. [20086]

The Prime Minister: I have asked my right hon. Friend the President of the Council and Leader of the House of Commons to chair a new Cabinet Committee on e-democracy. The composition and terms of reference of the new committee are:

Ministerial Committee on e-Democracy (MISC17)

Composition

The President of the Council and the Leader of the House of Commons (Chair)

Secretary of State for Trade and Industry

Financial Secretary to the Treasury

Minister without Portfolio

Minister of State for Transport, Local Government and Regions

Minister of State for Home Affairs

Minister of State for Trade and Industry

Minister of State for Cabinet Office

Parliamentary Secretary for the Leader of the House of Commons Office

Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Skills

Invited to attend

The e-Envoy

Terms of Reference

"To consider ways of strengthening the democratic process by engaging the public and their elected representatives through the use of the internet and other electronic means."

Pledge to British Muslims

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister if he (a) instructed or (b) agreed to the Cabinet secretary signing the pledge to British Muslims; and if he will make a statement. [15120]

The Prime Minister: The secretary of the Cabinet signed the pledge as head of the home civil service because he thought it particularly important at this time to reassure Muslims and those of different faiths within the civil service through a positive statement of this kind. Diversity is an important part of the agenda for the reform of the civil service. He believed it to be a non-controversial statement put forward by a well-established organisation affiliated to the Muslim Council of Britain and he understood that it had the support of all the main political parties. He did not act under instruction.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister when he was invited by the Islamic Society of Britain to sign their pledge to British Muslims; when a text for the pledge was first communicated to him; when he agreed to sign; and whether the text first communicated to him was that which was signed on his behalf. [15121]

The Prime Minister: It is not our practice to give details on such matters. The Deputy Prime Minister signed it on the Government's behalf and all three main political parties were represented at the launch of the pledge.

Pledge

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the pledges signed by (a) the holder of the office of Cabinet secretary and (b) himself since 1 May 1997. [15119]

The Prime Minister: No record of pledges is kept. I signed a variety of expressions of support, as previous Prime Ministers have done before me.

Successive secretaries of the Cabinet, as head of the home civil service, have made public commitments to the continued reform of the civil service and to particular aspects of it.

Suez Medal

Bob Spink: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to issue a Suez medal for service between 1951 and 1954. [18177]

The Prime Minister: The Committee on the Grant of Honours, Decorations and Medals which advises Her Majesty the Queen on the issue of such medals has not made any recommendation on this issue. But I am sure it will consider any representations the hon. Member may wish to make on this matter.

International Crime Tribunal

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has made to the United Nations Security Council to establish an international criminal tribunal to try the perpetrators of the attacks on 11 September; and if he will make a statement. [18851]

The Prime Minister: International criminal courts or tribunals are not a substitute for national jurisdictions, and never have been. They are there to take action against individuals who have committed crimes for which a relevant national jurisdiction is unable or unwilling to take action. That does not apply in this case. The United States has every justification to try those responsible for the attacks in its own country.

Decommissioning (IRA)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Prime Minister if he will request from the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning the inventory of the weapons decommissioned by the IRA. [18861]

The Prime Minister: On 23 October the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning reported that it had witnessed a quantity of IRA arms being put beyond use. It confirmed the material in question includes arms, ammunition and explosives.

However, in the interest of furthering the decommissioning process, the Commission declined to provide further details. We all must respect the Commission's own judgment on how best to proceed to fulfill its mandate, the decommissioning of all paramilitary arms.

I look forward to further progress on the arms issue alongside the full implementation of the Good Friday Agreement, and the long-term stability of the Northern Ireland political institutions.

Saif Sareea 2

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he had with the joint chiefs of the defence staff regarding (a) possible cancellation of and (b) reduction in the scope of exercise Saif Sareea 2. [19376]

The Prime Minister: None.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Rail Regulator

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to change the powers of the Rail Regulator. [15502]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 16 November 2001]: We intend to streamline the existing structure while still recognising that there will be a continued need for some form of independent economic regulation.

Eurostar

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what track access charges have been paid by Eurostar for use of tracks (a) between Waterloo and the Channel Tunnel, (b) within the Channel Tunnel, (c) on French rail lines and (d) on Belgian rail lines, for each year since the commencement of operations. [15950]

Mr. Jamieson: The Track Access Charges for Eurostar services are commercially sensitive and cannot therefore be made public.

Track Access Charges in France and Belgium are not paid by Eurostar (UK) Ltd. but are dealt with by their business partners, SNCF and SNCB.

Car Ownership (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many people owned a car in the Buckingham constituency in the last year for which information is available. [17846]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department has no information on the number of people owning cars in the Buckingham constituency. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency record shows that the number of currently licensed cars registered to keepers in the Buckingham constituency at December 2000 was 44,899.

Registered Social Landlords

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many (a) council and (b) Registered Social Landlord (RSL) properties there are where the target rents are below current rents at current prices; and how many and what percentage of (i) council and (ii) RSL properties there are in each English region where the target rent is at or below current rents at current prices. [17824]

Ms Keeble: The information is not currently available. Social landlords will only have completed their property valuations and calculated their target rents under the reforms around the end of this calendar year.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will estimate the number and percentage of (a) council and (b) RSL rents scheduled to fall as a result of his policy to restructure rents in (i) England and (ii) each region. [17825]

Ms Keeble: The information is not available in the form requested. In particular, the figures critically depend on assumptions about what would have happened to rents in the absence of restructuring.

East Coast Main Line

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which phases of the infrastructure upgrades on the East Coast Line have so far been (a) started and on what date and (b) completed and on what date; on what dates the subsequent phases of the upgrades are due (i) to start and (ii) to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [17790]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 23 November 2001]: Phase 1 of the project, which commenced in 1999, provides capacity improvements to the Leeds Station area and is expected to be completed by 2004–05. The Strategic Rail Authority is continuing to take forward project development work on the upgrade.

Millennium Dome

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he has set a deadline for concluding (a) the sale and (b) a lease of (i) the Millennium Dome and (ii) the site of the Millennium Dome. [18069]

Ms Keeble: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) on 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 906W.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what offers have been made (a) to purchase and (b) to lease (i) the Millennium Dome and (ii) the site of the Millennium Dome since 1 January. [18070]

Ms Keeble: While the process to secure a long-term use of the Dome continues, it would not be appropriate to publish such information, which is commercially confidential. To reveal any of these details would undermine on-going discussions, would not be conducive to a successful conclusion and would be against the public interest.

Social Housing

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many houses were built by the 10 largest housing associations in each of the last three years; how many are projected for next financial year; and what grant was payable to each association in each of those years. [18351]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 27 November 2001]: (a) Based on information supplied by the Housing Corporation, the number of self-contained units built by the 10 largest housing associations in each of the last three years are as shown in the following three tables. Also shown is the total grant allocated to the housing association during each year for building purposes.

		Self-contained units built

Total	3,277	181	3,096	105,255

Notes:

1. The top 10 RSLs/HAs by size, for each of the three periods, was determined by totalling, for each RSL, the following figures:
their total stock of self-contained units;
the number of hostel/shared housing bedspaces;
the number of units where the RSL had an interest in a shared ownership scheme or a leasehold for the elderly scheme;
the stock managed for non-RSLs (stock managed for other RSLs was excluded).
2. It is important to note that grants allocated to an RSL may not necessarily be reflected in the number of units built within that same year.
3. The total grant allocation is the sum of the ADP grant allocated by the Housing Corporation and the LASHG grant allocated by the local authority.
4. The number of units built annually comprises new-build self-contained units only.

(b) Housing Corporation allocations to the top 10 RSLs in 2001–02 for the construction of new units are as follows:

	ADP allocation £000	Number of units to be built with this allocation
Peabody Trust	17,736	243
Riverside Housing Association Ltd.	2,034	95
Sanctuary Housing Association	1,328	74
Northern Counties Housing Association Ltd.	3,282	108
North British Housing Ltd.	9,522	283
Home Group Ltd.	11,569	288
Hyde Housing Association Ltd.	15,565	315
The Guinness Trust	9,883	243
London and Quadrant Housing Trust	22,538	352
Anchor Trust	8,153	140
Total	101,610	2,141

Note:

The allocation figures represent the start-of-year position for accepted allocations prior to grant confirmation. Note that the allocation in the table refers to ADP allocations by the Housing Corporation only. Information on LASHG grants for the current year are not yet available.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many households in council and RSL properties will not have reached their target rents by 2012–13. [18625]

Ms Keeble: The information is not available. In particular, rate of increase of actual council and RSL rents over the next 10 years will depend, among other things, on the outcome of future spending reviews (for council rents) and periodic reviews by the Housing Corporation (for RSL rents).

Aviation Industry

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what calculations his Department has made as to the additional costs incurred as a result of increased security measures at United Kingdom airports since 11 September by (a) United Kingdom airports, (b) airlines and (c) other service providers. [18451]

Mr. Jamieson: Following informal contacts between my Department and the aviation industry we estimate that the extra security measures introduced since 11 September will have cost the aviation industry about £50 million by the end of the year.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to assist (a) United Kingdom airports and (b) airlines in respect of additional costs incurred as a result of increased security measures at United Kingdom airports. [18452]

Mr. Jamieson: We are considering whether emergency aid should be paid to the UK aviation industry to compensate for the events of 11 September, and we will take the guidelines on state aid issued by the European Commission and endorsed by the EU Transport Council fully into account in any decision.

Car Ownership (Arundel and South Downs)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many people owned a car in the constituency of Arundel and South Downs in the last year for which figures are available. [18311]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department has no information on the number of people owning cars in the Arundel and South Downs constituency. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency record shows that the number of currently licensed cars registered to keepers in the Arundel and South Downs constituency at December 2000 was 47,966.

Homeless People

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proportion of non-secure lettings made by local authorities by region in each of the years 1997–98 to 2000–01 were (a) introductory tenancies and (b) lettings made to discharge their duties to homeless households under section 193 of the Housing Act 1996. [18300]

Ms Keeble: Information on the number of lettings made by local authorities to discharge their duties to homeless households under section 193 of the Housing Act 1996 is not available centrally.

The table gives the available information on

(a) the proportion of local authority non-secure lettings that were introductory tenancies; and

(b) the proportion of non-secure lettings to homeless households in priority need. The latter will include lettings that are made to discharge the local authorities duties to homeless households under section 193 of the Housing Act 1996 and may include some lettings that are introductory tenancies (that would end the section 193 duty).

Introductory tenancies as a percentage of local authority non-secure lettings and percentage of all non-secure lettings given to homeless households in priority need

DTLR Housing Investment Programme returns (annual)

Detling Beacon

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if there has been an increase in (a) air traffic using and (b) night flights in the corridor five miles either side of Detling Beacon in Kent since 11 September. [18471]

Mr. Jamieson: We are not aware of any increase in either air traffic users or night flights in the corridor five miles either side of the Detling Beacon since 11 September.

Housing Management

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will announce his decisions on the first round of local authorities' bids for additional resources to establish arm's-length housing management companies to improve their housing standards. [18828]

Mr. Byers: We have decided that conditional allocations should be made to the following local authorities sufficient to support capital investment through arm's-length companies on housing improvements in 2002–03 and 2003–04 up to the sums indicated:

£ million

Local authority	Conditional allocation
Ashfield	24.0
Derby	31.1
Hounslow	35.0
Kirklees	62.5
Rochdale	24.2
Stockton-on-Tees	44.5
Westminster	20.3
Wigan	58.3

If confirmed, these allocations should ensure that the housing stock of most of the authorities concerned meets the Government's decent homes standard by 2006.

Final allocations will depend on services delivered by the arm's-length company achieving an excellent rating from the Housing Inspectorate. Exceptionally, for round one only, we are prepared to allocate 50 per cent. of conditional allocations where companies are assessed as good and likely to improve. Authorities will also require the Secretary of State's approval under section 27 of the Housing Act 1985, the granting of which will be subject to the criteria set out in my Department's Guidance last April, including criteria on the responsibilities, constitution and staffing of the arm's-length companies.

We have been unable to accept the bid from Kensington and Chelsea because it did not fully separate strategic and operational responsibilities between the council and the proposed company as required by the arm's-length principle.

Authorities to which we have been unable to make conditional allocations in round one are invited to consider applying again. The closing date for applications in round two is the end of February 2002.

Housing Stock (Radon Emissions)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many discretionary grants have been awarded for remedial work to reduce the risk from radon emissions in (a) Devon and (b) England and Wales since 1996; and what has been the total cost. [18356]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 27 November 2001]: The Government have made available to all local housing authorities in England and Wales a single capital pot of £705 million this year for housing capital expenditure purposes. Any discretionary grant given by an authority for radon remedial work will be from this source. We do not have reliable centrally collected figures on the number of such discretionary grants for this or earlier years.

Rural Public Transport

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 423W, on rural public transport, if he will list (a) the local authorities that have received local transport capital funding, (b) the organisations that received central Government funding from the Rural Bus Challenge and (c) the organisations that received support from the Rail Passenger Partnership in 2001–02. [18835]

Ms Keeble: All local highway authorities in England (outside London) are allocated funding annually for local transport capital investment through the Local Transport Plan process. The allocation of the £1.36 billion capital funding made available for local transport in 2001–02 was announced in December 2000.

The following 34 English local authorities have received funding to date in 2001–02 from the Rural Bus Challenge Fund:

Bedfordshire
Cumbria
Devon
Dorset
East Riding
East Sussex
Essex
Hampshire
Herefordshire
Hertfordshire
Kent
Lancashire
Leicestershire
Milton Keynes
Norfolk
North Lincolnshire
North Yorkshire
Northamptonshire
Northumberland
Nottinghamshire
Plymouth
Redcar and Cleveland
Shropshire
South Yorkshire
Staffordshire
Stockton-on-Tees
Suffolk
Thurrock
Torbay
Tyne and Wear
Warwickshire
West Yorkshire
Wiltshire
Worcestershire.

The Rail Passenger Partnership scheme funds partnerships that may consist of local authorities, passenger transport executives, train operators or public transport consortia. To date, for 2001–02, funding for the following 21 partnership schemes have been approved by the Strategy Rail Authority:

Vale of Glamorgan Rail Services
Anglia Service Improvement Package
Brentford Station Improvements
Taff Corridor Rolling Stock
Thornaby Station Facilities
Additional Class 333 trailer vehicles
Clitheroe and Blackburn Rail Services
Carmarthen-Milford-Haven Services
Swanage Rail Services
Haverfordwest Station Improvements
Burnham-on-Crouch Station Refurbishment
Heart of Wales Rail Services
Hexham-Carlisle Passenger Information
Waterbeach Station Facilities
Redruth Station Refurbishment
Tamar Valley (Winter Sunday Service)
Tees Valley Cycle Spaces
Liskeard Station Refurbishment
Southminster Branch Line
FGE Cycle Spaces
Traintaxi—national scheme.

Affordable Housing

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what (a) number and (b) proportion of affordable housing units (i) have been built since March 2001 and (ii) will be built by March 2002. [18788]

Ms Keeble: The number of dwellings built by registered social landlords and local authorities in England in the six months from April 2001 to September 2001 is 7,300. This figure is 11 per cent. of all dwellings built in the period. Figures on the number of dwellings built by tenure are published monthly in the Housebuilding Statistical Release. The next release, giving figures for October 2001, will be published on 6 December. Information on how many dwellings will be built by March 2002 is not available.

Small Business (Rate Relief)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps she has taken to introduce legislation to provide rate relief for small businesses on former agricultural sites. [18784]

Dr. Whitehead: Provisions for a five year 50 per cent. mandatory rate relief scheme for new small businesses on what had previously been agricultural premises are contained in the Rating (Former Agricultural Premises and Rural Shops) Act 2001. The Act covers England and Wales. The Act was commenced in England on 15 August. It has not yet been commenced in Wales, which is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Green Belt Planning Applications

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list for each of the last 10 years the number of planning applications approved in the green belt for (a) residential and (b) commercial properties for each region of England. [16631]

Ms Keeble: The information requested is not held centrally by the Department, and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Council Tax Benefit

Mr. Daisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will abolish the council tax benefit subsidy limitation scheme before the 2002–03 settlement. [18922]

Dr. Whitehead: An announcement on whether the council tax benefit subsidy limitation scheme will be operated in 2002–03 will be made as part of the statement on the provisional local government finance settlement, which will be made on Tuesday 4 December, subject to the progress of Parliamentary business.

Car Safety

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he is taking to improve the safety of cars with regard to pedestrians. [16491]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wigan (Mr. Turner) on 23 November 2001, Official Report, column 505W.

Planning Applications

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many planning applications were awaiting a decision by him on (a) the most recent date, (b) 31 December 2000, (c) 31 December 1999, (d) 31 December 1998 and (e) 31 December 1997. [19201]

Ms Keeble: Information available is in the following form.

Date	Numbers of called-in planning applications not decided[1]
31 March 1998	57
31 March 1999	19
31 March 2000	60
31 March 2001	28

[1] These figures are the difference between the number of applications called-in in the year ending 31 March and the number cases decided in that year.

Regional Assemblies

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his timetable is for elected regional assemblies in England. [19311]

Dr. Whitehead: As the Deputy Prime Minister stated in the summer, the Government intend to publish a White Paper on regional governance. This will set out our plans for taking forward the manifesto commitment on elected regional government in England and indicate a timetable for setting up the first elected assemblies.

A27

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will publish his (a) proposals and (b) timetable for road safety improvements for pedestrians at the Boundstone College crossing on the A27 at Sompting in West Sussex. [19301]

Mr. Jamieson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Tim Matthews, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Tim Waltham to Tim Loughton, dated 29 November 2001:

> The Transport Minister, David Jamieson, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the proposal and timetable for road safety improvements at the Boundstone College crossing on the A27 at Sompting.
> A Public Consultation on four options for a grade separated pedestrian facility took place at Boundstone Community College in June 1999. The results were published in July 2000, indicating that the preferred option was a footbridge for pedestrians and dismounted cyclists.
> The bridge is being designed in detail and we expect to publish details of the proposals next Summer. Progress thereafter will depend on the reaction to those proposals. Subject to that, construction could commence in 2003/04.
> If you would like further details the Project Manager, Ing Fischer, at our Dorking office would be pleased to help you. His telephone number is 01306 878362.

Registered Vehicle Keepers (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many registered vehicle keepers there are in the Buckingham constituency. [16912]

Mr. Jamieson [pursuant to his reply, 23 November 2001, c. 499W]: The number of currently licensed vehicles registered to keepers in the Buckingham constituency at December 2000 was 53,316.

Traffic Congestion

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his projections are for (a) traffic congestion, (b) the number of vehicles on the roads in the UK and (c) the number of car passenger and bus passenger miles travelled by (i) 2005, (ii) 2010 and (iii) 2020. [19302]

Mr. Jamieson: (a) "Transport 2010—The 10 Year Plan" forecasts that, as a result of the Plan, congestion in England will be some 6 per cent. lower in 2010 than in 2000. No forecasts have yet been made for 2005 or 2020.

(b) The Table shows the latest forecasts of the number of cars and light vans available to households for private use in Great Britain:

Year	Cars in GB
2000	25,127,000
2005	27,249,000
2010	29,480,000
2020	33,365,000

TEMPRO (Tripend Model Program) Version 4.1

DTLR does not make forecasts of the total number of heavy goods vehicles or buses.

(c) DTLR has not made forecasts of car or bus passenger miles.

English Partnerships

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he will review the role of English Partnerships in relation to the former new towns; [18792]

(2) if he will return the assets in new towns held by English Partnerships to local authorities; [18794]

(3) if he will ensure that regeneration of former new towns is assisted by reinvestment of assets realised by English Partnerships locally and without clawback. [18793]

Ms Keeble: A review of all English Partnerships' activities is now under way. It is, of course, considering a wide range of issues, including EP's role in the former new towns and the future ownership of land there.

I expect the first part of the review to be completed by about Christmas, with a second part, looking in more detail at the implementation of the recommendations, ready by Easter 2002.

River Thames

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what progress has been made on the recommendations made by Lord Justice Clarke to increase safety on the River Thames. [19912]

Mr. Jamieson: I have today placed in the Libraries of the House an updated summary of the action taken on each of Lord Justice Clarke's 74 recommendations.

Park Homes Working Party

Diana Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what progress he has made on his consideration of the report of the Park Homes Working Party. [20017]

Ms Keeble: I am pleased to announce today the publication of the Government's response to the report of the Park Homes Working Party, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House. The response gives a detailed response to each of the Working Party's recommendations and indicates how we intend to take them forward. It also includes a summary of the responses received to our consultation on the Working Party's report last year. The response indicates our commitment to taking forward the agenda for reform in this area, with the aim of ensuring a fair balance of interests between the rights and responsibilities of residents and site owners of park homes.

Local Government Funding (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the allocation of central Government funds to (a) Wycombe district council and (b) Buckinghamshire county council in each of the last four years. [14870]

Dr. Whitehead [pursuant to his reply, 19 November 2001, c. 40W]: The general grants (Revenue Support Grant, National Non Domestic Rates and damping grants) and ring-fenced grants for Buckinghamshire for 1989–99 was £211.229 million.

Terrorism

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what have been the estimated costs of (a) emergency planning and (b) other operations undertaken by local authorities in connection with events following the 11 September terrorist attacks; if additional costs will be supported by central Government; and if he will make a statement. [13843]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 November 2001]: Central Government have not required local authorities to do any additional emergency planning work since 11 September, but immediately reminded them that they should ensure that their emergency arrangements, including contact details, are up to date. No information is held centrally on 'other operations' which may have been undertaken by local authorities following 11 September attacks.

Subsequently, in October a "Response to the Deliberate Release of Chemicals and Biological Agents—Guidance for Local Authorities" was issued. As with any guidance issued, it inevitably requires local authorities to review their emergency arrangements, and probably revise some aspects of their plans, but this does not attract significant additional costs.

Manchester Airport

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent discussions the Government have had with FLS Aerospace about the future of their operation at Manchester Airport. [18273]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have not had any discussions with FLS Aerospace about the future of their operation at Manchester Airport.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Criminal Justice Review

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will extend the period of consultation on the criminal justice review. [19995]

Mr. Browne: In the light of representations made by the political parties and those involved in delivering criminal justice services, I have decided to extend the period of consultation on the Government's response to the criminal justice review by a further four weeks to 7 January 2002.

Police Service of Northern Ireland

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who was consulted before the proposed badges for the Police Service of Northern Ireland were designed; and at what cost. [18877]

Jane Kennedy: No one was consulted before the designs were first commissioned. The aggregate costs for the sample emblem designs were £41,329.45 (inclusive of VAT). This figure includes research, presentation materials and colour photocopying.

Decommissioning

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the next event in the decommissioning process to take place. [11993]

Jane Kennedy: The Independent International Commission on Decommissioning reported on 23 October that it had witnessed a quantity of IRA arms being put beyond use according to the terms of the decommissioning schemes and regulations. However, in the interest of furthering the process of putting all arms beyond use, the commission declined to provide further details including on the timing of further events.

The commission's mandate under the terms of the Good Friday agreement is to facilitate the decommissioning of all paramilitary arms. To that end, it reported that it is continuing contact with the IRA representative. The Government have every confidence in General de Chastelain and his colleagues and we should all respect their wishes on how best to proceed to fulfil their mandate.

RUC Policing and Human Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the attendance at the RUC policing and human rights conference broken down by (a) perceived community background, (b) gender and (c) occupation; and what was the cost of (i) organising and (ii) promoting this event. [17760]

Jane Kennedy: Approximately 230 delegates attended the policing and human rights conference on each of the two days on which the event took place (1 and 2 October). Community background information was not sought from delegates, nor were records kept of gender and occupation breakdown. However, the organisations invited to attend the conference are as listed.

In addition, community representatives from 97 per cent. of district command areas also attended.

The total cost of the conference was £57,880.

Police Informants

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the police in Northern Ireland paid to informers in the last year for which figures are available; how many informers received payments; and what the average payment made was. [17806]

Jane Kennedy: The police service of Northern Ireland does not comment on matters relating to the number of covert human intelligence sources as defined under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. However, I can say that a total of £176,580 was paid out for information received during the period 1 January 2000 to 1 January 2001.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Regulation

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the cost to businesses of regulations introduced since 1997. [16488]

Mr. Leslie: All regulatory proposals likely to have a significant cost to business require a Regulatory Impact Assessment. Prior to the introduction of the Regulatory Impact Assessment process in 1998, Cost Compliance Assessments were used. These assessments are published by Departments and are placed in the Libraries of the House.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many regulatory measures the Government (a) introduced and (b) abolished in the last year. [16474]

Mr. Leslie: During 2000, 3,487 pieces of primary and secondary legislation were introduced. Over 98 per cent. of the total relates to Statutory Instruments (SIs), the vast majority of which had only a local or temporary effect, such as routine air traffic and road closure orders. A better measure of the regulatory burden is the number of regulatory impact assessments produced by Departments for proposals imposing significant costs on business, charities or voluntary organisations. Last year, less than 5 per cent. of the total imposed significant costs.

An estimate of the total number of regulatory measures abolished in the last year could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Government are determined to minimise the burden of regulation on business and others. The Regulatory Reform Act 2001 now provides a powerful tool for reforming over-burdensome, over-complex and outdated primary legislation. The Prime Minister has asked all Departments to identify further areas of legislation that might be reformed under the Act and other procedures.

Freedom of Information Act

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on what date his Department established a working group of officials to prepare his Department for the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and on what dates this committee has met since it was set up. [14772]

Mr. Leslie: An Open Government Unit was established in the Cabinet Office early in 2000, with responsibility for the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 and other government openness initiatives within the Cabinet Office. the Unit will ensure that the Cabinet Office complies with the implementation plans set out in the paper placed in the Library of the House on 13 November 2001 by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Doncaster, Central (Ms Winterton), as stated in her answer on 13 November 2001, Official Report, column 692W.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) direct and (b) indirect involvement the Government have had in the supply of Russian weapons to (i) the Northern Alliance, (ii) its component factions and (iii) other non-state actors operating in and around Afghanistan since 11 September. [17951]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are involved in military operations in self-defence against international terrorists within Afghanistan. Information and plans about these operations are extremely sensitive, and it would not be in the public interest for them to be disclosed. In my opinion, exemptions 1*(a)* and (b) (Defence, Security and International Relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information apply here.

General Affairs Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the outcome was of the General Affairs Council held in Brussels on 19 and 20 November; what the Government's stance was on each issue discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [18019]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I represented the UK at the General Affairs Council (GAC) in Brussels on 19 November.

The GAC adopted the sixteen 'A' Points listed in document number 14061/01. It also noted the resolutions, decisions and opinions adopted by the European Parliament and in its part-session of 22–25 October 2001 in its part-session in Strasbourg listed in document number 12865/01. Copies of both documents have been placed in the Libraries of both houses.

World Trade Organisation

Following a presentation by the Commission, the Council welcomed the decision, taken at the Fourth Ministerial Conference of the WTO in Doha on 9–14 November, to launch a new round of multilateral trade negotiations.

Work in other Council Formations

The Presidency drew attention to the Secretariat's report of the main issues being discussed by other sectoral meetings of the Council of Ministers.

Enlargement

The Commission presented its Enlargement Strategy Paper and the Regular Progress Reports on the thirteen candidates. The GAC will discuss these further at its next session on 10 December in preparation for the Laeken European Council.

Future of EU

The GAC discussed, on the basis of a Presidency non-paper, preparations for a Declaration to be made at the Laeken European Council. The Presidency concluded that the Declaration would comprise three sections:

(i) a political analysis of the state of the Union, including the perceptions and expectations of public opinion;

(ii) themes for the debate on future of Europe, based on the Nice agenda, and comprising:

—European Union objectives and policies

—Demarcation of powers between the Union and its member states

—Democratic legitimacy

—the Union's capability to decide and conduct its policies

—Simplification and general presentation of the European project

(iii) the Council Decision to convoke the Convention.

The Presidency agreed to present its draft declaration to member states, taking account of their contributions, before the Presidency's pre-Laeken tour of EU capitals. The themes identified in the Presidency's draft declaration would be presented in the form of open questions.

The Presidency identified some supplementary themes, which would be points of reference for the Laeken Declaration:

—the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality;

—the legitimacy of the European Parliament, the links between it and the EU's national Parliaments and the increased role of the latter;

—preserving the acquis communautaire;

—the enhanced external dimension of the Union;

—the effectiveness of the Union's decision-making process.

Middle East Peace Process

Ministers reviewed the situation in the Middle East in the light of contracts made during:

—the EuroMed Ministerial Conference in Brussels on 5 November;

—the ministerial week of 9–16 November at the UN General Assembly; and the tour of the region by Guy Verhofstadt, Romano Prodi and Javier Solana.

Ministers also completed preparations for the Second meeting of the EU-Israel Association Council, held on 20 November in Brussels, for which the GAC adopted an EU Declaration.

Afghanistan

The GAC adopted Conclusions. These welcomed the adoption of Security Council Resolution 1378 and reiterated the EU's support for the efforts of the UN Special Representative, in particular the objective to establish rapidly a transitional administration in Afghanistan. The GAC recalled that such efforts were intended to install a legitimate, broad-based, multi-ethnic government committed to establishing human rights. The EU would continue to participate in seeking a political solution. The Union called on the Northern Alliance to exercise restraint and to facilitate the rapid establishment of a new administration which enjoyed both national and international support. Humanitarian aid remained an absolute priority and would be subject to closer co-ordination between member states, the Commission, specialist humanitarian agencies, the Afghanistan Support Group and non-governmental organisations.

While recognising the primary role of the Afghan people in determining their future, the GAC called on the UN and international financial institutions to devise a plan for the economic, social and institutional reconstruction of Afghanistan, which would help co-ordinate the efforts of the international community. The EU intended to participate actively in the meeting in Washington on 20 November.

The GAC decided it would appoint a Special Representative of Afghanistan, to work under the authority of the High Representative.

Joint meeting with defence ministers: declaration on military capabilities

In a joint meeting with defence ministers, the GAC issued a Declaration which outlined an action plan to take forward work to meet the Helsinki headline goal (the ability, by 2003, for member states to be able to deploy up to 60,000 personnel within 60 days for military crisis management operations).

Joint meeting with interior ministers: declaration on police capabilities

In a joint meeting with interior ministers the GAC adopted a Police Conference Declaration stating that the policing targets set by the Feira European Council had been met. The target was for 5,000 police officers to be available for EU and other international policing missions by 2003, including 1,000 for rapid deployment.

EU internal action following the terrorist attacks in the USA

The GAC reviewed the work conducted to date and envisaged in implementing the action plan/road map on the fight against terrorism. The Council concluded that work would continue, notably regarding: EU/third country relations, non-proliferation, disarmament, arms exports and biological and chemical terrorism. The GAC stressed that implementation of UN Security Council Resolution 1373 remained a priority. The GAC asked COREPER to examine a French proposal to create an international forum on the financing of terrorism.

Western Balkans

The GAC adopted conclusions which:

(i) urged the Serbian and Montenegrin authorities to agree quickly on constitutional arrangements, by means of a democratic and construction dialogue, which would provide for a democratic Montenegro in a democratic Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY). The GAC asked The High Representative (HR) to visit Belgrade and Podgorica to reaffirm the EU's position, promote further dialogue and report back to the next GAC on 10 December. The Council affirmed that any referendum that resulted from the current process should be conducted democratically and in accordance with the Montenegrin Constitution;

(ii) welcomed the peaceful and orderly legislative elections in Kosovo, which were an important step towards fully implementing United Nations Security Council Resolution 1244. The newly elected Kosovars should be encouraged to carry out their functions in strict compliance with the constitutional framework for provisional self-government. The GAC also called on them to co-operate fully with UNMIK and with the Belgrade authorities, in accordance with the joint document signed on 5 November 2001;

(iii) welcomed the adoption of the constitutional provisions of the Macedonia Framework Agreement of 13 August and the announcement of the new constitution by the Macedonian Parliament on 15 November. It also urged all parties to apply the Framework Agreement in its entirety without delay and to observe the cease-fire. The EU was willing to play its full part in the context of the donors' meeting, once the conditions were met.

(iv) agreed that EU would continue to play a leading role in the Stability Pact. The Pact's activities ought to be based on the principles of concentration/refocusing and regional appropriation. The GAC stressed the importance of enhancing the complementarity between the Pact and the Stabilisation and Association Process. The GAC emphasised that the impetus for regional co-operation must come from the region itself.

Africa: Great Lakes and Etritrea

The GAC discussed the Ministerial troika mission to the Great Lakes Region to take place on 20–25 November. The GAC confirmed its support for the Lusaka process (concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC)) and for the holding of the Congolese dialogue under the Lusaka Agreement. It also welcomed the adoption of UN Security Council Resolution 1376 and endorsed the requests made to States which had still begun to withdraw their forces from the DRC in accordance with Resolution 1304.

The GAC also welcomed the donor information conference for the DRC to be held in Brussels on 20 December on the initiative of the World bank, further to the donor information conference held in Paris in July. It welcomed the meeting to be held in Brussels on 21 December, which would give impetus to the establishment of a regional trust fund for DDRRR (Disarmament, demobilisation, reintegration, resettlement and relocation).

The GAC welcomed the swearing in of a transitional government in Burundi on 1 November (in line with the Arusha process). The Council expressed its deep concern about the recent upsurge of violence and strongly condemned the attacks on the health centres and the kidnapping of schoolchildren by armed groups. The GAC recalled that it had adopted a Joint Action and released EUR 9.5 million to support the deployment of a special protection unit, provisionally composed of a South African battalion, and called again on the international community to contribute to that unit's funding. The GAC welcomed the Commission's signing of the National Indicative Programme on EU aid for Burundi.

The GAC welcomed the agreement between Presidents Museveni and Kagame of Rwanda and Uganda brokered by the United Kingdom, which aimed to reduce the sources of tension between the two countries and thus contribute to the region's stability. The Council also adopted an updated common position on Rwanda, further to that of September 2000. The Ministerial troika visit the region on 20–25 November would provide an opportunity to assess support in the States concerned for organising a Great Lakes Conference, under the aegis of the United Nations and African Union, once the Lusaka and Arusha peace processes had progressed sufficiently.

The GAC expressed deep concern at the situation in Eritrea, in particular persistent infringements of opposition rights, curbs on press freedom and the lack of information on the prominent figures who had been detained. It regretted that no solution had yet been found to the problem of the expulsion of the Italian Ambassador to Asmara, who was the representative of the European Union. It also regretted that the Eritrean Head of State, Mr. Isayas Afewerki, had not received the European Union Heads of Mission. The GAC said that talks should take place rapidly, in line with the Cotonou Agreement. These should address the EU's concerns, and set a timetable for the organisation of free and fair elections. The GAC noted that the relevant Council Bodies were examining the possible practical implications for EU aid if the current situation were to continue.

Overseas Countries and Territories (OCTs)

The GAC agreed a new Decision on the association of the overseas countries and territories with the European Community for the period 2001–07. This will result in increased EU aid for the UK's overseas territories.

Presidency meetings with EU institutions' Trade Unions

The Presidency briefed on its recent meetings with the EU Trade Unions. The meetings had covered the issues the Unions wanted the GAC to take into consideration when it addressed the Commission's personnel policy reform programme next year.

Voting Record

No formal votes were taken on the points under discussion at the GAC.

Espionage

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the imprisonment of 12 UK citizens in Greece on alleged espionage charges. [18388]

Mr. Bradshaw: Twelve British and two Dutch nationals were arrested on 8 November in Kalamata airbase after allegedly taking photographs at the base. Such photography is illegal in Greece. The group were charged with espionage on 12 November. They appeared before an Investigating Magistrate on 27 November when further espionage charges were laid.

Following the hearing on 27 November, the group was remanded in custody. They will now appear in front of a three strong panel of judges in Kalamata. We hope this will take place as quickly as possible. This hearing will not be a trial as such but is a review mechanism within the Greek justice system.

The British plane spotters and their families were naturally disappointed that the case did not conclude on 27 November. So were we. We are talking to the Greek authorities to request that all avenues are pursued to ensure that the review takes place very quickly. Our objective remains to ensure proper conditions for the detainees and a speedy and transparent judicial process.

Weapons

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries his Department has assessed as seeking to make (a) nuclear, (b) biological and (c) chemical weapons. [18260]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is not Government policy to comment on specific intelligence matters or assessment.

Iraq and Iran

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether (a) Iraq and (b) Iran have covertly produced biological weapons. [18268]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is not Government policy to comment on specific intelligence assessments. However, with reference to Iraq, I refer the hon. Member to the answer which the Prime Minister gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 5 November 2001, Official Report, column 6W.

EU Treaties

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the areas under the third pillar of the EU treaties to which co-decision with the European Parliament (a) applies and (b) does not apply. [18440]

Peter Hain: The third pillar, or Title VI of the Treaty on European Union, contains provisions for co-operation between member states in the fields of police and judicial co-operation in criminal matters. There are no areas under the third pillar to which co-decision with the European Parliament applies. However, within Title VI, under Article 39(1) of the Treaty on European Union, the Council is required to consult the European Parliament before adopting any measure referred to in Article 34(2)(b), (c) and (d). These measures are:

> framework decisions for the purpose of approximation of the laws and regulations of the member states;
> decisions for any other purpose consistent with the objectives of Title VI; and > conventions which the Council shall recommend to member states for adoption in accordance with their respective constitutional requirements.

Article 39(2) requires the Presidency and Commission regularly to inform the European Parliament of discussions in the areas covered by Title VI. Article 39(3) says that the European Parliament may ask questions of the Council or make recommendations to it, and that each year it shall hold a debate on progress made in the areas referred to in Title VI.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit the Joint Entry Clearance Unit. [18735]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right hon. Friend has not yet visited the Joint Entry Clearance Unit, but he does plan to visit Departments of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office that he has not yet seen. As Minister responsible for entry clearance I visited the Joint Entry Clearance Unit on 12 June.

Visa Cases

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 16 July 2001, Official Report, column 45W, on visa cases, when it became the practice not to disclose details of individual visa cases in a public forum; and for what reason. [18628]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is a well-established general practice not to disclose the names of applicants or details of individual visa applications on confidentiality grounds. This practice is in accordance with Exemption 12 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information and reflects the Government's obligations under the Data Protection Act 1998. I refer my hon. Friend to his answer of 22 March 2001, Official Report, columns 316–17W.

Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many formal notices his Department has received in the last year from the

Parliamentary Ombudsman expressing an intention to carry out an investigation; and in respect of each notice how long it took to respond. [18763]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Information on the outcome of statutory investigations which were concluded during 2000–01 are set out in the Parliamentary Ombudsman's Annual Report for 2000–01, copies of which are available in the Library of the House, or on the Parliamentary Ombudsman's website at www.ombudsman.org.uk/pca/document/para01/index/htm.

Between 1 April 2001 and 31 October 2001, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office received 13 new statutory statements of complaint from the Parliamentary Ombudsman. The FCO responded to them all; in 11 cases the FCO met the agreed deadline set by the Ombudsman's office; while in the other two, the deadline was missed by one day.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Zimbabwe; and what steps he will take to ensure (a) the conditions of the land reform deal negotiated at Abuja, Nigeria are honoured and (b) the criteria for Commonwealth membership are maintained. [18255]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 28 November 2001]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 27 November 2001, Official Report, columns 815–18.

Gibraltar

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure that Gibraltarians can vote in the 2004 elections to the European Parliament. [19998]

Peter Hain: We unequivocally accept the obligation to give effect to the judgment of the European Court of Human Rights in the case of Matthews v. UK and we are committed to extending the European franchise in time for the 2004 elections to the European Parliament. To this end, we will be seeking legislative time in order to bring in the necessary domestic legislation. We will, of course, consult the Government of Gibraltar on the legislative and practical details.

Andorra

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings he has held with the joint sovereigns of Andorra in the last three years, with specific reference to the use of Andorra as a route for smuggling into the UK. [19133]

Peter Hain: The Secretary of State has not had any formal bilaterals with the French President and/or the Bishop of Urgell in the last three years. Officials have met regularly with Andorran parliamentarians and officials during the last three years to discuss issues of mutual interest.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Sport England (Athletics)

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what targets her Department has set Sport England for the funding of athletics; and if she will make a statement; [17945]

(2) what plans she has to direct Sport England to divert the resources earmarked for the 2005 World Athletics Championships to the development of grassroots athletics; and if she will make a statement. [17943]

Mr. Caborn: The UK's offer to stage the World Athletics Championship in Sheffield in 2005 has not been accepted by the International Association of Athletic Federations. Sport England will therefore reallocate the lottery funds originally earmarked in principle for staging the Championships to other projects to benefit grassroots sport including athletics in particular.

UK Athletics, Sport England and officials from my Department are co-operating to produce an agreed development plan for athletics which aims to increase the number of people involved in the sport as competitors, organisers, coaches and officials; to improve systems for identifying and developing talent; provide better facilities; and strengthen support for our top competitors. Details of the plan are under discussion and will be published in the near future.

Tourism

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to bring the level of Government grant-in-aid to the English Tourist Council into line with that to the Scottish, Wales and Northern Ireland tourist boards. [18416]

Dr. Howells: Government aid to the Scottish Tourist Board, the Wales Tourist Board and the Northern Ireland Tourist Board per head of the population has always been much higher than that to the English Tourism Council (ETC) over the last decade. Each administration now makes its own decisions on funding that take into account local conditions and needs and the extent to which financial support is needed to address market failure in different parts of the country.

Direct comparisons of Government grant do not, of course, provide the whole answer. In England, the local authorities also spend over £90 million each year promoting tourism. DCMS's £1 billion expenditure on arts, museums, galleries, sport etc. also directly benefits tourism. In addition, Government funding to English tourism is set to increase from £10 million in 2001–02 to £12 million in 2002–03 and £12.5 million in 2003–04. Visitor spending in England is higher, at £222 per head of the population, than that in Scotland (£160 per head) or Wales (£92 per head) and total spending by tourists in England has grown faster in recent years.

Cunningham Review

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the recommendations of the Cunningham Review which have not been accepted by her Department. [18485]

Mr. Caborn: The recommendations set out in the Elite Sports Funding Review are directed at both the Sports Councils and my Department. Implementation of many of the recommendations is already being progressed by the Sports Councils in co-operation with the national governing bodies of sport. The remaining recommendations are being carefully considered within the context of my Department's spending review.

Lottery Funding

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how indoor sports facilities will be affected in the West Midlands by the New Opportunities for School and Community Sports Lottery funds. [18338]

Mr. Caborn: £61,274,000 has been provisionally allocated to local areas in the West Midlands and the large majority of this funding will be used to provide new or modernised sports facilities. The proportion of this funding used for indoor and outdoor facilities will be decided by local partnerships led by LEAs, as they develop bids that best meet local priorities and strategies.

Derek Casey

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the redundancy payment to Derek Casey, former Chief Executive Officer of Sport England. [19084]

Mr. Caborn: Full details of the severance package for the former Chief Executive of Sport England will be disclosed in Sport England's accounts which will be laid before the House as soon as possible.

International Association of Athletic Federations

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which Ministers represented her Department at the IAAF Annual Award ceremony in Monte Carlo on 25 November. [19083]

Mr. Caborn: No Minister from this Department attended this event.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Departmental Press Notices

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the press notices issued by her predecessors on each day between 10 September and 10 October 2000 on subjects which are the responsibility of her Department. [8944]

Mr. Morley: During the period from 10 September to 10 October 2000, a total of 38 press releases were issued by the MAFF press office. I have also established that the environment and rural affairs press group issued 12 press releases for this period while part of DETR.

The press releases are in the public domain and can be found on the following websites:

www.defra.gov.uk
www.dtlr.gov.uk
www.home.office.gov.uk

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the press notices issued by her Department on each day between 10 September and 10 October. [8943]

Mr. Morley: During the period from 10 September to 10 October 2001, a total of 45 press releases were issued by the DEFRA press office.

Please note that this included 33 press releases from activities formerly identified as MAFF related and 12 press releases from the recently merged environment press office, now part of the DEFRA press office.

These press releases are in the public domain and can be found on the following websites:

www.defra.gov.uk
www.dtlr.gov.uk
www.home.office.gov.uk

Departmental Procurement

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the Government's procurement policy and what plans there are for Departments to join together to (a) reduce procurement costs, (b) increase efficiency and (c) operate green procurement policies. [16744]

Mr. Morley: The Government's procurement policy is that all public procurement of goods and services is to be based on value for money, having due regard to propriety and regularity. Value for money is not the lowest price—it is defined as the optimum combination of whole life costs and quality to meet the user's requirement. The Office of Government Commerce (OGC) was created to lead a wide-ranging programme to modernise procurement in central civil Government. DEFRA is supportive of and committed fully to working with the OGC in delivering this wide-ranging programme. One of the areas in which OGC is encouraging a joined-up approach is in the aggregation of requirements and wider use of existing agreements. This will make a significant contribution to (a) reducing procurement costs and (b) increased efficiency.

With regard to (c) the joint HM Treasury/DETR (now DEFRA) note, on environmental issues in purchasing, explains how Departments can pursue their "green" strategies within the above procurement policy framework. In particular, it explains how environmental issues can be reflected in specifications.

Bio-security

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what plans the Government have to improve national bio-security; how much money is allocated to target (a) airports and (b) containers arriving in ports in the current financial year; [16944]

(2) what changes have been made to increase bio-security in the UK since 2000; [16945]

(3) what action is planned by the Government to prevent the entry of potentially infected illegal meat into the United Kingdom. [16956]

Mr. Morley: All consignments of fresh meat imported into the UK from other EU member states must have been produced in accordance with the harmonised Community rules laid down in Council directive 64/433/EEC. Imports from third countries must have been produced to standards at least equivalent to those in the directive. Among other things, this directive sets out the licensing, structural and veterinary supervision requirements to be applied in abattoirs, cutting plants and cold stores.

All meat imported into the UK from third countries must enter at designated UK border inspection posts (BIPs) where it is subject to veterinary inspections. All consignments are subject to documentary and identity checks and at least 20 per cent. of consignments undergo physical checks. These ensure import conditions are met and that the products remain in a satisfactory condition during transport. In line with Community rules, random spot checks at destination may be carried out on consignments of fresh meat imported into the UK from other EU member states.

New arrangements have been introduced across all enforcement agencies involved to improve the sharing and analysis of information about known or suspected illegal imports. We are building up a database of details which is enabling us to target enforcement action and to make best use of available resources. Our national regulations have also been amended to assist local authorities in seizing suspected illegal imports when they are found at point of sale. The Food Standards Agency is also encouraging local authorities to ensure that checking for illegal imports is part of their routine inspection of food premises.

Alongside this we have introduced improved publicity to ensure that travellers are aware of the restrictions on what may be imported. Posters have been placed at main airports and we have asked UK travel agents and airlines using UK airports to make information about import controls available to travellers. Recognising that it is most effective to inform travellers before they leave for their journey to the UK, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been active via British embassies abroad, providing information directly to travellers and via travel agents and local media.

We are keeping these measures under review and will make improvements as necessary. In addition, we are looking at a wide range of other options to ensure the rules on imports are enforced effectively and efficiently. These include, for example, the possible use of sniffer dogs and x-ray machines at ports and airports and changes to administrative structures.

Apart from a small number of ports that import only animal products not intended for human consumption where import controls are operated by the state veterinary service, local authorities are responsible for controls at ports in their areas and the financial information requested is not held centrally.

We are taking every opportunity to drive home the importance of observing high standards of bio-security on and around farms. We have used interviews in the national and local media and placed advertisements in the local and farming press. We have produced a video demonstrating a practical approach to bio-security. This has been made available to all livestock farmers and others in the industry, accompanied by a leaflet and letter from Jim Scudamore, the chief veterinary officer. Special bio-security arrangements have been applied within restricted infected areas and subject to stringent enforcement.

In the Animal Health Bill currently before Parliament, we are emphasising the importance of bio-security by linking the payment of compensation on infected premises to compliance with disease control measures. In addition, recommendations on future national bio-security measures may emerge from the independent inquiries into foot and mouth established by the Government.

Growth Promoters

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the growth promoters that are permitted to be given to (a) pigs, (b) poultry and (c) other farm animals. [17413]

Mr. Morley: The following growth promoters are authorised under directive 70/524/EEC to be used as feed additives for pigs, poultry and other farm animals:

(a) Pigs

(i) Flavophospholipol

(ii) Salinomycin sodium

(iii) Avilamycin

(b) Poultry

Laying hens, turkeys, other poultry excluding ducks, geese, pigeons—Flavophospholipol

Chickens for fattening, turkeys—Avilamycin

(c) Other farm animals

Calves, rabbits, cattle for fattening—Flavophospholipol

Animals bred for fur, excluding rabbits—Flavophospholipol

Cattle for fattening—Monensin Sodium.

Spanish Fishermen (Compensation)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason and how much EU compensation is being paid in this financial year to Spanish fishermen for loss of fishing opportunities in Morocco; what the UK contribution is to this compensation; and what EU compensation is to be paid to British fishermen for loss of fishing opportunities under Cod Preservation plans. [17306]

Mr. Morley: The European Council, at its meeting in Nice in December 2000, asked the Commission if it did not prove possible to conclude a future fisheries agreement with the Kingdom of Morocco to propose, keeping within the financial perspective, a specific action programme for restructuring the Community fleet which had fished within the framework of the old agreement.

Now that negotiations between the EU and Morocco on a new agreement have failed, the proposal before the Council of Fisheries Ministers on 27 November would provide 197 million euros of new Community money, over two years, towards the restructuring of the fleets concerned, which are Spanish and Portuguese. We have made sure in negotiating that the terms of the measures are aimed at achieving real restructuring which avoids diversion of effort to Community waters.

This measure will not increase the UK's contribution to the EU budget.

No EU compensation has been paid to British fishermen as a result of recovery measures to protect cod stocks. I would find it difficult in principle to justify making compensation payments for a decline in stocks, particularly when the cause of the problem could relate to overfishing, or for conservation measures put in place to improve stocks and fishing opportunities in the future.

However, in order to promote the restructuring of the UK fleet, decommissioning schemes totalling £36 million are currently in place in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Sheep Brains (Testing)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the level of testing of sheep brains for BSE and scrapie; and when she expects to publish the results of the next round of testing. [18209]

Mr. Morley: Between November 2000 and the end of September 2001, 465 sheep scrapie suspects have been tested at the VLA. 284 were found to be positive for scrapie; none have given results indicative of BSE. The Department is also strain-typing, using mouse bioassay, brains from scrapie-infected sheep collected since 1996. In about 180 cases, experiments have reached the first point at which, if BSE was clearly present, it might have become apparent. It has not done so, although the work is still on-going and experiments cannot therefore be interpreted as excluding the presence of BSE. It is likely to require several more years before the strains can be definitively identified. The outcome of all investigations, whether research or surveillance, are kept under continual review, and guidance sought from SEAC where necessary. We will continue to put all our research into the public domain at the earliest opportunity.

In the new year, the Department will be launching an abattoir survey and a fallen stock survey to test for TSEs, including scrapie, some 23,000 sheep aged over 18 months. This is part of an EU-wide programme designed to give information on the incidence of scrapie and other TSEs in the European Union. Quantitative data in terms of numbers of animals tested, and number positive, will be reported regularly to the European Commission in accordance with our statutory obligations. This information will also be put in the public domain. Qualitative analysis, whether in terms of the prevalence of scrapie infection in the population sampled, or the nature of any scrapie identified, will under normal circumstances require completion of the survey, and possible further investigations.

Sheep/Lamb Industry

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will make a statement for the forecast level of the ewe premium for 2001; [18207]

(2) what assessment she has made of (a) the future of the European Union's sheepmeat regime and (b) the prospects for the United Kingdom's sheep and lamb industry; and if she will make a statement on the Council of Ministers meeting on 20 November. [18204]

Mr. Morley: The European Commission has made forecasts of the final rate of the ewe premium during the course of the year to enable advances of the premium to be paid; its most recent forecast is for a final rate of 10.779 euros. However, the final rate of the premium will not finally be determined until the average community market price for sheepmeat for the marketing year is known.

The European Commission has proposed a number of changes to the sheepmeat regime. These include replacement of the current deficiency-type premium calculation with a fixed rate premium of 21 euro with effect from 2002. The proposals were considered by the Agriculture Council on 20 November and I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Clydesdale (Mr. Hood) on 26 November 2001, Official Report, column 690W.

Foot and Mouth

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will grant a right for farmers to appeal against the slaughter of stock thought to be infected with foot and mouth before they are killed. [18065]

Mr. Morley: If a farmer does not agree with the decision to cull his stock, he has the right to make representations to the district veterinary manager.

This right is not affected by the Animal Health Bill currently before Parliament.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to make insurance against outbreaks of foot and mouth disease compulsory for livestock farmers. [19247]

Mr. Morley: The Department is continuing to study the options for insurance against the consequences of outbreaks of livestock diseases.

Late Payments

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the industrial action by her Department's civil servants has led to a backlog in processing (a) IACS payments and (b) compensation payments; and if the Government will pay interest to farmers affected by late payments. [18295]

Mr. Morley: Industrial action by PCS members has affected the Department's ability to process payments as normal, although every effort continues to be made to make payments within the appropriate time scales. It is not Government policy to pay compensation for payments which might miss payment deadlines because of industrial action.

Sheep Annual Premium

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what representations she has received with regard to the level of sheep annual premium for the forthcoming year; [18084]

(2) when she expects to announce the level of sheep annual premium for the forthcoming year. [18085]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 26 November 2001]: We have received a number of representations on the European Commission's proposal to replace the current deficiency-type premium calculation with a flat rate premium of 21 euro with effect from 2002. Under the Commission's proposals, member states would be able to pay the flat rate from 16 October 2002.

The proposals were considered by the Agriculture Council on 20 November. No agreement was reached at that meeting and we expect that discussions will resume in the Council in December.

Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many formal notices her Department has received in the last year from the parliamentary ombudsman expressing an intention to carry out an investigation; and in respect of each notice how long it took to respond. [18765]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Information on the outcome of statutory investigations which were concluded during 2000–01 are set out in the parliamentary ombudsman's annual report for 2000–01, copies of which are available in the Library of the House, or on the parliamentary ombudsman's website at www.ombudsman.org.uk/pca/document/par01/index.htm

Between 8 June 2001 (the date on which the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs was set up) and 31 October 2001, the Department received one new statutory statement of complaint from the parliamentary ombudsman. The time taken to respond was 28 days.

Rural Affairs

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what was spent on (a) the England rural development programme, (b) the farm business advisory service and (c) other services for farmers in 2001–02. [18836]

Alun Michael: (a) Expenditure on the England rural development programme from 16 October 2000 to 15 October 2001 (the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund financial year) amounted to £125,931,200.00 The figure excludes state aid and modulation.

(b) DEFRA is invoiced quarterly in arrears by the small business service for delivery of the farm business advice service. The amount invoiced at the end of September for work carried out in this financial year was £1.3 million. This figure was lower than anticipated due to the temporary suspension of the service and restricted access to farms as a result of the foot and mouth disease outbreak. Current forecast expenditure for the whole of 2001–02, based on business link service delivery predictions, is £11.55 million.

(c) Figures on expenditure on other services to farmers in 2001–02 are not held centrally due to the number and variety of sources of assistance available.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farm businesses received regional development agency support in 2001–02, stating in each case the level of funding made available. [18681]

Alun Michael: This information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) people have been helped by the England rural development programme by category and (b) farmers have received free consultancy advice from the farm business advisory service. [18785]

Alun Michael: (a) 3,924 new land based agreements were signed under the England rural development programme (ERDP) for the scheme year 2000–01. Of these, 2,572 were agri-environment scheme agreements, and 1,352 related to afforestation and other forestry measures. Around 10,500 claims for support were paid in 2001 to upland farmers under the hill farm allowance, which is also part of the ERDP.

Three new rural economy schemes were introduced in October 2000 under the ERDP: the rural enterprise scheme (RES), the processing and marketing grant (PMG) and the vocational training scheme (VTS). These schemes operate on a competitive basis and are designed to support rural enterprises and rural services. Up to the end of October 2001, 136 RES projects had been approved at a total grant value of some £8 million. Over the same period, 20 PMG projects and 72 VTS projects were approved, representing a further £5 million and £2 million respectively of grant expenditure.

Foot and mouth disease had a marked effect on delivery of the ERDP, but a number of initiatives intended to minimise the impact have been or are being pursued, including extended application windows for the land based schemes.

(b) Over the year since the farm business advice service was launched in October 2000 until the end of September 2001, 7,613 farms requested the service, 4,637 farms received an initial diagnostic visit and 2,851 farms received the full three-day service resulting in an action plan.

Farmers throughout England directly affected by the foot and mouth outbreak were invited to apply for the enhanced five-day service at the end of August 2001. By the end of September, 1,146 farmers had registered for the enhanced service and 319 had received an initial visit.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the extent to which delivery has been achieved on (a) provision of new service standards, (b) additional sure start schemes and (c) increasing police visibility and accessibility in rural areas. [18787]

Alun Michael: (a) The rural services standard set out in the rural White Paper brings together standards and targets from a range of rural services. It is our intention to review and update this standard annually starting in 2002.

(b) Sure start aims to support young children and their families living in disadvantaged areas so that they have improved life chances. To date the Government have announced 437 out of the 500 sure start programmes planned to be operational by April 2004. In addition to the 500 full-scale sure start programmes, £22 million has been allocated to establish 50 small sure start programmes to reach pockets of deprivation, particularly those in rural areas. The third round of pilot projects began in seven rural districts at the end of July, and it is expected that the fourth round of pilots, which will involve a further six rural districts, will commence at the end of November.

(c) Police authorities were required to report in annual policing performance plans how they spent the extra £15 million (2000–01) and how they intended to spend the additional £30 million (2001–02) on improving policing services in rural areas. In addition chief constables are required to outline in their annual report what measures have been taken to improve visibility and accessibility in each ward and parish in their force area. These publications can be found on individual police force websites.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the (a) funds available in the Countryside Agency grant scheme for village services launched in April and (b) proportion spent through the scheme in 2000–01. [18790]

Alun Michael: The funds allocated to each of the schemes in the Countryside Agency's vital village programme are:

	£ million
Parish Plans	[1]5
Community Service Grant	[1]15
Parish Transport Grant	[1]15

[1] Over three years

The vital villages programme only started in 2001–02 so expenditure was zero in 2000–01.

Fisheries Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the outcome was of the Fisheries Council held in Brussels on 27 November; what the Government's stance was on each issue discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [19644]

Mr. Morley: I represented the UK at the Fisheries Council on 27 November.

The Council discussed the Commission's proposal to extend the multi-annual guidance programme (MAGP IV) for one year until the end of 2002, and will return to the subject at its next meeting.

The Council reached political agreement on rules for the restructuring of the Spanish and Portuguese fleets which used to fish in Moroccan waters. Many of the vessels in these fleets have been tied up in port since December 1999, when the EU-Morocco fisheries agreement expired. The rules govern the use of the 197 million euros which have been allocated to fund, during 2002 and 2003, the destruction of vessels, conversion to non-fishing uses, export of vessels to third countries and conversion of vessels to other fishing methods. The UK and a number of other member states made it clear that they expect Spain and Portugal to ensure that vessels modernised with EU money under the measure will not fish in EU waters.

There was a qualified majority in the Council in favour of a decision applying provisionally the renewed EU-Mauritania fisheries agreement, whose predecessor expired on 31 July 2001. The agreement provides for fishing opportunities in Mauritanian waters over five years at a cost of 86 million euros per year. Along with a number of other member states the UK, in supporting the proposal, made clear that we consider there is substantial room for improvement in the way that such agreements are negotiated and monitored: I stressed in particular the need to make sure that they provide value for money, promote environmentally sustainable fishing and are coherent with Community development policy. I made it clear that we are looking for a thorough debate, within the framework of the forthcoming review of the common fisheries policy, on the handling of such agreements.

The Council noted the Commission's report on the monitoring of implementation of the CFP and the Commission's communication on serious infringements of the CFP rules during 2000. The Commission urged greater consistency among member states on matters such as the size of penalties.

The Council also noted the difficulties being experienced by the Commission in reaching agreement in the Community's negotiations with Norway, Iceland, the Faroes, Greenland and Russia about fixing and allocating the total allowable catch for blue whiting in 2002. There was agreement that the Community should continue to argue for a responsible approach to exploiting this pressurised stock.

The Council was given an indication by the Commissioner of how he intends to launch his proposals for reforming the common fisheries policy. He intends to bring this forward in the form of a number of separate legislative proposals in the course of 2002. He intends to start by launching a "road map" of the Commission's plans in the new year, once the European Parliament has delivered its opinion on the Commission's Green Paper on the CFP review. The Commission then envisages that there might be an orientation debate at the Council in April, with subsequent Councils considering different elements of the legislative proposals.

The Commission and the Presidency both urged member states which had not yet completed their national procedures for ratifying the UN Straddling Stocks agreement to do so as soon as possible. This is required so that the EU can ratify the agreement which will now be entering into force in December.

Cattle Auctions

Jim Knight: to ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when auction markets for cattle will be restored in (a) Dorset and (b) areas that have been spared infection by foot and mouth disease. [16308]

Mr. Morley: A decision to reopen auction markets in Dorset or elsewhere in England and Wales will be made in the light of scientific and veterinary advice on progress with the eradication of FMD. It is not possible to state a precise time but it is expected to be in the early part of 2002, provided there are no further outbreaks.

Flood Defence

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list for each of the last 10 financial years the Government's annual expenditure on flood prevention and flood defences. [16633]

Mr. Morley: Flood defence is provided by the Environment Agency, local authorities and internal drainage boards. The great majority of their expenditure is provided by Government in the form of DEFRA grant (which is used by local authorities to fund levies to the Environment Agency, special levies to internal drainage boards and to finance their own spend on flood and coastal defence). The following table sets out total Government funding of flood and coastal defence for the last 10 years:

	£ million
1991–92	269.6
1992–93	279.7
1993–94	277.0
1994–95	274.0
1995–96	272.3
1996–97	309.7
1997–98	312.4
1998–99	315.9
1999–2000	326.3
2000–01	[1]328.5

[1] Information updated since response to the answer given to the hon. Member for Mid-Bedfordshire (Mr. Sayeed) on 9 November 2001, Official Report, column 451W.

Total expenditure is budgeted to increase to some £377 million in the current financial year and forecast to increase further to £393 million in 2002–03 and £414 million in 2003–04.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to announce the results of her review into the financial and institutional arrangements governing flood defence matters; and if she will make a statement. [19088]

Mr. Morley: The conclusions of the review of flood and coastal defence funding arrangements will be published soon and will coincide with the initiation of a public consultation on recommendations in the report.

Countryside Visits

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 425W, on countryside visits, how many people visited the countryside in (a) 1996 and (b) 1998. [18834]

Alun Michael: The United Kingdom leisure day visits survey shows that in 1996 there were 1,302 million day visits and in 1998 there were 1,253 million day visits to the countryside. Figures are not available for the number of different people who visited the countryside.

Ash Moor, Petrockstowe

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what microbiological studies have been carried out in relation to Ash Moor Petrockstowe; and if she will place the studies in the Library. [19136]

Mr. Morley: There is no requirement to include microbiological studies within an environmental impact assessment and none were carried out at Ash Moor.

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the grid references are of the site on which a geological survey was carried out in relation to Ash Moor Petrockstowe and if she will place the survey in the Library. [19138]

Mr. Morley: The draft environmental impact assessment on the Ash Moor mass burial site includes the appropriate information on the hydrology, geology and hydrogeology of the site. The information will be included in the final published text.

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the environmental impact assessment in relation to Ash Moor Petrockstowe; and if she will revoke the decision to allow the site to be brought into use for the disposal of animal carcases. [19135]

Mr. Morley: The draft environmental impact assessment on the Ash Moor mass burial site is currently the subject of consultation with interested bodies. The final text will be published in the usual way. There are no current plans to use the Ash Moor site for the disposal of animal carcases.

Market Towns

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list (a) the level of funds available for the regeneration programme for the next three years, (b) the number of market towns that have received support in 2001–02 and (c) the number of market towns, as defined by the Government. [18786]

Alun Michael: From next April regional development agencies will make their forward spending plans within single budgets covering all their activities, rather than in several separate programme budgets. Rural regeneration budgets will no longer be separately identified within regional development agency total budgets. However regional development agencies must identify key planned rural outputs, and will in due course be able to report in arrears on actual expenditure in rural areas.

Rate Relief (Village Businesses)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to introduce legislative proposals to extend the mandatory rate relief scheme for village shops to (a) small food shops, (b) pubs and (c) petrol filling stations. [18789]

Alun Michael: The village shop rate relief scheme was extended to include pubs and petrol stations in April 2001. Under the scheme, the sole village pub or petrol station with a rateable value of £9,000 or less in a qualifying settlement, is eligible to receive 50 per cent. rate relief from central Government. Local authorities have the power to top the relief up to 100 per cent.

In August, a rate relief scheme for farm diversification and village food shops was introduced. Under the scheme, mandatory 50 per cent. rate relief will be provided to all food shops with a rateable value below £6,000 in designated villages of less than 3,000 population.

Councils still have the discretion to give up to 100 per cent. relief to any business in a settlement which is eligible for the rate relief scheme with a rateable value below £12,000.

Town and Parish Councils

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which town and parish councils have received financial assistance for (a) training and (b) preparation of local plans in 2001–02, stating in each case the level of funding made available. [18791]

Alun Michael: (a) The Countryside Agency, in consultation with the National Association of Local Councils, is still in the process of working up a national training strategy for town and parish councils. No parish or town council has therefore received funding for training from the Countryside Agency.

(b) The parish plans grant scheme was launched in April this year. The target is to have 1,000 communities producing town or parish plans by 2004.

The maximum level of grant available is £5,000 to cover 75 per cent. of the costs of producing the plan. To date, 243 parish and town councils have registered an interest to produce a plan and 72 have been made a formal offer of grant. Grant is paid out against actual expenditure but applicants can claim an "up front payment" of 25 per cent. of their grant application to help them get started.

Food and Farming Policy

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects the Policy Commission on Food and Farming to report. [20224]

Margaret Beckett: The independent Policy Commission was tasked in the summer with reporting to the Government by the end of this year. The commission is making good progress and will complete the bulk of its work in that timetable, but it will now deliver its final report by the end of January 2002.

Sheep Brain Experiment

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the reports of audits she has commissioned into the sheep brain pool experiment at the Institute for Animal Health. [20225]

Margaret Beckett: I have now received the reports of the two independent auditors, the UK Accreditation Service (UKAS) and Risk Solutions. I intend to publish them, along with a response from the Institute for Animal Health to the issues raised in the audits, at 9.30 am tomorrow (30 November) and will make the documents available to hon. Members through the Vote Office and Libraries.

National Forest (East Midlands)

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will report on the National Forest Company's progress in creating the National Forest in the east midlands. [19997]

Mr. Morley: I have arranged for copies of the National Forest Company's annual report and its accounts for 2000–01 to be placed in the House Libraries.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimates she has made of the increase in the use of recycled aggregate as a consequence of the introduction of the aggregates levy. [17925]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 27 November 2001]: I have been asked to reply.

The increase in the use of recycled aggregates as a consequence of the introduction of the aggregates levy cannot be predicted with certainty. The size of any change will depend on how the producers and consumers of aggregate respond to the levy and to consequent changes in prices, in both the short and longer term. The regulatory impact assessment prepared in 2000 to accompany the proposal for the levy noted that, using the short run elasticities produced by ECOTEC for the Quarry Products Association in 1998, a best estimate of the impact of a £1.60 levy on the demand for primary aggregates would be a reduction of around 10 per cent. of production or, currently, about 24 million tonnes per year. Alternative materials, including recycled aggregate, would replace some of this reduced production, and less aggregate would be required as a result of increased efficiency and a reduction in waste of all aggregates in construction and manufacturing processes. At any level of production, the levy should encourage a shift away from virgin aggregate towards alternative materials such as recycled aggregate.

Salmon Farming

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of salmon farming on the environment; and if she will make a statement. [13869]

Mrs. Liddell: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for this matter rests with the Scottish Executive. I understand however that the key issues of concern have been identified and a range of actions designed to tackle them have been embarked upon.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Court of Appeal

Mr. Miller: To ask the Solicitor-General how many references there have been to the Court of Appeal under section 36 of the Criminal Justice Act 1972 since 1972. [18302]

The Solicitor-General: By virtue of section 36 of the Criminal Justice Act 1972, the Attorney-General may seek the opinion of the Court of Appeal on a point of law arising out of any trial on indictment where there has been an acquittal. Since 1972, there have been at least 56 Attorney-General's references where the Court of Appeal has given its opinion on a point of law. The figures for the last few years are as shown.

1998: 2

1999: 2

2000: 5

2001: 2.

HEALTH

Health Care Rationing

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the extent of health care rationing. [11093]

Mr. Hutton: Patients continue to be assessed on the basis of clinical need, and it has been repeatedly made clear that those patients in clearest need will be treated as a matter of priority, regardless of any other factors. The National Institute for Clinical Excellence and the Committee for Health Improvement have been set up to ensure a faster more uniform uptake of treatments which work for the patient. In addition to this the NHS Plan sets out a commitment that by 2003, following a review of the existing weighted capitation formula used to distribute national health service funding, reducing inequalities will be a key criterion for allocating NHS resources to different parts of the country.

Disaster Planning (Wyre Forest)

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans have been made for the reception of casualties if a major disaster occurs in Wyre Forest. [11188]

Mr. Hutton: We are determined to ensure that the national health service is in as strong a position as possible to handle major incidents and we have recently asked senior NHS doctors and managers to review their arrangements for major incidents.

In line with Government guidance, Worcestershire has a comprehensive major incident plan in place for a range of possible scenarios. The plan has been developed in collaboration with health services across Worcestershire and involving all the emergency services and the local authority emergency planning departments.

Past experiences of major disasters in this country and abroad suggest that hospitals and minor injury centres both within Worcestershire and outside the district could be deployed depending on the scale of the disaster and the nature of injuries sustained. The Government's recent guidance to health authorities on major incident planning procedures is designed to heighten awareness as a precautionary measure and forms part of the Department's on-going work on medical countermeasures for biological incidents.

Major Trauma Casualties (Worcestershire)

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many major trauma casualties could be received and treated simultaneously at hospitals in Worcestershire and neighbouring areas. [11189]

Mr. Hutton: The ability of hospitals to respond to major trauma is dependent on a number of factors. Within each hospital the ability to receive such casualties will depend on the number of resuscitation bays and intensive care units (ICU) beds available.

Only hospitals that have adequate facilities such as resuscitation, theatres, ITU and clinical expertise should receive major trauma. Currently in Worcestershire there are:

spaces for up to 12 patients and two resuscitation bays at the Alexandra Hospital, spaces for up to seven patients and three resuscitation bays at Worcester Royal Infirmary.

There is the potential for spaces for up to 20 patients and four resuscitation bays in the new hospital in Worcester, due to open in April next year.

Worcestershire's major incident plan has escalation procedures to involve other sectors of the health and social services locally, and in surrounding areas. The Hereford and Worcestershire Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust would work in collaboration with local and surrounding acute hospitals and neighbouring ambulance trusts to ensure that patients are taken to the nearest appropriate facility.

Nurses

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) registered and (b) formerly registered nurses have taken up a full or part-time contract with the NHS after a break in their nursing career in each of the last three years for which records are available. [16398]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Qualified nurses, midwives and health visitors who have returned to practice in the national health service

Year or part year	Part time	Full time
1 February 1999 to 31 January 2000	1,636	1,156
1 February 2000 to 31 January 2001	2,579	1,518
1 February 2001 to 31 October 2001	1,496	1,286

Note:

Data collected by the Department do not identify whether returning nurses are registered or formerly registered.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the number of registered and formerly registered nurses who are not employed as nurses and who are (a) under 30, (b) under 40, (c) under 50 and (d) under 60 years of age. [16388]

Mr. Hutton: Data covering the number of registered and formerly registered nurses are collected by the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting (UKCC).

The table is the Department's analysis of the data supplied.

Nurses in England not working in the national health service

England—September 2000	Less than 30	30 to less than 40	40 to less than 50	50 to less than 60	Not known	Total
Nurses in England with effective registration who are not working in the NHS	29,020	48,240	47,990	35,290	30	160,580
Nurses previously registered in England who have let their UKCC registration lapse	2,720	29,790	36,680	35,950	1,490	106,630

Notes:

1. Individual records have been matched to health authorities and regions in England by postcode. Where postcode data are inaccurate or missing records have been matched by town/city.
2. Nurses have to register with the UKCC every three years to stay on the UKCC register.
3. Figures relate to the area of practice at the time of registration.
4. Numbers are rounded to the nearest 10.

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contribution his Department will make to the World Health Organisation study into deep vein thrombosis and air travel. [16319]

Jacqui Smith: The Department, in conjunction with the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions is planning to make a contribution to the World Health Organisation study in terms of financial support and the provision of advice, the details of which are under consideration.

Palliative Care

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the money assigned to palliative care over three years has been spent; and if he will make a statement on how it was spent. [16353]

Jacqui Smith: By 2004 the national health service will be investing an additional £50 million which will match, on a national basis, the investment made by the voluntary sector. We will be monitoring the information from financial frameworks and cancer network service delivery plans to ensure that this investment is happening.

Plasmapheresis

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision there is in the NHS for the treatment of severe sensitivity to light by plasmapheresis. [17144]

Mr. Hutton: Facilities for plasmapheresis are available in many large national health service haematology or immunology departments. We are not aware, however, of any photosensitive eruption for which it is routine treatment and for which the NHS would provide facilities.

Atypical Antipsychotic Drugs

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the average cost per patient of prescribing atypical antipsychotic drugs. [17222]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Information on the number of patients prescribed atypical antipsychotic drugs is not available.

The average net ingredient cost per prescription item for atypical antipsychotic drugs dispensed in the community in England in 2000 was £70.06.

The Department has asked the National Institute for Clinical Excellence to appraise the clinical and cost effectiveness of atypical antipsychotic drugs.

Operations

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of operations carried out under the NHS were performed in the private sector in the last 12 months. [19381]

Mr. Hutton: This information is not available in the form requested.

The Department has recently surveyed health authorities and trusts on the amount of activity they are purchasing for national health service patients within the private sector and will publish key results in due course. The Department is also currently reviewing its information needs as far as NHS-funded activity in the private sector is concerned.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria will be used to allocate funding to primary care trusts. [19197]

Mr. Hutton: We currently allocate funding to health authorities, and they allocate funding to primary care trusts, on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine each health authority and primary care trust's fair share of available resources, to enable them to commission similar levels of services for populations in equal need.

In future the intention is that allocations will be made direct to primary care trusts. This is subject to the passage of legislation through Parliament. Allocations will continue to be based on the principle of weighted capitation.

Waiting Times

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were waiting for (a) in-patient treatment and (b) out-patient appointments in each quarter of (i) 2000 and (ii) 2001 for (a) less than six months, (b) between six and 12 months, (c) between 12 and 18 months and (d) over 18 months. [19196]

Mr. Hutton: The number of inpatients waiting less than six months; between six and 12 months; between 12 and 18 months; and over 18 months in each quarter of 2000 and 2001 are given in the table.

More than half of the patients waiting over 18 months at end September 2001 are awaiting single use instruments for tonsillectomy or adenoidectomy. This is because the National Health Service has been advised only to carry out these procedures (when routine) using single-use supply instruments due to the theoretical risk of contracting vCJD. A sufficient supply of these instruments is now available, therefore we expect that the number of patients waiting for tonsillectomy or adenoidectomy procedures on the list will start to reduce and we will be able to ensure treatment of actual and potential over 18 month waiters in the coming months.

Department of Health—QMO8 quarterly return

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for (a) each health authority and (b) in total, (i) the authority-wide resident-based (A) in-patient and (B) daycase waiting list target for March 2002, (ii) the authority-wide profiled target for such cases for October 2001, (iii) the number of patients waiting for (1) in-patient and (2) daycase treatment in October 2001, (iv) the difference between (i) and (iii) and (v) the difference between (ii) and (iv). [19320]

Mr. Hutton: The latest information is given in the table. Data for October 2001 are not available until 7 December; therefore September 2001 data have been provided instead. There is a single profile for in-patients covering daycases and ordinary admissions.

Profiles are a management tool to ensure maintenance of the manifesto commitment. They are used to review progress, and to inform discussion between the Department and health authorities. The manifesto commitment was achieved in March 2000 and has been maintained since.

Nursing Care

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nursing home beds per 10,000 population over 18, (b) residential places per 10,000 population over 18 and (c) mental health nursing home beds (EMI) per 10,000 weighted population there are in (i) the Buckinghamshire health authority area and (ii) England. [19312]

Jacqui Smith: The information available is given in the table. Details relating to 31 March 2001 will be published at the end of November 2001, in the Statistical Bulletin "Community Care Statistics 2001: Residential personal social services for adults, England".

Rate of nursing beds, residential places and mental health nursing beds per 10,000 population aged 18 and over in the Buckinghamshire health authority area and England in 2000, as at 31 March 2000—rates per 10,000 population aged 18+

	(i) Buckinghamshire health authority area	(ii) England
(a) Registered nursing beds	36	50
(b) Residential places[1]	64	90
(c) Mental health nursing home care beds[2]	2	7

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of nursing posts are vacant in (a) the Buckinghamshire health authority area and (b) England. [19314]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Department of Health Vacancy Survey 2001
Qualified nurses, midwives and health visitors

whole-time equivalents

	3 month vacancy rates (Percentage)	Number of 3 month vacancies	Number of staff in post
England	3.4	9,000	256,200
Buckinghamshire HA	7.8	230	2,680

Notes:

1. Three month vacancies are vacancies as at 31 March 2000–01 which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (whole time equivalents).
2. Three month vacancy rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three month vacancies, plus staff in post from September 1999–2000 medical and dental and non-medical workforce censuses (whole time equivalent).
3. HA figures are based on trusts, and do not necessarily reflect the geographical provision of healthcare.
4. Numbers are rounded to the nearest ten.
5. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.
6. England totals include staff form special health authorities.
7. Totals may not equal sum of component parts due to rounding.
8. Staff in post figures are taken from the Department of Health Non-medical Workforce Census, September 2000.

Social Services

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time equivalents per 10,000 population work in social services in (a) Buckinghamshire, (b) Milton Keynes and (c) England. [19316]

Jacqui Smith: As at 30 September 2000 the number of whole-time equivalent personal social services staff employed by local authorities per 10,000 population was 22.1 in Buckinghamshire, 32.1 in Milton Keynes unitary authority and 43.4 in England.

Children (Local Authority Care)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give his estimate for the number of looked after children in the care of local authority social services departments per calendar year in each of the last 10 years. [19310]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is in the table. Figures are not collected on a calendar year basis but are supplied on the basis of years ending 31 March.

Number of children looked after by local authorities, years ending 31 March, England

Year	Number
1992	55,500
1993	51,600
1994	49,100
1995	49,500
1996	50,600
1997	51,100
1998	53,300
1999	55,500
2000	58,100
2001	58,900

Notes:

1. Figures exclude children accommodated under an agreed series of short-term placements.
2. Numbers are rounded to the nearest hundred.

Adoption

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what activities he includes under the heading of Adoption Support Services. [19227]

Jacqui Smith: The Adoption and Children Bill provides that adoption support services means counselling, advice and information in connection with adoption, and other such services as are specified in regulations. Our intention is that the adoption support services included in the regulations will include financial support.

The White Paper "Adoption: a new approach" published in December 2000, a copy of which is available in the Library, includes examples of the types of services that could be provided in a comprehensive adoption support services. These include the provision of support groups for those affected by adoption, facilitating contact between adopted children and birth parents, providing practical help (such as respite care) to adoptive families, and child therapeutic services. The aim is to ensure that all those affected by adoption, particularly adoptive families, can be helped to effectively access mainstream services and also be provided with support to meet needs specific to the adoptive placement.

The development of the national framework for adoption support is being informed by a stakeholder group and the work of the adoption and permanence task force. We intend to publish the framework for consultation in the spring and to finalise this in the light of the consultation responses prior to publishing draft regulations for consultation.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his assessment is of the likely impact of the Adoption and Children Bill within five years of enactment on (a) the number of children adopted, (b) the proportion of babies adopted as a percentage of the total and (c) the proportion of looked after children adopted as a percentage of the total compared with current figures. [19232]

Jacqui Smith: It is not possible to provide figures for the position five years after the enactment of the Adoption and Children Bill. However, a number of the provisions in the Bill will encourage more prospective adopters to come forward. In particular, the independent review mechanism should build confidence in the assessment process for prospective adopters and the adoption support frameworks should ensure that those adopting can be confident that they will receive the assistance they need to make any placement work. The Adoption Register for England and Wales will also facilitate the matching of children waiting for new families with approved adopters and help to increase the numbers of children being adopted.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his intentions are regarding increasing the number and nature of adoptions taking place across local authority boundaries. [19223]

Jacqui Smith: We expect to see an increase in the numbers of children placed across local authority boundaries, particularly of older children and sibling groups, as a result of increased consortia working and the impact of the Adoption Register for England and Wales.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he proposes to produce a report on the system of home studies for adoption placements. [19213]

Jacqui Smith: The White Paper "Adoption—a new approach", a copy of which is available in the Library, makes clear that the Department will carry out a fundamental review of the assessment process for adopters and the operation of adoption panels. Work has begun to determine the scope of this project and it is our intention to establish a stakeholder group to input to the process early in the New Year. We will bring forward proposals for consultation during 2002 and implement the resulting changes as part of the wider Adoption and Children Bill implementation.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the likely cost of regulation of voluntary adoption agencies under the terms of the Adoption and Children Bill as it relates to the Care Standards Act 2000. [19208]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the anticipated costs of regulation was prepared and included in the recent consultation document "Frequencies of Inspection and Regulatory Fees", a copy of which is in the Library.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when after Royal Assent he expects the terms of the Adoption and Children's Bill to come into force. [19228]

Jacqui Smith: We are considering the timetable for bringing the measures in the Adoption and Children Bill into force and will come to a view as the Bill makes its progress through Parliament.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is regarding fees which may be charged by adoption agencies in respect of the provision of services to persons providing facilities as part of the adoption service resulting from the Adoption and Children Bill. [19211]

Jacqui Smith: Clause 11 of the Adoption and Children Bill enables the appropriate Minister (the Secretary of State in England and the National Assembly in Wales) to make regulations prescribing the fees which may be paid and charged by adoption agencies to organisations such as other adoption agencies and adoption support agencies in respect of the provision of services as part of the Adoption Service. We believe that the existing inter-agency fee system operated by adoption agencies should continue to operate as it does at the moment. However, we have promised to keep the inter-agency fee under review and this power will enable us to make any changes we may consider necessary at a future date.

It is not our intention to enable local authorities to charge adopters or prospective adopters in respect of domestic adoption services, and nothing in Clause 11 permits them to do so.

However, the Bill enables the appropriate Minister to make regulations prescribing the fees which may be charged by local authorities to adopters and prospective adopters in respect of intercountry adoption. It is intended that the regulations will enable local authorities to charge fees to contribute towards their costs in providing information, preparing and assessing prospective adopters, obtaining medical reports and police checks and preparing post-placement and post-adoption reports in respect of intercountry adoption cases. These charges will not be permitted to include any element of profit.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what study he has made of cases of criminal assault against birth parents by their adopted children; and how many such cases he has studied. [19205]

Jacqui Smith: There has been no such study. Concerns have been expressed about the small minority of cases where birth parents may be placed at some risk where access is provided to the birth records.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effectiveness at tracking adopted children in the system operating in England and Wales. [19309]

Jacqui Smith: Looked after children who are placed for adoption are monitored through central data collections and local tracking mechanisms in the same way as any other looked after child.

Once an adoption order is made it would not be appropriate to track adopted children in this way. However, we are committed to securing long-term success and stability for adoptions. That is why in the White Paper "Adoption—a new approach", a copy of which is in the Library, we undertook to work with the relevant stakeholders to develop appropriate ways of obtaining regular information on the success of permanent placements, including adoption (for example, through voluntary anonymous surveys and through the provision of adoption support services). We will use this information to inform future policy developments and to help us to develop and set targets that focus on the success and stability of all permanent placements, both before and after the making of relevant Court Orders. We aim to set such targets by 2004–05.

Next year, we shall develop an integrated children's system, a key theme of our Quality Protects programme, which will bring together planning and record keeping for children in need in the community and those looked after by local authorities. It will provide a single, coherent record for the child's case history until adoption and will help planning and decision making. The aim is to improve individual local authorities' information and record keeping.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the procedure for appeal against the findings of a panel will be and what complaints procedure will be available to the applicants in his proposals for setting up review panels in clause 12 of the Adoption and Children Bill; [19217]

(2) which ombudsman will be responsible for complaints against adoption review panels proposed in the Adoption and Children Bill. [19218]

Jacqui Smith: To encourage more people to apply to adopt and to build confidence in the adopter assessment process, the White Paper "Adoption—a new approach" committed the Government to provide an independent review where an adoption agency intends to turn down a prospective adopter's application. A copy of the White Paper has been placed in the Library. The Bill includes powers enabling the appropriate Minister to make regulations to establish such a mechanism, which may be run by an independent body. The intention is that the independent review mechanism will review, at a prospective adopter's request, applications that adoption agencies have indicated they are minded to turn down. It is also intended to use the independent review mechanism to review adoption agency qualifying determinations about the disclosure of information concerning a person's adoption. It will remain the responsibility of the adoption agency to make a final decision after taking into consideration the recommendation of the independent review. Detail on how the review mechanism will work, the complaints procedure and the determinations that it will be used to review will be fully consulted on.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under clause 12 of the Adoption and Children Bill, to which organisations he might delegate his functions in respect of the operation of review panels. [19307]

Jacqui Smith: To encourage more people to apply to adopt and to build confidence in the adopter assessment process, the White Paper "Adoption—a new approach" committed the Government to provide an independent review where an adoption agency intends to turn down a prospective adopter's application. A copy of the White Paper has been placed in the Library.

The Bill includes powers enabling the appropriate Minister to establish a mechanism, which may be run by an independent body, to review qualifying adoption agency determinations. Details of how the review mechanism system will work will be fully consulted on. Any organisation wishing to apply to operate the independent review mechanism will be required to demonstrate that it has the relevant expertise to enable it to perform this function.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the representations he has received regarding adoption since publication of the draft adoption Bill in March. [19296]

Jacqui Smith: We have received representations from the British Agencies for Adoption and Fostering, the Local Government Association, the Association of Directors of Social Services, NORCAP, Adoption UK, Barnardos, and many other interested parties and private individuals.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the meaning of child's welfare in the Adoption and Children Bill. [19229]

Jacqui Smith: Clause 1(2) of the Adoption and Children Bill makes the child's welfare the paramount consideration of the court or adoption agency in any decision about the adoption of a child. It brings the welfare test into line with that in the Children Act 1989, with the important addition that the court or agency must consider the child's welfare throughout his life, in recognition of the lifelong implications of adoption. Under Clause 1(3) the court or agency must also bear in mind that in general any delay is likely to prejudice the child's welfare.

The "child's welfare" is not defined in the Bill, as is the position under both the Children Act 1989 and the Adoption Act 1976. Case law under the 1989 and 1976 Acts shows that the courts have given a wide interpretation to the term "welfare". Clause 1(4) sets out some of the issues that will be relevant in a "welfare checklist" that must be applied by the court or agency in determining the best interests of the child in any decision relating to adoption. It includes a requirement to have regard to the child's ascertainable wishes and feelings about the decision and to his particular needs. It also obliges the court or agency to have regard to the relationship the child has with his relatives, the prospects of and benefits to the child of this relationship continuing, the ability of his relatives to provide the child with a secure home and to meet his needs, and their views concerning the decision relating to the adoption of the child.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a preliminary list of those overseas countries to which Chapter 6 of the Adoption and Children Bill will apply. [19294]

Jacqui Smith: Chapter 6 of the Adoption and Children Bill covers all adoptions with a foreign element. This includes children habitually resident outside the British Islands brought into the United Kingdom by individuals habitually resident in the United Kingdom, whether they were adopted outside the United Kingdom or it is planned to adopt them in the United Kingdom. It also includes the taking out of the United Kingdom for adoption children who are Commonwealth citizens or habitually resident in the United Kingdom.

Once the Bill is implemented overseas countries will fall into three distinct categories:

(i) Those that have ratified the 1993 Hague Convention on Protection of Children and Co-operation in respect of Intercountry Adoption. Prospective adopters will be required to follow prescribed procedures to adopt under the Convention. Convention adoptions will be automatically recognised in the United Kingdom. We are currently consulting on this system and the draft guidance and draft Regulations for England and Wales to be issued under the Adoption (Intercountry Aspects) Act 1999.

(ii) Those that have adoption procedures that meet requirements prescribed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State (following consultation with the National Assembly for Wales). These are specified "overseas adoptions" and will be recognised in the United Kingdom. The intention is to consult upon the criteria prior to making regulations. It is likely that they will be based upon the key principles enshrined in international law, including the law in the overseas country:

ensures that the child has been freely given up for adoption and that this has not been induced by payment or compensation of any kind;

makes attempts to place the child in a family in their own country; confirms that intercountry adoption is in the child's best interests;

requires that the domestic and intercountry adoption arrangements and requirements are the same;

ensures that profit is not made from the process;

ensures that the prospective adopters have been assessed and approved as suitable to adopt in their home country.

Prospective adopters habitually resident in the United Kingdom will be required to follow the prescribed procedures and satisfy conditions prior to adopting overseas to avoid committing an offence under Clause 80 of the Adoption and Children Bill.

(iii) Those countries that have not ratified the Hague Convention and do not have procedures that meet the prescribed criteria for inclusion in the Order specifying "overseas adoptions". Any adoption order made in one of these countries would not be recognised under United Kingdom law and so any child brought into the UK from one of these countries would need to be adopted under UK law. Prospective adopters habitually resident in the UK will be required to follow the prescribed procedures and satisfy prescribed conditions prior to bringing a child back into the UK to avoid committing an offence under Clause 80 of the Adoption and Children Bill.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many overseas adoption applications have been processed by his Department in each of the last five years. [19207]

Jacqui Smith: The table shows how many overseas adoption applications the Department has processed in each of the last five years.

Intercountry adoption applications processed by the Department of Health

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish his Regulatory Impact Assessment of the Adoption and Children Bill. [19210]

Jacqui Smith: The Regulatory Impact Assessment on the Adoption and Children Bill was published on 19 October 2001, the date of introduction of the Bill. It is available in the Library and on the Department's website.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his proposals are for which local authority should be responsible for the resourcing and provision of specialist educational provision for persons adopted outside of the original local authority's area. [19222]

Jacqui Smith: The Adoption and Children Bill provides a power to make regulations setting out where the responsibility lies for assessment and provision of adoption support services in cases where a child is placed with an adoptive family living in a different local authority area. We will use this power to make regulations which put in place a clear system for the provision of adoption support services in these circumstances. We will also make regulations to ensure the appropriate flow of funding between local authorities in such cases. These regulations will form part of the new framework for adoption support which we are currently developing. We intend to consult fully on the framework and the draft regulations, to ensure that we get the detail right.

We also intend to issue guidance and directions to health authorities, primary care trusts and local education authorities to ensure the joined-up planning and provision of public services in connection with adoption.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the proportion of children subject to special guardianship orders which would be issued under Clause 110 of the Adoption and Children Bill as opposed to full adoption proceedings. [19214]

Jacqui Smith: It is impossible to estimate accurately the proportion of children who are likely to be the subject to a special guardianship order as compared with adoption. However, we believe the order will be of particular benefit to older children who do not wish to be adopted, but who do want the greater security offered by special guardianship. We have made it clear that special guardianship orders will be accompanied by access to a full range of support services including, where appropriate, financial support, to help the placement succeed. The responses to the consultation on the report of the performance and innovation unit's on adoption[1] were overwhelmingly in favour of creating such an order. We will continue to consult fully on how best to introduce the special guardianship order to optimise its use, where appropriate.

[1] Adoption: issued for consultation, (July 2000), Cabinet Office, London

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his proposals are for payment of allowances for the new special guardianship orders proposed in the Adoption and Children Bill. [19295]

Jacqui Smith: The White Paper "Adoption—a new approach", a copy of which is in the Library, made it clear that special guardianship orders would be accompanied by access to a full range of support services including, where appropriate, financial support, to help the placement succeed. This is reflected in the Adoption and Children Bill. The details of these arrangements will be included in a draft national framework for adoption financial support which we intend to publish for consultation next spring.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has for encouraging the provision of intermediary services to people connected with adoption as a result of the Adoption and Children Bill. [19226]

Jacqui Smith: The provision of intermediary services to people connected with adoption will be considered as part of the development of the adoption support framework promised in the White Paper "Adoption—a new approach", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he proposes to publish regulations relating to the provision of assessments and support services for people connected with adoption. [19221]

Jacqui Smith: We intend to publish our proposals for the handling of assessments for adoption support and a draft framework for the provision of adoption support services, including financial support, for consultation in the spring. After considering the consultation responses we will publish for consultation the draft Regulations to give effect to our final proposals under Clauses 2, 3 and 4 of the Adoption and Children Bill.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average time for completion of adoption for children identified as potential adoptees under the age of one in each of the last 10 years. [19212]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the duration of the period between 'best interest decision' and date of adoption has been collected centrally only since 1 April 2000. In order to show a 10-year time series, the data in the table show the average duration between the date of start of care and date of adoption for children who were aged under one when care started.

At 31 March 2001, the average length of time between entry into care and the best interest decision for all children adopted was one year, one month.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the procedures for obtaining a child's ascertainable wishes as set out in the Adoption and Children Bill. [19231]

Jacqui Smith: Clause 1(4)(a) of the Adoption and Children Bill provides courts and adoption agencies with a legal obligation to ascertain the child's wishes and feelings about all decisions relating to adoption, and to take them into account considering the child's age and understanding. The precise procedure will be set out for adoption agencies in regulations and guidance, and for the courts in court rules and in guidance.

We intend to consult on the new draft regulations and guidance before the Bill's provisions are implemented.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many foster parents are on the register of social services departments in each local authority in England and Wales; and how many were on the register in (a) 1990 and (b) 1995. [19215]

Jacqui Smith: Figures for 1990 and 1995 are not held.

We do have data supplied to the Department by councils from 1998–99 when they applied for training support project grants at the beginning of each financial year to train/assess foster carers to the Care NVQ Level 3. These figures detail the numbers of foster carers who were contracted directly by the council and via independent fostering agencies.

Data are as follows:

Number of foster carers

	Directly contracted by local councils	Contracted by LCs via independent agencies	Total
1998–99	29,689	835	30,524
1999–2000	30,166	1,085	31,251
2000–01	30,003	1,502	31,505
2001–02	30,343	2,023	32,366

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what advice he based his proposals to restrict the right of access to an adopted person's birth certificate and birth parent details granted in the Adoption Act 1976 as set out in Chapter 3 of the Adoption and Children Bill. [19204]

Jacqui Smith: Officials have advised me that section 51 of the Adoption Act 1976 has worked well in the vast majority of cases. However, since the 1976 Act there have been concerns about a small number of cases where there could be a risk to birth parents if they were traced through the birth records.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his intention to change the number of (a) voluntary organisations and (b) informal groups providing adoption support services in England and Wales. [19225]

Jacqui Smith: The Adoption and Children Bill includes new provisions requiring adoption support agencies to register with the National Care Standards Commission in England and with the National Assembly in Wales. Agencies in addition to adoption agencies which are registered with the National Care Standards Commission will be able to provide specialist support in connection with adoption. Registration in this way will ensure that such services are provided to a high standard.

The Bill's provisions on registration of adoption support agencies will provide an improved level of protection for people receiving adoption support services. Our intention is to regulate organisations and individuals providing professional support services, not to prevent people from providing informal support in their own homes.

We promised in our White Paper "Adoption: a new approach", published in December 2000, to develop new frameworks for adoption support and financial support. We will publish the frameworks for consultation in the spring. There may be a slight increase in the number of organisations providing adoption support as a wider range of services are made available under the frameworks.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has for the (a) selection of members, (b) qualifications and training of members, (c) payment of members, (d) scrutiny and (e) likely operating cost, in relation to review panels set up under Clause 12 of the Adoption and Children Bill; and at what stages he envisages review panels will operate. [19216]

Jacqui Smith: To encourage more people to apply to adopt and to build confidence in the adopter assessment process, the White Paper "Adoption—a new approach" committed the Government to provide an independent review where an adoption agency intends to turn down a prospective adopter's application. A copy of the White Paper has been placed in the Library. The Bill includes powers enabling the appropriate Minister to make regulations to establish a mechanism, which may be run by an independent body, to review qualifying adoption agency determinations. Details of how the review mechanism system will work, including the composition of the body and its membership, will be fully consulted on.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his assessment is of reasonableness for a period of delay as used in the Adoption and Children Bill. [19230]

Jacqui Smith: This will depend on the facts of the particular case.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has for funding centrally the operation of the review panels under the Adoption and Children Bill. [19308]

Jacqui Smith: The cost of establishing and administering the independent review mechanism will be met centrally from the extra £66.5 million for adoption announced in the White Paper "Adoption—a new approach", a copy of which has been placed in the Library. We have promised to consult on the detail of how the independent review mechanism will operate, to ensure that we get it right. The running costs of the review mechanism will be taken into account in the forthcoming spending review.

Capital Spending Projects

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those capital spending projects being negotiated in the NHS where the lead on building and management involves an overseas firm or organisation. [19298]

Mr. Hutton: Detailed negotiation information is only held centrally on private finance initiative projects with a capital value of £25 million and over. No information is held centrally regarding the country in which the bidders are either registered or owned. Information is therefore supplied for all trusts which have shortlisted or preferred bidders, ie: the stage at which negotiations begin. These are listed in the table.

North Bristol NHS Trust

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if hospital improvement plans submitted by the North Bristol NHS Trust are among the proposals by trusts that he has prioritised for capital investment under his 10 year plan. [19193]

Ms Blears: No detailed proposals for a major redevelopment of hospital services have yet been submitted to the Department by the North Bristol National Health Service Trust.

SCOTLAND

Section 28 (Local Government Act)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment she has made of the effect of the repeal of section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988 in Scotland; [11851]

(2) what representations she has received about the repeal of section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988 in Scotland. [11850]

Mrs. Liddell: I have received no representations about—and made no assessment of the effect of—the repeal of section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988 in Scotland.

TREASURY

Special Purpose Vehicles

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Treasury (a) monitors and (b) offers advice to other Government Departments on special purpose vehicles. [18222]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Treasury does not monitor special purpose vehicles (SPVs). Where it is directly involved in individual public-private partnerships, the Treasury will take a close interest in the performance of the contractual counterparties, including where these are SPVs. Its role in agreeing broad strategies and approaches to the use of SPVs will not involve it in advising Departments in special cases.

As part of its operational and business guidance for Departments, the Office of Government Commerce published in October guidance on the financial appraisal of suppliers, which includes advice on assessing bidders' financial and economic standing, whether they are SPVs or single companies.

Vocational Training Relief

Mr. Syms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will replace the vocational training relief. [17989]

Dawn Primarolo: In his pre-Budget statement the Chancellor of the Exchequer outlined the Government's new approach to training and to tackling the intermediate skills deficit in the UK work force.

HIPC Initiative

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the HIPC initiative on the debt levels of the HIPC nations; and if he will make a statement. [18489]

Ruth Kelly: The UK believes that the enhanced HIPC initiative is working and already 24 countries have qualified for debt relief. According to World bank and IMF estimates these countries will, on average, have their debts reduced by two-thirds, this will bring their debt service ratios to below the developing country average. The World bank and IMF also estimate that HIPC is delivering US$2.4 billion annually to those countries that have reached Decision Point, and that these countries are allocating about 75 per cent. of their debt relief to social services, such as education and health. Of these, four countries have exited the process and have benefited from irrevocable debt cancellation. The UK continues to work hard to ensure that the HIPC initiative is a success, and to ensure it delivers a sustainable exit from debt for the poorest countries. The UK continues to push for other countries to adopt its policies of offering 100 per cent. interim relief, and holding payment in trust for those countries that have to yet benefit from interim relief.

Arundel and South Downs

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people received (a) tax credits and (b) means-tested benefits in the constituency of Arundel and South Downs in each year since April 1997. [18313]

Dawn Primarolo: The available information for Arundel and South Downs is in the table:

Recipients of (a) tax credits and (b) certain income related benefits in the Arundel and South Downs constituency

	Working families tax credit (WFTC)/family credit (FC)	Disabled persons tax credit/disability working allowance (DWA)	Income support (IS)	Jobseeker's allowance (income based) (JSA)	Total

1. Apart from DPTC and DWA, the figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample. They are subject to sampling error and therefore shown to the nearest hundred.

2. Recipients of WFTC/FC or DPTC/DWA who also receive IS or JSA are included only in the first two columns. This eliminates double counting in the total.

3. WFTC and DPTC replaced FC and DA from October 1999.

4. DPTC and DWA figures are for April.

Euro

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy to seek revision of the framework set down by the Stability and Growth Pact as part of the preparations for UK euro entry. [18518]

Ruth Kelly: The Government have said that they will only recommend joining a successful single currency if it is in our national economic interest to do so, and if the economic case for joining is clear and unambiguous. The five tests will define whether a clear and unambiguous case can be made.

Pensions

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many members of defined contribution pension schemes are paying the (a) higher rate and (b) standard rate of tax; [18627]

(2) if he will estimate the number of members of defined contribution pension schemes paying the (a) higher rate and (b) standard rate of tax. [18610]

Dawn Primarolo: Available estimates for 2001–02 are contained in the table, it is not possible to break down those contributing to occupational schemes according to whether they are in defined benefit or defined contribution schemes. All those contributing to personal pensions will be in defined contribution schemes.

Basic rate	8,000	3,500
Higher rate	2,000	500

Figures are provisional and consistent with the 1999–2000 Survey of Personal Incomes projected to 2001–02 levels of earnings and prices.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many defined contribution occupational pension schemes are covered by the pre-1987 tax regime; and how many members of such schemes there are; [18611]

(2) how many defined contribution occupational pension schemes are covered by the 1987 to 1989 tax regime; [18626]

(3) how many occupational pension schemes are covered by the (a) pre-1987 and (b) 1987 to 1989 tax regime. [18604]

Ruth Kelly: Latest estimates from the Government Actuary's Department Survey of Occupational Schemes (1995) suggested that there were 8.8 million active members in 38,000 defined benefit occupational schemes; 1.1 million members in 109,000 defined contribution occupational schemes; and around 0.3 million members in 4,000 mixed defined benefit/defined contribution schemes. It is not possible to derive from this survey or from other sources how many schemes and members are covered by the different tax regimes.

Railtrack

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 November 2001, Official Report, column 267W, on the accounting treatment of the successor organisation to Railtrack, on what date he received a reply from the Office for National Statistics; and if he will place in the Library advice given by the ONS on the accounting treatment of other possible successor organisations to Railtrack. [19183]

Mr. Andrew Smith: ONS replied on 5 October to Treasury's request of 3 October for advice on the accounting treatment of a company limited by guarantee that was a possible successor organisation to Railtrack. ONS has not given any advice on other possible successor organisations to Railtrack.

Inland Revenue Investigations

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Inland Revenue make inquiries into family backgrounds in advance of looking at the financial affairs of the individual into whom they are inquiring. [18889]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue does not routinely look into family backgrounds before commencing a tax inquiry. But there are circumstances in which it would be relevant to do so. For example, the main reason for considering whether to inquire might be that an individual's reported income seemed much lower than his probable expenditure.

In such a case the Revenue might look at the financial position of others in the household to see whether their incomes and, therefore, possible contribution to family finances might account for any perceived shortfall. Preliminary research of this kind helps to focus inquiries on those cases presenting the biggest risks.

Capital Assets

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 November 2001, Official Report, column 270W, on capital assets, what guidelines the (a) National Audit Office and (b) Treasury issue on how to classify who bears the risks and rewards associated with an asset. [19189]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Generally accepted accounting practices are used to determine who bears the risks and rewards associated with an asset, and hence its accounting treatment. These are applied by accountants working for departments, and subsequently audited by the National Audit Office (NAO). The Office for National Statistics (ONS) follows the same treatment for national accounts.

The Treasury's "Resource Accounting Manual" makes clear that all complex transactions should be accounted for under the overriding principles of the Accounting Standards Board's (ASB) Financial Reporting Standard (FRS) 5 "Reporting the Substance of Transactions". Such transactions include those where ownership of capital assets reverts to the public sector, for leasing transactions, the more specific principles of the ASB's Statement of Standard Accounting Practice (SSAP) 21 "Accounting for Leases and Hire Contract Contracts". For Private Finance Initiative transactions, more specific guidance is given in the Treasury document "Technical Note no. 1 (revised)—How to Account for PFI Transactions", which sets out additional practical guidance on how to apply the ASB's Application Note "Amendment to FRS5—Private Finance Initiative and Similar Contracts".

The aspect of the question relating to National Audit Office guidelines has been referred to the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission who can respond on behalf of the NAO.

Inland Revenue (Informers)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with regard to Section 32 of the Inland Revenue Regulation Act 1890, what criteria the Commissioners of Inland Revenue employ to determine whether to exercise their discretion afforded by the Inland Revenue Regulation Act 1890 to reward an informer; when these criteria were established; and how they differ from the criteria previously in force. [18927]

Dawn Primarolo: Financial rewards can be made to an informer following the conclusion of an inquiry where tax is recovered as a result of the information provided. In deciding the amount of any reward, the Commissioners have regard to the amount of tax recovered. Calculation details are not disclosed since this would enable an informer to estimate the amount of tax recovered, which would breach the Revenue's duty of confidentiality to the taxpayer.

It is not possible to say whether these criteria have applied unaltered since the enactment of 1890, but they have remained unchanged for many years.

National Insurance (Married Women)

Mr. Page: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to inform working women of the consequences of paying the married women's rate of National Insurance. [16503]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to Inland Revenue leaflet CA 13 "National Insurance contributions for women with reduced elections". The leaflet, which was updated in May 2001 and can also be found on the Inland Revenue website, explains what contributions married women pay and the implications for future contributory benefit entitlement resulting from keeping their reduced liability.

The Inland Revenue undertook a major publicity exercise in October 2000 writing to around 250,000 married women who had previously elected to pay reduced rate National Insurance contributions. The letter advised them to consider their elections following recent structural changes to National Insurance contributions. A dedicated helpline was set up to provide further information and assistance and some 63,000 telephone inquiries were received.

The September 2001 edition of the Employers Bulletin, which again can be found on the Inland Revenue's website, included an article about married women's reduced rate contributions recommending action that employers should take on a regular basis to remind their employees, who pay a reduced rate, what information they need to report which could affect their National Insurance liability.

NHS (Additional Spending)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department has made of the cost-effectiveness of additional spending on the NHS since 1997. [19286]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Government Departments are required to demonstrate that all their expenditure on services provides value for money. The Public Service Agreement between the Treasury and the Department of Health requires NHS trusts to converge over time on a benchmark defined by the cost of care commissioned from NHS trusts which perform well against indicators of fair access, quality and responsiveness. The Treasury monitors progress against the benchmark regularly.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the operation of the Climate Change Levy; and if he will make a statement. [16499]

Mr. Boateng: As with all taxes, the Climate Change Levy is reviewed as part of the normal Budget process.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Armed Police

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is given to armed police to deal with firearms situations involving suspects suffering from mental illness. [16686]

Mr. Denham: The basic training that all new recruits receive includes an element that raises awareness of mental illness and highlights the importance of communicating effectively and sensitively with people suffering from a mental disorder. Individual forces also provide further training for their officers on these issues. Details are not held centrally of all such local provision.

The Association of Chief Police Officers Manual of Guidance on police use of firearms recognises that people suffering from mental illness may not realise the seriousness of the situation they are in or respond 'normally' to conventional negotiating strategies. The guidance stresses the importance of police negotiators, armed officers and Firearms Incident Commanders having an understanding of people who suffer from mental illness and suggests some actions which may reduce the risk of firearms use. It also stresses that a person's impairment does not reduce the potential harm they may inflict if the incident is not resolved, and that it is the role of the police to deal with the threat irrespective of motive.

It is important that the Government should continue to explore with the police all possible options for ensuring that officers are able to deal with such incidents effectively and in a way that protects the public and police officers.

In conjunction with the Association of Chief Police Officers and Northern Ireland Office, we are currently reviewing, as a matter of priority, the range of 'less lethal' alternatives to firearms. As one would expect, all have differing levels of risk and effectiveness associated with them, and any advantages of such alternatives have to be properly and fully assessed against any disadvantages.

In addition, under section 79(1) of the Police Act 1996, I have asked the Police Complaints Authority (PCA) to report on the lessons to be learned from investigations supervised by them since January 1998 into incidents in which police shootings occurred and which resulted in death or injury. The PCA have begun work on this review, and I have asked them to report within six months. The report will be laid before Parliament and published.

Fingerprinting

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what quality control systems are in place to ensure the accurate retrieval of fingerprints found at the scene of a crime. [16951]

Mr. Denham: The training of a fingerprint expert requires that before that person is registered as an expert, he/she must be competent to deal with the process for retrieval of fingerprints from a scene of crime, together with accurate recording of that process. That process includes a requirement to take a Polaroid photograph indicating precisely where the fingerprint has been lifted from and sign across edge of the tape once the fingerprint has been lifted. The essential steps to ensure the probity and continuity of the exhibited fingerprint have been tried and tested within the Criminal Justice System on countless occasions. They meet the high standards of integrity required by our courts.

15 Forces have the ISO9002 Quality Standard for its procedures and have attained that quality standard. The remainder have met an agreed national Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) standard which is audited at least once a year by an independent audit process.

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the fingerprint service in the United Kingdom. [16952]

Mr. Denham: I do not have plans to review the fingerprint service in the United Kingdom. The Association of Chief Police Officers created a Project Group to review the fingerprint evidential standard in 1996. Only after a meticulous programme of work spanning five years, including a comprehensive review of the processes and procedures within all 42 fingerprint bureaux in the 43 Forces in England and Wales, was the evidential standard changed on 11 July 2001.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for removing failed asylum seekers. [16922]

Angela Eagle: The public service agreement target is to enforce the immigration laws more effectively by removing a greater proportion of failed asylum seekers. Latest information on performance against the target will be published in the 'Asylum Statistics Q3 2001 United Kingdom' on 30 November.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for improving the satisfaction of victims and witnesses with their treatment in the criminal justice system. [17059]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The 2000 British Crime Survey showed that 58 per cent. of victims were satisfied with their treatment by the criminal justice system. An equivalent figure from the 2001 British Crime Survey is awaited.

The 2000 Witness Satisfaction, which was the first national survey of witnesses, showed that 75 per cent. of witnesses were very or fairly satisfied with the treatment they received. A similar survey in 2002 will show whether the proportion of satisfied witnesses has increased.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the public service agreement target for efficiency savings in the Police Service. [17308]

Mr. Denham: I am pleased to say that Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) has reported that all 43 police forces in England and Wales achieved the two per cent. efficiency savings required in 2000–01 under the public service agreement. The requirement included an obligation for efficiency gains to be used for the benefit of front line policing. A copy of the HMIC report is in the Library.

UK Youth Parliament

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will respond to the manifesto submitted to the Government for comment by the UK Youth Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [18016]

Mr. Denham: I shall be responding as soon as possible to the manifesto on behalf of the Government.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been obtained and how many further orders are awaiting court hearings, broken down by area, since their introduction; and if he will make a statement on their impact on antisocial behaviour. [17127]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Official statistics on the number of Antisocial Behaviour Orders (ASBO) taken out are based on quarterly returns received from Magistrates' Courts Committees. A review identified an undercount and my Department therefore undertook an exercise with the police to obtain more reliable figures. As a result of this reconciliation exercise the total number of ASBOs issued up until the end of September this year was 466, which is 184 more than previously reported. A breakdown by area is given in the table.

Information is not held centrally on the number of applications for ASBOs awaiting court hearing.

Since their introduction in April 1999 ASBOs have been used successfully in a variety of cases and have made a real difference for the better in people's lives.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what other Home Office contracts have been awarded to the company providing the Criminal Records since 1997 and were completed to (a) time and (b) budget. [17746]

Mr. Denham: Information available for other contracts awarded to Capita by my Department since 1997, which were completed (a) on time and (b) on budget, is as follows:

Year	Company	Contract
1997	Capita[1]	Designing and Managing Building Projects
1998–99	Capita EC	Environment/Space Planning
1998	Capita Business Service	Recruitment of General Managers

2000–01	Capita Business Service	Quantum Project

[1] Advisory contracts for which Capita was not the prime contractor

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on progress with the Criminal Records Bureau; [17745]

(2) what is the (a) original and (b) latest (i) completion date and (ii) cost for the Criminal Records Bureau. [17747]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Colchester (Bob Russell) on 26 October 2001, Official Report, column 449W.

It has always been the intention that the Criminal Records Bureau should be self-financing by means of the charges that it makes for the Disclosures that it produces.

Motorways

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask chief constables in England and Wales for a report on the effectiveness of Regulation 12 of the Motorway Traffic (England and Wales) Regulations 1982, as amended, in their county areas. [17410]

Mr. Denham: The enforcement of motorway regulations is an operational matter for chief officers of police. I understand from the Association of Chief Police Officers that they consider that the prohibition of Heavy Goods Vehicles (HGV) and coaches from the outside lane of motorways enhances traffic flow and affords other drivers some degree of protection from large vehicles. Most HGV drivers observe the prohibition, although a small minority exercise poor lane discipline which can cause annoyance to other motorists. There is, however, little evidence to suggest that this is a significant problem, and we do not consider that a review of the regulation is necessary at this time.

Thames Valley Police

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recorded crimes per 1,000 population there were in each of the Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships in the Thames Valley police area in the last year for which figures are available. [18649]

Mr. Denham: Details of recorded crime figures for violence against the person, sexual offences, robbery, burglary in a dwelling, theft of a motor vehicle and theft from a vehicle are collected centrally for each Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) in England and Wales. The most recent information is available in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin number 12–01, entitled 'Recorded Crime: England and Wales, 12 months to March 2001', published on 19 July 2001. The details for Thames Valley CDRPs are given in the table.

Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures will be available to public authorities to protect the academic confidentiality of information contained in project licences held under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 after the Freedom of Information Act 2000 is implemented. [18297]

Angela Eagle: The Freedom of Information Act 2000 covers a wide range of public authorities including public sector academic institutions. The right of access will apply to information held by such institutions subject to the conditions and exemptions set out in the Act.

Section 41 of the Act exempts as a class information obtained from any other person if its disclosure would constitute a breach of confidence actionable by that or any other person. Other exemptions in the Act which may be relevant to applications to academic institutions for information relating to project licences granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 relate to personal information the disclosure of which would contravene the data protection principles set out in the Data Protection Act 1998 (section 40 of the Freedom of Information Act); and commercial interests (section 43).

It is impossible to judge hypothetically what would or would not be disclosed, as all requests under Freedom of Information will be assessed on a case by case basis. But the Government believe that the Act achieves a proper balance between the right to know, the right to privacy and the preservation of confidentiality where disclosure would be contrary to the public interest.

The timetable for the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act was recently announced. Implementation will be in stages with the duties on public authorities to apply Publication Schemes—details of the information they will provide pro-actively—being introduced first. This will be staggered for different parts of the public sector. The individual right of access will follow in January 2005.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to change the (a) resource departmental expenditure limit and (b) administration costs limit for her Department in 2001–02. [19950]

Clare Short: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate the Department for International Development Departmental Expenditure Limit for 2001–02 will be increased from £3,114,570,000 to £3,127,152,749. The Administration Cost Limit will increase from £67,246,000 to £67,561,000. Within this DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the table.

	Resources	Capital
Change	12,582,749	—
New DEL	3,127,152,749	—
Of which:
Voted	2,450,932,749	—
Non-voted	676,220,000	—

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

A transfer of £22,656,813 from DFID's non-voted Departmental Unallocated Provision (DUP) to the Ministry of Defence for Conflict Prevention in sub-Saharan Africa;

A transfer of £4,435,438 from DFID's non-voted DUP to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for Conflict Prevention in sub-Saharan Africa;

A transfer of £8,900,000 from the FCO to DFID for Global Conflict Prevention;

A transfer of £100,000 from DFID's non-voted DUP to the Cabinet Office (SIA) for Conflict Prevention in sub-Saharan Africa;

A transfer of £15,000,000 from the Reserve in support of a new International Monetary Fund Poverty Reduction Growth Facility for Pakistan;

A transfer of £15,000,000 from the Reserve in support of humanitarian relief in Afghanistan;

A transfer of £570,000 from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) for a contribution to the refurbishment of BHC Lusaka;

A transfer of £10,000 to the Home Office for DFID's contribution to the "Groupe d'etats Contre la Corruption" (GRECO);

A transfer of £510,000 from the Cabinet Office for the Civil Service Modernisation Fund;

A transfer of £195,000 to the Cabinet Office for funding of Fast Stream Recruitment.

The increase will be met by inter-departmental transfers or from the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Democratic Republic of Congo

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on (a) the progress of the peace process in the Democratic Republic of Congo, (b) her recent visit to the region and (c) the latest International Crisis Group report on the Inter-Congolese dialogue. [18635]

Clare Short: I had a useful visit to the region in August where I met with Presidents Kagame and Museveni, President Kabila and Mr. Bemba, Mr. Onusumba and representatives of MONUC among others to discuss the importance of moving the Lusaka Peace Process forward. These have been some promising signs in recent months with no major ceasefire violations, the start of the Inter-Congolese Dialogue (due to reconvene in the new year), and more frank discussions about disarmament, demobilisation, and re-integration. But the situation remains fragile. The international community needs to give its full support to pushing all the elements of the Lusaka Peace Process forward, including the Inter-Congolese Dialogue.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will respond to the UN report of the Panel of Exports on the Illegal Exploitation of Natural Resources and other Forms of Wealth in the Democratic Republic of Congo, in particular section III part D. [18630]

Clare Short: We welcome the publication of the revised report last week. We believe it is an improvement on the previous highly flawed report. We shall raise any specific allegations with the Governments concerned and press them to take action to investigate substantiated allegations against groups and individuals. But we also believe that the way forward for the region—including better management of mineral resources—is the full implementation of the Lusaka peace accord.

Angola

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the sanctions against terrorists in Angola since the publication of the third report of the Monitoring Mechanism on Sanctions against UNITA. [18632]

Clare Short: We welcome the Monitoring Mechanism's latest report in October. The report is currently under discussion by the Security Council and we look forward to a timely follow-up.

The Government fully support the sanctions imposed by UNCSRs 864, 1127, and 1173 as a means of bringing UNITA to the negotiating table. We are currently investigating two UK companies named in the latest report and hope to report back to the Sanctions Committee shortly.

Malawi

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what actions her Department is taking to promote good governance in Malawi; and what assessment she has made of the decision of major donors to suspend development aid to the country. [18631]

Clare Short: Malawi is an extremely poor country with very weak capacity in all government systems. We are implementing a £34 million programme aimed at improved safety, security and access to justice for poor and vulnerable people, by strengthening the judiciary and reform of the police and prison services. We are assisting the Anti Corruption Bureau and Ombudsman's office, and we are helping to improve public expenditure management.

All donors are at present maintaining their programmes in Malawi.

Afghanistan

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment she has made of the effect of the collapse of Taliban rule on the scale of population displacement in Afghanistan; [17173]

(2) what assessment she has made of the willingness of the Northern Alliance and other non-Taliban forces (a) to permit and (b) to assist in the distribution of humanitarian aid; [17175]

(3) what assessment she has made of the continuing need for air drops as a means of supplying emergency food aid to the Afghan people following the collapse of Taliban rule; [17174]

(4) what assessment she has made of the opportunities to render accelerated humanitarian assistance to the Afghan people as a result of the collapse of Taliban rule. [17172]

Clare Short: Where there have been improvements in the security situation, some international staff of humanitarian agencies have returned to Afghanistan, and access to these parts of the country has increased. However, while the changing situation has resulted in some people in the north of the country being able to return to their homes, continued fighting in the south has caused further displacement. Because of ongoing security concerns, access to vulnerable groups in this regions is extremely limited.

The UN Regional Humanitarian Coordinator met with the leadership of the United Front-led Government of the Islamic State of Afghanistan on 20 November in Kabul. The UN has received assurances from the leadership that they will help to ensure the safety and security of UN national and international staff. Improved security is key to enhancing the ability of humanitarian agencies to deliver assistance to those in need. We, and the rest of the international community, will continue to urge the authorities in Afghanistan to assist with the relief effort, and to help stabilise the environment in which the humanitarian community are trying to operate.

Efforts are under way to maximise the delivery of assistance into Afghanistan, especially in the worst affected areas of the North. The World Food Programme is working to maximise the delivery of food by road, including in areas of Afghanistan worst affected by winter. WFP has launched its first airbridge from Tajikistan to Faizabad in Northern Afghanistan. Four flights a day are planned to use this route over the next few weeks, despatching a total of 2,000 tons of food. Airdrops are still being seriously considered as a fall-back measures. WFP, with assistance from my Department, are well advanced with contingency plans for air drops using identified drop zones. Again, this is heavily dependant on security considerations.

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is the value of fairly traded (a) tea and (b) coffee used in her Department in each of the last five years. [17554]

Clare Short: Fairtrade coffee was introduced in our East Kilbride office in September 1999 and in London in June 1998. In East Kilbride, no tea is sold, but the value for coffee is:

September 1999-December 2000: £1,925

2001: £10,150.

In London, in 1998 and 1999 coffee was served at hospitality functions only. Tea was introduced in 2000, and both tea and coffee were offered for general sale from January 2000. Figures are:

1998: Coffee £1,245

1990: Coffee £2,004

2000: Coffee £4,185. Tea £320

2001: Coffee £4,868. Tea £310.

Ministerial Visits

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the developing countries visited by her Under-Secretary of State for International Development in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and countries expected to be visited in (f) 2002, (g) 2003 and (h) 2004. [16639]

Clare Short: The Under-Secretary of State for International Development visited:

South Africa, Montserrat and Ukraine in 1997

Colombia, Ukraine, Bulgaria, Russia, Brazil, Fiji, West Bank and Gaza, Jordan and South Africa in 1998.

Montserrat, Egypt, Central America, Palau, Cambodia, Poland and South Africa in 1999.

Romania, Moldova, Kosovo and Kazakhstan in 2000.

Kyrgyzstan, Albania, Indonesia and Malawi in 2001.

The Under-Secretary of State plans to visit Ukraine in December 2001 and Bangladesh in the first quarter of 2002. No visits have been planned beyond this.

Scottish Devolution

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her policy is regarding consultations prior to the publication of proposals involving the transfer of powers to the Scottish Executive by (a) primary legislation and (b) Order in Council. [13817]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland on 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 748W.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Disability Access

Tim Loughton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what measures he is taking to improve disability access to courts in England and Wales; and what financial resources are being made available for this purpose. [19289]

Mr. Wills: At the end of 1997 the Court Service commissioned the Royal Association for Disability and Rehabilitation (RADAR) to devise a methodology to enable it to conduct disability access audits of all its courts and offices. It involved Court Service personnel who had been trained in the process visiting every building on the estate to identify where they failed to meet the standards required and what remedial work would be required.

On this basis, a three year programme of works was devised (starting in 2001–02) to enable works to be completed well in advance on the 1 October 2004 Disability Discrimination Act 1995 deadline for physical improvements. £5 million has been set aside for this year and targeted on the principal court centres across the estate.

Under the Justices of the Peace Act 1997, the provision and improvement of magistrates courthouse accommodation is a matter for each Magistrates Courts Committee (MCC) to determine, in consultation with the local paying authority or authorities. Since 2000, the Department has provided £2.5 million to enable MCCs to improve facilities for the disabled in magistrates courts across England and Wales. Officials will shortly be assessing the 2002–03 bids received from MCCs for further improvement works.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what advice his Department has given to court staff on assisting disabled people attending court. [19287]

Mr. Wills: Every public office has a Customer Service Officer whose training includes considering the needs of disabled customers. To support that service, in October 1999 every member of Court Service staff was given a booklet containing guidance on assisting disabled customers. The booklet suggests ways of helping people with a range of disabilities. It also outlines arrangements for provision of assistance such as large print leaflets and communication support for deaf people. All relevant Court Service training events cover disability issues. A liaison officer is available at Court Service Headquarters to assist with disability issues.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what cover is provided to court employees by court service insurance policies when dealing with people with disabilities. [19290]

Mr. Wills: The Court Service does not provide any insurance cover for its employees.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, which court buildings in England and Wales have been assessed as disability-friendly. [19288]

Mr. Wills: I am advised that there is no definition within the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 of 'disability-friendliness' against which to make such as assessment.

However, in so far as Part M of the Building Regulations 1991 require the design of new and refurbished buildings to enable disabled people to gain independent access into and within the building, all new court builds and major court refurbishments completed since 1992 could be said to be 'disabled-friendly'. It is not possible, in the time available, to provide specific details.

I would also refer the hon. Member to my earlier reply, which sets out the steps which my Department is taking to improve disabled facilities in courts by the 1 October 2001 deadline set by the DDA.

Court Service

Kali Mountford: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, when he will publish the Court Service annual report for 2000–01. [20020]

Mr. Wills: The Court Service annual report for 2000–01 has been published today and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans she has to amend the Lord Chancellor's Department's Departmental Expenditure Limit and Running Costs Limits for 2001–02. [20019]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Request for Resources 1, the Lord Chancellor's Department Departmental Expenditure Limit for 2001–02 will be increased by £22,034,000 from £2,732,900,000 to £2,754,934,000. The increase is the net effect of take up of End Year Flexibility entitlement of: £9,000,000 in respect of Capital Modernisation Fund; £1,031,000 in respect of DEL capital expenditure; £1,355,000 in respect of an award from the Invest to Modernise Fund; £408,000 in respect of the Invest to Save Budget; awards from the Capital Modernisation Fund totalling £1,888,000 in respect of new projects and £1,174,000 from the Invest to Modernise Fund; transfers in respect of transfers of business from the Home Office in the sum of £614,000; from the Department for Work and Pensions in the sum of £20,000; from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in the sum of £100,000 and from the Ministry of Defence in the sum of £176,000. Transfers of business arising from the Machinery of Government changes of £406,000 from Cabinet Office and £5,862,000 from Home Office are also included in this supplementary estimate.

The Administration cost limit for the Lord Chancellor's Department Request for Resources 1 will be increased by £5,344,000 from £612,786,000 to £618,130,000. The increase is caused by take up of End Year Flexibility entitlement of £1,355,000; an award of £1,174,000 from the Invest to Modernise fund; Transfers in respect of transfers of business from the Home Office in the sum of £480,000; from the Ministry of Defence in the sum of £176,000; from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in the sum of £100,000 and to the Department for Work and Pensions in the sum of £200,000. Transfers of business arising from the Machinery of Government changes of £406,000 from Cabinet Office and £1,853,000 from Home Office are also included in this supplementary estimate.

The increases will be offset by transfers from the Departmental Expenditure Limits of the Home Office, Department for Work and Pensions, Department for Local Government, Transport and the Regions, and the Ministry of Defence, take-up of End Year Flexibility entitlement, an award from the Invest to Modernise Fund and awards from the Capital Modernisation Fund and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Freedom of Information

Jim Knight: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he will report to Parliament his proposals for bringing fully into force those provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 which are not yet in force. [20018]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor has today laid a Report on the Implementation of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 before both Houses. Copies of the Report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Judges' Accommodation

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the (a) units of residential accommodation owned or rented by the Lord Chancellor's Department for occupation by judges on circuit, (b) accumulative capital value of the same when last valued, (c) the running costs of maintaining the same for the financial years (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) 1999–2000 and (d) the number of judges accommodated in the same for each of the above years and the number of nights they were so accommodated. [18629]

Mr. Wills: A list of the units of residential accommodation owned or rented by the Lord Chancellor's Department for occupation by judges on circuit is contained in table 4.

The Capital Value of the Freehold Lodging Estate was £10.84 million as at June 2000.

The total cost of running the judges' lodgings during the three years in question was:

Table 1

Year	£
1997–98	4,776,684.08
1998–99	5,232,956.97
1999–2000	4,785,683.07

The number of High Court judges accommodated in the lodgings over the three years in question was:

WORK AND PENSIONS

Analytical Job Evaluation Schemes

Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of the work force is covered by analytical job evaluation schemes. [18306]

Alan Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

No systematic data are collected on the prevalence of job evaluation schemes across the economy. Job evaluation schemes tend to be used by large private sector employers and by many parts of the public sector.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants of attendance allowance there are broken down by each nation and region as at the most recent date for which figures are available; and if he will estimate the extent of underclaiming of attendance allowance. [12647]

Maria Eagle: The latest available information on the number of people receiving attendance allowance is in the table.

People in receipt of attendance allowance at 31 May 2001

Country and Government Office Region	People in receipt
Great Britain	1,290,000
England	1,064,500
North East	62,800
North West	178,700
Yorkshire and Humber	112,100
East Midlands	97,300
West Midlands	134,500

Lone Parents

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many lone parents on income support have been subjected to a sanction because they have failed to attend a personal adviser interview. [7908]

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many lone parents have had income support reduced as a sanction under the new deal for lone parents; and what provision is made for sanctions to be applied in the case of lone parents who attend interviews but decline to co-operate in the process of looking for work. [9678]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Sanctions are not applied under the new deal for lone parents as it is a voluntary programme. However, since April 2001, lone parents with a youngest child of school age (at least five years and three months old) have been asked to take part in a meeting with a personal adviser to discuss the range of help available to move into work when they make a claim for income support.

Lone parents currently claiming income support are being invited to a compulsory personal adviser meeting, on a rolling programme, starting this year with those with a youngest child of 13 to 15 years.

If lone parents currently claiming income support fail to attend a compulsory personal adviser meeting their benefit is sanctioned. This has happened in 362 cases up to 26 October. If the lone parent subsequently participates in a personal adviser meeting then the sanction is lifted. Lone parents are not required to take further action beyond participating in a personal adviser meeting.

ONE Service

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to ensure that personal advisers in the ONE programme are adequately trained in work-focused initiatives. [11924]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: There is a Learning and Assessment Framework (LAF) in place for the ONE pilots, which supports the structured training and development of the staff performing various roles in ONE offices. As part of this, all personal advisers undertake an assessment of knowledge and skills required to carry out their job. This self-assessment covers all areas of their work as advisers, including competence in conducting work-focused interviews. Where training needs are identified, the LAF provides information on the various learning tools available through ONE Training Team, Benefits Agency and Employment Service Regional Training Centres. To meet their training needs attendance on a course or open learning may be appropriate, or they may arrange to meet with local voluntary organisations to widen their knowledge and understanding of clients with special needs. Regular reviews of the progress made towards meeting identified learning needs is an integral part of the staff performance and appraisal system.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his policy is on the provision of separate information on the outcome of participation in ONE by people with mental illnesses; and if he will make a statement. [7989]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Results from the ONE evaluation about the experiences of sick or disabled people, including those with mental illness, have been published in the Department's Research Series (numbers 126, 139, 140, 149 and 150) and In-house report number 84.

Sick or disabled clients, including those with mental illness, have generally viewed the ONE service positively. When personal advisers have tailored their help to clients' circumstances, their advice and guidance has been well received.

The ONE client survey examines experiences of and outcomes from ONE for different groups of clients. Information on clients' individual characteristics, including the nature of their health problems, was also collected. Where differences between the experiences of clients with mental illnesses compared with sick or disabled clients as a whole are identified, these will be reported. The first survey information relating to clients with mental illnesses should be published later this year.

Teenage Parents (Jarrow)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assistance is available to teenage parents in the Jarrow constituency to get (a) work, (b) education and (c) training. [9106]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Teenage parents aged 18 or over are able to take full advantage of new deal for young people, which offers tailored help in finding work or suitable training, and improving prospects of remaining in sustained employment.

Teenage lone parents in receipt of income support can choose to join the new deal for lone parents, which offers a package of advice and support, including information on training opportunities, employment, in-work benefits, and child care arrangements. An in-work support service is also provided to help lone parents make the transition into employment.

Job Retention and Rehabilitation Pilots

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he plans to make further announcements about the structure and scope of the job retention and rehabilitation pilots; and if he will make a statement. [17259]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The aim of the job retention and rehabilitation pilot is to provide robust evidence about the overall impact of job retention and rehabilitation services and their cost effectiveness, and the relative impact of three intervention strategies ("boosting" help in the workplace; in health care services; and both in the workplace and through health care).

The feasibility of delivering this in practice through a "live" service to clients is currently being assessed through the three month "Feasibility Phase" of the pilot which is due to end on 18 January 2002. Nine prospective delivery organisations are being supported to fully develop, cost and submit proposals for service delivery that are fully consistent with evaluation requirements. The evaluator contracted for the feasibility phase, the National Centre for Social Research, will report on the feasibility of the pilot as a whole in the context of service delivery bids submitted to the Department.

We would expect to make an announcement on the future of the pilot, its structure and scope, after we have fully considered the outcome of the feasibility phase.

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what is the value of fairly traded (a) tea and (b) coffee used in his Department in each of the last five years; [17568]

(2) what fairly traded products, other than tea and coffee, have been purchased by his Department in each of the last five years; and what was their value. [17569]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Information on expenditure on fairly traded products is not available and could be collected only at disproportionate cost. The majority of fair trade goods are obtained by outsourced services, eg catering. Civil servants buy a coffee or tea of their choice for their own consumption.

Public Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will list those public bodies to which his Department appoints members and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000; [17707]

(2) if he will list those public bodies which are the responsibility of his Department and which are not listed in Public Bodies 2000. [17708]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Public Bodies 2000 sets out information on non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs), certain public corporations (including nationalised industries) and NHS bodies. There are four types of NDPB: executive NDPBs; advisory NDPBs; tribunal NDPBs; and boards of visitors to penal establishments. The next edition will be published around the end of the year. Information about task forces, annual reports, and ad hoc advisory groups is set out in an annual report published by Cabinet Office. Copies of Public Bodies 2000 are in the Library of the House and this publication may be accessed via Cabinet Office's website http://www.official-documents.co.uk/document/caboff/pb00/pb00.htm. Copies of the annual report on task forces and similar bodies have also been placed in the Library of the House and the annual report is being made available on Cabinet Office's website.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State appoints members and is responsible for the following public bodies which do not appear in the Public Bodies 2000 publication: Disability Rights Commission (DRC), Independent Living Fund (ILF), Independent Review Service (IRS), Social Fund Commissioner (IRS for the Social Fund) and the 10th Anniversary Trust.

Responsibility for the Appeals Service and Motability lie with the Department for Work and Pensions although my right hon. Friend does not appoint members. the Lord Chancellor's Department (LCD) makes appointments for the Appeals Service and Motability board members are drawn from finance, industry, the professions, trade unions and voluntary organisations.

Local Bodies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list those local bodies which were set up under legislation which is the responsibility of his Department and its predecessors since May 1997. [17709]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Advisory Committee for Disabled People in Employment and Training (ACDET), the Disability Rights Commission (DRC), Race Education and Employment Forum (REEF) and the Appeals Service (TAS) are those bodies set up since May 1997 and are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. ACDET was set up in June 1998, REEF on 16 November 1999, and DRC and TAS in April 2000.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what were the gross costs of the Regulatory Impact Assessment for (a) the Social Security Benefit Up-rating (No. 2) Order 2000 and (b) the Social Security Fraud Bill (revised). [17750]

Mr. McCartney: These costs are shown in the published regulatory impact assessments which are available in the Library.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many older people will receive winter fuel payments this winter in Tynemouth constituency. [17994]

Mr. McCartney: Last winter, around 19,300 people aged 60 and over in Tynemouth constituency received a winter fuel payment. The figure for this year will be similar.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many older people will receive winter fuel payments this winter in the Loughborough constituency; what plans he has to extend winter fuel payments to other groups in receipt of benefits; and if he will make a statement. [18473]

Mr. McCartney: Last winter, around 15,000 people aged 60 and over in the Loughborough constituency received a winter fuel payment. The figure for this year will be similar. There are no plans to change the existing regulations.

Pensions Service

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many local advisers will be assigned to each local office of the new Pensions Service; what its total staffing complement will be; and if he will make a statement on plans to offer claimants a personal interview if requested. [18026]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The Pension Service will provide a customer-focused service dedicated to the needs of today's and future pensioners. It will be modern and efficient, and accessible by telephone, post, in time the internet and locally where pensioners need to do so. It will work to join up services for pensioners both locally and nationally and will build on existing best practice.

There will be a local service in each area offering a face to face service for those customers who need it. In addition the local service will work with other locally based organisations to provide information on the full range of local services of interest to pensioners through outreach and visiting activity. The design and size of the local service is currently being planned.

New Deal

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) record is kept and (b) assessment made of the destinations of people who leave the new deal for lone parents for employment. [18055]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Records of the destination of people leaving the new deal for lone parents are published monthly in the Statistical First Release, which is available in the Library.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment his Department has made on the effectiveness of the new deal for lone parents in south Tyneside. [17404]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We are giving lone parents more choices and more help than ever before to move off welfare and into work. The new deal for lone parents is a key part of this range of support and has helped over 100,000 lone parents to find work.

By the end of August, 2,116 lone parents had joined the new deal for lone parents in the Gateshead and south Tyneside district. 301 of these lone parents have taken up education or training opportunities and 1,064 have moved into work.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of those on the new deal for lone parents left for employment in the last 12 months, broken down by region. [9641]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Across Great Britain 56 per cent. of those leaving the new deal for lone parents left for employment during the last 12 months.

A regional break down is provided in the table.

Proportion of people leaving new deal for lone parents for employment, August 2000-July 2001

Employment service region	Percentage
Scotland	62
Wales	63
Northern	60
North West	57
Yorkshire and Humberside	66
West Midlands	52
East Midlands and Eastern	59
South West	58
London and South East	46

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the effects of the new deal for lone parents on levels of employment and benefit take-up among lone parents. [9680]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The following reports have been commissioned but have not yet been published:

Date expected	Title
Spring 2002	Synthesis Report 2002
Spring 2003	Quantitative Survey of Lone Parents

The following reports have already been published:

Date	Title
June 2000	The New Deal for Lone Parents: A Review of Evaluation Evidence
April 2001	Jobfinders Grant: Research amongst lone parents
August 2001	New Deal for Lone Parents: An Evaluation of the Innovative Pilots
October 2001	NDLP Evaluation: A Quantitative Survey of Lone Parents on Income Support

The Statistical First Release, published monthly with information from the NDLP database, also includes useful information.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have entered the new deal gateway (a) once, (b) twice and (c) three times or more in respect of the (i) new deal for lone parents, (ii) new deal for young people, (iii) new deal for the over 25s, (iv) new deal for the over 50s and (v) new deal for disabled people. [11593]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: At August 2001, 697,400 people had entered the new deal for young people programme. Of these 100,200 clients have entered the programme twice and 9,100 have entered three or more times.

At August 2001, 355,400 people had entered the pre-April 2001 new deal 25 plus programme. Of these 65,150 clients have entered the programme twice and 11,150 have entered three or more times.

Information is not available on the number of people re-entering the new deal for lone parents, the new deal for disabled people or new deal 50 plus.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the impact of the new deal for the over 50s on levels of employment and benefit take-up among the over 50s. [11594]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Although there has been a considerable amount of research into benefit take-up by pensioners, there is none which has been specifically targeted at the over 50s.

Research of new deal 50 plus has been commissioned. The research reports (with dates where published) are:

Evaluation of new deal 50 plus: qualitative evidence from clients: first phase—July 2000

Evaluation of new deal 50 plus: qualitative evidence from ES and BA staff: first phase—August 2000

Evaluation of new deal 50 plus: qualitative evidence from ES and BA staff: second phase—March 2001

Evaluation of new deal 50 plus: qualitative evidence from clients: second phase—March 2001

Evaluation of new deal 50 plus: Research with Individuals (Wave 1)—September 2001

Evaluation of new deal 50 plus: Research with Individuals (Wave 2)—September 2001

Evaluation of new deal 50 plus: qualitative evidence from clients: third phase—November 2001

Evaluation of new deal 50 plus: Summary Report.

Copies of the published reports can be found in the Library.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many participants in the new deal have received (a) training and (b) subsidised employment in the construction industry in each year since 1997. [11600]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We estimate that since April 1998 about 12 per cent. of subsidised employment starts in the new deal for young people have been in the construction industry. All subsidised employment participants receive training. Construction training can also be accessed through the further education and training option.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) male and (b) female members of each ethnic group have participated in the new deal from the Wycombe constituency since it was set up. [14868]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Figures are not available for the new deal for disabled people and the new deal for partners. Due to the small volumes involved, figures for the other new deals broken down by ethnic group are not published at constituency level because of the risk of identifying individuals.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what targets he has set in respect of the new deal for the over 50s in the next 12 months. [15836]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: New deal 50 plus forms part of the A2 annual performance agreement (APA) target, which aims to get 410,000 people into work in 2001–02. The A2 target also includes the new deal for young people, new deal 25 plus, employment zones, jobseeker's allowance long-term unemployed and people with disabilities not counted under other APA targets.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many participants in the new deal for 50 plus received training grants in each of the last 12 months. [15843]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is in the table.

Month	Numbers claiming the new deal 50 plus training grant
October 2000	112
November 2000	120
December 2000	124
January 2001	133
February 2001	140
March 2001	189
April 2001	150
May 2001	183
June 2001	166
July 2001	155
August 2001	180
September 2001	158

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the implementation of the new deal 50 plus in Coventry. [16270]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: New deal 50 plus has been operating nationally since April 2000. In the first 18 months of national operation over 51,000 people have been helped into work, including 350 people in Coventry.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the answer of 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 160W, which Government Departments have taken on staff through the new deal programme since its inception. [18058]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Chatham and Aylesford (Mr. Shaw) on 28 November 2001, Official Report, column 901W.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the answer of 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 160W, how many participants in (a) the new deal for young people and (b) the new deal for the long-term unemployed have entered (i) employment and (ii) sustained employment lasting more than 13 weeks in Government Departments in each year since 1997, broken down by each Department. [18059]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions further to his answer of 6 November 2001, Official Report, column 195W, on industrial injuries disablement benefit, for what reason information is not available on claims for industrial injuries disablement benefit which have been refused as a result of the applicant's condition being caused through work processes and not as a result of accident or prescribed disease. [18928]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: In general we do not keep records of the reasons for disallowing claims for benefit where to do so would serve no purpose. If, in the course of reviewing scientific and medical developments, the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council recommends changes to the way conditions caused by work processes are dealt with under the industrial injuries scheme, we will consider those recommendations and monitor the number of cases affected.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Individual Learning Accounts

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations she has received from training providers affected by the closure of the ILA scheme for an introduction of another scheme; and if she will make a statement. [17297]

John Healey [holding answer 22 November 2001]: We have received representations from a number of Individual Learning Account (ILA) registered providers expressing disappointment about the withdrawal of the programme. Many have also offered their help in the development of our future plans. We welcome their offers and will take advantage of their experience. I hope to announce more details on the process for developing a further scheme in due course.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people were under investigation in relation to individual learning accounts (a) before 30 October and (b) at the latest available date. [19323]

John Healey: Before 30 October 2001 29 cases had been taken up for investigation by the Department's Special Investigations Unit. As at 27 November 2001 this had increased to 60 cases. The police are currently involved in five cases.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether she consulted training providers before bringing forward the suspension of the Individual Learning Account scheme; and if she will make a statement. [19325]

John Healey: Because of the need to take immediate action it was not possible to consult training providers. The Department for Education and Skills called in police to investigate new allegations of fraud and theft involving Individual Learning Accounts. Officers from the Department's Special Investigations Unit had confirmed the allegations on Thursday 22 November. With the advice of the police and to prevent serious risk to public funds, the ILA programme was shut down on Friday 23 November.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what considerations informed her decision to bring forward the suspension date for individual learning accounts. [19326]

John Healey: The Department for Education and Skills called in police to investigate new allegations of fraud and theft involving individual learning accounts. Officers from the Department's Special Investigations Unit were alerted to those allegations on Wednesday 21 November and confirmed them on Thursday 22 November. With the advice of the police and to prevent a serious risk to public funds, the ILA programme was shut down on Friday 23 November.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many complaints had been received in relation to the operation of individual learning accounts (a) before 30 October and (b) at the latest available date. [19324]

John Healey: Up to 31 October 2001 there had been 8,448 (0.33 per cent.) complaints received concerning the operation of individual learning accounts. As at 19 November 2001 the number of complaints had increased to 10,276 (0.41 per cent.). Just over a quarter of complaints have raised questions about non-compliance of learning providers with the rules of the ILA scheme.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the public expenditure consequences of the operations of the individual learning account scheme between 30 October and 23 November. [19327]

John Healey: We cannot give a figure for expenditure between 30 October and 23 November.

There are still significant numbers of payments due in respect of claims already made by learning providers and committed expenditure in respect of learning already booked by providers on the ILA Centre system before it was shut down on 23 November. Because of the police investigation into allegations of fraud and abuse we do not, currently, have access to Capita's ILA Centre system on which the data are stored. We also need to validate both the claims and the bookings held on the ILA Centre system and take action to recoup moneys which have been improperly claimed. As a result it is not possible to estimate the extent of the additional financial commitment at present.

FE Course Costs

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made for the current financial year of the average cost per student following a two-year curriculum 2000 programme in (a) a school sixth form, (b) a sixth form college and (c) a tertiary college. [18348]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The department does not publish the average cost per student of a two-year Curriculum 2000 programme. However, the latest estimate of the average delegated funding per sixth form student in schools per year for 2001–02 is £3,330. The total funding per full time equivalent student in FE sector colleges per year in 2001–02 is £3,660. Separate figures for sixth form colleges and tertiary colleges are not available. It should be noted that the two unit funding figures quoted are not directly comparable, as the FE unit funding includes total public funding allocated for further education, while the schools' figure is based only on delegated funds and excludes other funding which the school receives centrally from LEAs which impact on post-16 students.

Class Sizes (Somerset)

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average secondary school class size was in (a) the County of Somerset and (b) the constituency of Yeovil in (i) 1996, (ii) 1997, (iii) 1998, (iv) 1999, (v) 2000 and (vi) 2001; and if she will make a statement. [18373]

Mr. Timms: The available information is shown in the following table.

Average class sizes in maintained secondary schools: Classes taught by one teacher

January each year	Somerset LEA	Yeovil parliamentary constituency
1996	23.2	23.9
1997	23.2	23.2
1998	23.9	24.2
1999	23.9	24.1
2000	23.6	24.8

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

"Time for Reform" Consultation Exercise

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects legislation to be introduced to implement the recommendations of the "Time for Reform" consultation exercise. [19449]

Mr. Caborn: We remain fully committed to the policies set out in the White Paper "Time for Reform" and intend to introduce legislation to reform and modernise the alcohol and public entertainment licensing laws as soon as parliamentary time permits.

Ministerial Visits (North-East)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many times since November 2000 Ministers from her Department have visited (a) the Teesside area and (b) Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency to meet with locally based businesses. [19070]

Mr. Caborn: Ministers from this Department visited the Tees Valley area on four occasions since November 2000 and met a number of individuals and organisations which included locally based businesses. None of these visits were to the Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency.

Film Industry

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent action she has taken to support and develop the UK film industry. [19068]

Mr. Caborn: The Government set up the Film Council in October 1999 to develop a sustainable UK film industry. It has since launched the following initiatives:

£60 million of lottery funding for investment over a three year period in film development and production.

A new £1 million a year training fund making awards for schemes targeting writers and development executives, and producers and business executives.

9 regional screen agencies to develop film regionally.

A £1 million scheme to teach young people to make short films using digital technology.

The Cinema Marketing Agency, a co-funded venture between the Film Council and the All Industry Marketing Committee, to market and promote cinema to all audiences in order to increase the frequency of cinema-going.

The new MEDIA Desk backed by the Film Council, providing information about the MEDIA Plus programme to the UK film, television and new media industry.

A research and Statistics Unit for the first time able to provide comprehensive and authoritative data and information on the film industry for the benefit of the industry itself, Government and the media.

In addition the Film Council, through the British Film Commission, continues to promote inward investment from the international film industry into the UK. The British Film Institute is driving forward the strategy for film culture and education in the UK. The Film Council also co-funds film activities in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in his March Budget, extended to 2005 the tax relief for film. This will help encourage investment in British film production.

Sports Clubs

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about tax relief for community and amateur sports clubs. [18494]

Mr. Caborn: My Department has been in regular dialogue with HM Treasury and the Inland Revenue following my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's announcement in his Budget speech of his intention to consult on a tax relief for community amateur sports clubs. My officials have also been in close dialogue with representatives of Sport England, the Central Council of Physical Recreation and the National Playing Fields Association on this issue.

Following the pre-Budget report this week, the Government are pleased to announce that the Treasury is today launching a consultation document on the best way for tax relief to help community amateur sports clubs that make a positive contribution to their local communities. The Charity Commission has also today announced that it will recognise as charitable community amateur sports clubs that promote participation in healthy recreation by the provision of facilities for the playing of particular sports. This development should enable many community amateur sports clubs to obtain charitable status and the tax relief that goes with it. My officials have been in discussion with the Charity Commission about the potential impact of this development.

DEFENCE

NATO

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the UK will pay to NATO as its share of NATO's overall costs in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04; and what the equivalent figures are for other NATO member countries. [19822]

Mr. Hoon: The Ministry of Defence pays the UK's contributions to NATO's Military Budget and Security Investment Programme. It also makes a very small payment towards the Civil Budget, to which the major contributor is the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The estimated net expenditure for the current financial year is £113 million. Subject to exchange rate and other technical variations, we would expect the next year's payments to be of the same order. In the subsequent year, ceilings have still to be agreed for NATO's budget year 2003 which is the major influence on our financial year 2003–04 payments.

We do not have figures for other NATO countries. However, their payments are made in accordance with the agreed cost shares for each budget.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how often the NATO-ESDP Working Groups on capabilities have met; and if he will make a statement. [19823]

Mr. Hoon: The NATO-EU Ad Hoc Working Group on Capabilities has met eight times, including its inaugural meeting on 28 July 2000.

The group was set up following the Feira European Council in June 2000. The group has enabled useful exchanges of information and dialogue between the two organisations on capability development issues, in addition to the extensive staff contacts that have taken place on the development of the Headline Goal and the Defence Capabilities Initiative.

Departmental Report

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he plans to publish a report on his Department's performance during financial year 2000–01. [20351]

Mr. Hoon: Information about the Ministry of Defence's (MOD's) performance during the last financial year is contained within the MOD Performance Report 2000–01, which will be laid before the House on 30 November, as Cmd 5290. Copies of this report will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Operation Veritas

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he expects that the extra £100 million allocation announced in the Chancellor's pre-Budget report will fully cover the costs associated with Operation Veritas in the current financial year. [19827]

Mr. Hoon: The extra £100 million has been made available by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer to cover new equipment and immediate operational requirements needed for operations in Afghanistan and the campaign against international terrorism.

We are at a relatively early stage of Operation Veritas. The financial data on the costs of the operation are still being gathered. I hope to be able to provide the information in due course.

European Security and Defence Policy

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which defence projects in the EU have been (a) initiated and (b) brought forward as a result of the aspiration to achieve the objectives of the European Security and Defence Policy. [19829]

Mr. Hoon: Decisions to initiate or accelerate defence projects are driven by a wide range of factors. These encompass both national priorities and the relevant commitments of nations towards international bodies such as NATO and the EU.

The European Council has agreed that the capability objectives of the European Security and Defence Policy and those of NATO will, for the countries concerned, be mutually reinforcing. It is therefore neither practical nor necessary to categorise project initiatives solely under a European Security and Defence Policy or NATO heading.

EU Defence Spending

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the EU member states which are increasing their defence spending in real terms over the next three years. [19830]

Mr. Hoon: The UK is committed to increasing its defence expenditure in real terms between financial years 2000–01 and 2003–04. Other countries' defence spending plans are a matter for them. EU member states have committed themselves to real increases in defence capability over the next few years, in particular at the Capabilities Improvement Conference in Brussels on 19–20 November.

HMS Gannet

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the reasons were for the timing of the decommissioning of Squadron 819 at RNAS Prestwick. [17655]

Mr. Ingram: The planned date for the reduction of HMS Gannet to a Forward Operating Base remains 31 March 2002. In order to achieve this drawdown in practical terms it has been necessary to reduce the supporting infrastructure and move the Anti-Submarine Warfare helicopters based at HMS Gannet in stages, at the same time re-appointing the personnel of 819 Naval Air Squadron (NAS) associated with these aircraft. This resulted in the decommissioning of 819 NAS on 1 November 2001.

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy personnel are based at HMS Gannet; and what was the cost of their (a) accommodation and (b) subsistence for each of the last 12 months. [17656]

Mr. Ingram: There are 210 service personnel serving in HMS Gannet. The total accommodation and subsistence costs for the past 12 months are as follows:

£000

	Accommodation costs	Subsistence
2001
November	86	27
October	109	27
September	111	9
August	98	8
July	117	8
June	99	7
May	123	8
April	107	7
March	103	8
February	102	7
January	94	6
2000
December	96	6
Total	1,245	128

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy personnel will be based at HMS Gannet, Prestwick from April 2002; and how they will be accommodated. [17657]

Mr. Ingram: The Scheme of Complement for the HMS Gannet Forward Operating Base, from 1 April 2002, will be 82 RN personnel. They will be accommodated in either Service Family Accommodation (Married Quarters) for married and accompanied individuals, or Substitute Single Service Accommodation for those who are either unmarried or are married but are serving unaccompanied.

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost is of the lease of the HMS Gannet site at Prestwick airport; and how long the lease has to run. [17658]

Mr. Ingram: There are two leases at the HMS Gannet site—one for the domestic site, known as Greensite and one for the operational site. The current leases for these two sites are due to expire in November 2013 and July 2019 respectively. Because the cost of the leases is commercially confidential, I am withholding the information requested under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Departmental Staff

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many employees of (a) his Department and (b) agencies sponsored by his Department work in (i) London, (ii) areas benefiting from EU objective 1 status, (iii) areas with objective 2 status and (iv) other areas. [16111]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The number of permanent and casual civil servants employed by DTLR(C) at 1 October is given in the table. The numbers for the agencies are based on the Departmental annual report for 2001. The information on the number of staff working in areas benefiting from EU objective 1 and objective 2 status is unavailable due to the disproportionate cost of collection.

Street Warden Scheme

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which areas in London were successful in their bids under the street warden scheme; and which were unsuccessful. [17775]

Ms Keeble: The Government Office for London received 45 street wardens bids. 18 bids, totalling more than £4.2 million, were approved.

Organisations other than local authorities, for example, housing associations, were eligible to apply under this DTLR funded pilot scheme. The table shows the successful and unsuccessful bids, the lead agency and the bid area.

Terminal 5

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his statement of 20 November, on Terminal 5, if he will set out the terms of reference of the research study to reassess attitudes to aircraft noise. [17792]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The initial terms of reference are as follows:

Aims and objectives

A1. The White Paper, "New Deal for Transport", announced the Government's intention to formulate an aviation policy looking some 30 years ahead and stated the principle that the aviation industry should, in broad terms, meet the external costs it imposes. The Department's consultation on "The Future of Aviation" noted (para 149) that further research into the monetary valuation of the effects of noise may be needed to inform charging strategies.

A2. The Study is to reassess attitudes to aircraft noise in England; their correlation with the Leq noise index; and to examine (hypothetical) willingness to pay in respect of nuisance from such noise, in relation to other elements, on the basis of stated preference (SP) survey evidence.

Issues and scope

A3. The Study shall be of sufficient scale and scope to provide a methodologically robust re-assessment of the validity of the Leq family of noise indices as a proxy for relative community annoyance; and in particular the relative weightings on average event noise level and number of events.

This project was announced by my hon. Friend the Member for Coventry, North-East (Mr. Ainsworth) in May and is not directly connected with the planning decision on Heathrow Terminal 5. The project consists of two phases and is expected to last approximately three years. The contract has recently been awarded to a consortium led by The MVA Consultancy.

I will also ensure that all available research into sleep disturbance and attitudes to aircraft noise by day and by night will be taken into account in the consultation about the bight noise regime at the designated London airports to be undertaken by 2003.

Homeless People

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proportion of lettings were made available to homeless households in priority need by local authorities; what proportion of lettings were made available to homeless households in priority need by housing associations; and how many homeless households were in temporary accommodation by region at the end of each year from 1991–92 to 2000–01. [18301]

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list (a) by region and (b) by size of property in terms of number of bedrooms the proportion of (i) secure lettings made available by local authorities to homeless households and (ii) lettings made available to homeless households by housing associations in 2000–01. [18299]

Ms Keeble: Information for 2000–01 is not yet available. Information on 1999–2000 lettings reported by local authorities on their 2000 Housing Investment Programme (HIP) returns, and corresponding data in respect of registered social landlord lettings collected through the CORE data systems are given in the tables:

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many homeless people there are in the Buckingham constituency. [20132]

Ms Keeble: The information is as follows:

Homeless households (and homeless at home) in accommodation at 31 March 2001 in Aylesbury Vale

	Number
Total	195
of which:
With dependant children or a pregnant woman	159

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many (a) permanent and (b) temporary homeless people there were in rural areas broken down by local authority in (i) 1996, (ii) 1997, (iii) 1998, (iv) 1999, (v) 2000 and (vi) 2001. [19647]

Ms Keeble: I have placed the information requested in the Library.

Public Transport (ME Sufferers)

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to provide for the subsidisation of public transport use for ME sufferers. [18830]

Ms Keeble: The Transport Act 2000 guarantees that disabled people are entitled to at least half fares or better on local bus services, with a free bus pass. In addition the Transport Act 1985 (outside London) and the Greater London Authority Act 1999 (London) give local authorities the discretion to provide concessionary travel for their resident disabled people on public transport services.

The provisions in all three Acts extend the concessions to a wide range of disabled people. It is for local authorities to decide whether a person is eligible for concessionary travel given the definitions of the Acts.

Home Zones

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many home zones are (a) in force and (b) under preparation or development, broken down by local authority. [18854]

Ms Keeble: We are currently monitoring nine pilot home zone projects in England and Wales. The pilot schemes are in Ealing, Lambeth, Leeds, Manchester, Monmouthshire, Nottingham, Peterborough, Plymouth and Sittingbourne. A number of local authorities have implemented home zones outside of the pilot project.

A £30 million challenge fund for home zones in England was announced by the Prime Minister in April. 237 bids were received from 110 local traffic authorities. We hope to announce details of the successful schemes before Christmas.

House Sales

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the home search and survey process in the house sale market; and what plans he has to improve the system. [18914]

Ms Keeble: Surveys and searches are intended to tell prospective home buyers about the condition of the property they are buying and about registered title, charges, planning highways and other matters directly affecting the property. Nearly all prospective home buyers have searches carried out, but only a minority commission a professional survey. Most of the remainder rely on a valuation inspection carried out on behalf of a lender. This is often a false economy since a valuation inspection is not a condition survey.

Searches and survey information are of key importance to home buying decisions and yet, under the present home buying and selling process, they become available only after terms have been agreed between buyer and seller. This is a major cause of uncertainty, delay and transaction failure. Our research showed that 28 per cent. of transactions failed after terms had been agreed, and that in 43 per cent. of those cases the reason was problems revealed by either an independent survey or a lender's valuation inspection. This failure rate costs consumers in the region of £350 million each year in wasted expenditure.

Our package of measures to improve the home buying and selling process will address this problem. Home sellers will be required to make key information available in the form of a "seller's pack" before terms are agreed, rather than the buyer having to uncover the facts later under the current system.

Modernising the process of carrying out searches is also a crucial part of the reform package. The National Land Information Service (NLIS) will provide a fast, one-stop, on-line national searches service.

As soon as parliamentary time allows, we will introduce legislation to make it easier for people buying and selling homes through a seller's pack.

Planning Appeals

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many planning applications were subject to an appeal against refusal; what percentages of appeals were (a) wholly allowed, (b) partially allowed and (c) dismissed; and in how many cases costs were awarded against the relevant council in respect of planning applications submitted to (i) Lewes district council and (ii) Wealden district council for each year from 1990 to date. [19087]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 29 November 2001]: The provision of information on planning appeals is the responsibility of the Planning Inspectorate. I have asked the Inspectorate's Chief Executive, Mr. Chris Shepley, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Shepley to Norman Baker, dated 30 November 2001:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about planning appeal statistics in the Lewes District Council and Wealden District Council areas.

The numbers of appeals received in these areas are shown on the enclosed tables. Information available about decisions issued in 1990 is not fully available as our statistics database records only appeals received from 1990 onwards. Many of the decisions in 1990 would have been received in 1989, so no record exists. For planning appeals, partially allowed decisions are recorded as allowed.

It is not possible to provide the information requested about costs awards as these records are only maintained on a national basis.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the time scale for introducing high speed trains on the west coast main line. [18918]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 29 November 2001]: High-speed trains currently operate on the route at 110 mph. 125 mph running is expected from 2003.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the upgrade of the west coast main line. [18919]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 29 November 2001]: The Government remain committed to providing a revitalised rail network, and the west coast main line upgrade is an integral part of that commitment. It is clear from our discussions with the Strategic Rail Authority, the Railway Administrator and Virgin that parts of the project are subject to uncertainties over cost increases and timetables. We are in discussion with the parties on the issues involved and the options. At this stage we cannot predict the outcome of those discussions, but we are working hard to reach agreement on a project which is value for money and can be delivered to a clear timetable, subject to the need to obtain any planning consents.

Social Housing (Rural Areas)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 26 November 2001, Official Report, column 693W, on social housing, if he will list the proportion of social housing stock in rural areas that has transferred from local authority ownership under (a) the right-to-buy scheme and (b) registered social landlords in (i) 1996, (ii) 1997, (iii) 1998, (iv) 1999, (v) 2000 and (vi) 2001. [19906]

Ms Keeble: The number of local authority dwellings in rural areas transferred from local authority ownership under the right-to-buy scheme and to registered social landlords (as reported by local authorities) in each of the years 1995–96 to 2000–01 as a proportion of the total authority stock at 1 April each year is as follows:

Proportion of LA stock transferred from LA ownership

Percentage

Year	Right to buy scheme	To RSLs
1995–96	1.2	3.4
1996–97	1.2	2.1
1997–98	1.5	1.5
1998–99	1.4	5.5
1999–2000	2.0	3.5
2000–01	1.6	6.9

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, of 26 November 2001, Official Report, column 319W, on the Rural White Paper, if he will list the proportion of social housing stock occupied in rural areas by local authority in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998, (d) 1999, (e) 2000 and (f) 2001. [19787]

Ms Keeble: I have placed the information requested in the Library. The table presents data showing the derived levels of occupied social stock as at 1 April in each year from 1996 to 2001, distinguishing between stock owned by local authorities and by Registered Social Landlords, in authorities categorised as either 'mixed rural' or 'deep rural' at local authority level. For comparison purposes information is shown based on post local govern reorganisation boundaries. Estimates of residential housing stock and vacancy levels are reported by local authorities annually on housing investment programme returns.

Planning

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many of the planning issues called in last year were rejected. [19834]

Ms Keeble: 127 planning applications were called-in in the last financial year (1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001). Of the 55 applications which have so far been determined planning permission was refused in 31 cases.

Affordable Housing (Planning Guidance)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on how section 106 agreements can be made to encourage cross-boundary co-operation between authorities for the purposes of the delivery of affordable housing; and what guidance he gives on what reference should be made to (a) circular 6/98 and (b) Planning Policy Guidance 3. [19468]

Ms Keeble: Planning Policy Guidance Note 3 "Housing" advised that regional planning bodies may need to estimate the future balance between market and affordable housing, and identify and assess regional and sub-regional trends and factors which are likely to influence local housing need. In drafting regional planning guidance, they should also take into account regional housing statements which provide a regional context for local authorities when drawing up their housing strategies and support the development of more strategic approaches to tackling housing need.

We intend to publish shortly a consultation document on our proposals for reforming planning obligations and how we might increase the provision of affordable housing through the planning system.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what checks his Department makes to ensure that there are consistent determinations through the planning process with particular reference to the provision of affordable housing through section 106 agreements. [19469]

Ms Keeble: Development plans form the framework within which decisions on proposals for development are taken. The Secretary of State is a statutory consultee in their preparation and can make objections when there are conflicts with national guidance, including on affordable housing, which do not appear to be justified by local circumstances. He has powers of intervention to direct that plan proposals shall be modified before adoption. He can also call in planning applications where the provision of affordable housing is at issue.

Flood Plains

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list those planning applications that have been agreed for development in the flood plains since the introduction of the revised Planning Policy Guidance 25; and what was the position of the Environment Agency in each case. [19467]

Ms Keeble: This information is not available centrally.

The Environment Agency reports annually under the high-level targets published in 1999 on its response to planning applications, identifying cases where the agency sustained objections on flood-risk grounds and final decisions, by the local planning authority or on appeal, were in line with or contrary to agency advice. The report for 1999–2000, covering the period from 1 October 1999 to 31 March 2000 was placed in the Library of the House by the then Minister for Planning on 21 December 2000, Official Report, column 311W. The report for 2000–01, covering the period from 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001, is expected to be published shortly.

NATS

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the ability of the NATS PPP to provide for the (a) debt repayment and (b) capital investment contained in the business plan negotiated with the strategic partner; [17659]

(2) how the investment required by National Air Traffic Services in the next 10 years will be funded. [17662]

Mr. Jamieson: NATS are finalising their business plan, which will take into account the impact of the event of 11 September. The plan will be submitted to the Government shortly.

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if an application has been made to alter the strategic agreement for National Air Traffic Services; and if he will make a statement. [17660]

Mr. Jamieson: The Airline Group (the Government's strategic partner in the Public Private Partnership for National Air Traffic Services) has made application to alter the Strategic Partnership Agreement in relation to the deferral in the completion of the New Scottish Centre. The Strategic Partnership Agreement regulates the relationship between the Government and the Airline Group as shareholders in National Air Traffic Services.

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to review the structure of the NATS PPP following the events of 11 September. [17661]

Mr. Jamieson: I have no plans for such a review.

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how the costs of voluntary redundancies at NATS will be met; and what assessment he has made of the effects on the pension fund. [17663]

Mr. Jamieson: NATS has made provision for such restructuring costs as part of its Business Plan. The direct effect on the pension fund will be the injection of moneys to the fund to support the cost of pension enhancement for those fund members taking voluntary retirement.

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if Service Level Agreements with NATS engineers will be guaranteed following the engineering review. [17666]

Mr. Jamieson: NATS has defined service levels for all its operational equipment systems. As part of its engineering review, the company has been reviewing the required levels of service for these systems, and these will continue to be included in Service Level Agreements.

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what report he has received from the Economic Regulator on cost cutting measures for NATS. [17667]

Mr. Jamieson: No such report has been received.

Atlantic House, Prestwick

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what progress has been made in replacing the oceanic system at Atlantic House in Prestwick; and what is his estimate of its operational date. [17664]

Mr. Jamieson: Procurement options are being investigated and, pending a decision on the way forward, it is not possible to predict the operational date of the new system. In the meantime the current system is subject to a sustained programme that will keep it fully operational and capable of meeting the forecast capacity demand at least until 2006. The existing system is currently enjoying its best performance since its introduction, with 100 per cent. availability in 2001.

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what is his estimate of the lifespan of the upgraded radar system being installed at Atlantic House, Prestwick. [17665]

Mr. Jamieson: The new radar data processing system at Prestwick is capable of displaying a maximum of 350 aircraft on a radar screen at any one time. The current maximum number being displayed is around 150. The system could be modified to display a greater number of targets if that were required. However, the project plan was based on the assumption that the system would not reach the capacity of 350 aircraft being displayed on a screen before 2012.

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will make an announcement of the rough sleepers unit's progress towards meeting the target to reduce the number of people sleeping rough. [20409]

Ms Keeble: The latest figures on rough sleepers in England will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses on the morning of Monday 3 December.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Fraud

Phil Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish the inspection report of the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate in respect of Birmingham city council. [20453]

Malcolm Wicks: The Benefit Fraud Inspectorate report was published today in respect of Birmingham city council and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

BFI reports that the council's performance in benefits administration was poor and counter fraud activity was very weak at the time of inspection. Inspectors found claims processing backlogs and a very poor filing system. There was a significant risk of internal fraud with procedural weaknesses including flawed computer access control and management checking.

BFI considered the council's overpayment administration was inadequate with some £3.5 million of overpayments outstanding for over two years without any recovery action being instigated. Overpayments were regularly reclassified as "fraudulent" without evidence of it—£2.2 million was reclassified in this way in 1999–2000.

The report notes the council recognised its benefit administration inadequacies and restructured its service shortly before the inspection. This included the establishment of a central overpayment team.

Inspectors found that a high level of WBS savings was claimed inappropriately. The council was failing to gather enough evidence and was not meeting subsidy order requirements. The report also notes other weaknesses in the council's counter fraud activity including a failure to analyse risks or use inspectors' powers.

The report makes recommendations to help the council address weaknesses and to improve the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit, as well as its counter fraud activities.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and will be asking the council for its proposals in response to the findings and recommendations of the BFI.

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the extent of benefit fraud in (a) Scotland and (b) the United Kingdom on an annual basis. [10754]

Malcolm Wicks: Our most recent estimate is that £2 billion is lost annually through benefit fraud in Great Britain. This estimate cannot be broken down by region.

We have set firm targets for reducing the amount of fraud and error in income support and jobseeeker's allowance and we have already met our first milestone, of a 10 per cent. reduction, 18 months ahead of schedule.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library the legal advice received by his Department on the disclosure of databases of personal data held by third parties to benefit fraud officials, as covered by the anti-fraud social security legislation of 1997 and 2001. [17216]

Malcolm Wicks: We do not publish internal discussion and advice. This is in line with Part II, paragraph 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Pension Forecasts

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the manner in which the Government will provide information to individuals about combined state and private pension forecasts. [8410]

Mr. McCartney: Combined pension forecasts are issued by private/occupational pension providers using information made available by the Department for Work and Pensions.

Individuals will be informed about combined pension forecasts by their scheme provider/employer, and can choose whether or not they wish to receive one.

Pilot exercises conducted with the private sector demonstrated that recipients of the new joint statement, which provides people with easy to understand information on both their state and private pensions, found the service helpful in planning their future income needs in retirement.

The focus of the Department's recruitment activity is on pension scheme providers and employers with occupational pension schemes who will offer the new combined pension forecast service to their members. We will continue to provide general information to individuals about the various pension options available and the importance of reviewing their needs regularly through our pensions education campaign.

The Department for Work and Pensions commenced the recruitment of pensions scheme providers at the annual Pensions Show on 17 October 2001 and intend to exhibit at appropriate industry events in the future.

New Deal

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what resources are being targeted to help people aged (a) 50 and over and (b) under 25 years who are not working, to set up their own businesses. [11652]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The new deal 50 plus, new deal for disabled people, new deal 25 plus, work based learning for adults and training for work, all provide a range of help for people over 50 who wish to set up in business. Support for the under 25s who wish to establish their own business is provided by two major initiatives: the self-employment route of new deal for young people and the youth enterprise initiative.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what alternative to individual learning accounts is offered to new deal 50 plus participants reaching the end of their 52 weeks on employment credit and in receipt of a training grant. [15845]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We are currently in the process of making alternative arrangements following the suspension of ILAs. In the meantime, people can still access the £150 new deal 50 plus contribution by contacting their local Jobcentre.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in East Devon are on the new deal programme, broken down by each category of the new deal. [17266]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is in the table.

Programme	Number of people on the programme[1]
New deal for young people	25
New deal 25 plus	22
New deal for lone parents	158
New deal 50 plus[2]	[3]46

Mortgage Support

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of working age households in each English region were receiving mortgage support through their income support in (a) March 1997 and (b) March 2001. [17772]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is in the table.

Working age income support (IS) recipients receiving income support mortgage interest payments by Government office region, as at February 1997 and February 2001

English region	February 1997 Number of IS cases (thousand)	February 1997 Percentage of working age population	February 2001 Number of IS cases (thousand)	February 2001 Percentage of working age population
All England	208.3	0.7	149.0	0.5
North East	10.3	0.7	8.1	0.5
North West	36.2	0.9	27.0	0.6
Yorkshire and Humberside	20.8	0.7	16.9	0.5
East Midlands	15.3	0.6	11.6	0.4
West Midlands	23.2	0.7	18.0	0.6

London	32.0	0.7	22.4	0.5
South East	29.5	0.6	18.1	0.4
South West	19.6	0.7	12.5	0.4

Notes:

1. North West includes Merseyside Government office region, previously shown separately
2. Working age income support recipients are defined as single people or family units receiving income support where the main recipient is of working age (male 16–64, female 16–59). This will include cases where the main recipient's partner is of state pension age
3. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling error
4. Case load figures have been rounded to the nearest hundred; percentages are given to one decimal place

Hospitalisation (Deduction of Benefits)

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if his Department's regulations governing deduction of benefits for people admitted to hospital for six weeks or more include consideration or fixed costs incurred, with particular reference to standing charges for utilities. [18075]

Mr. McCartney: The deduction is intended to reflect the fact that hospital in-patients do not have to meet all their day-to-day living expenses.

Child Poverty

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what work his Department has carried out in dealing with child poverty in the last three years. [19835]

Malcolm Wicks: Child poverty and social exclusion are complex and multi-dimensional concepts, affecting many aspects of children's lives—including their living standards, health, housing, the quality of the environment, and opportunities to learn. The Government are committed to ending child poverty within 20 years. Our strategy for tackling child poverty and social exclusion is set out in the annual "Opportunity for all" reports. The third "Opportunity for all" report (Cm 5260) presents the latest information on the indicators used to monitor progress against this strategy.

Child Support

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will make a statement on what plans he has for existing Child Support Agency customers to be progressed on to the new regulations from April 2002; [19899]

(2) if he will make a statement on the means by which individual CSA customers will be able to seek a review of their cases after the introduction of the new regulations; and what repayments will be backdated to the start of the new regime. [19900]

Malcolm Wicks: Changes to the child support scheme will take effect for new cases from April 2002. Existing cases will be transferred to the new scheme about a year later. The precise date will be announced when we are confident that it is working well for new cases.

When CSA converts existing cases both parents will be notified of the decision and how it has been arrived at. For the vast majority of existing cases the new calculation will take effect from a common date. Either parent can ask the CSA to look at the decision again within one month of notification if they think that it is wrong. If the CSA accepts that the decision is wrong they will correct it straight away. If it turns out that the non-resident parent has overpaid maintenance in the meantime the sums involved may be refunded or offset against future liability.

Either parent can also appeal against the CSA's decision to an independent tribunal who will consider whether the agency applied the law correctly.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will outline his policy towards disclosure under CSA regulations; how he plans to change it after April 2002 in respect of departures; and what impact this will have upon the rights of a new partner to a parent with non-resident responsibilities. [19901]

Malcolm Wicks: The Child Support Agency treats the protection of personal information very seriously and it will only disclose information gathered for child support purposes in circumstances permitted by law.

Changes to the child support scheme, which are to be introduced for new cases by April 2002, will not include any provision for departures. However, either parent will be able to apply for the child support rates to be varied in specified, exceptional cases. The decision making process for variations will be streamlined. Applications for a variation can be submitted before the maintenance calculation has been made, thus enabling the system to operate more quickly.

The financial details of a NRP's new partner will not normally be relevant in the changed child support scheme.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

End of Life Vehicles Directive

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will place copies of the responses to her Department's consultation paper on the End-of-Life Vehicles Directive in the Libraries of both Houses. [18469]

Ms Hewitt: A list of those who responded and a summary of their responses will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses shortly. Copies of individual responses whose authors have not requested confidentiality will be placed in the DTI library.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria she will use for the regulatory impact assessment of the End-of-Life Vehicles Directive; and if she will make a statement. [18468]

Ms Hewitt: A partial regulatory impact assessment of options for implementing the directive was contained in a DTI Consultation Paper published on 10 August 2001. A further regulatory impact assessment will be carried out in the process of finalising the method of implementation. This will identify, and quantify as far as possible, the costs and benefits of implementation, and will be drawn up in accordance with the accepted practices and procedures outlined in the Cabinet Office's published guidance.

Strategy Board

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when she expects to appoint her Department's Strategy Board; and if she will make a statement; [18531]

(2) what criteria will be used to select the business members of her Department's Strategy Board; [18533]

(3) what the terms of appointment of the business members of her Department's Strategy Board will be; and if members will receive remuneration. [18532]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 27 November 2001]: I am considering all issues connected with the establishment of the new Strategy Board, including the criteria to be applied, terms of appointment and remuneration. I expect to make the appointments before 1 April 2002, and will announce them when they are made. We will be adopting an open and transparent procedure for making these appointments and I shall be making an announcement on this procedure in due course.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Countryside Visits

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) for what reason the Countryside Agency Leisure Day Visits Survey (a) did not take place during 2001 and (b) will take place during 2002; [19600]

(2) pursuant to her answer of 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 425W, on countryside visits, for what reason the United Kingdom Day Visitors Survey was not carried out in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001. [19782]

Alun Michael: The United Kingdom Day Visits Survey was not scheduled to take place in 2001. There is a biennial survey programme sponsored by 10 organisations. A survey did not take place in 2000 because of lack of resources. The 2002 survey will put the programme back on schedule.

Hunting

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the potential dangers of transmission of foot and mouth disease from the travelling of hunters from areas where hunting is still suspended to areas where the suspension has been lifted. [17970]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 26 November 2001]: Participants in hunting whose main dwelling is not in an FMD free county, or those who have visited livestock premises in an at risk or high risk county within seven days of a hunt, will not be able to take part in hunting. Hunt organisers will be responsible for certifying that these and other rules are being followed to DEFRA's satisfaction and it is intended that records will be kept of participants to ensure that these rules are enforced.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the economic impact on the rural economy of the temporary suspension of hunting. [17966]

Alun Michael [holding answer 26 November 2001]: The Department has not carried out an assessment of the economic impact on the rural economy from the temporary suspension of hunting. Our priority has been to concentrate on the eradication of the foot and mouth outbreak.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what information is required from landowners before permits are issued allowing the resumption of hunting with dogs on their land. [18383]

Alun Michael: The arrangements for a temporary system of permits to regulate hunting with dogs in FMD free counties from 17 December were announced on 15 November and copies were placed in the Library of the House.

For the proposed permit system, landowners will not be required to submit any information to DEFRA. It will be down to the proposed permit holder and the hunt secretary or person responsible for the hunt (if different) to supply all necessary information.

Industrial Action

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 422W, on industrial action, if she will list the level of payments by category that have been delayed since the dispute began. [19905]

Mr. Morley: The major impact of industrial action has been on the arable area payments scheme where normally around 60–70 per cent. of payments are made in the first two or three weeks of the payment window, which runs from 16 November to 31 January. This year the figure is expected to be a little over 50 per cent.

On the livestock schemes the industrial action has had minimal impact. To date industrial action has had limited impact on payments on England Rural Development Plan (ERDP) schemes, some targets on service standards are likely to be missed.

Agrimonetary Support

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 23 November 2001, Official Report, column 519W, on departmental costs, if she will list the representations she has received from the European Union concerning the late payment of support moneys to farmers. [19786]

Mr. Morley: The Rural Payments Agency is in touch with the European Commission and they are fully aware of progress on CAP payments.

Research

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research is being carried out by her Department for which moneys from the budgets for (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03 have been committed. [19234]

Mr. Morley: Details of all on-going research funded by DEFRA—including the title, the contractor, the budget committed, and the start and scheduled end dates of individual projects—can be viewed on the Department's website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/research/projects. As research projects are commissioned, they are posted on the site.

Rural White Paper

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 321W, on local education authorities, and of

26 November 2001, Official Report, column 690W, on educational attainment, what measures her Department plans to use to monitor headline indicator 3 on page 166 of the Rural White Paper. [19783]

Alun Michael: The Rural White Paper headline indicator 3—better education for all—will be informed by the work of the Countryside Agency on the development of its own indicators on education and training.

The agency currently reports on the attainment to national vocational qualification level 3 by those economically active within the Labour Force Survey and also pupils reaching Key Stage 2 within primary schools. The agency plans to continue working with these indicators but to supplement them by developing robust and consistent data on broader educational attainment—A levels, GCSEs—analysed and reported for rural areas.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what changes her Department is proposing on animal movement restrictions for those herds subject to 12-month test intervals for tuberculosis; and what (a) economic and (b) animal health and welfare assessments she has made. [19896]

Mr. Morley: Veterinary risk assessment suggests that there is an increased risk of spread of bovine TB from herds where the test is overdue and that the risk is greatest in areas with a higher historic incidence of TB.

One way to minimise this risk would be to place such herds under movement restrictions until tested clear. This would entail financial losses for some of the farmers affected. Coming so soon after FMD such a decision would not be taken lightly.

DEFRA officials are assessing the levels of risk that attach to different types of herd and whether placing some herds under restriction would be proportionate. As part of this exercise officials are discussing proposals with the NFU and other stakeholders. No decision has yet been reached.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made in the last six months of the threat of tuberculosis to (a) human and (b) animal health. [19897]

Mr. Morley: Tuberculosis in cattle is caused by the organism M. bovis and this can also cause tuberculosis in humans. Most tuberculosis in humans is caused by a different organism M. tuberculosis.

There remains a growing threat to cattle health from M. bovis TB. Provisional statistics show that last year new incidents of cattle TB were confirmed in some 1,000 herds and just over 8,300 cattle were slaughtered under disease control measures. Incidence was projected to rise by some 20 per cent. in 2001. Incidence is higher in the south west than elsewhere in England. It is not yet clear what the effect of the suspension of TB testing during the FMD epidemic has been on disease transmission within herds.

The occurrence of bovine tuberculosis in humans remains rare and runs at about 50 cases a year. There is no evidence of an upward trend. Most cases are thought to arise from re-activation of infection caught before the introduction of widespread pasteurisation of most milk in the 1950s or from infection caught abroad. The geographic spread of incidence in humans does not reflect the geographic spread of the disease in cattle in England. The threat of cattle TB to humans continues to be assessed as low but the situation is under regular review. The recent rise of M. tuberculosis TB in humans is of greater concern.

Organic Production

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress on the Organic Action Plan; what organisations she has met to discuss the Organic Action Plan; and if she will outline the (a) aims, (b) objectives and (c) targets set by the Government to meet the Organic Action Plan. [19721]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the Government's intention to set up an Action Plan for Organic Farming in her speech to the Green Alliance on 24 October 2001. On 26 November I was joined by the Environment Minister, the Rural Affairs Minister, and the Food and Farming Minister, Lord Whitty, for exploratory talks with representatives of the organic food and farming sector with a view to launching the Organic Action Plan next year.

Organisations involved in the discussions included the National Farmers Union, the Soil Association, Country Land and Business Association, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, the Environment Agency, English Nature, Sustain, Food and Drink Federation, British Retail Consortium, the Institute of Grocery Distribution and representatives from organic certification and research bodies. The industry's response to the Government's initiative was very positive, which I welcome.

The plan will look at how the organic sector will consolidate gains already made and will set out a strategy for its future direction. Work will begin once the independent Policy Commission on the Future of Farming and Food has reported. This will allow the Policy Commission's recommendations to be taken into consideration in drawing up the Action Plan's detailed aims and objectives.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps her Department is taking to encourage UK supermarket companies to increase the level of purchasing of domestically produced organic food and produce; [18200]

(2) what cross-departmental discussions she has had to encourage organic food consumption in (a) schools, (b) hospitals and (c) other departmentally-funded institutions. [18203]

Mr. Morley: On 24 October, in a speech to the Green Alliance, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced our intention to establish an action plan to set out the future direction of the organic food and farming sector. Work on the plan will begin when the Policy Commission on the Future of Farming and Food has reported so that any recommendations the Commission might have can be taken on board. An important issue for the action plan will be how to maximise our farmers' and growers' share of the expanding market for organic produce. We hope that all sectors involved, including the major retailers, will work together in taking this initiative forward.

In addition the high-level Sustainable Procurement Group, also announced on 24 October, will investigate and make recommendations on how procurement officials on the Government estate can more fully support the Government's sustainable development objectives, including those on food.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will calculate (a) the area of fully organic UK farmland and (b) the number of companies licensed to produce organic foodstuffs. [18201]

Mr. Morley: As at June 2001, the area of fully organic land in the UK was 351,000 hectares. A further 271,000 hectares was in conversion. 3,876 farmers and 2,063 processors (including importers) were registered with the organic inspection bodies.

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the profitability of organic enterprises. [17932]

Mr. Morley: Indicative net margin figures for typical enterprises can be found in the booklet on conversion available from the Organic Conversion Information Service, which we fund. I will arrange for a copy to be sent to the hon. Gentleman.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many applications she has received for interest for late payment of foot and mouth compensation. [18643]

Mr. Morley: The Department's foot and mouth disease claims unit has received 307 claims for interest on delayed compensation payments.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made about when Devon will be given disease free status from foot and mouth. [18332]

Mr. Morley: Devon attained FMD free status on 27 November once all outstanding serological testing had been completed.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will pay interest for the late payment of foot and mouth compensation to Mr. Whittal Williams, a constituent. [18642]

Mr. Morley: There is no obligation on the Department to pay statutory compensation within a specific time limit or to pay interest on delayed compensation payments. At the outset of the disease we had an aim in mind for the time it would take us to make payments, but the enormous scale of the outbreaks and the pressing need to deal with them as quickly as possible so as to eradicate the disease meant that our priority was to focus available resources on achieving that objective. We were therefore unfortunately not always successful in meeting our goal for making payments.

The Department apologises for the inconvenience caused by any delay on its part but interest will not be paid on compensation payments.

Mr. Whittal Williams' claim for interest was referred to the Department by his National Farmers Union representative and an official reply was sent on 3 October.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the methods used to control the foot and mouth epidemic in Mongolia and of the lessons for the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [17462]

Mr. Morley: FMD is endemic in parts of Asia, Africa, the middle east and south America. The Department has not made any specific assessment of the outbreak in Mongolia.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what further measures the Government plan to ensure a rapid ban on livestock movement should another outbreak of foot and mouth take place. [18066]

Mr. Morley: In the event of a new outbreak of foot and mouth disease, local movement restrictions would be imposed as soon as disease is suspected. The introduction of national movement restrictions would be based on veterinary advice as to risks posed to the wider livestock industry.

Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the applicability of the Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998 to her Department. [18636]

Mr. Morley: The Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act 1998 has applied to the public sector (and therefore DEFRA) since 1 November 1998.

The legislation provides a statutory right for certain businesses to claim interest on late payment of commercial debts. It applies to any UK commercial contract to which DEFRA is a party.

With regard to foot and mouth matters, DEFRA takes the view that compensation and cleansing and disinfection costs payable to farmers under the Animal Health Act 1981 and Foot and Mouth Disease Order 1983 (as amended) are not commercial contracts within the scope of the Act.

Farmers' Markets

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to encourage the development of farmers' markets. [17931]

Mr. Morley: The reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for East Surrey (Mr. Ainsworth) on 20 November 2001, Official Report, column 198W, gave details of the measures that we have been taking to encourage the development of farmers' markets. Among other things it referred to the possible availability of grant under the Rural Enterprise Scheme and to the support being provided by the Countryside Agency, whom we grant aid. This support complements that being provided at a local and national level by a variety of governmental and non-governmental bodies.

Sheep Export Ban

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the ban on the export of sheep from the United Kingdom will be lifted. [16719]

Mr. Morley: The European Union's Standing Veterinary Committee agreed to allow limited exports of sheep meat from specified countries of GB from 12 November 2001. The current ban on the export of livestock from GB has been extended to 31 January 2002. It is not possible at this stage to predict how long the ban will remain in place. Export restrictions on livestock from Northern Ireland were lifted on 7 June 2001.

Contaminated Food (Border Inspections)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to increase the number of inspectors at ports to detect contaminated food; and if she will make a statement. [12360]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 November 2001]: All products of animal origin imported from third countries into the UK must enter at designated UK Border Inspection Posts (BIP) where they are subject to veterinary inspections. The inspection services at the BIP are the responsibility of the local authority and we expect them to have adequate staff properly to carry out their duties. However, the BIP has to be approved by the European Commission, which conducts periodic inspection missions, and which has to be satisfied that the inspection services are adequate. If they are not, the approval of the BIP may be suspended.

Products of animal origin produced within the EU may circulate freely in the single market, and are not subject to border checks. They may be subject to checks at the point of destination within the UK.

In respect of food not of animal origin the Food Standards Agency monitors general food enforcement activity by all local authorities, including port health authorities, and has recently begun a programme of audits to provide more detailed information on enforcement standards.

Fishermen

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her policy on extending MAGP IV by a year; and what measures she will take to assist payments to UK fishermen from this budget line. [19580]

Mr. Morley: I welcome the Commission proposal to extend MAGP IV by one year while setting digressive limits on the capacity of the EU fleet, and reducing eligibility for grants for construction and modernisation of vessels. The purpose of the MAGP IV programme is to set quantified limits on member states' fleets, rather than to provide payments to fishermen.

Flood Defences

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much new public money has been spent in 2001 on improving flood defences in (a) York, (b) Uckfield, (c) Yalding, (d) Leamington Spa, (e) Stratford Upon Avon and (f) Lewes. [17830]

Mr. Morley: Operational responsibility for flood alleviation measures with the local operating authorities, namely the Environment Agency, Internal Drainage Boards and local councils. DEFRA provides grant for flood defence capital works, and associated studies, which meet essential technical, economic and environmental criteria and achieve an appropriate priority score.

I understand the Environment Agency has incurred expenditure in 2001 on such flood alleviation initiatives as studies, flood warning improvements, emergency repairs and maintenance at these sites but has not undertaken capital improvement works.

Food (Pesticide Residues)

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the Government are undertaking a comprehensive study of the effects of pesticide residues in food; and if she will make a statement. [18212]

Mr. Morley: The Department works closely with the Food Standards Agency (FSA) on all matters concerning pesticide residues in food. Ministers are advised on this subject by the independent Pesticide Residues Committee (PRC) which oversees a wide-ranging surveillance programme. The results from this programme are published quarterly on the committee's website at www.pesticides.gov.uk

There has been some specific concern over the potential combined effects of pesticide residues and at the request of the FSA, the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT), a group of independent experts, established a Working Group for the Risk Assessment of Mixtures of Pesticides/Veterinary Medicines (WIGRAMP).

The working group is now in the process of preparing a draft report. It is hoped to issue the draft report for consultation early in 2002 and to hold a further open meeting before the report is passed to the COT for their consideration. The FSA are aiming to publish the finalised report in early summer 2002. The minutes of working group meetings and other information concerning the group can be found through the FSA website at http://www.foodstandards.gov.uk/committees/cot

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many ministerial engagements (a) were cancelled between 1 January and 31 May and (b) have been cancelled since 1 June. [18037]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 27 November 2001]: There is no record kept of cancelled engagements in DEFRA Minister's diaries. When engagements have had to be cancelled, wherever possible we try to re-instate them at a later date. All engagements are subject to ministerial and parliamentary business.

Flood Relief

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to spend some of the money for flood relief announced by the Deputy Prime Minister when he visited Upton on Severn on projects in Upton on Severn. [18923]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 29 November 2001]: This Department provides grants for flood and coastal defence capital works, and associated studies, which meet essential technical, economic and environmental criteria and achieve an appropriate priority score. Further to increases in spending plans in the last two spending reviews, additional funding of £51 million over the four years from 2000–01 was announced in November 2000 following the severe flooding last year. An increased priority was given to urban flood defences and the grant rates for all river flood defences were increased by 20 per cent.

Operational responsibility for flood management measures rests with the local operating authorities, normally the Environment Agency and local councils, who decide which projects to promote and their timing. The operational authorities are invited to submit applications for DEFRA funding.

In the last 12 months the Agency has installed water gauges to measure the obstructing effects of the redundant railway embankment to the west of Upton. It has invited every property at risk of flooding to be linked to it's telephone flood warning service and it participated in the recent Flood Fair to promote self help protection measures. Upton on Severn is also in the area covered by the Catchment Flood Management Plan being developed for the River Severn. The study is being financed by DEFRA and conclusions are expected by the middle of next year.

Pig Farmers

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to introduce special movement pig licences for farmers in Devon. [15626]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 16 November 2001]: There are no such plans. However, the restrictions on pig movements in Devon were eased from 27 November when the county was granted FMD Free Status. Movements still require a licence from the local authority.

Livestock Movements (Departmental Website)

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what dates and at which times the autumn movement of livestock scheme website at www.fmdamll.defra.gov.uk/logon.asp has been unavailable; and if she will make a statement on the impact on applicants of the unavailability of the website. [16331]

Mr. Morley: The address quoted by the hon. Member is incorrect. Guidance on the Autumn Movement Licensing Scheme has been constantly available on the DEFRA website at www.defra.gov.uk/footandmouth/.

Agricultural Supply Industry

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what support her Department has given to the agricultural supply industry following the outbreak of foot and mouth disease. [14056]

Mr. Morley: The Department has provided support to the agricultural supply industry following the foot and mouth disease outbreak through a number of initiatives. These include:

Providing direct help to the wide range of small rural businesses that have been severely affected by FMD including help with rates, bills, tax, and national insurance.

Setting up the FMD helpline and the Farm Business Recovery helpline.

Regional seminars which provide national and regional advice on subjects such as diversification, grants, restocking and local initiatives.

Farm Business Advice Service (FBAS) whose advisers will help farmers to make decisions about the future direction of their business. The service is funded by DEFRA and operated by the Small Business Service through Business Links.

A 24 m extension to the Business Recovery Fund to help rural economies damaged by foot and mouth disease.

Research (GM Animals)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many GM animals were being used in research at the latest date for which figures are available, broken down by species; and if he will make a statement on the efficiency rates of this technique. [9598]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The number of scientific procedures started in the last year for which figures are available, involving genetically modified animals and showing the species and the purposes for which they were used, is given in Table 3.3 of the publication "Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals, Great Britain, 2000", a copy of which is in the Library. The number of animals used is close to the number of procedures, as animals are not normally re-used.

Questions about the science involved are primarily for the Minister of Science and Innovation at the Department of Trade and Industry. However, I understand a range of techniques are used, depending on the required type of modification, to produce new lines of genetically modified animals. The efficiency of the techniques ranges broadly from 1 per cent. to 30 per cent. (that is, the number of successfully genetically modified offspring as a percentage of the number of germ cells or embryos manipulated).

The offspring of established genetically modified lines are also reported in the Home Office/National Statistics annual publication mentioned. About 35 per cent. of such offspring are used in research programmes, the remainder being used for further breeding only.

PRIME MINISTER

European Arrest Warrant

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations he has received from (a) the European Criminal Bar Association of Defence Lawyers and (b) Fair Trials Abroad, concerning the European arrest warrant; and if he will make a statement. [19592]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware, I have not received any representations.

It is the Government's intention to implement the European arrest warrant as part of the wider reform of extradition law by means of a Bill later in this parliamentary Session.

Security

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Prime Minister what plans there are to create a Cabinet Minister for United Kingdom Security; and if he will make a statement. [19769]

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department has responsibility for security, terrorism and civil emergencies.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much money Coalition members have given to the Northern Alliance and its supporters since the beginning of the conflict in Afghanistan. [17450]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government cannot provide this information, under exemption 1(a) and (b) (Defence, Security and International Relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Israel

John Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with EU ministers concerning Israel's export to the EU of goods manufactured in Israeli settlements in the occupied territories; and what action has been taken by the EU. [18864]

Peter Hain: The issue was discussed at the 19 November General Affairs Council, in preparation for the EU-Israel Association Council on 20 November. At the Association Council, the EU underlined its interest in maintaining a strong trade partnership with Israel and its intention to find a sustainable solution to the rules of origin issue. The council noted its concern that Israel should comply with the territorial scope of the agreement.

On 23 November the European Commission published a notice to importers in the EC Official Journal advising importers presenting documentary evidence of origin with a view to securing preferential treatment for products originating in Israeli settlements in the West Bank, Gaza strip, East Jerusalem and Golan Heights to take all necessary precautions.

Euro

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 27W, on the Scottish Executive, if the Minister of State for Europe discussed the timing of a referendum on the euro with the former Education Minister in Scotland. [19816]

Peter Hain: No.

NATO Parliamentary Assembly

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the composition of the United Kingdom Delegation to the NATO Parliamentary Assembly. [20402]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following will represent the United Kingdom at the NATO Parliamentary Assembly:

The right hon. Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Donald Anderson)

The right hon. Member for North-East Hampshire (Mr. James Arbuthnot)

The hon. Member for the City of York (Mr. Hugh Bayley)

The right hon. Member for North-East Fife (Mr. Menzies Campbell CBE QC)

The hon. Member for Barnsley, West and Penistone (Mr. Michael Clapham)

The right hon. Lord Clark of Windermere

The hon. Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Harry Cohen)

The hon. Member for Ilford, South (Mr. Mike Gapes)

The Lord Gladwin of Clee CBE

The hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Michael Hancock CBE)

The right hon. Lord Jopling DL

The hon. Member for Halifax (Alice Mahon)

The hon. Member for East Hampshire (Mr. Michael Mates)

The hon. Member for Vale of Glamorgan (Mr. John Smith)

The hon. Member for Dunfermline, West (Rachel Squire)

The right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir John Stanley)

The hon. Member for Gosport (Mr. Peter Viggers).

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Sudan on the (a) creation and (b) restoration of churches in the north of the country. [19722]

Mr. Bradshaw: We regularly discuss issues relating to religious freedom with the Sudanese Government both bilaterally and through the EU. EU Heads of Mission in Khartoum held a meeting on 5 November with the Sudanese Minister for Religious Affairs to discuss religious freedom. Our Ambassador chaired the meeting in his capacity as local EU Presidency. They specifically raised concerns about impediments to church-building.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's approach to peace in the Sudan, with particular reference to democratic consent in the south of the country. [19725]

Mr. Bradshaw: The search for peace remains the focus of our policy towards Sudan. We continue to support the IGAD peace process, and, accordingly, the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) Declaration of Principles, which includes the right of self-determination for southerners. We continue to promote democratic transformation. We regularly urge the Government of Sudan and other authorities to improve freedom of political association and assembly, and to remove legislation and end practices limiting other popular freedoms. This is also a core focus of the EU-Sudan dialogue, which the UK is currently chairing as local EU Presidency.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with other African Governments on proposals to bring peace to the Sudan. [19723]

Mr. Bradshaw: As members of the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) Partners Forum, we regularly discuss Sudan with other African Governments, particularly Kenya, Uganda and Nigeria. Kenya has an important role to play in the Sudanese peace process because the IGAD Secretariat, which we have helped fund, is based in Nairobi. The Foreign Secretary has discussed Sudan with President Moi and our Embassy in Nairobi keeps in close contact with the Kenyan authorities.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with Christian Solidarity on the subject of slavery and abduction in the Sudan. [19724]

Mr. Bradshaw: We take the issue of abductions very seriously and are keen to work with any organisation that is dedicated to tackling the problem. FCO officials keep in touch with Christian Solidarity. They and our Embassy in Khartoum also work very closely with Save the Children (UK), who are involved in efforts to address the problem in Sudan, and we have given significant funding to them for their work with the Committee for the Eradication of Abduction of Women and Children (CEAWC). We have also provided funding through the EU to UNICEF. Our ambassador in Khartoum regularly urges the Sudanese Government to greater efforts, and encourages them to increase their support for the work of the CEAWC. We also raise the issue of abductions through the EU/Sudan dialogue.

European Bodies

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his position towards the establishment of conventions for joint information activities between (a) the European Commission, (b) its agencies and (c) his Department as proposed in Com (2001) 354. [19588]

Peter Hain: The Government welcome the Commission's initiative (Commission Communication Com (2001) 354) to improve the way in which information about the EU is provided to the citizen. The Communication makes sensible proposals (for example, better co-operation between the European Parliament and Commission offices in member states) and respects subsidiarity.

It is right that the EU institutions should co-operate properly with each other to supply information on Europe, and that they should work, where appropriate, with member states. The Commission's proposal does not affect the Government's role in providing information on the European Union to United Kingdom citizens. Nor does the proposal create any new powers for the EU institutions.

European Security and Defence Policy

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the outcome of the recent talks held with the Turkish Government in Ankara about the European Security and Defence Policy. [19828]

Mr. Bradshaw: We, and the US, made considerable progress at the recent talks with the Turkish side in Ankara, clarifying the implementation of the Nice Conclusions on participation in ESDP by the six non-EU European Allies.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Contested Hearings

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many either-way cases heard in magistrates courts have been contested in each year since 1987. [19726]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to respond to this question using information collected by the Crown Prosecution Service.

CPS records show that the number of contested hearings in magistrates courts in either-way cases was as follows:

Year	Numbers
1991[1]	32,744
1992	39,170
1993	34,695
1994	33,568
1995	28,942
1996	24,767
1997	25,323
1998	24,439
1999	23,022
2000	21,808
2001[2]	15,432

[1] April-December only

[2] January-September only

Note:

No comparable figures were collected before April 1991.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) wholly and (b) partly-contested cases there were, and how many acquittals there were in each case, for (i) magistrates courts and (ii) Crown courts in each year since 1987. [19727]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to respond to this question using information collected by the Crown Prosecution Service.

The table shows the number of contested hearings in magistrates courts and in the Crown court. These are divided into two categories: hearings in which the defendant entered pleas of guilty to some charges while other charges proceeded to a contest, and hearings in which no guilty pleas were entered. The total number of contests is also shown.

The table also gives both the number and the proportion of acquittals. These are again divided up into those where guilty pleas were entered to some charges, those where no guilty pleas were entered, and the total number of acquittals.

No comparable figures were collected before April 1991.

Contingency Fees

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what assessment she has made of contingent fees; and what plans she has for their introduction. [R] [19556]

Ms Rosie Winterton: None. Contingency fees are already used in many tribunals and for non-contentious business. The Government have no plans to extend their use.

Community Legal Service

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, how much funding the Community Legal Service has received in each year it has been in existence; and what (a) amount and (b) percentage of this has been given directly to advice-providing organisations in the form of grants to help them improve and develop their services. [18844]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In 2000–01, £810 million was made available to the Legal Services Commission to fund the Community Legal Service (CLS). In that year £1.5 million, or 0.2 per cent., was given directly to a range of organisations in the form of grants.

In 2001–02, £708 million has been made available to fund the CLS, of which approximately £3.94 million, or 0.6 per cent., has been committed to projects in grant funding.

On 8 May 2001 the Partnership Innovation Budget was set up with a budget of £15 million over three years (0.7 per cent. of total expected funding of £2,105 million). Bids were invited for initiatives intended to improve the delivery of legal services in innovative ways, and the first set of grant awards was announced in September 2001. To date, over £12 million in grants has been committed.

Court Buildings (Wales)

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what plans he has to improve court buildings in Wales. [18867]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor's Department is exploring a number of opportunities to improve facilities within Wales. To provide new and refurbished courts, we are examining both Private Finance Initiatives (PFI), as well as evaluating the potential for shared or joint ventures.

The Gwent PFI project is already well advanced, covering the Newport, Blackwood and Caerphilly areas, and subject to the inclusion of additional magistrates courts or Court Service properties, the new or refurbished courts are planned to become operational during 2005.

We are also exploring the prospect of joining an existing police PFI project in North Wales. Negotiations are still at an early stage but it is intended that the project should incorporate existing properties in Bangor and Caernarfon.

In addition, the Lord Chancellor's Department continues to fund a significant programme of maintenance and refurbishment work, via both the Court Service and local authorities, on the existing estate.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Ethnic Community Religious Groups

Mr. Cox: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what recent discussions he has had with the Church Commissioners on providing funding to ethnic community religious groups. [17831]

Mr. Bell: In 2000 the Commissioners made available £160 million to support the work of the Church of England, particularly in areas of need and opportunity. Within the Church of England there are many parishes with ethnic community religious groups that the Church seeks to serve.

HEALTH

Teenage Pregnancy

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Independent Advisory Group on Teenage Pregnancy will publish its first annual report. [19492]

Jacqui Smith: The Independent Advisory Group on Teenage Pregnancy has published its first annual report today.

This is a very comprehensive report and we commend the Advisory Group for the valuable work it has undertaken since it was formed. We welcome the Advisory Group's acknowledgement of the significant progress made to date across Government on implementing our Teenage Pregnancy Strategy. We recognise that, as with all long-term strategies, we must sustain our action and commitment if we are to achieve the strategy's goals. The report contains 49 specific recommendations on potential areas for further action and we will give these our full and careful consideration. We will aim to publish a detailed response to the report by next spring.

HIV (Health Care Workers)

Mr. Anthony D. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the outcome of the review of policy on patient notification exercises relating to HIV-infected health care workers. [20343]

Jacqui Smith: We have recently accepted advice from the Expert Advisory Group on AIDS (EAGA) and the United Kingdom Advisory Panel for Health Care Workers Infected with Blood-borne Viruses (UKAP). They advise that it is no longer necessary to notify every single patient who has undergone an exposure prone procedure[1] by an HIV infected health care worker because of the low risk of transmission and the anxiety caused to large numbers of patients.

In future, the need for and extent of a patient notification exercise will depend on the level of risk exposure. This may mean that in some instances there is no patient notification exercise, or it is limited in its scope. Until now, all patients who have undergone exposure prone procedures have been notified regardless of their level of risk. EAGA and UKAP are in the process of developing these criteria and we will be issuing operational guidance to the national health service in the new year.

[1] Exposure prone procedures are those where there is a risk that injury to the health care worker could result in their blood contaminating a patient's open tissues. Exposure prone procedures, in general terms, include most surgery, gynaecology and obstetrics, dentistry, and some aspects of midwifery and specialist nursing.

General Medical Council (Disqualifications)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to introduce a ban from registration with the GMC of (a) GPs and (b) consultants who have been banned from practising in (i) EU, (ii) Commonwealth and (iii) other countries. [8979]

Mr. Hutton: We are discussing with the General Medical Council extending the matters that can be considered under its registration and its fitness to practise procedures to include disqualifying decisions by authorities abroad. There is already provision covering doctors from the European Economic Area.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the approved AVC providers under the NHS pension scheme; how many outstanding AVC contracts there are with these providers; when these AVC providers were first selected and when that selection was reviewed; and what was the source of the professional advice as to that selection and renewal. [10922]

Mr. Hutton: The authorised AVC providers for the national health service pension scheme in England and Wales are Equitable Life Assurance Society, Clerical Medical Investment Group Limited, Standard Life Assurance Society and the Prudential.

Equitable Life was appointed as the first, sole provider from 15 February 1991. The society was reappointed from 6 April 1998 for a further five years. On both occasions, the appointment followed a competitive tender with the Department. National health service employers and staff interests were represented on the selection panel. The Government Actuary's Department provided professional actuarial advice.

In March 2001, when Halifax plc purchased Equitable Life's operations, the range of AVC investment funds was extended by agreement to include seven from Clerical Medical, a Halifax Group subsidiary.

I understand that there are about 38,000 national health service contracts with Equitable Life and around 2,000 with Clerical Medical.

From 8 October 2001, following a further tendering exercise managed and endorsed by independent advising actuaries Bacon and Woodrow, Standard Life and the Prudential were added to the list of authorised providers. No contracts are yet operational.

Hospital Performance

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of (a) a Commission for Health Improvement report and (b) the star-ratings as indicators of a hospital's performance. [13545]

Mr. Hutton: The Commission for Health Improvement (CHI) is an executive non-departmental public body which, among other things, reviews arrangements by national health service trusts for monitoring and improving the quality of health care for which they have responsibility.

The Department's NHS performance ratings, represent a high level summary of the overall performance of non-specialist acute NHS hospital trusts against a number of key targets and indicators with a particular staff, patient and clinical focus. The performance ratings concentrate primarily on the management of NHS trusts rather than the quality of care.

We are confident that the assessment made in both cases is robust, fair and complementary. The CHI looked at the performance ratings for those organisations it had already reviewed and confirmed that they provide a fair assessment based on the available data.

NHS Trusts

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total annual (a) surplus and (b) deficit for each NHS trust in England in each year since 1997 for which figures are available. [13622]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he gives to NHS trusts on ordering their priorities between waiting (a) lists and (b) times. [13463]

Mr. Hutton: In meeting both waiting list and times targets, the national health service has been advised that above all patients' clinical need and priority must come first. In July 1997, an executive letter (EL (97) 42) was issued to the NHS about access to secondary care services. It stated that:

> "Clinical priority must be the main determinant of when patients are seen as outpatients or admitted as inpatients."

Since then, a significant amount of guidance from the Department has been given to the NHS on managing waiting lists and times targets. "Getting Patients Treated—The Waiting List Action Team Handbook" was issued to all NHS trust chief executives in August 1999 and provides detailed advice on how to monitor inpatient and outpatient waiting lists to ensure patients are treated in the right order.

Two reports specific to managing outpatient waiting lists were published jointly by the Department of Health and the NHS Modernisation Agency in November 1999 and July 2000 entitled "Variations in NHS Outpatient Performance". These reports contain practical actions that hospitals can take to reduce the time patients wait to see a consultant and to modernise outpatient services for the convenience of patients. Every hospital was instructed to take the actions set out in the reports.

In February 2000, a toolkit for primary care groups was also issued by the NHS executive entitled "Tackling Waiting Lists Together". This guidance was aimed at general practitioner practices and primary care groups to advise them on the causes of waiting list problems and how to address them.

More recently, the NHS was instructed to use guidance drawn up by the NHS Modernisation Agency called the "Primary Targeting Lists Approach" to assist them in treating patients within the shorter maximum waiting times targets for 2001–02. The guidance gives NHS organisations the practical advice to treat patients in the right order within the maximum waiting times targets.

In addition, the chief executive and chief operating officer of the Department have written to chief executives of NHS organisations on a number of occasions re-emphasising the importance of delivery and the actions they should be taking to achieve them.

The guidance can be found at the following websites:

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the performance of NHS trusts in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 in meeting their responsibility to absorb the cost of capital at a rate of 6 per cent. of average relevant net assets. [16949]

Mr. Hutton: The provisional annual accounts for national health service trusts in 2000–01 show 247 NHS trusts met the 6 per cent. capital absorption duty. However, exclusion of shortfalls deemed immaterial (that is less than 0.5 per cent.) increases this figure to 339.

Information for 2001–02 will not be available until the NHS trust audited annual accounts are received in autumn of 2002.

Oldchurch Hospital (A and E)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is for an A and E patient to see a doctor at Oldchurch hospital in Romford; and if he will make a statement. [14806]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve waiting times for patients waiting to see a doctor in the A and E department of Oldchurch hospital in Romford. [14804]

Mr. Hutton: We are committed to resolving the issue of waits in accident and emergency and the NHS plan includes clear objectives for reducing inappropriate waits. By 2004, no patient will wait more than a total of four hours in accident and emergency from time of arrival to admission, transfer or discharge, with the average waiting time reduced to 75 minutes.

Oldchurch hospital, part of Barking, Havering and Redbridge hospitals national health service trust, has already received £868,000 from the accident and emergency modernisation fund. The trust will also receive a share of the additional £100 million announced last month to support the recently published reforming emergency care strategy.

Furthermore, efficiency within the accident and emergency department at Oldchurch hospital will be boosted by the additional £300 million announced in October to tackle nationally the persistent problem of bed blocking. Of the £100 million allocated so far, local authorities in the area have received just over £1 million.

The trust will also be supported by the London modernisation board access taskforce to tackle the issue of meeting four-hour trolley waits as a priority.

Respiratory Disease

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce a national service framework for respiratory disease; and if he will make a statement. [12691]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 14 November 2001]: There are currently no plans to introduce a national service framework for respiratory disease. The NSF for older people recognised the importance of respiratory diseases to the health and well-being of older people. The NSF provides for a 10-year developing framework for action across health and social care and within this set arthritis and respiratory disease in older people as the next priorities for future work. The focus of this will be older people, but, much like the current NSF service models on stroke and dementia, such a service model will have implications for, and apply to, all who need these services, regardless of their age.

There is a range of Government initiatives already in place which take a preventive approach to respiratory disease and have long-term objectives to improve treatment and care. These include the investment of £53 million in smoking cessation services—smoking is the major cause of lung cancer and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD)—and asking the National Institute for Clinical Excellence to prepare clinical guidelines for the national health service for the diagnosis and treatment of lung cancer and the management and treatment of COPD.

Capital Projects

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for major capital projects over £50 million in his Department, at what discount rate the value for money test would recommend that (a) a publicly funded project became a PFI scheme and (b) a PFI project became publicly funded. [15404]

Mr. Hutton: The decision on whether a capital investment project should test for private finance in the first place is taken early in the process, at the outline business case stage. Decisions will be based on the nature and complexity of the project, which in turn impact upon value for money factors such as the number and capability of bidders likely to be interested and the past track record of similar projects with regard to private finance initiative. Being a set constant the discount rate is not a relevant factor and is therefore not considered.

A single discount rate for all Government Departments is set by Her Majesty's Treasury. National health service trusts are therefore not required to apply different discount rates as part of their sensitivity tests in the full business case on assessing at what point a PFI option does not demonstrate value for money when compared to the public sector comparator.

It is not possible to set rates that would determine a switching value ahead of the priced bid as the exact rate will be determined by the rate of spend, exact timings of the cash flows, length of contract period and interest rates applicable at the time contracts are signed. As a general rule, compared to the current 6 per cent. rate, an increase makes revenue payments more attractive, a lower rate favours up-front capital investment.

Hospital Beds

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what changes have been made to the designations of hospital beds since 1 May 1997; [15318]

(2) changes have been made to the methods of counting bed numbers since 1 May 1997. [15317]

Mr. Hutton: No changes have been made to the methods of counting the published average bed numbers since 1 May 1997. A new twice-yearly census was introduced in March 1999 to improve the availability of information on critical care. In addition, a special census of beds to inform progress on implementing capacity plans for winter was taken on 1 December 2000.

Information on numbers of beds is collected by broad ward designation not by individual bed designation. No changes have been made to the ward designation since May 1997. Additional categories, such as intermediate care, are being introduced to reflect changes to the way services are delivered.

Patient Lists

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he gives to (a) dentists and (b) general practitioners on removing from their lists patients who have not attended for a period of time; and what plans he has to review this guidance. [15393]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not issue guidance to general dental practitioners on removing patients. Under current regulations, dentists' terms of service provide that a continuing care arrangement or a capitation arrangement shall lapse at the end of the 16th month beginning with the month in which the patient was first accepted by the dentists or the arrangement was last extended. Continuing care arrangements apply to patients who are 18 years of age or older; capitation arrangements to patients who are under 18. A continuing care or capitation arrangement is extended when a patient attends the dentist for treatment or for a check-up.

The Department does not issue guidance to general practitioners on removing patients who have not attended their practice for a period of time. However, GPs' terms of service require them to invite patients for a consultation where they have not been seen for a period of three years.

Epilepsy

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about Government support for research into (a) child and (b) adult epilepsy. [15394]

Jacqui Smith: The main Government agency for research into the causes of and treatments for disease is the Medical Research Council (MRC), which receives its funding via the Department of Trade and Industry. The MRC has a large portfolio of research into epilepsy, out of a total spend of approximately £24 million on neurological diseases. The MRC always welcomes high quality applications for support into any aspect of human health and these are judged in open competition with other demands on funding. Awards are made according to their scientific quality and importance to human health.

The Department funds research to support policy and delivery of effective practice in the national health service. Research on the clinical effectiveness and cost effectiveness of new drugs for epilepsy in adult and children is currently being supported through the health technology assessment programme. Research includes a randomised controlled trial of longer-term clinical outcomes and cost-effectiveness of standard and new anti-epileptic drugs, at an overall cost of £1.3 million, together with reviews of existing research on behalf of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence.

In addition to specific projects, the Department also provides support for research commissioned by charities and the Medical Research Council that take place in the NHS.

Project details of work directly funded by the Department or supported through the NHS research and development budget can be found on the National Research Register (NRR). This is available in the Library and most medical libraries on CD-Rom, and on the internet: http://www.doh/gov.uk/research/nrr.htm. The NRR contains details of projects/trials relating to child and adult epilepsy.

Welfare Foods Scheme

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will announce the funding for the welfare foods scheme for 2002. [15322]

Jacqui Smith: The welfare foods scheme is demand-led. For 2002–03, funding will be sufficient to reach demand.

Diabetes

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the national service framework for diabetes; and if he will make a statement. [15601]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bethnal Green and Bow (Ms King) on 15 October 2001, Official Report, column 1046W.

GPs (Computers)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the proportion of general practitioners using a computer as part of their daily work. [15399]

Mr. Hutton: 98 per cent. of general practitioners have access to clinical computer systems in their practices and 95 per cent. have this available at their own desks.

As a result of project connect more than 95 per cent. of GP practices have access to NHSnet, the Internet and email.

Prostate Cancer

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps are being taken to promote awareness of prostate cancer nationally; and if he will make a statement; [16210]

(2) what percentage of men (a) in England, (b) in the north-east region and (c) in the Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency have been checked for prostate cancer in the last 12 months. [16209]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 19 November 2001]: The national health service prostate cancer programme was launched on 6 September 2000. The programme covers research, treatment and a risk management programme specifically around improving early detection and diagnosis. One element of the risk management programme is the informed choice project aimed at raising awareness among men about prostate specific antigen (PSA) testing. This education project is developing materials for patients, the public and professionals which can be given to any man requesting a PSA test, to help him make an informed choice about whether to proceed with the test or not.

Information on what percentage of men have been checked for prostate cancer is not collected.

Personal Social Services Grants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the change in the level of local authority personal social services grants from 2001–02 to 2002–03. [17166]

Jacqui Smith: The level of personal social services grants that will be available to local authorities in 2002–03 will be announced as part of the local government finance settlement.

Hospital Providers

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to draw up a list of approved hospital providers in the EU. [16851]

Mr. Hutton: The Department will begin a tender exercise to establish a list of approved providers in the new year, drawing on the experience of the three test-bed sites in the south-east of England which are currently working to send national health service patients overseas. This tender exercise will of necessity take several months.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the Commission for Health Improvement will assist him in drawing up a list of approved hospital providers in the EU. [16854]

Mr. Hutton: We are considering how the Commission for Health Improvement could best assist in this process.

The commission's involvement will be planned within the context of the commission's overall priorities in relation to helping to improve the quality of care to all national health service patients.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with which hospital providers he has (a) had meetings and (b) corresponded in (i) Austria, (ii) Belgium, (iii) France, (iv) Greece, (v) the Netherlands, (vi) Germany, (vii) Portugal, (viii) Spain and (ix) Norway. [16850]

Mr. Hutton: Officials and members of the three test-bed sites working to send national health service patients overseas have had meetings with several providers based in Germany and a provider based in Greece.

In addition, officials have corresponded with a large number of hospital providers. Details will be placed in the Library shortly.

Treatment Abroad

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he notified the European Commission of his decision to amend domestic legislation to clarify that health authorities and trusts may commission treatment from other member states of the EEA. [16855]

Mr. Hutton: Following my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's public statement on 27 August, my noble Friend Lord Hunt of Kings Heath wrote to European Commissioners Byrne, Bokelstein and Diamontopolou on 4 September 2001.

Golden Hello Scheme (GPs)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was discharged to general practice under the Golden Hello scheme up to and including 16 November. [16845]

Mr. Hutton: We concluded consultation with the General Practitioners Committee of the British Medical Association on the detail of the scheme on 1 November and issued guidance to health authorities and primary care trusts the following day.

Entitlement is backdated to 1 April 2001 so that any general practitioner who has taken up an eligible post on or after that date qualifies for a payment.

Most payments are being made by health authorities from the national general medical services non-cash-limited budget and the next quarterly monitoring data on that budget are not due until January. We expect, however, expenditure on this new scheme to exceed £10 million this year.

Good Hope Hospital, Sutton Coldfield

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have waited for more than one year for (a) in-patient and (b) out-patient treatment at the Good Hope hospital, Sutton Coldfield, in each month in each of the last five years. [16782]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service does not collect information on the number of out-patients waiting over one year. The NHS however does collect routinely the number of outpatients waiting over 26 weeks (six months).

In-patient monthly data have only been collected since April 1998. Prior to this they were only available quarterly. Out-patient data have not been collected on a monthly basis, being only available by trust quarterly.

Hillingdon Local Modernisation Review

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 19 November 2001, Official Report, column 112W, when he expects the Hillingdon local modernisation review to publish its conclusions. [17128]

Mr. Hutton: Reports on phase 2 of the local modernisation review are due to be shared with the Department by 30 November 2001. We expect to see detail of the key actions from local modernisation reviews in the health improvement and modernisation plans that all health authorities are required to publish in spring 2002.

Randomised Controlled Trials

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to restrict treatments available in the NHS which have not been subjected to randomised controlled trials. [17122]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: We have no such plans.

Cutlass Review

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the results of the Cutlass review. [17218]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: The Cutlass review is a project of the national health service health technology assessment (HTA) programme. This programme's outputs are published in the HTA monograph series, provided they pass a rigorous scientific assessment and editorial process including external peer review. The HTA monograph series is available on the internet at no charge.

Mental Health

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what investment has been made in each health authority area in respect of (a) the mental health national service framework and (b) the mental health aspects of the NHS plan. [17090]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 22 November 2001]: Details of total investment in mental health by health authority are not available. As part of the self-assessment programme, this year local implementation teams will be completing a finance mapping exercise, the details of which will be in the public domain next year. This exercise will create a baseline from which investment in future years can be monitored.

In 2002–03 an extra £75 million revenue will be allocated to health authorities; this allocation will be earmarked for mental health services to implement actions outlined in the NHS plan. By 2004, the money will have been used to improve a range of services including assertive outreach teams, crisis resolution teams and early intervention teams.

Parliamentary Questions

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will answer the question of 1 November on respiratory disease (UIN: 12691) from the hon. Member for Cardiff, West. [19555]

Jacqui Smith: I replied to my hon. Friend today, Official Report, columns 1192–93W.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the question of the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside, of 12 November on the future of cleft lip and palate services for the north-west region. [19831]

Jacqui Smith: I replied to my hon. Friend on 28 November 2001, Official Report, column 976W.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will answer the question tabled by the hon. Member for Taunton on 17 July (ref: 5667) on STI-571. [19484]

Ms Blears: I wrote to the hon. Member on 4 October.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Online Services

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of his and other Government Department's progress in meeting the Government's targets for providing services online. [19066]

Mr. Leslie: Delivery is at the heart of our agenda for transforming public services, and e-government is one of the most powerful catalysts we have for achieving that transformation. The Office of the e-Envoy produces both an annual report and regular monthly reports giving details of the progress that is being made. The next annual report will be published shortly. The latest figures on progress towards the target of making Government services available electronically by 2005 show that over 50 per cent. of Government services are e-enabled now. Departments predict that 74 per cent. of services will be e-enabled by the end of 2002.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Schools Budgets

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which categories of expenditure she proposes shall count as (a) schools budget, (b) individual schools budget and (c) local education authority budget for the purposes of implementing the Education Bill; and if she will make a statement. [19464]

Mr. Timms: The exact scope of these budgets will be defined in due course in Regulations, after further consultations. Broadly, however, we expect the schools budget to cover all expenditure for which funding is generally delegated to schools at present, along with most other expenditure relating to the cost of provision for pupils (including expenditure on school meals and out-of-school education, and most expenditure on special educational needs apart from costs relating to the carrying out of statutory assessments and the making of statements). The great majority of the schools budget will have to be delegated to individual schools through the individual schools budget, although LEAs will need to retain funding within the school budget for certain purposes, including out-of-school education and some aspects of special educational needs provision. We expect the schools forum to play a role in determining whether funding for some specified items should be delegated or centrally retained.

The LEA budget will cover those functions which cannot appropriately be carried out except at the level of the LEA. These are likely to include most functions for which funding is currently retained centrally by LEAs under the heads of Strategic Management, School Improvement and Access to Education (including home-to-school transport). The LEA budget will also include expenditure on LEA functions which do not relate to primary and secondary education.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if she will list the aggregate for England of (a) local education authority budgets for education, (b) their local schools budgets, (c) their individual schools budgets and (d) (c) as a percentage of (b), for each year since the implementation of section 46 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998; [19462]

(2) if she will list the aggregate for England of (a) local education authority general schools budgets, (b) their potential schools budgets, (c) their aggregate schools budgets, (d) (c) as a percentage of (b) and (e) (c) as a percentage of (a), for each year from 1996 until the implementation of section 46 of the School Standards and Framework Act. [19463]

Mr. Timms: The information is as follows:

England £ million

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
(a) GSB	16,437	16,711	17,549

School Buildings

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what information is available from asset management plans on school building condition needs. [20401]

Mr. Timms: Today we are publishing information on school condition needs, based on data supplied earlier this year by local education authorities from their asset management plans. At current price levels, these plans indicate that nearly £7 billion is needed for capital works fully to maintain and repair school buildings. This is a significant level of need that has been recognised by the Government in their huge investment programme to improve school building accommodation. A total of £7.5 billion has already been made available for investment in school buildings since 1997, and a further £6.3 billion is planned over the next two financial years—the highest investment levels for 50 years. In 2003–04, funding from central Government for capital investment in schools will reach £3.5 billion, compared with only £683 million in 1996–97.

By successfully introducing asset management plans, this Government have provided LEAs with a rigorous framework for identifying and prioritising accommodation needs across schools. This has highlighted the size of the problem we inherited in 1997, resulting from nearly two decades of under-investment in school buildings.

A copy of the publication has today been placed in the Library.

Secondary Schools

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on progress towards the introduction of the literacy and numeracy hours into secondary school curriculum; and how this can be achieved without reduction of time for national curriculum subjects. [19473]

Mr. Timms: The Key Stage 3 strategy for raising standards for 11 to 14-year-olds does not advocate literacy or numeracy hours. The strategy will help schools improve teaching and learning in all subjects, with an emphasis on the core subjects of the national curriculum.

Head Teachers

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions she has had with representatives of head teachers' organisations. [19472]

Mr. Timms: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State meets representatives of the head teacher associations from time to time to discuss a range of issues. Recently, she met them with other unions on 2 July and 4 September 2001. The Secretary of State also had a meeting with the National Association of Headteachers (NAHT) on 30 October.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on how performance-related pay will affect the salaries of head teachers. [19474]

Mr. Timms: School governing bodies must review their head teachers' pay each year, and may award them a point on their individual pay range if they have shown a sustained high quality of performance taking account of agreed performance objectives. Since September 2000, the award of performance pay points has been supported by special grants. The Government are consulting on the mechanism for payment of a new special grant to take effect from April 2002.

Homework Clubs

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress has been made in the promotion of homework clubs in schools; and if she will make a statement. [19611]

Mr. Timms: We are committed to providing opportunities for young people to enrich their learning through out-of-school-hours activities. "Extending Opportunity: a national framework for study support", published in 1998, set out the contribution homework clubs can make to a school's wider programme of out-of-school-hours learning activities.

We also published Homework Guidelines, which require school homework policies to refer to any opportunities that exist for pupils to do homework, under supervision, at places other than home. In addition to school homework clubs, these may also include libraries and community centres. The homework area on the Department's Standards website supplements the guidelines with examples of good practice and case studies which teachers, governors, parents and pupils can access.

Admissions Forums

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the estimated cost is of setting up admissions forums under the Education Bill. [19612]

Mr. Timms: The School Admissions Code of Practice recommended that LEAs set up local Admissions Forums as a vehicle for consultation and discussion of issues arising from proposed admission arrangements. The majority have already done so. LEAs currently have considerable costs associated with difficult admission issues and the benefits gained from resolving these matters more quickly make the setting up of forums, where they don't already exist, broadly cost neutral.

TNC Credit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost is to public funds of the implementation of the TNC Credit (New Category of Provider) Regulations 1999. [14100]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

It is not possible to produce an accurate estimate.

Instructors

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time instructors were employed in (i) primary, (ii) secondary and (iii) special schools in each of the last four years for which figures are available. [8840]

Mr. Timms: Instructors and other teachers without Qualified Teacher Status in maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools in England, 1998 to 2001 by full-time/part-time and phase were as follows[1, 2].

	1998	1999	2000	2001
Full-time
Nursery and primary	530	610	750	1,340
Secondary	780	1,000	1,070	1,560
Special	100	140	130	210
FTE of part-time
Nursery and primary	370	400	430	410
Secondary	800	850	760	730
Special	30	50	40	40

[1] Totals may not appear to equal the sum of their component parts due to rounding; all figures have been rounded to the nearest 10

[2] Table excludes teachers on routes to Qualified Teacher Status: the Graduate Teacher Programme, Registered Teacher Programme, Licensed teacher scheme and Overseas Trained Teacher scheme

When deciding whether to employ an instructor without QTS, head teachers take into account the fact that they can often bring valuable skills and experience to the classroom, particularly in subjects that have a high practical content. Instructors also include teachers with qualifications obtained overseas who are not currently seeking QTS.

Between January 1998 and January 2001 the number of full-time equivalent regular teachers in the maintained schools sector with Qualified Teacher Status rose from 394,400 to 404,500, an increase of 10,100.

Free School Dinners

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will rank local education authorities according to the percentage fall in the proportion of children attending day schools who are eligible for free school dinners between 1991 and 2000; and what figures are available for 2001. [17777]

Mr. Timms: The available information is shown in the following table.

LGR = Local Government Reorganisation

Between 1997 and 2000, 24 LEAs were subject to Local Government Reorganisation

School Places

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment she has made of (a) school places and (b) the shortage of teachers in the Buckingham constituency. [17861]

Mr. Timms: My Department does not collect detailed information on school places. The Government believe that decisions concerning the supply of school places are best taken locally by the main partners in the provision of education, who have knowledge of local needs. Local education authorities have a duty to ensure that there are sufficient school places in their area. They must publish annually a School Organisation Plan setting out how they plan to deal with any surplus or deficit of places over a five-year rolling period.

Where an LEA can demonstrate overall growth in the need for school places it may apply to my Department for capital funding.

My Department does not hold figures on teacher shortages in the Buckingham constituency centrally.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what latest assessment she has made of the shortage of (a) school places and (b) teachers in Arundel and South Downs. [18308]

Mr. Timms: My Department does not collect detailed information on school places. The Government believe that decisions concerning the supply of school places are best taken locally by the main partners in the provision of education, who have knowledge of local needs. Local education authorities have a duty to ensure that there are sufficient school places in their area. They must publish annually a School Organisation Plan setting out how they plan to deal with any surplus or deficit of places over a five-year rolling period.

Where a local education authority can demonstrate overall growth in the need for school places it may apply to my Department for capital funding.

There were 82 teacher vacancies in the maintained schools sector, 1.6 per cent. of teachers, in West Sussex at January 2001. Figures for the constituency of Arundel and South Downs are not held centrally.

Pupil Attainment

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if data showing average attainment level of pupils entering (a) individual primary and (b) individual secondary schools (i) are and (ii) could practically be made available centrally to her Department. [18266]

Mr. Timms: We do not hold data showing average attainment level of pupils entering individual primary schools.

We have recently published the results of a pilot programme for the calculation of value added measures for secondary schools, showing the progress made from Key Stage 2 to Key Stage 3 and from Key Stage 3 to GCSE/GNVQ. The evaluation of the pilot and further consultation in the new year will inform final decisions on the publication of these two measures for all secondary schools in the 2002 performance tables.

School Performance

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement in respect of the recent findings of the National Foundation of Educational Research in respect of average performance levels by (a) comprehensive schools and (b) grammar and secondary modern schools counted together. [18264]

Mr. Timms: The findings of the recent research by the National Foundation for Educational Research are interesting and not inconsistent with our own statistics that the GCSE results (based on grades and average point scores) for 15-year-olds in grammar schools are, broadly speaking, similar to those of the top 25 per cent. in comprehensive schools.

Investors in People (Slough)

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which organisations in Slough received Investors in People awards in each year since 1997. [18648]

John Healey: Organisations in Slough which have received Investors in People awards since 1997 are as follows:

1997

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she plans to introduce a replacement scheme for ILAs. [18294]

John Healey: We are developing future plans which build on the successful elements of the ILA programme. I hope to announce more details on the process for developing a further scheme in due course.

Infant Class Sizes

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action her Department is taking in relation to infant classes of 31 or more. [18527]

John Healey [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Since this September infant classes for five, six and seven-year-olds have been limited to no more than 30 children, except in a few limited circumstances permitted by the class size legislation.

Figures published on 15 November 2001 showed that in September 2001 99.9 per cent. of infant classes had 30 or fewer pupils in them, or exceeded the limit for reasons permitted by the relevant legislation. Sixty-eight classes, just 0.1 per cent. of the total, appeared to be in breach of the limit. We are following these up with the local education authorities concerned to agree ways in which they can meet the limit.

Threshold Pay

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the estimated total cost of threshold pay is in 2001–02. [19352]

Mr. Timms: My Department paid over £400 million in threshold special grant to local authorities in the 2000–01 school year. In addition to continuing payments for teachers already on the upper pay scale, the cost of threshold pay in the 2001–02 financial year will depend on the number of teachers who cross the threshold this school year. That will not be known until the new year.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent representations she has received on the cost to schools and LEAs of threshold pay. [19339]

Mr. Timms: The Department provides special grant funding to meet the extra salary costs associated with teachers crossing the threshold. This arrangement is widely regarded as satisfactory.

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 20 November 2001, Official Report, column 259W, on threshold allowance awards, how many teachers received threshold back pay in the 2000–01 financial year in each local authority; how many teachers have paid higher rates of tax because their threshold back pay was held up to the 2001–02 financial year in each local authority; and what was (a) the average, (b) the shortest and (c) the longest time between head teacher and assessor approvals of threshold by each local authority. [19250]

Mr. Timms: The information requested has not been collected centrally and could be gathered only at disproportionate cost.

Lecturers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the latest figures are for the average pay of university lecturers; and what plans she has to increase this amount. [18672]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 28 November 2001]: The figures in the table reflect data collected for 1999–2000. The Government play no part in setting pay levels in the higher education sector.

Average salary of full-time academic staff in UK HE institutions 1999–2000

Grade	Average salary (£)
Professors[1]	50,600
Senior lecturers and Researchers[2]	37,300
Lecturers[3]	28,400
Researchers[4]	21,800
Other grades[5]	30,000
All grades	30,600

[1] Includes heads of departments, professors, former UAP scale researchers (grade IV), clinical professors and those appointed professors on a locally determined scale.

[2] Includes principal lecturers, senior lecturers (former UAP/CSCFC scales), former UAP scale researchers (grade III), clinical senior lecturers and those appointed senior or principal lecturers on a locally determined scale.

[3] Includes lecturers, senior lecturers (former PCEF scale), clinical lecturers and those appointed lecturers on a locally determined scale.

[4] Includes all research grades not listed above and those appointed lecturers on a locally determined scale.

[5] Includes all other grades of academic staff not listed above.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of university lecturers are employed on a part-time basis; and what plans she has to increase the use of part-time lecturers. [18673]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 28 November 2001]: The latest figures published by the Higher Education Statistics Agency are shown in the table. Higher education institutions as independent bodies are responsible for appointing their own staff. They will take into account their individual operational needs and circumstances in offering the contracts.

Academic staff in UK higher education institutions 1999–2000

	Numbers	Percentage
Full-time	113,790	84
Part-time	21,960	16
Total	135,750	100

Teaching Reforms

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 465W, on teaching reforms, for what periods the (a) current and (b) new special grants apply; if schools will receive permanent increases to their budgets to cover the cost of threshold pay; and if she will guarantee that no school will lose out financially when special grants for threshold pay come to an end. [19192]

Mr. Timms: There are two current teachers' pay special grants. The one for performance pay progression runs to March 2002 and will be replaced by a new performance pay special grant that runs until March 2004. The other is for threshold pay, which runs to March 2003. We will consider longer-term funding arrangements for both threshold and performance pay in the next spending review. But we fully accept that they mean a permanent increase in the cost of teachers' pay and we will take proper account of that in our financial planning.

School Funds

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance she gives to local education authorities to enable them to determine the allocation of funds to schools. [19202]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 29 November 2001]: In determining the allocation of funds to schools, local education authorities (LEAs) must comply with section 47 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, and the regulations made under that section contained in the Financing of Maintained Schools Regulations 2001, which set out the school funding framework in England.

In April 2001, the DfES issued a policy note to LEAs on funding allocation, which encouraged authorities to look at ways of simplifying funding formulae.

White Paper Responses

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will summarise the responses to all consultations associated with the Education White Paper, including (a) the number of responses to each question, (b) the number and percentage supporting each provided response to each closed question, (c) a summary of the responses to open questions and (d) a list of those replying to each consultation. [19306]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 29 November 2001]: As well as the consultation on the White Paper itself, the Department launched six consultations associated with it during September 2001, covering School Governance;

Admissions; Exclusion Appeals Panels; Early Years Education and Childcare; and 16–19 Organisation and Inspection.

Quantitative reports on the White Paper, Governance and Admissions consultations are available on the Department's website and have been placed in the Library of the House. These consultations received 2,378, 4,385 and 416 responses respectively. In general, the consultation questions met with a broadly supportive response.

The remaining consultation summaries will be made available in the same way shortly.

Faith Schools

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will place in the Library copies of representations received in connection with the Department plans for faith schools. [19200]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 29 November 2001]: Our policy of faith schools was part of the White Paper "Schools: achieving success", which was the subject of wide-scale consultation. A copy of the interim report on the consultation has been placed in the Library and the full report will be published in due course.

Publishing letters sent by members of the general public to this Department without their prior permission would represent a breach of confidentiality.

Teacher Recruitment

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list (a) the amount being paid under the additional moneys for recruitment and retention, (b) how many teacher vacancies there are and (c) the allocation of funds under the Starter Home Initiative, broken down by local education authority. [17129]

Mr. Timms: Concerning the amount being paid to each local authority under the recruitment and retention fund I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 8 November 2001, Official Report, column 408W. Concerning the number of teacher vacancies I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 19 November 2001, Official Report, columns 59–60W. The successful bids to provide homes for key workers under the Starter Home Initiative, the total amount allocated to each bid and the areas the bid covers are contained in tables, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries.

Exam Results

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if she will make a statement on the relative examination performance of (a) faith and (b) non-faith schools since 1997; [17471]

(2) what are the average (a) GCSE and (b) A level results for each local education authority for (i) faith and (ii) non-faith schools for (A) 1997, (B) 1998, (C) 1999, (D) 2000 and (E) 2001. [17472]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 23 November 2001]: The requested information for maintained mainstream schools is as shown.

The percentage of 15-year-old pupils in England achieving five or more GCSE grades A*-C or the GNVC equivalent in (a) faith and (b) non-faith schools since 1997 is as follows:

	Faith schools	Non-faith schools
1997	49.4	42.3
1998	50.6	43.6
1999	52.9	45.4
2000	54.5	46.7
2001	55.3	47.8

The average GCE A/AS point score per 16 to 18-year-old entered for two or more A/AS exams in (a) faith schools and (b) non-faith schools since 1997 is as follows:

	Faith schools	Non-faith schools
1997	17.1	17.1
1998	17.8	17.6
1999	18.0	17.9
2000	18.2	18.2
2001[1]	17.9	17.3

[1] The coverage of advanced results differs to that of previous years. The figures for 2001 are concerned with cumulative results over the last two years for 16 to 18-year-olds. The figures for 2001 are therefore not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

The LEA breakdown of this information is shown in tables, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries.

High Quality Teaching

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 7 November 2001, Official Report, column 245W, on high quality teaching, how much funding is provided to support teachers' performance pay through special grants for each local education authority; and how many teachers in each local education authority are in receipt of this funding. [18181]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 26 November 2001]: Allocations for each LEA under the new special grants for 2002 to 2004 will be made in the spring.

On threshold funding, for threshold assessments made in 2000–01, tables set out the number of full-time equivalent teachers who have passed the threshold and in respect of whom we have paid claims by LEAs. The payments made to LEAs are also listed. Copies of these tables have been placed in the Libraries.

TREASURY

Pre-Budget Report

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if table 4.3 of the pre-Budget report includes the effects of (a) income tax, (b) housing benefit withdrawal and (c) council tax benefit withdrawal; [19652]

(2) if he will produce an amended version of table 4.3 of the pre-Budget report including the effects of withdrawal of housing benefit and council tax benefit; [19651]

(3) if he will produce an amended version of table 4.3 of the pre-Budget report including the effects of income tax. [19650]

Dawn Primarolo: Table 4.3 of the 2001 pre-Budget report includes the effects of income tax and the withdrawal of housing benefit and council tax benefit.

Working Families Tax Credit

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies his Department has undertaken on the impact of working families tax credit on the levels of (a) income tax paid, (b) national insurance paid and *(c)*other benefits paid by recipients; and if he will make a statement. [19520]

Dawn Primarolo: As a result of working families tax credit, families in receipt and working for more than 30 hours a week now pay no net income tax if their earnings are below £265 per week. The wider impact of working families tax credit will be assessed as part of a comprehensive programme of evaluation.

International Tax Recoveries

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answers of 25 October 2001, Official Report, column 375W, and 21 November 2001, Official Report, column 360W, on international tax recoveries, how much in total the International Division of the Inland Revenue recovered in compliance cases in the tax year ending 2000 from tax payers paying at least £100 million; whether those tax payers were individuals or corporations; and what was their national domicile. [19785]

Dawn Primarolo: The total amount recovered from taxpayers paying at least £100 million was £499 million. Both taxpayers were corporate entities, who are resident in the UK.

Statutory Maternity Pay

Brian Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of those businesses providing statutory maternity pay to their employees have made a claim to be reimbursed in each financial year since 1996. [19111]

Dawn Primarolo: All employers are required to pay Statutory Maternity Pay (SMP) to eligible employees. Employers do not have to make a claim to have SMP reimbursed; they recover it from the national insurance contributions (NICs) that they are due to pay over to the Inland Revenue each month.

Information is not available in the form requested. Although we have accurate figures of the numbers of employers recovering SMP we do not presently record the number of employers paying SMP. The number of employers who recovered SMP in each year is as follows:

Year	Number
1997–98	95,524
1998–99	70,812

No data are currently available for any later year. A random sample check of employers who pay SMP is carried out each year. Data from this sample check indicate that between 88 per cent. and 90 per cent. of employers do recover all the SMP that they have paid out.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Liverpool

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on (a) delays at Liverpool office of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, (b) their cause and (c) production of naturalisation certificates. [17911]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 27 November 2001]: Last month, new computer equipment was installed in the Directorate. It was necessary to stop issuing certificates of citizenship between 17 October and 12 November while the installation of the equipment was successfully completed. Certificates of citizenship are now being issued to successful applicants.

Residency

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 12 November 2001, Official Report, column 558W, when his officials received an application on behalf of Mrs. Melissa Jane Gryspeerdt of Chippenham, Wiltshire, maiden name—Dodd, date of posting—August 2001; when they expect to process it; and if he will make a statement. [16276]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 20 November 2001]: It has not been possible to trace any application in August from Mrs. Melissa Jane Gryspeerdt. But an application from her was received by special delivery post on 17 September. On examination it was found to be invalid because a document specified in the application form had not been provided. It was accordingly returned to Mrs. Gryspeerdt by recorded delivery post on 18 October. The Royal Mail confirmed that the package was delivered in Chippenham on 20 October.

Charity Commission Investigations

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what organisations are being investigated by the Charity Commission for possible (a) terrorist links and (b) money laundering activities. [14823]

Angela Eagle: This is a matter for the Charity Commission who will write to my hon. Friend. A copy of the Commission's reply will be placed in the Library.

Wrongfully Convicted Prisoners

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the Question of the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside, of 29 October on the publication of his Department's report on support for wrongly convicted prisoners. [19832]

Beverley Hughes: I have replied to my hon. Friend today. I am sorry for the delay in doing so.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish his Department's report on after-care for wrongfully convicted prisoners. [11784]

Beverley Hughes: The study has contributed useful material for further development of proposals but it does not stand alone, and was an internal document not designed for wider circulation. The National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux has been commissioned to develop a project proposal. I expect to make an announcement early in the new year.

Vivisection

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to establish a Royal Commission on vivisection; and if he will make a statement. [19648]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Redcar (Vera Baird) on 13 November 2001, Official Report, column 645W.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress towards the public service agreement target for reducing asylum decision times. [16934]

Angela Eagle: The target for the current year is to decide 60 per cent. of new substantive asylum claims within two months. We are taking a range of measures, including strengthening asylum decision capacity and streamlining internal casework procedures, to support delivery of the target. It is planned that interim data on performance during the period April-September 2001 will be published during the first half of 2002.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent consultations he has undertaken with local authorities about proposals for levels of funding for asylum seekers. [18644]

Angela Eagle: Officials from National Asylum Support Service (NASS) met with representatives of the Association of London Government (ALG) and Local Government Association (LGA) on 22 October and 9 November this year. Also present at these meetings were representatives from the Audit Commission and, at the first meeting only, the Rent Service.

Discussions covered arrangements for an interim grant payment to cover costs in the first half of this year, and an agreed letter has been sent to all local authorities. They also covered proposals to increase the information given by local authorities to the Home Office in support of claims. This is to improve communication from the Home Office to local authorities on case status, so that next year's grant can be based on agreed lists of named asylum seekers. Discussion of grant arrangements for 2001–02 continue and another meeting is planned for early in the new year.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many local authorities have indicated that their costs of supporting asylum seekers exceed (a) current and (b) proposed grant levels. [18645]

Angela Eagle: In 2000–01, based on unaudited claims, some 60 local authorities had costs that exceeded the grant levels. Of these 38 had shortfalls of less than £50,000.

Grant limits for the current year have yet to be confirmed. We are discussing with local authority associations proposals which take into account the recommendations of the Audit Commission report "Halfway Home" and also allow proper scope to recognise the reasons for high costs in some authorities.

Kainos Programme Evaluation Report

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the recommendations made by the Kainos Programme Evaluation report. [18184]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 26 November 2001]: I understand that the main report is still in draft form. When the recommendations are available the Kainos trustees (who own the report) have agreed that a copy may be placed in the Library, and I will ensure that this is done. The Executive Summary, which has been finalised, has already been placed in the Library.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the cost and effectiveness of the Kainos units in prisons. [17215]

Beverley Hughes: I understand from information provided by Kainos that the additional cost of the units was of the order of £60,000 a year in each prison. In the course of a year typically 50–70 prisoners went through the programme in each prison.

An independent evaluation found no statistical basis for concluding that prisoners who had been through the Kainos programme had re-conviction rates that were any lower than would be expected for similar released prisoners as a whole. It found some modest improvements in prisoners' attitudes and behaviour, and that the programme made a positive contribution to order and control.

The Prison Service Management Board concluded that the benefits of the programme were not sufficient to justify its meeting the costs from public funds.

Work Permits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permits were granted in 2000 and in which categories. [18746]

Angela Eagle: In the 2000 calendar year, a total of 102,174 work permit applications were approved as follows:

Type of permit	Number issued
Business and Commercial	72,550
Sports and Entertainments	21,817
Training and Work Experience	7,807
Total	102,174

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many footballers have been granted work permits in each year since 1997. [18747]

Angela Eagle: The following table illustrates how many footballers have been granted work permits in each year since 1997:

	Number of work permits approved
1997	53
1998	67
1999	78
2000	76
2001 (To date)	36

Prison Officers (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prison officers are from black and ethnic minorities; and what is the proportion of those employed in prisons operated by private companies. [14196]

Beverley Hughes: The Home Secretary's Race Equality Employment Targets Second Annual Report was published on 13 November. On 13 March 2001, minority ethnic staff made up 3.7 per cent. of the Prison Service's 43,800 staff and 2.6 per cent. of the operational work force. There were 18,720 prison officers of which 1.7 per cent. were black and 1.2 per cent. were from other minority ethnic backgrounds. There were also 1,456 Prison Custody Officers employed in privately operated prisons, of which 2.1 per cent. were black and 1.2 per cent. were from other minority ethnic backgrounds.

By 30 September 2001 the proportion of minority ethnic staff in the service's work force rose to 3.8 per cent.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the outcome was of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held in Brussels on 16 November; what the Government's policy was on each issue discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [16531]

Angela Eagle: I, together with my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and Jim Wallace, the Acting First Minister for Scotland, represented the United Kingdom at the Justice and Home Affairs Council in Brussels on 16 November.

A Points

The A points were approved as in document 13978/01 (a copy of which is in the Library), except for items 6 and 7, on which one member state maintained its parliamentary scrutiny reserve.

Framework Decision on a European Arrest Warrant

On scope, the Presidency sought agreement to its compromise proposal that the European arrest warrant should apply to a list of offences, with dual criminality abolished for such offences. The Commission proposed that sabotage, arson, hijacking and serious violation of international humanitarian law be added to the list of offences. The majority of member states agreed to this proposal.

There was broad agreement to a 60-day deadline, extendable by 30 days, within which surrender procedures should be completed in the executing state.

The draft Framework Decision will return to the December Justice and Home Affairs Councils for final consideration.

Framework Decision on Combating Terrorism

Provisional agreement was reached on Article 1 (terrorist intent) with some drafting changes. An addition on the right to demonstrate was added at the request of one member state. The Council agreed, after an intervention from the United Kingdom delegation, to return to the definition contained in the United Nations conventions on terrorism restricting the exemption for belligerents in armed conflicts to the armed forces.

With regard to penalties for terrorist offences, the Commission made a compromise proposal based on a range of penalties for these offences and one member state proposed alternative wording for Article 4.3. Further consideration will be given to these options.

There was no opposition to a Presidency proposal for optional extraterritorial jurisdiction. The Framework Decision will be resubmitted to the December Justice and Home Affairs Council for final consideration.

Debate on Implementation of the Tampere Conclusions

There was a general debate on the papers which the Presidency and the Commission had produced. The Home Secretary emphasised the United Kingdom's commitment to playing a strong role in operational action to combat illegal immigration at and beyond the external borders of the European Union. One member state advocated the creation of a European Union border forum, while others argued for the creation of a European union border service, and one favoured a feasibility study into the creation of a European Union border service.

The Home Secretary stressed the need for faster progress on the asylum agenda; there was little support for a standstill clause on national legislation and an open method of co-ordinating national policies on asylum.

The Home Secretary argued that European Union law enforcement bodies should be more effective and co-ordinated and, together with one other member state, stressed that the Police Chiefs' Task Force should be more focused on operational activity and more accountable to the Justice and Home Affairs Council. Four member states spoke in favour of clarifying the role of the Task Force and one noted proposals for an operational Europol. The Home Secretary noted that the European Union needed to step up European Union action against drugs.

My right hon. Friend Jim Wallace stressed the importance of mutual recognition in civil matters and the good record of co-operation between the legal systems of England and Wales and Scotland. The Home Secretary agreed that the United Kingdom continued to regard mutual recognition of judicial decisions as fundamental to judicial co-operation in both criminal and civil matters at European Union level.

Harmonisation of penalties

This item was postponed until the December Council.

Other Business

Schengen Information System

The Austrian delegation introduced its initiative on use of the Schengen Information System and the Schengen acquis to combat terrorism. This issue will be considered at the December Council.

European Judicial Atlas

Work had been completed on the European Judicial Atlas. This would assist judicial authorities in each member state to identify the appropriate authority to receive and carry out a request for legal assistance in another member state.

Parenting Orders

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the cost to public funds in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02 of parenting orders. [17326]

Angela Eagle: The estimated cost of parenting orders in 2000–01 was £1,274,000 and we estimate the cost in 2001–02 will be £1,668,000.

Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Bill

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which Hindu groups he has consulted on the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Bill. [17209]

Beverley Hughes: Ministers have spoken informally about the Bill with a number of leaders of faith communities, including a representative of the National Council of Hindu Temples United Kingdom. Officials also discussed the proposals in the Bill with two groups of faith community representatives who requested meetings—Muslims and Christians—and there are arrangements in place for continuing contact with faith groups of all kinds on matters of interest to them.

Extradition

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which countries have reciprocal extradition arrangements with the United Kingdom, and to which countries he is unable to (a) deport and (b) extradite on humanitarian grounds. [17767]

Angela Eagle: The United Kingdom has general extradition arrangements with the following countries.

Whether and to what country a person may be extradited or deported will depend on the facts of the particular case.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) deportation orders and (b) extradition orders are subject to judicial review; how many have been subject to a judicial review in the past two years; how many reviews have been successful; what were the judicial rulings in each case; what was the time taken in each case; on how many occasions were successful reviews appealed by (i) his Department and (ii) those of his colleagues; how many of these appeals were successful; and what was the time taken in each case. [17768]

Angela Eagle: Seven decisions to order the surrender of a fugitive are currently the subject of judicial review applications. No such challenge to a surrender decision has succeeded in the past two years.

The information otherwise requested is not readily available and could be obtained, I regret, only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons (a) have been in the past year and (b) are subject of extradition proceedings; and from which countries. [17766]

Angela Eagle: Over the recent past, the United Kingdom has received an average of 100 requests per year from its many extradition partners. The arrest of a fugitive marks the start of extradition proceedings. 120 cases are currently the subject of such proceedings. There would have been a similar number over the past 12 months. Requesting jurisdictions in the current cases are as follows:

Requesting jurisdiction	Number of requests[1]
USA	35
Germany	12
France	11
Italy	10
Switzerland	7

Yacht Harbours and Marinas (Security)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what security measures are applied at yacht harbours and marinas to counter (a) illegal immigration, (b) drugs trafficking and (c) terrorism; and if he will make a statement. [17143]

Angela Eagle: I understand from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions that protective security advice has been circulated by Transec and covers maritime activities in these areas.

The Immigration Service is in contact with harbour masters and coastguards in order to increase their awareness of immigration issues. It works closely with Her Majesty's Customs and Excise maritime intelligence and has had success in apprehending small vessels as a result.

Yacht harbours and marinas are included within the overall drugs trafficking intelligence assessments used by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise; resources are deployed in line with these assessments.

Specific security measures at individual small ports are the responsibility of individual chief constables in those jurisdictions.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

SIXTH SERIES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SESSION 2001–2002

VOLUME 375

19th November—30th November 2001

Printed indexes to Hansard

The volume index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the bound volumes of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The fortnightly index to Hansard. This covers the same date range as the volume index but references are to the column numbering in the daily parts and weekly edition of Hansard.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings and written questions:
    - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
    - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
    - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
    - Debates etc. (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
    - Sittings in Westminster Hall (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings); and
    - Questions (which includes written, oral and private notice questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R=First reading
- 2R=Second reading
- Com=Committee stage
- Rep=Report stage
- 3R=Third reading
- res=resolution
- amendt(s)=amendment(s)
- *=matter taken formally without debate or division.

Parliamentary background

- The Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk contains a range of information about Parliament and the full text of some Parliamentary papers and proceedings including Hansard.
- Information on current Parliamentary business is provided in the House of Commons Information Office Weekly Information Bulletin, available on the website and from The Stationery Office (020 7873 8499).
